The second group to appear on the program was Simon and Garfunkel. They were immediately well received by the audience with their clever remarks; "It's good to be here at Mass Agricultural College. Actually were two of the Four Seasons. We lost the other two in the mud."

Unlike the Rovin' Kind, Simon and Garfunkel's performance was comprised entirely of songs for which Paul Simon, the guitarist, had written both the lyrics and music.

ONE GUITAR, two voices in quiet harmony held the audience spellbound as they performed their compositions. Their songs included: "Leaves that are Green", "He was my Brother", "Sparrow", "I am a Rock", "I am an Island", "Homeward Bound", and their original hit re-

Collegian Reorganizes Staff; Positions Open To Campus

At a meeting of the Collegian staff Sunday night in the Collegian office Dr Arthur Musgrave, head of the Department of Journalistic Studies, proposed a major revision of the newspaper's elective offices. Dr. Musgrave's talk was followed by discussion and voting on his proposals.

An explanation of the measures that were accepted follows: (All elective positions are now open to anyone on campus who fulfills the qualifications set by the Collegian Publishing Board.)

OFFICIAL NOTICE

ANNUAL Collegian staff elections will be held March 3, 1966.

TIME: 6:30 p.m. Student Union Building.
BY VOTE of the staff Feb. 20, and with authority granted by the publications board, the Elections Procedure Committee details the information as follows:

- 1—Offices to be filled: (one each for Mon., Wed., Fri. editions)
- News Editors—3
- Feature Editors—3

Editorial Page Editors—3

2—Terms of offices: all to expire Dec. 31, 1966.

A—Each candidate must file no later than four p.m. Thursday, Feb. 24, 1966, with the Collegian secretary, Mrs. Barry.

—A letter listing the office sought, a statement of intent to serve the full term (to 12/31/66) and a statement of the candidate's qualifications. To be eligible, each candidate must have had at least one semester of Collegian membership.

Three examples of his writing (not necessarily published), at least one of which must be in a field for which he is not a candidate. (Example: a candidate for news editor might file one editorial and two news stories.)

Honest George

The Real Washington; History and Legend

What does George Washington mean to us? The picture on a dollar bill, or the excuse for a February holiday? Let's forget the cherry tree hero for a bit and consider what our first president was really like.

Historian John B. McMaster has called Washington the most elusive character in history. Washington himself would have poo-pooed any character rating that made him a demi-god.

THOROUGHNESS

Probably one of Washington's most outstanding traits was thoroughness. During his whole life he kept his eye on a number of things, making note of every penny he possessed and every foot of land he owned. There is a memorandum in his handwriting giving the number of windows in each of the houses on the Mt. Vernon estate with the number of panes in each window.

It has been said that George Washington had no sense of humor. He has been described as listening to a hilarious joke with dead-pan face and reacting to its punch line without laughter and with a solemn comment. "Is that so?"

Actually he did laugh occasionally and was even known to resort to joshing. One of these capers occurred during the bleak winter at Valley Forge when he kidded Brig. Gen. William Smallwood about enjoying the company of a group of interned British ladies. Smallwood failed to see the fun, and Washington had to write the ruffled general an apology saying, "That I was sorry to find that what I meant merely as a joke has been taken by you in a serious point of light."

RARE OCCASION

One of the rare times when he was known to laugh heartily in public occurred at a play called "Poor Soldier" in which he was portrayed as a Continental general and was described in good-humored comic verse. The audience looked at the general in his box and when they saw him laughing they could hardly believe their eyes. His mirth was so unusual the newspaper the next day published the fact that George Washington had laughed.

Throughout his lifetime Washington had to struggle to control his violent temper. It is recorded that one day he came unexpectedly upon a white overseer giving a slave a thrashing. The sight so enraged Washington that he fell into one of his furious tempers. Seizing his horsewhip he approached the overseer, eyes blazing. The man realizing that he was about to take the negro's place as an object of flogging kept walking backward and saying, "Remember your character, General. Remember your character." Washington remembered his character and rode off with a few words of rebuke.

In spite of these not so-pleasant character quirks Washington could be pleasant and agreeable, and his conversation, even with people whom he detested, left the impression of quiet politeness. He had a warm current of affection for children. He remembered the names of youngsters he had met, and his pockets were often full of presents for them. He had no children of his own but loved his stepchildren, John Parke Custis and Martha Custis, as if they had been his own.

Some biographers claim that Washington did not care for pomp and ceremony, while others state that he possessed an innate love of ceremony. It is told how he wanted to be called "His Mightiness the President of the United States." The Speaker of the House laughed at this title and because of his laughter was never forgiven by Washington.

It was finally decided to call him simply "The President of the United States."

BING WASHINGTON

If it is true that Washington loved pomp and ceremony why did he turn down an offer of kingship? When Colonel Lewis Nicola in 1782 hinted that General Washington should become king of the United States, Washington spiked the suggestion emphatically with this reply: "I am much at a loss to conceive what part of my conduct could have given encouragement to an address, which to me seems big with the greatest mischiefs, that can befall my country. If I am not deceived in the knowledge of myself you could not have found a person to whom your schemes are more disagreeable."

George Washington's high sense of responsibility, as well as his energy, and devotion to his country was proved when he became the Chief Executive. He understood the ramifications of trade and commerce among the Colonies and States. He saw clearly the need for means of transportation, uniform currency, systems for acquiring property, for spreading and controlling trade. He was a genius at organization.

Some of Washington's qualities reveal him to have been much more like the average man than many of us suppose. He was downright fond of a good time. He was an excellent horseman and fond of riding to the hounds. He loved horse racing. He was fond of billiards and cards, the latter being played almost daily when he was at Mt. Vernon, and Mr. Washington was not beyond wagering a few pence on his hands. He loved the theater probably more than any other form of amusement and went to every play, good or bad, that was produced within his reach. Dancing was a form of recreation of which he never tired.

When it came to drinking Washington was a one bottle man. This meant that at dinner he customarily drank a pint of Madeira, besides rum, punch or beer. Although he preferred Madeira he often drank cider champagne or brandy. But, in spite of so much imbibing historians report that he was never seen intoxicated. He was allergic to tobacco smoke and once nearly broke up an important meeting with an Indian delegation when he grimaced while smoking the traditional peace pipe.

He was extremely hospitable. George once remarked that he and Martha had not sat down to the table alone for 15 years.

Stockbridge Opinions Vary Over Dorm Integration

by BOB GORMAN

In an interview with several students concerning the proposed integration of Stockbridge students into other campus dorms some of the comments given were as follows:

Joe Roseberry, senior and resident of Middlesex dorm replied, "I'm all for integration. It will upgrade Stockbridge by forming better communications with the University."

"The only disadvantage is that the Stockbridge students will not be together as a dorm. However, the unity will not be split up because of the school's clubs, organizations, and sports teams."

When asked of his views on the issue Jim Harrington, freshman from Middlesex dorm, answered, "It isn't that big an issue. The benefits of keeping us together outweigh the benefits of splitting us. The Stockbridge students get along together."

JOE FATELO, a freshman resident of Berkshire dorm, stated, "I think it's for the good of Stockbridge to integrate, if we want to become more closely associated with the University. It will help us to get to know more University kids; and give Stockbridge a better name. Also, integration will increase our social standing."

During a similar discussion with Dean Jeffrey of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, the Dean had this to say, "I haven't pressed the idea, but now that it's happening, I'm all in favor of it."

ASKED HOW the proposed integration will effect Stockbridge, Dean Jeffrey replied, "Stockbridge School is not in danger of being affected. This can be observed by the fact that Stockbridge entrance requirements have been increased and that new courses are being added."

"Aside from this, it is expected that for the first few years Stockbridge will not be completely integrated. The students will live in various dorms in one area. Also those Stockbridge students desiring fellow Stockbridge students will be granted their wish."

The Stockbridge Senate meeting Tuesday night was expected to involve many heated discussions concerning the proposed integration. However, the real debate was to concern the budget for the '66-67 year.

THE MEETING opened with a report from Joe Roseberry, Stockbridge senator to the University, stating that a committee of three University senators and three Stockbridge senators or students would investigate the possible problems that might occur.

They will also report to the Housing Office and decide which dorms will be available to integration.

The three Stockbridge committeemen are: senator Joe Roseberry, Pres., Al Provost of the freshman class, and Jerry Jolly, also a freshman. The three University members are: senators Bert Freeman, Dick Homan, and Jim Allen.

THE TOPIC of elections was then brought up. Since Stockbridge is only a two year school and some freshmen leave for summer placement in early April, the senior elections are usually held in March of the freshman year.

However, the idea raised was to have class officers elected at the beginning of the second semester of the freshman year. These officers would remain in office throughout the senior year.

This proposal was well received because next year it will take at least one semester to meet the candidates if Stockbridge integrates. Senate President Ed Sprisslev put the plan before the activities committee for further investigation.

THE BUDGET reports were read in an open hearing following all new business (unlike the University's Senate, the Stockbridge Senate gives money to all Stockbridge activities, clubs included).

Stoso, Stockbridge School Organization, was the first to submit a budget.

NEXT the Forestry Club asked for an emergency appropriation of $100 to help defray the costs of the Woodsmen's Weekend at Dartmouth College in April.

The Animal Husbandry Club asked for emergency funds of $120 to pay the cost of judging teams. Thus, a heated debate arose over whether $90 of this sum could be used for meals. A show of hands indicated that the Senate was willing to pay the complete bill if R.S.O. agreed.

Following this the Shorthorn (Stockbridge School newspaper), The Arbor and Park Club, Sigma, Sigma, Alpha, and the Landscape Operations Club submitted their budgets.

BEFORE the meeting adjourned it was pointed out that the excess money of the Senate Emergency Fund should be used for scholarships and loans. The bill was placed before a committee to look into the possibility.

Later the same night the dorm meeting was held to vote on what should be done with the dorm treasury, since the dorm will not be used next year.

It was decided that tickets for the Stockbridge Progress Banquet will be paid for out of this sum. The remainder of the money will be used for a school community chest.

Collegian Reorganization . . .

Two pages he has made up by posting clippings from the Collegian, week on Feb. 14-18, using type and photos. He must write original headlines for each story, indicating size of type and type family. He must copyedit three stories equalling at least one column of type to demonstrate knowledge of copyediting symbols and ability to improve a written story.

This material must be taken to a copyediting session which shall be part of Section B below.

B-To qualify, each candidate must attend at least three of four training sessions to be announced for the week of Feb. 28-March 1. Required for all candidates will be the makeup-copyediting-headline session to which he must take the two pages required in Section A above.

C-Each candidate will be given the opportunity to speak at a Candidate's Night on Wednesday, March 2, 1966. Each will be given a maximum of five minutes to outline his qualifications for the office. Time and place will be announced.

D-Eligible to vote on March 3 will be all staff members listed on the masthead of Friday, February 25, 1966.

4-Definition of duties:

A-Each editor will be autonomous within the general policies defined by the Senior Board (See 4D below). For example, the Monday News Editor will be responsible for recruiting, training, organizing and managing the staff to prepare all the News copy for the Monday edition each week.

B-The three editors within a department (for example, the Monday, Wednesday and Friday Features Editors) will be responsible for coordination of all functions of the Features Department. They may wish to elect a monthly chairman or coordinator, alternating so each has opportunity to serve. They may switch days of duty and staffmembers as they agree among themselves and/or with the aid of the personnel director.

C-The personnel director and chairman of the board shall be selected by the Senior Board. The Senior Board shall consist of all elected editors as defined in No. 1 above, and the business manager (see D below).

D-The Senior Board shall meet weekly to coordinate the efforts of the staff, establish by majority vote general Collegian policies and to perform such other functions which shall provide for coordinated activity. Immediately after the March 3 election, the Senior Board shall meet to appoint a Business Manager, a Personnel Director and a Chairman. Should any of these three positions be filled by an officer elected under No. 1 above, the next highest vote-getter shall be declared elected to an editor's position. In the event of vacancy by resignation from any department editorship, the remaining two editors shall submit a nomination for the vacancy to the Senior Board which shall appoint a successor. The Business Manager shall nominate candidates for advertising manager for Senior Board appointment. All other vacancies or new positions shall be filled by Senior Board appointment on majority vote.

E-The personnel director shall be available to assist any editor who wishes help in recruiting, training and organizing. The director shall be the final authority in settling personnel disputes and allocating personnel among the different staffs.

F-The chairman shall arrange and preside at all Senior Board meetings; he shall represent the editors at campus functions and in meetings with committees, faculty and administration. The chairman shall also serve as liaison between the business and editorial staffs and shall be the final authority in any matters of dispute between these arms.

Lonely Snowman Bedecks ATG Lawn

A lone snow sculpture stood on North Pleasant Street in bold defiance to another snow-less Winter Carnival. The brothers of Alpha Tau Gamma Fraternity were determined to go ahead with their plans to build a sculpture in spite of the less-than-wintery weather.

Of course, gathering enough snow to build an eight foot snow man was their biggest problem. After clearing every available snow flake from their own lawn and parking lot, the ATG's turned to the university parking areas. Still more snow was needed.

Finally, a dump truck full of snow from Atkins Apple Orchard in Amherst was added to the heap on the house's front lawn, and the brothers went to work carving out their "masterpiece."

The sculpture took shape under the able leadership of Frank Palumbo, ATG's cook, who is an alumnus of the Culinary Institute of America at Yale University where he took courses in ice carving. The form of a fallen skier soon appeared at the top of the snow heap.

Food coloring and vegetables were used to "paint" the carving. The eyebrows were made from anchovies, the eyes from kosher dill pickles, and the letters ATG at the sculpture's base were spelled out in red beads.

The finished product, a skier ingloriously resting on his mound of snow, was entitled "We Slipped," in honor of a much-lamented social probation. It was the star of North Pleasant Street during the Winter Carnival weekend as groups of strollers paused to admire it.

Although no prizes were offered for snow sculptures this Winter Carnival, the ATG's certainly deserved one. Not only did they give UMass its first snow sculpture since 1963, but they also go down in UMass history as the first fraternity to "ball" the weatherman!

Dope Raid At Oklahoma U.

(CPS) — A University of Oklahoma student who was arrested in a Jan. 8 narcotics raid off-campus has been denied readmission to the university for the spring semester.

The male student was advised by Dean of Men William R. Brown that he should confer with his lawyers before making any further attempt to register for the spring term. The student saw the dean after a "stop" card had been put on his enrollment packet and he was unable to register. The Office of Student Affairs initiated the stop procedure.

Officials said that "stop" cards were also put on the packets of the other nine students who were involved in the raid but that none of them showed up for registration.

The decision not to allow any of the ten to return to school was made by the OU regents during their January meeting. The regents made the ruling even though the university usually permits students facing criminal charges to remain in school pending a court decision.

Seven of those arrested face criminal charges and three will be tried on misdemeanor charges. A preliminary hearing for the seven has been postponed pending the ruling of the judge on a motion that the case be thrown out of court on the grounds that a search warrant was improperly issued.

Wig Niks Outlawed

Most of us like to pride ourselves in our devotion to upholding the rights of our fellow man, but sometimes you falter and say, "There oughta be a law"—like when you see some of these silly-looking, long-haired, bearded moppets or mopes that comprise much of today's beatnik set.

There oughta be a law? Well, there is, right in the General Laws of Massachusetts, adopted by the General Court in 1675. It reads:

"Whereas there is manifest Pride openly appearing amongst us in that long Hair like Womens Hair is worn by some men, either their own, or others Hair made into Perewigs: And by some Women wearing Borders of Hair, and their Cutting, Curling and Immodest laying out their Hair, which practice doth prevail and increase especially amongst the younger sort.

"This Court doth Declare against the ill custome as Offensive to them, and divers sober Christians amongst us, and therefore do hereby exhort and advise all persons to use moderation in this respect; And further do impower all Grand juries to present to the County Court such Persons, whether

...and the band plays on, as Bobby Kaye and his orchestra set the world of Broadway to music.

Counselors Needed

If you have a 2.0 or better average and want to work with people, you may qualify for a position as a residence hall counselor.

Applications for this "hard work if you can get it" opportunity are available from any Head of Residence or from the Dean of Men's Office in Mach-mer Hall. The deadline for applications is March 4, 1966.

A meeting will be held in the School of Business Administration Building in room 120 on Wednesday, February 23, at 7:30 p.m. to further define the position and its responsibilities, and to answer any questions about these positions.

New England Affected

Asian Flu Hits Hard

From Alaska to Florida the flu bug has sent its victims struggling off to bed with fever, headache and sore throat, and Californians are the most seriously afflicted.

Schools Are Closed

In Los Angeles, where the virus is the A type — Asian flu, 400,000 students and 3000 teachers missed school Friday, absenteeism reached 40 per cent in some schools and industries, and county health officials said the epidemic won't reach its peak until midweek.

Twenty-four of the state's 58 counties have been affected, and Dr. Philip K. Condit, chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the state Health Department, estimated that four million Californians will be stricken.

Many schools in the Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento and Fresno areas will be closed Monday in hopes that the day off and the holiday Tuesday for Washington's birthday will slow the epidemic's spread.

New England Hit

In Anchorage, Alaska, an influenza-type illness has caused high absenteeism in two schools, and the epidemiology section of the Arctic Health Research Center is working to isolate the virus.

Elsewhere, Florida, Georgia, and the New England states of Maine, Rhode Island and Massachusetts are suffering from a B type virus, less infectious than Asian flu, but just as discomforting to the person in bed.

In Providence, R. I., more than 25 per cent of the students in upper grades are sick, and Worcester, Mass., schools and industries reported a 15 per cent rate of absenteeism.

Epidemic Is Doubtful

Additionally, Dr. John E. McCroan, chief epidemiologist for the Georgia Department of Public Health, said many other areas may be suffering from influenza, but until specimens have been analyzed in the laboratory, they cannot be officially listed as flu.

The U. S. Public Health Service has noted an increase in pneumonia-influenza deaths in the New England and South Atlantic sections, but cautioned that these deaths "do not parallel the evident prevalence of influenza in some parts of the country."

The health service expressed doubt that the flu epidemic would reach national proportions.

Hospitals Are Full

But health officials in Nevada said the flu bug apparently crept across the California border and spread to the cities of Reno and Las Vegas.

Hospital beds were reported full in both cities, and some schools were closed in the Lake Tahoe area.

N.C.C. To Sponsor Benefit Dinner

Wild Winter Weekend!

This year's Winter Carni had everything but the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Junior Class planners originally wanted even that! Despite the absence of the BSO, this week provided a full range of cultural, social and academic activities. And there was a little something extra this year — spirit.

President John Mullin with his Carni chairmen and his executive board, has added new briskness to the winter festivities. They originated what may well become the beginning of tradition — a week-long carnival.

Also they are trying to improve the spirit on campus with the festivities. At the basketball game, spirit abounded. Sectional cheering, the pep band, the Flying Redmen, presentation of the queen finalists and an invasion by agents from UMCLE made the spirit flow.

The Junior Class should be commended for the year long planning and the wonderful Winter Carni that the planning produced.

A Cold Funeral

BY SCOTTIE INGLIS

It takes a very special sort of person to make long-range plans for a group funeral.

Poorly scheduled examinations can have decidedly adverse effects on students. Professors scheduling such examinations clearly exhibit a lack of concern for the well-being of students.

Saturday morning exams, exams held immediately after vacations, and after the few well publicized "big weekends" are not rare occurrences at UMass. When testing occurs at such unfavourable times, the student's chance of success is greatly reduced.

Ideally, a student should be prepared for examination at all times. However, one can not realistically assume that a student is always caught up in his studies.

The model student would, theoretically, gladly forfeit "Winter Carni" weekend or his Christmas vacation in order to prepare for an exam. However, vacations and large-scale social activities are designed to provide the student with opportunity for relaxation and recreation. There is certainly ample room during regular school sessions for the scheduling of examinations.

The professors who schedule Spanish and French exams for the day after Homecoming Weekend are the possessors of rather sadistic outlooks. They certainly realize that students plan big weekends some time in advance. Often it is too late to cancel plans when examination dates are finally announced. Such professors either enjoy the idea of students denying themselves some much looked forward to recreation or else they really do take pleasure in flunking a good percentage of their classes.

Consideration for the welfare of others is a necessary element if individuals are to function together harmoniously. If one individual or group acts without regard to others they cannot expect harmony to be maintained.

Consideration implies a knowledge of the way that people generally react in a given situation. Thus it is often quite easy to determine what will be precipitated by a specific action before it is taken.

A little more consideration and foresight on the part of some professors could help to alleviate some of the pressures and anxieties felt by students.

Senate Report

HOW MANY WORK

BY KAREN ROSE, Senate Editor

The Student Senate has passed quite a bit of constructive legislation so far this year. Unfortunately, the Senate as a whole has not been instrumental in initiating this legislation.

The structure of the Senate like that of so many other organizations is supported by a few strong pillars. The pillars are solid bases, firm supporters, with a definite stand.

The workers and the shirkers here are because they have a lot to stay—about nothing to define at first glance.

Possibly the shirkers are most noticeable.

Of course, no group can be clearly divided into two distinct groups. Many of the Senators cannot be classified because their positions fluctuate from day to day, issue to issue, meeting to meeting.

These senators have little overall value. Consistency in legislation is imperative. If a senator cannot take a definite, constant stand on an issue how can he propose efficient or remedial legislation on the issue?

Back to the pillars—is there a chance that they'll crack? Possibly, quite possibly, the pillars will crack and crumble from the blows of exhaustion and despair.

Reconstruction takes a lot of precious time.

SENATORS AND THE STUDENTS

The following and the above editorials sound like a scolding, but it is important that student senators be reminded of the powerful position they hold. They represent the vanguard of student opinion, the cone through which all student thinking is eventually funnelled, formalized, and presented in written form before the administration.

The University is expanding at an unprecedented rate, a rate too swift not to result in various administrative changes. It is therefore vital to the welfare of the students that their representatives in government be fully aware of and active in the many changes that are and will be coming.

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—with-held upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters To The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

A CHANCE

To the Editor:

Often, I have heard students, who are majoring in the social sciences, comment on the lack of application of theories and knowledge accumulated in their studies to practical experience. To solve this problem, these students should explore the excellent opportunities afforded them as Northampton or Belchertown Volunteers. Members of the former organization travel to Northampton State Hospital where they visit with the patients. It is not only that these students supply contact with the world outside the hospital, but, in most cases, they are the only ones with whom the patients converse. Thus, the arrival of the volunteers provides a sharp contrast to the monotony of institutional life. The program at Northampton gives the psychology major an insight into the workings of a mental hospital, the sociology major a chance to work with people in a group setting, and the recreation major an opportunity to organize games and activities.

The other volunteer program provides residents of Belchertown State School with personal contact that cannot be supplied by the undermanned professional staff. The volunteer has the choice of working with small youngsters, teenagers or adults. Opportunities similar to those at Northampton are available to students in such majors as psychology, sociology, recreation and education. The program at Belchertown also includes tutoring in the areas of reading, arithmetic and other basic skills.

I may have implied that the only people who would benefit from volunteering are those with training or interests in specific areas. However, any student who likes people will receive the satisfaction of spending a few hours a week working where his efforts are badly needed and strongly appreciated.

— Letters to the Editor —

Dr. Feldman is 'typical'

Without defending any religious form—whether mysticism or Dr. Feldman's science—one can strongly congratulate Miss Reall for her precise comments. Dr. Feldman's views are, as she pointed out, naive. They reflect a narrow approach to understanding reality.

Unfortunately, Dr. Feldman is indeed "typical." His beliefs are representative of the extravaganza now entertained by many minds—the condition called "social science." Like many previous human excesses this current vogue (which seeks to understand social behavior by the "methods of science") has produced a variety of semi-comical myths. They remind one of the 18th century Frenchmen carrying the Goddess of Reason through the streets of Paris.

We have "experimental psychologists" trying to make connections between what can happen in the laboratory under certain conditions, and what does in fact happen in real life. This ritual becomes imaginative when the subjects are non-humans; it is, as Reall puts it, "an insidious dehumanization" when the subjects are "objectified" human beings.

The psychologists are not alone in their "scientific" endeavors; there are at least two other rings in this circus; there are "sociologists" trying to explain suicide rates by

"correlating" them with the incidence of traffic fatalities (of any sort) in a given area. We are told that the positive relationship which exists between the two rates means that the suicide victim shares the attitude to life of the traffic victim. The number of ice cream cones sold in New York City in one day correlates with the daily birthrate in India.

There are political scientists—"pop sociologists" as one writer calls them—gathering voluminous statistics in an effort to explain various political phenomena. With the use of these sophisticated compilations and "statistical techniques" we are informed that the policy positions of the two parties on the slavery issue probably had something to do with the 60 year Republican voting pattern of the negroes. We are told to expect businessmen to contribute more money to the Republicans, and Labor Unions to the Democrats. The presidential candidates in 1972 are very likely to have members of their own party as running mates, and will in all probability get most of their votes from their own party members.

Thank goodness for the Idols of social science

REALL CHALLENGES FELDMAN

To the Editor:

It is not that the huffing and puffing of Dr. Feldman and Miss Reall on the brick facade of Hasbrouck is going to shake the workings of the research within, I simply feel that someone should take the part of that science which they have so unjustly brought to trial. It is accused of being intimately involved in questions to which it would not, in its most immodest moments, deem itself relevant.

In Miss Reall's passionate letter, she accuses the tradition from Newton through Einstein and beyond of creating (innocently I hope) a monster which the been loosed on the world to "thingize" mankind. I do not believe that we can justly lay the blame for the tragic condition, in which man finds himself alienated from the rest of mankind, at the feet of a discipline which is concerned with formulating, in a closed mathematical system, natural physical phenomena. It is not on science itself, but on the people that have the power to use, or misuse, the by-products of scientific investigation that Miss Reall's frustrations should be bent. If she doesn't like being dehumanized by tranquilizers, deodorants, or the Bomb, she should be confronting advertising executives, politicians, and generals—not scientists. The goal of the natural scientist is not to serve a social purpose, but to advance science. He cannot be held responsible for its misuse.

If Miss Reall feels that the nature of quantum mechanics has no implications to the question of free will, I would suggest that she take her challenge to Dr. Feldman, not Dr. Schrodinger. I will even be her second. The question that Dr. Feldman raises in his article has been a dead one among physicists for a good many years. I'm afraid I just cannot see what relevance the fact that we are unable, at the same instant, to exactly measure the velocity and position of a particle, a perfectly rigorous statement within its own logical system, has to the nebulous world of theology. Reductionism is a dangerous game. One doesn't mind many physicists playing at it because they know where their discipline is impotent. It can neither create nor alleviate imperfections in the human condition. That is why it cannot play the role of either villain or savior in any age. Those honors belong to the realms of men.

Mark Twain on War

I've been looking for the following quote by Mark Twain for about a year, and finally found it in an obscure labor paper from British Columbia. A newspaper would do a great public service by publishing this frequently.

"The loud little handbill will shout for war. The pulpit will warily and cautiously protest at first...The great mass of the nation will rub its sleepy eyes, and will try to make out why there should be a war and they will say earnestly and indignantly: 'It is unjust and dishonorable and there is no need for war.'

"Then the few will shout even louder. A few fair men on the other side will argue and reason against the war with speech and pen, and at first will get a hearing and will be applauded; but it will not last long. The few who want war will outshout those who want peace, and presently the anti-war audience will thin out and peace will become unpopular.

"Before long you will see a curious thing: anti-war speakers will be stoned from the platform, and free speech will be strangled by hordes of furious men who still agree with the speakers but dare not admit it...

"The whole nation, pulpit and all, will take up the war cry and shout itself hoarse and will mob any honest man who ventures to open his mouth for peace. Then such mouths will cease to open.

"Next, the statesmen will invent cheap lies, putting the blame on the nation being attacked, and each man will be glad of these and will study them because they soothe his conscience; and thus he will by and by convince himself that war is just and he will thank God for the better sleep he enjoys by his self-deception."

Requirements

To the Editor:

Your statement of the requirements for the B.A. degree is generally correct but not exactly so. Whether or not the errors are of great enough significance to warrant publication of corrections I leave to your judgement.

Although no error is involved, it is perhaps unfortunate that no distinction was made between the requirements of the University and those of the College of Arts and Sciences. The requirements of the College include all those of the University, but clearly the student in Nursing, Business Administration, etc., is not bound by our College requirements.

As regards the College requirements in science and math, you of course recognize that natural science includes both the physical and biological sciences. Furthermore, there are options other than a year of math available to all students in the College of Arts and Sciences, provided, of course, that departmental requirements of the major do not restrict these options. Thus your statement of requirements of the College of Arts and Sciences as they relate to members of the Class of '66 and '67 should have read:

Three years' work in natural sciences and mathematics which is made up of a) a year's work (at least 6 credits) in one of the physical sciences—Astronomy, Chemistry, Geology, and Physics—and b) a year's work (at least 6 credits) of biological science made up of courses chosen from the offerings of one or more of the Departments of Botany, Microbiology, and Zoology or Entomology 126, and c) a third year (at least 6 credits) which may be either (i) a year of mathematics, or (ii) a semester of mathematics and a semester of logic (Philosophy 125), or (iii) two science courses (biological, physical, or both).

On November 10, 1964, the Curriculum Committee of the College of Arts and Sciences approved the following amendment to the above requirement, which does not appear in the current catalogue: For students of the Class of 1968 and thereafter, the third year's work may be either (i) two courses of at least three credits each in one or more of the fields, Mathematics, Statistics (in the Department of Statistics), or Logic (Philosophy 125), or (ii) two science courses (biological, physical, or both).

Please note that statistics courses offered by departments other than the Department of Statistics may not be used to satisfy the requirement. Item "(i)" of the amendment represents a change in the requirement (but only for students in the Class of 1968 and thereafter); item "(ii)" of the amendment does not.

A complete statement of the requirements of the College of Arts and Sciences (with the exception of the November 10, 1964, amendment) may be found on pages 92 and 93 of the undergraduate University of Massachusetts Bulletin, 1965 - 1966.

SPEAKER BAN

(ACP)—From the Minnesota Daily, University of Minnesota: Ohio State University's administration recently banned a Communist speaker and suffered the predictable consequences: student protests, marches, and sit-ins.

The ban was based on a newly-passed state law empowering trustees of any state-operated institution to refuse speaking facilities to Communists, advocates of violent overthrow of government, or "persons whose presence is not conducive to ethical or moral conduct."

Under pressure from students and faculty, Ohio State's president tried to get the trustees' ruling changed, but failed.

He pointed out that banning speeches is an excellent publicity device for any such speaker and thus is probably self-defeating.

Minnesota—at least temporarily—has learned its lesson from the last banning more than a year ago. May Ohio State come to know the same calm and tranquility that an enlightened and temperate administration can ensure.

CONCERT PROVIDES WARMTH, STYLE

By NANCY ABRAMS, Feature Staff

Once upon a time there was a clean-cut All-American folk group called the Modern Folk Quartet who strummed their guitars and banjo, sang up-beat arrangements of folk songs, and projected the required Kingston Trio image.

There is now a grubby quintet of folk-rockers called the Modern Folk Quartet who play electric bass, lead, and 12-string guitars, electric banjo, electric bonzouki, and drums; sing up-beat arrangements of folk songs, and project the required Byrds-Loving Spoonful image.

THE FOUR SINGING members of the group all have good, clear voices which are never lost in the din of their instruments. Their smooth, close harmony is a joy to the ear. No matter how wild and rocky they get, their singing never deteriorates into shouting.

An added talent is their ability to get laughs and applause as rewards for their lighthearted clowning.

Very versatile men, their repertoire ranges from traditional songs such as "The Ox-Driver's Song" to the gospel song "I'm Going to Live the Life I Sing About in My Song" to a soft and sweet "It Was a Very Good Year" to a frantic and fantastic "Swing Me."

Comedy highlights were red-headed Jerry's tongue-in-cheek song about Jack the Ripper and the group's instrumental version of "Oh Suzanna" on plastic woodwinds.

MOST FOLK-ROCK groups wouldn't touch a true folk song. MFQ takes traditional songs and makes rock songs out of them. This may have turned off the purists and ethnics, but the audience seemed to agree that the MFQ have an outstanding act built on talent and showmanship rather than noise.

Biff Rose is an easy-going young man from Louisiana who is genuinely funny, although his Southern accent makes him a bit hard for Yankee ears to understand. His remarkably clean act reached its zenith when he reminisced about his education in Catholic schools.

"I WASN'T too popular with my nun in the second grade, Sister Mary Poppins. I made a rosary out of jelly beans and twine, and then I ate it."

Later I joined a fraternity—Alpha Beta Dogma. I went to Loyola University, a Jesuit school, and every year we used to play the Baptists at LSU. We'd sit on our side waving our liquor bottles in the air, and they'd sit on their side waving their liquor bottles behind their backs.

We also played the UJA—United Jewish Academy—but we always won because they couldn't handle the pigskin."

THEN CAME Glen Yarbrough, "the highlight of the weekend." Right before our eyes the owner of the familiar, beautiful tenor voice ran through an act of mostly mediocre material.

His best numbers were two deeply-moving love songs, "The World I Used to Know" and "Stan-yon Street."

After a hideous rock 'n roll rendition of the folk song "Old Blue," which even Glen himself dumped on, he sang an arrangement of "900 Miles" that was somewhat quieter but still heavily under the influence of folk-rock.

LATER ON Glen did rather well with "The New Frankie and Johnny Song," which shows there's hope he might someday learn how to handle the folk-rock idiom.

Of course, Glen plugged his soon-to-be-released album, sang his current single "It's Gonna Be Fine," which he admitted wasn't selling very well, and gave a poor treatment of his one hit record, "Baby, the Rain Must Fall."

His most emotional moment came when he gave a moving tribute to the hand that feeds him with a splendid rendition of the Coca-Cola jingle.

ONE FOOTNOTE: a big thanks should go to the organizers of the concert for their humane policy of opening the doors early and letting the crowd dribble in. It was certainly an improvement over Saturday night's mob scene in the cold.

S.R.O. CONCERTS . . .

cording "Sounds of Silence", which, as Paul Simon explained, expresses the inability of people to communicate with one another on an emotional level.

As they left the stage the audience avidly applauded and whistled in approval. Simon and Garfunkel returned and sang two more songs. The first was a parody on present day folk singers "singing" other groups. It was entitled "A Teenage Moron". The other song was "I Shall be Free."

These two performers displayed a great deal of stage presence, a genuinely funny sense of humor and a style of singing which came across well with only one guitar as means of accompaniment.

AFTER A DELAY of fifteen minutes the Four Seasons appeared on stage clad in green v-neck sweaters, green turtle-neck jerseys and black pants.

They began their performance with "Stay", and sang in addition to some of their best hit records like "Candy Girl", "Walk Like a Man", and "Dawn", their first hit record, "Cherie", and their most recent hit, "Let's Hang On".

The lead singer displayed his virtuosity and tremendous range of voice in such songs as "Since I Don't Have You" and the "Hawaiian Wedding Song" which, however, was somewhat out of keeping with the rest of the group's repertoire.

In addition to hearing the Four Seasons, the audience was subjected to a drum solo which was highly entertaining for the first four or five minutes, but soon after it began to make the crowd squirm uneasily in their seats while waiting for it to end.

Their repertoire was all inclusive as both old and new hits were sung, in addition to songs made popular by other singers. One got the impression that Frankie Valli, the lead singer of the group, was the real uniting factor, as the other members of the foursome, when performing alone, were at a loss for holding the attention of the audience.

The bass singer was badly in need of a lozenge, or better yet a deeper and more powerful voice, as he could barely be heard above a harsh whisper in several of the songs such as, "Big Girls Don't Cry" and "Walk Like A Man."

As a group the Four Seasons came across well thanks to the unique range of voice of the lead singer.

Three different groups with three distinct styles made for an enjoyable concert which had appeal for the college crowd as well as the post-grads.

Students Needed For STP Teaching Program In South

Nearly 150 graduate students from twenty-five universities in all parts of the country spent last summer teaching in twenty-seven predominantly Negro colleges and universities.

The summer of 1965 was the second year of the Southern Teaching Program, which had its genesis in the minds of a handful of students in the Yale Law School. Early in 1964, they came to the conclusion that the best contribution they could make to the movement for equal rights—and equal opportunity—would be to work as additional staff at the Negro institutions, to make possible special summer programs or reduce the teaching loads of the overworked regular faculties. The students reasoned that they could relieve regular instructors at the colleges, who could then attend summer institutes, work toward advanced degrees, or teach smaller classes, thus being able to give students more individual attention.

With the enthusiastic backing of the Yale administration, the students approached several Southern colleges, got a response far exceeding their expectations, and found themselves with a full-fledged program on their busy hands. That summer, with support from the New World Foundation, they sent fifty-three graduate students, most of them from Yale, to teach in thirteen institutions. Last summer, with additional support from the Fund for the Advancement of Education and Carnegie Corporation, the recruiting effort spread beyond the Ivy League to Midwestern, Western, and Southern institutions, and a total of 110 students, a majority of whom had already had some teaching experience, gave courses. Twenty-three of the student instructors held masters degrees; six had doctorates.

About two-thirds of the courses handled by STP instructors were in special pre-college programs for high school graduates, mainly in English, mathematics, and reading. Although most of these were in the nature of remedial work, some were for especially talented youngsters. The instructors who taught regular courses were generally well prepared, by virtue of their graduate studies, to do so, but those teaching the elementary or remedial pre-freshman programs had usually had no special training and little, if any, relevant experience for this particular type of teaching. In most cases, their enthusiasm and dedication to teaching overcame these deficiencies, but many reported that they could have made more progress more rapidly if they had not had to work out techniques for themselves.

The STP instructors were more critical of their own achievements than were the institutions that employed them. Twenty-three of the colleges completed questionnaires at the end of the summer. Twelve declared the teaching job done by the STP men and women to be excellent; eleven rated it good. Asked what they considered to be the chief contributions of the instructors, most colleges rated first their enthusiasm, willingness to work long hours, and ability to inspire the students. Half of the institutions reported that they had been able to undertake new programs or significantly expand existing ones because of the STP, and twenty-two said they intend to ask for more instructors next summer.

The impact of the program was not one-way. Almost without exception the instructors reported that they had been personally rewarded by their experience. Several accepted full-time jobs in the college where they had taught during the summer, and of some sixty who were interviewed, ten spoke seriously of returning later to a Negro college.

The program will be repeated next summer. In addition to recruiting for that program, the STP is now giving increasing emphasis to recruiting for semester or full-year positions. A permanent office, directed by Fred Schulze, is at Yale.

Lent Opens

On Ash Wednesday, February 23rd, at 12:15 p.m. there will be a service of Holy Communion in the Council Chambers of the Student Union, using the Form of Worship of the Church of South India. This service, ecumenical in character, is open to all baptized people. It is intended to be an authentic offering, symbolic of basic unity in the Body of Christ.

CULTURE AND SPORTS

Mon., Feb. 21: Vivaldi: The Four Seasons (Vittoria Emanuel, violin/Societa Corelli); Moussorgsky: Night on Bald Mountain (Ormandy/Phila.); Delibes: Coppelia Ballet Suite (Ormandy/Phila.); Massenet: Meditation from "Thais" (Agout/London Proms Sym.); Tchaikovsky: Sym. No. 3 in D Major, "Polish" (Boult/London Phil.); Liszt: Totentanz (Brailowsky, piano — Ormandy/Phila.); Guilmant: Morceau Symphonique for Trombone and Orch., Op. 88 (Henry Charles Smith, trombone—Ormandy/Phila.).

Tues., Feb. 22: Basketball Game.

Wed., Feb. 23: Tchaikovsky: Marche Slave (Reiner/Chicago); Beethoven: Sym. No. 3 in E-flat Major, Op. 55, "Eroica" (Bernstein/NYP); Ravel: Daphnis and Chloe (complete) Bernstein/NYP); Strauss: Don Quixote, Op. 35 (Ormandy/Phila.).

Thurs., Feb. 24: Basketball Game.

Film Classics to be Shown

"I am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang" is the first in a series of major American films to be presented in a new program entitled the American Film Classics beginning tonight in Hasbrouck 20 at 8:15.

The films will be chosen from films from 1914 to the present and will embrace all genres, including comedy, dramas, westerns and musicals.

According to the series' advisor, Dr. David Porter of the Engineering Dept., the series is intended to educate as well as entertain.

He said that later in the program lectures from four-college faculty will discuss the films and the evolution of the particular genre.

Come and Play

Faculty members and students are welcome to play in the University Varsity Band. The band will rehearse on Thursday from 4:40-5:55 p.m. in the Old Chapel. Music will include a variety of works for concert band, including original band works, transcriptions, marches, and lighter music. Call Mr. John Jenkins for more information, 545-2106.

Papa's Birthday

Governor Volpe has urged Massachusetts' citizens to display flags and conduct suitable exercises on Tuesday, February 22nd, in observance of Washington Day, the birthday anniversary of the nation's first President. The Chief Executive, himself, will be kept busy in the State House Hall of Flags, where he will participate in the traditional "hand-shaking" ceremony.

In proclaiming Washington Day, Governor Volpe said: "On February 22nd all Americans will pause to pay just honor to George Washington, first President of the United States and the 'Father of our Country'. Educated partly at a neighborhood school and partly by his brother our first national commander was a man with outstanding qualities of leadership which enabled him to lead this country's forces in the arduous but successful struggle for liberty."

Each program will include a feature film and a short subject. The shorts will include experimental films and one-reel comedies.

Appearing with Paul Muni in "Fugitive" will be Stan Brakhage's avant-garde "Desistfilm".

Future programs will include Bogart and Bacall in "The Big Sleep" Edward G. Robinson in "Little Caesar" and experimental by Andy Warhol and Kenneth Anger.

New Courses

As a result of increased demand, a new section has been added in Computer Science 121. This section will meet on Tuesdays and Thursday at 11:15 in the Engineering Laboratory, Room 307, starting March 1, 1966. Students wishing to register for this course should obtain Course Add Cards from the Registrar's Office and bring them to the Computer Science Office. Registration will be limited at 30 students.

Also, a short course in FORTRAN Programming will be offered for the Faculty and Graduate Students on March 2, 9, 16, and 30, 1966. The classes will be held in Room 132, Engineering Building from 3:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. Please notify Miss Dillmann, Ext. 2157 if you plan to attend these Wednesday sessions. All participants are urged to obtain a copy of "Basic Computer Programming" by Decima M. Anderson, which is available in the Bookstore.

UMass Cadets Expect Gen.

Major General Charles S. O'Malley, Jr., Commanding General of Fort Devens and XIII US Army Corps will visit the UMass campus on February 23 to inspect the UMass Army Cadet Brigade. He will discuss ROTC on Campus with President Lederle and then meet with Cadets of the Brigade to learn first hand about their activities here.

General O'Malley, a West Pointer and soldier for 30 years, has fought in two wars, commanded numerous Army units, taught at college level, and held important posts in Washington.

Psychologists Agree To Give Up Tests

A team of psychologists at St. Luke's Hospital said yesterday that it would surrender copies of a disputed psychological test given to 350 ninth-grade pupils here last month if school authorities so demanded.

The psychologists' action came as legislators in Albany and Washington prepared bills to prevent alleged "invasion of privacy" on minors without consent of parents.

The answer forms on the disputed test have been sent to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., to be analyzed by computers.

The psychologists said that if they had to surrender the forms, they would keep the psychological "profiles" produced by the computers because they said these would be useful in their search for potentially troubled youngsters.

The test had 566 questions. It was given on Jan. 10 to 14 and 15-year-old pupils at Junior High School 141 in Riverdale, the Bronx. The 19 questions on religion and 15 on sex—to be answered "true," "false" or "cannot say"—were reported to include such inquiries as:

"I feel sure there is only one true religion." "I am a special agent of God." "I believe my sins are unpardonable." "Evil spirits possess me at times."

"I have never been in trouble because of my sex behavior." "I believe women should have as much sexual freedom as men." "I have been disappointed in love."

Representative Benjamin Rosenthal, Democrat of Queens, said he would introduce legislation this week "to make sure this sort of invasion doesn't happen again." Mr. Rosenthal is one of the three members of the Special Inquiry on Invasion of Privacy in the House Government Operations Committee, which has been investigating psychological tests given to Federal employees.

Mr. Rosenthal said a similar bill would be filed at Albany this week by Assemblyman Sidney Leibowitz, Democrat of Queens.

In addition to J. H. S. 141, the test was given at the Hackley School in Tarrytown and the Horace Mann School in the Bronx, as part of an experimental program. The experiment is directed by Dr. Benjamin Belser, head of the nine-member team of psychologists at St. Luke's which is working under a $375,000 grant by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Dr. Belser has spent more than 12 years studying ways of predicting academic and emotional failures of young people and of helping to avert such failures by early help.

The St. Luke's teams scoffed at the assertion by the publisher of the tests, the Psychological Corporation, that it was not intended for young people, but for adults.

The test is the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory, designed to be the equivalent of a complete psychiatric examination. It was devised at the University of Minnesota during World War II by Dr. Stakre Hathaway and the late Dr. J. Charnley McKinley.

The team pointed out that Dr. Hathaway published "An Atlas of Juvenile M.M.P.I. Profiles" with E. D. Monachesi.

"An M.M.P.I. Handbook," also published by the University of Minnesota, tells of a study Dr. Hathaway made of ninth-grade pupils in Minnesota in 1957. About 15,000 pupils took the test and their median age was 15.

The use of the test by the public school in Riverdale is under investigation by Dr. Bernard E. Donovan, the Superintendent of Schools.

A set of the tests, prepared for computer scoring, was ordered through the Mayo Clinic, the St. Luke's team said. Though the children signed the answer forms, their names were blocked out and the forms were coded before they were sent back to the clinic, a spokesman explained.

At the clinic, the answers will be run through templates, which will sift and compare them in countless ways and then crank out psychological profiles of the pupils.

"Once this is done, the answers themselves are of no consequence because it is the profiles, rather than the specific answers, that are useful," the spokesman explained.

The team, therefore will surrender the answer forms if required, meaning it would no longer be able to check on how a pupil answered any single question.

WMUA Hosts Mgt. Talk

Starting salaries of $8,000 to $12,000 and the chance for stimulating work, personal growth and professional advancement are offered in management consulting to qualified candidates from graduate business schools, questioners were told in a panel discussion over station WMUA, Feb. 21, 1966.

PANELISTS, in the free-wheeling discussion were three undergraduate students and two management consultants. The three students were Samuel Wyrich of Harvard, Victor Bers, University of Chicago and Steven Brody, New York University. The management consultants were Richard F. Neuschel and James T. Bartlett of McKinsey & Company, Inc.

During the discussion Mr. Neuschel drew a sharp contrast between the "efficiency experts" of the past and modern day consultants. "The former," he said, "usually had a set of techniques for measuring work within standard time allowances."

Today the management consultant as opposed to being essentially an applier of technique is a business problem solver. He is concerned with the identification of a whole range of problems and the development of creative original solutions to these problems.

"QUALIFIED MEN who have completed graduate business school can command starting salaries of $8,000 to $12,000 a year in management consulting," said Mr. Bartlett. "Furthermore, there is ample opportunity to advance according to one's skills and effort. The firm benefits when these young men increase their contribution to our work."

Responding to questions, Mr. Neuschel said he believed the primary attraction of management consulting is its infinite diversity. "There is the opportunity to involve oneself in activities that challenge his mental equipment, and his interpersonal skills . . . also that there is an art and a science of management, in the way in which any nation manages its resources . . . of physical things . . . financial, raw materials and the like . . . so that the field of management can give the individual enormous satisfaction . . ."

QUERIED by Mr. Bers as to whether a technical academic background was essential, Mr. Neuschel pointed out that increasingly analytical techniques are being used.

Mr. Neuschel responded by saying there was no compelling reason why one should go into any of these fields in preference to another.

that have mathematical foundation are being used in solving some types of management problems, so that advanced mathematical education could be helpful in getting started in the consulting field.

In another vein, Samuel Wyrich of Harvard asked if management consultants had spare time for personal interests. Again Mr. Neuschel answered saying, "Great achievement in any field of endeavor requires a high level of absorption and a high level of personal effectiveness whether one becomes a great and renowned Greek scholar, an outstanding architect, an aeronautical engineer or a management consultant . . . I don't mean by this to imply that we become so pre-occupied with our professional pursuits and the affairs of our clients that we don't lead a normal, happy family life . . ."

Mr. Brody asked why he should go into business rather than going into government service, continuing in a university, working on research or teach-

Viet War Raises Doubts Of Veteran Status

WHO QUALIFIES as a veteran of the Vietnam conflict, and how large a state bonus should they receive? These are two of the questions being pondered today by the joint legislative committee on Military Affairs, after public hearings on a series of bills to grant state bonuses ranging from $100 to $500 to Vietnam veterans.

Two veterans organizations, the American Legion and the Disabled American Veterans, urged the committee to place the bills in a study, to define veteran, who is entitled to a bonus, and how much they should receive. But both organizations stressed that a bill should be reported out of the committee for action in the current session.

Senator William X. Wall (D-Lawrence), whose own bill calls for a $100 state bonus, told the committee he would support any bonus bill reported to the floor for action. "We are engaged in a real war although there are still some doubting Thomases," he declared.

REP. ELEANOR M. CAMPO-BASSO (D-Arlington) favored a bonus similar to that granted vets of WW II and the Korean conflict—$200 for state-side service, and $300 for overseas duty. Another bill, for a $500 bonus, was favored by Rep. Julie Gilligan (D-Lynn), who said the increase over the World War II-Korean bonus was necessary due to the rise in the cost of living.

Rep. Robert L. Cawley (D-Boston), House chairman of the Military Affairs committee, pointed out that a bill became law during the 1965 session to give those serving in Vietnam veterans status in the eyes of the state. He stated that the effective date of a bonus bill "is a bone of contention", due to differing dates as to when the U.S. participation in Vietnam actually commenced.

Smith Museum of Art Given Rare Picasso Painting

The Smith College Museum of Art today announced the gift of an extremely rare painting by Pablo Picasso. Jere Abbott of Dexter, Maine, who was director of the Museum from 1932 to 1946, has presented the College with his Picasso, Les Misérables, 1903.

The painting was done in Barcelona when the Spanish artist was 22 years old. It has also been called Les Pauvres au bord de la Mer and depicts three haggard people walking along a deserted beach. A thin man, who may be blind, is led by a small child. A woman wrapped in a rose shawl accompanies them.

The solitary figures depicted on this lonely beach occur repeatedly in Picasso's works at the beginning of the century. While other artists of the period set their figures in petty bourgeois rooms, Picasso's men and women inhabit a no-man's land, too apathetic, too homeless or too preoccupied to move. They are the eternal outcasts from ordinary life, and the stark settings serve to give them a timeless quality. Picasso shows man in the abstract confronting his destiny.

The prevailing tone of the canvas is blue. The almost exclusive use of blue in Picasso's work at this time has led art historians to refer to the years 1901-1904 as the "blue-period." Phoebe Pool, in her Picasso—The Formative Years writes that "the use of blue has never been satisfactorily explained."

It has been attributed to accidental circumstances—to the fact that Picasso was too poor to buy other colors and to his habit of working at night by lamp-light—and to psychological causes (Jung regarded it as evidence of incipient schizophrenia). Its origin is certainly more complex than this and connected with the artistic aims which Picasso was pursuing at this time.

Blue was a favorite colour, rich in associations, with both the Romantics and the Decadents. For the Romantics it was linked with the idea of mystery, of night and of love, while for the Decadents there was added the connotation of evil, and both ideas were familiar in Barcelona and Paris at the turn of the century."

Mr. Abbott came to Smith in 1932 from The Museum of Modern Art in New York where he had been one of the founding members of the staff. Applying the same standards of excellence that he had helped establish at the Modern Museum, he acquired for Smith such important works as the Picasso, La Table, 1920, the Corot, La Blonde Gasconne, three Seurats, a Bonnard Landscape, and the extremely rare 15th-century silver point drawing by Dirck Bouts.

In celebration of the new acquisition, the Smith College Museum of Art will hang the painting together with Mr. Abbott's first Museum purchase, Picasso's La Table, 1920, in Gallery IV with prints by Picasso from the collection. In addition, an exhibition of photographs of Picasso at work, distributed by the French American Cultural Services and Educational Aid, New York, will be hung in Wright Hall and in Alumnae House.

Finally, all objects currently on display in the Museum which came into the collection during Mr. Abbott's tenure of office will be marked with a special label. The public is cordially invited.

The Museum is open from 9:00 - 5:00 Monday through Saturday and from 2:30-4:30 on Sunday.

UW Sorority Charged With Discrimination

The Collegiate Press Service

The University of Wisconsin faculty declared in a vote last week that Kappa Delta sorority must cease all campus operations by Sept. 15, 1967, unless it submits a certificate of non-discrimination.

The faculty voted in May, 1964, to require a non-discrimination certificate, called "Certificate I," from all campus social organizations. Certificate I requires the signatures of both local and national officers.

The certificate states that the organization has "no provisions in the national or local constitution, by-laws, ritual, or any other controlling rules which require the student membership to refrain from considering for membership, pledging, electing, or initiating any students to membership on account of race, color, creed, or national origin."

The certificate also states that there are no provisions in any local or national rules "which indicate or imply that any person should be considered socially unacceptable as a member because of his race, color, creed, or national origin."

Faculty officials said the deadline for Kappa Delta's signing was set at Sept. 15, 1967, to give local KD officers another opportunity to change the position of the national officers at the next Kappa Delta national convention, scheduled for the summer of 1967.

"We wish to make it clear," the human rights committee report to the faculty said, "that the action recommended is intended to put Tau chapter (the Madison chapter) of Kappa Delta on notice and to terminate Kappa Delta's presence on this campus automatically on Sept. 15, 1967, if a properly signed Certificate I has not been submitted before that time."

The Committee pointed out in its report that the Wisconsin chapter of the sorority had made strenuous efforts to change the national officers' petition. A resolution, supported by the Wisconsin chapter, empowered national Kappa Delta executive officers to sign certificates of non-discrimination was adopted at the national convention last July, but was declared unconstitutional by the national president.

TRUCK PROVIDES SURPRISE CARNI SHOW; RESCUE SUCCEEDS

BY DICK DANCA, News Staff

A goggle-eyed, pin-striped red sea monster stuck its snout out of the campus pond to the cheers of hundreds late Friday Afternoon.

The monster was "Whittie's Engine No. Two," a small red truck owned by the grounds dept., taking its almost annual pre-Winter Carnival plunge through the ice.

Winter Carnival started at 1:20 p.m. with a muffled bang and crackle for groundskeeper George Whitcomb making his third unplanned midwinter swim in the 1953 Ford Toro truck.

Whitcomb was plowing the ice for Saturday's Carnival events when the truck apparently hit a crack and settled into about six feet of water and mud.

He then opened the window, pushed the ice out then opened the door to escape, according to Herman Bergeron who helped direct salvage operations.

Bergeron also said the truck had just come out of the garage with a new engine after last year's dunking.

12-15" Thick

Groundskeepers working with chain-saws, long handled ice choppers and two-by-fours cleared a 30 foot long channel in the ice.

Workers estimated ice thickness to be between 12 and 15 inches.

Another sea-creature was then called to the rescue. Maintenance foreman Alan Cameron slipped beneath the freezing water in black and yellow wet suit and SCUBA to attach a chain to the truck's rear frame.

The heavy chain was lashed to a one-half inch cable on the winch of the ground's department's "tree truck."

A heavy front-end loader was brought in and chained to the front of the tree truck for added weight and the tug-of-war commenced.

80-ft. Crane in Reserve

Edmund Ryan, supt. of buildings and grounds said an 80-foot boom crane would have been used if the winch failed. Ryan had the area cleared to prevent injury should the cable snap.

When two campus police cars arrived, the officers were greeted with boos and hisses when they stepped out of their still-running vehicles.

One wag yelled "give 'em a ticket" when the cars were parked on the pond's grass.

When the winch-cable tightened, the red truck started to move, then began to slip further beneath the water. Again the students cheered.

About half way to shore the truck rose high enough to show the lug-eyed uppermost set of headlights on its hood and the uttering "Engine No. Two."

Only Tee-Shirt Awash

The vehicle's left door was opened flush against the hood and an oil-begrimed tee shirt floated out of the cab. The steering wheel turned from side to side.

After some more maneuvering, the truck was stranded in shallow water to allow the towing vehicles to switch position.

Precarious rescue operations progress as students brave the cold to watch.

A worker reached into the cab with a two-by-four to shift the truck's gears to neutral and jokingly asked co-workers if he should shut off the ignition.

Chains on His Rear-end

The front end loader's front end bucket was chained to Whittie's rear end and the small dump truck with a plow up front and ice cakes in back was hoisted onto solid ground.

Inside was a wrench, one work glove and a large piece of a lacy white slip.

The small truck that likes to play fish was towed back to its garage, and workers left sawhorses near the refreezing channel in case some students decide to play truck.

Cyclists Beware! Have Mufflers or else!

Motorcycle dealers and operators were warned "to place their own house in order" by a spokesman of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, who appeared at a hearing before the committee on Highways and Motor Vehicles to oppose a bill to require cycles to have mufflers and governors to restrict speed at not more than 45 miles an hour.

Joseph F. Walsh, legislative assistant to Registrar Richard E.

McLaughlin, said a law to require mufflers on cycles is already on the books, and all it requires is policing. But he added "this is a two-way street—dealers must dedicate themselves to highway safety and instruct buyers as to the proper use of the vehicles."

Representatives of the motorcycle industry appeared before the committee to oppose a series of bills to require that operators and passengers on cycles wear helmets. The proposal was supported by the registry, however, as being a step in the right direction to minimize fatalities on the highways. Registrar McLaughlin's spokesman pointed out that while a low rate of fatalities occur among cyclists, those that do result from head injuries.

THANKS

To the Editor:

Last week the Student Senate, showing concern for future Student activities on this campus, appropriated money to the U-Mass Scuba Club for an air compressor. Members of the Scuba Club would like to extend their thanks to the Senate for their help in assisting us in the continuation of our program, both present and future. As of now, the Scuba Club is the only organization on campus where students can learn to dive safely. This compressor will not only enable us to carry on our instructional program, but will also make it possible for experienced divers to obtain air. In the past we have been hampered by the lack of a convenient air supply. Now our present functions and future growth appear to be secure, and for this intellectual and moral judgement, we are grateful.

Sincerely,
Stephen Kennedy
President, UMass Scuba Club

Frosh Quintet Whips UConn, 74-62, for 6th

by TOM FITZGERALD

Avenging a 68-62 loss to UConn earlier this month at the Cage, the UMass Frosh built up a huge lead and snuffed out a late flurry by the Little Huskies to post a 74-62 victory Saturday afternoon at the UConn Field House in Storrs.

THE WIN WAS THE SIXTH STRAIGHT for the Freshmen and lifted their record to a robust 10-3. Their strong opponents received this sixth loss in 14 decisions.

Coach Charlie Kingston's charges face crucial tests in their last two appearances this week, hosting Leicester Junior College tomorrow night and traveling to Holy Cross on Thursday. Along with UConn, these two teams own the only victories over the Little Redmen this season, Leicester by 91-82 and Holy Cross by 94-80.

AFTER LEADING against UConn, 41-29, at the half, UMass cut loose on the scoring of Mike Gemei, Ron Nowakowski, and John Shockro. With a masterful driving basket by Joe DiSarcina, UMass reached its peak with a 58-33 cushion with 13 minutes remaining.

UConn, however, got a shot in the arm from three consecutive hoops by Bruce Drummond and knocked off 13 straighten points to trail by 12 with nine minutes left. Although Alan Fisher came through with a pair of field goals for UMass, UConn, sparked by eight points from guard Fred Malan, cut the lead to 64-56 with two-and-a-half left.

AT THAT POINT, it was Nowakowski who put the game on ice with a basket, two free throws, and a good feed to Fisher, all sandwiched around a UConn basket. UMass thus held a 70-58 advantage with a minute left.

UConn battled the Little Redmen on even terms during the first quarter, although Shockro's show-stopping three-point play on a driving hook shot put UMass on top, 16-13, after 10 minutes. UMass asserted itself with a 25-16 count in the second quarter.

IM REPORT

by DAVE JARNES

THE GRAYSON ACES, who don't have a starter over six feet tall, proved that their regular season victory over the Plymouth Patriots was no fluke with an easy 53-33 romp over the same club.

For all intents and purposes the game was over at the half as Grayson took a 30-16 lead at intermission. Little Tom Rossi, who chipped in with 8 points, continually set up big guns Jack Thomas (21 points) and Dave Smithers (16 points) while the aggressive Aces' defense forced the Patriots into many wild shots.

TED FERRY'S 11 points paced the Colt .45's balanced attack to a 42-41 win over the Cherrys in a playoff for the South league title. The Colts play the Aces in a semifinal dormitory championship game tonight at 6:30. In the other semifinal tilt the Webster Rams will be pitted against the Gorman Mayles. This game will also be at 6:30 as will be the Untouchable-Moody Blues battle for the Independent title.

THE DORM - FRATERNITY ALL-STAR GAME will be played at the Cage on Thursday at 8:00. The dorm all-stars are Burt Ca-

An even distribution of rebounds among starters Nowakowski (13), Peter Gayeska (11), DiSarcina (9), Gemei (7), and Shockro (6) gave UMass a 57-47 edge under the boards. Gemei, with a 9 for 12 performance from the field for the second straight game, led the winners with 20 points. Nowakowski and Shockro followed with 18 and 12.

MALAN PACED UCONN with 22 tallies, followed by Drummond with 15. The Little Huskies suffered from a poor 33 percent showing from the field.

That big game with Leicester tomorrow night will start, as usual, a 6 o'clock, preceding the varsity affair with St. John's. The junior college is led by a 6'8" rebounding machine named Tony Koski and a supporting cast of Ken Burns, Bob Lindgren, and Ron Baronowski.

The hustling Varsity Sextet came about as close as they could possibly get to pulling off the upset of the season. Saturday afternoon as they dropped a 6-5 overtime decision to powerful UNH before a Winter Carnival crowd of 1400.

FOLLOWING THE REMOVAL from the team of three starters by Coach Steve Kosakowski because they "had never gotten in shape and were holding the team back," the Umie sextet had a sudden rebirth of spirit and drive which had been notably lacking this season.

Playing with only 11 men dy (Rams), Chuck Webster (Buffaloes), Ted Ferry (Colts), Bob Higgenbotham (Lemons), Lenny Mees (Barracudas), Bill Carty (Patriots), Jack Thomas (Aces), Tom Kucab (Birch), Jay Kenney (Trojans), and Ray Stanells (Patriots). The Fraternity all stars are comprised of Goose Sagesse (SPE), John Hall (QTV), Jeff Larson (LCA), Ted Carpenter (ATG), Brian Lajole (ZN), Bill Foisy (PSD), Bob Detore (KS), Jim Kane (BKP), Ron Merrill (TKE), and Al Kline (AEP). The coaches for the dorms are Stan Flint (Buffaloes) and Joe Burke (Flamingo A's) while the fraternity coaches are Dan Meagher (ZN) and Walt Rozanski (KS).

A WRESTLING CLINIC will be held for the benefit of all participants in the intramural wrestling tournament this Wednesday at 7:00 P.M. in the Boyden Wrestling room.

Talented Huskies Continue Home Hex Over Redmen

by GLENN BRIERE

Connecticut's pressing defense and strong shooting were the factors as the Huskies sent UMass down to defeat for the second time this year Saturday at Storrs. The Redmen played well in the first half, but they collapsed in the second half and UConn rolled to a 91-64 victory.

A capacity crowd of 4260 saw the Huskies break the game wide open early in the second half with an effective zone press. Oddly enough, the Redmen held their own in rebounding, but their offensive work left something to be desired. The scrappy hustling of Clarence Hill enabled them to stay close in the first half, but they lost whatever finesse they had in the second half. Nor could they cope with the prolific shooting of UConn's Wes Bialosuknia and Tom Penders, who each shot 50% from the floor.

The only time that UMass led in the game was with fifteen minutes left in first half. Hill's shooting and Frank Stewart's rebounding gave them a 10-8 lead. Then they went sour while Connecticut caught fire, and two minutes later the Huskies were leading, 18-10. UMass was able to stay reasonably close, however due to the fact that they outdid themselves in rebounding. Billy Tindall and Frank Stewart controlled the offensive boards, but the Redmen couldn't put the ball through the hoop. With six minutes to go in the half, Connecticut ran off another streak and took a fifteen point lead. UMass came back with a mild rally, and UConn led, 41-30, at the half.

The first half saw the Redmen rebound quite well against Connecticut's aggressive defense. Their shooting was poor, however, and many of their shots were blocked. Nevertheless, they looked like they might give UConn some trouble in the second half.

This was not to be the case. From the outset the Huskies thoroughly dominated play. Fred Shabel's outfit put on a zone press that completely flustered the Redmen, and by the five minute mark they had outscored their opponents, 21-5. From here on they coasted in. During that one-sided five-minute period, about all UMass could do was foul. By the end of the game, three of the starting five had fouled out, including Tindall, Gasperack and Hill.

Wes Bialosuknia, Bill Corley and Tom Penders led UConn, scoring 26, 20 and 19 points respectively. Corley, who appears to have filled Toby Kimball's shoes, grabbed 16 rebounds. Clarence Hill was the only Redmen to reach double figures, and despite the fact that he scored only 18 points, he played a good, aggressive game. As a team, UConn shot 51% while Massachusetts shot only 37%. The Huskies led in rebounds, 53-46. Not showing in the statistics are the many times that UMass lost the ball as a result of UConn's press.

A crucial YanCon battle is slated for March 1, when Connecticut meets Rhode Island at Storrs. The Redmen, who are now 9-12, will be back in action on Tuesday night when they face a strong St. John's team at the Cage. This game will be preceded by a freshmen tilt between the revenge-minded UMass frosh and Leicester Jr. College at 6:00.

Sudden Death Strikes Again As Pucksters Lose To UNH, 6-5

against the fifteen used by UNH, the Redmen showed that they have the potential to be a top team. Junior Bill Skowyrza opened the scoring for the locals at 8:54 of the first period when he took a pass from Dave Eaton and slammed it home for the Redmen's first tally. Fred Molander added another marker two minutes later with the assist going to Greg Stone. The latter made it 3-0 in favor of the Umies at 11:20 on a rebound from shots by Molander and Frank Buckler.

SECOND PERIOD ACTION had the tables reversed, and a goal by UNH's Walsh and two by Rothwell made it 3-3 at the 16:00 mark. Not to be outdone, Bill Skowyrza added his second goal of the day with 12 seconds remaining to give the home crowd something to cheer about.

Dave Eaton put the Redmen out in front 5-3 at the 44 second mark of the third period, but the Wildcats closed the gap with goals by Thorn and Houston. Only the superb goaltending of Umie Netminder Ed Sanborn preventing the visitors from ending it right there.

IN THE OVERTIME, superb play by defensemen Feldhoff, Demars, Ledwick and Graney held UNH to but 5 shots on goal. Numerous scoring threats by both teams failed to materialize until UNH hit the nets at about the 9:00 minute mark, only to have the score disallowed because of a man in the crease. Hungry for the win, UNH won it on Dude Thorn's tally with only 34 seconds remaining, and the Redmen had suffered their fifth overtime loss of the season.

THE PUCKSTERS leave Monday night for a Tuesday afternoon contest with Vermont and are at home against M.I.T. on Friday evening at 7:00 P.M.

Trackmen Lose

by TERRY CARPENTER

Despite a 14-point performance by co-captain John Medeiros, the track team suffered its first defeat of the season at the hands of a powerful Northeastern team.

THE LONE bright spot of the meet for the Redmen was John Hall's victory in the 45 yd. high hurdles, tying Medeiros' four-day-old school record of 6.0. Medeiros placed second in the race. In the broad jump, Medeiros remained undefeated, capturing the event with a 22' 3" leap. Art Larvey was second.

Other places for the Redmen included a third place for Steve Burrell in the dash, a second for Medeiros in the low hurdles, a second for John Anderson in the 600, a second for Bill Thoms in the 1000, a third for Paul Freedman in the shot, a third for the injured Bob Murray in the pole vault, and a second for Medeiros in the high jump. The March 2 and is against the UConn Huskies at Storrs.

Scoring:
I UM-Skowyrza (Eaton, Feldhoff) 8:54. UM-Molander (Stone) 10:54. UM-Stone (Molander, Buckler) 11:20.

Another Hi-Rise Given Approval for UMass

Reprinted from Greenfield Recorder-Gazette
Preliminary sketches for a 28-story, $10-million library in front of South College were approved in Boston yesterday by University of Massachusetts trustees.

The annual meeting also re-elected Dr. Frank L. Boyden of Deerfield chairman; Joseph P. Healey of Boston, vice-chairman, and Robert McCartney, UM director of university relations, secretary.

TRUSTEE JOHN W. HAIGIS, JR., of Greenfield became a member of the executive committee after a change in bylaws which automatically makes every subcommittee chairman a member. Haigis is chairman of the subcommittee on buildings and grounds.

The site of the building had been hinted at before but this was the first disclosure of its size. The 28-story structure will rise above the university's already familiar hi-rise Southwest Complex, five 22-story dormitories, and the 20-story Graduate Research Center already on the planning boards. The library should be the highest building west of Boston.

Haigis said today trustees have given the library plans "the highest priority" in the building program.

"A complete library is the very heart of the learning center at the university," Haigis said today.

HE SAID THIS LIBRARY, designed by architect Edward Durell Stone, noted for his embassy in New Delhi and the Lincoln Center in New York City, represents an exciting new concept in library science.

Its vertical construction, alternating between every two floors of stack areas one floor of study area, will make it "extremely convenient" for students desiring to be near their reference material, he added.

Haigis said the building will contain two-million books.

University Plans Call for Immense Expansion in the Next Ten Years

by JOYCE HARVEY

With plans for 25,000 students on the UMass Amherst campus within 10 years, the administration and the university architects have had to project the number of necessary additions and developments to meet this increased number.

Latest plans for the campus include 13-story buildings, an underground student center, a tunnel between class-room wings, and an underpass for the Southwest Complex residents. The intramural fields behind Boyden will stretch to the Route #116 by-pass, and a four-lane road will separate the First Baptist Church and the Newman Center.

There will also be a high-rise library in mid-campus. (See Library story, this page.)

THE GRADUATE research Center with its three towers, each of 13 floors, will be situated where the Abbey now is. Here the graduate students and other advanced-degree candidates will be able to continue their research and studies with the more readily available materials.

The proposed University Center, also called the Adult Education Building, will house the student-activities center underground. In the two floors underground, the student-oriented activities and a large university store will be located. The 10 floors above ground will be available for conference groups that come to the university. Along with the numerous conference rooms will be accommodations for room and board.

The west addition to Bartlett will be built where the tennis courts are now. This five-story addition will connect with the main building by means of an overpass. A tunnel will join the new east addition to the main classroom section.

Eventually it is hoped that

N. Pleasant Street will not divide the campus, rather, that all traffic will be routed around the area. With the construction of a four-lane road from N. Pleasant Street to the Route 116 by-pass and passing between the First Baptist Church and the Newman Center, traffic will be directed away from the major part of the campus. A general-parking area will be located southeast of the Lincoln-boulevard intersection. The boulevard will widen at the Sunset Avenue intersection to include a 60 foot wide median strip to the N. Pleasant Street entrance. A large underpass will be constructed at the Boyden road intersection for the Southwest Complex residents.

PLYMOUTH AND SUFFOLK Houses seem to be the only County Circle dorms that will need to be removed to allow room for the boulevard.

Constit. Conven. Convenes Tonight

by KAREN ROSE, Senate Editor

Expediency will keynote both the Constitutional Convention and the regular Senate meeting tonight.

Senator Benezra will present a bill at the Convention that calls for a meeting of the four class officers and the Executive Committee of the Senate at least one week prior to any Constitutional Convention.

At this meeting the officers and the senators would discuss points on the convention agenda but no vote of any kind would be taken.

Senators Arnie Kaufman, Lynn Stowe, and Low Gurwitz will present a motion under regular Senate business that will allow non-Senate members to speak at meetings.

IN THE WORDS of the bill "Any R.S.O. which has business before the Student Senate may send one representative before the Senate, who shall have all the privileges of a Senator . . . except the vote . . ."

Senator Lew Luchans, in keeping with the theme of expediency will bring up a motion that all bills, except those brought up under special business, be tabled for from one to four weeks. During this time open hearings on the bills shall be held, and revisions and amendments shall be made, thus saving much time on the floor.

Three bills concerning the student judiciary bodies will be brought before the Constitutional convention. The first of these bills calls for an amendment to the Student Government Constitution by which, in all disciplinary cases undertaken by judiciary bodies, evidence submitted and testimony received would be made openly and publically at the discretion of the defendant.

In the section of the SGA Constitution concerning summonses the proposed amendment includes four stipulations to be stated on the summons. 1. the rule of regulation allegedly violated, 2. the specifics of the alleged violation, 3. the time and place of the alleged violation, and 4. the person(s) reporting the alleged violation.

THE FINAL AMENDMENT to the constitution proposes that the Senate provide and determine the procedures to be used by judiciary, the records to be kept, the officers of the courts, their functions, duties and selection.

A definition of Senate membership will also be brought up tonight. Former Senator Dick Wimberley's motion for Senate

UM Spring Colloquia Begins Thursday P.M.

A talk Thursday, Feb. 24, by Dr. John A. Howard of Columbia University will begin the Spring Colloquia of the University of Massachusetts School of Business Administration.

The colloquia are three talks on current business topics by outstanding authorities presented for students, faculty, and members of the community.

In the first of the three, Dr. Howard, marketing professor at Columbia, will discuss "The Theory of Buyer Behavior" at 4 p.m. in Room 120 of the School of Business Administration.

Dr. Howard received his Ph.D. in economics from Harvard University in 1952 and has taught at the Universities of Chicago and Pittsburgh.

He has published articles on buyer behavior in several publications, and is the author of "Marketing: Executive and Buyer Behavior," and two other books on marketing.

He has served as a marketing consultant with a number of companies, including British Petroleum, London.

The two other colloquia speakers will be Dr. John Dearden of Harvard, Mar. 15, on computer technology and Dr. Clarence C. Walton, Dean of the Columbia School of General Studies, April 26 on administrative decisions.

Sex Education Instituted to Combat Teenage Ignorance

Reprinted from the Springfield Union

Due to an alarming increase in illegitimate births, illegal abortions and venereal disease among American teenagers, an unprecedented number of schools have instituted grade and high school courses in sex education.

According to a report in a national weekly news magazine the emphasis on sex education in U.S. schools is viewed as one of the most effective ways to combat teen ignorance on the subject.

To illustrate a need for sex education for teenagers, the report cited the following facts based on national surveys: (1) At least a third of high school brides are pregnant as they march down the aisle; (2) Girls seventeen and under account for 22 per cent of all illegitimate births; (3) In 1964 alone girls of high school age aborted 180,000 pregnancies; (4) reported cases of syphilis among teenagers have more than tripled since 1956—young people under 20 account for more than one in five cases of venereal disease.

The report said sex instruction administered in classrooms counters the failure of most parents to adequately inform their children on matters of physical love and sex.

A survey by a Washington, D.C. physician showed that only one in 14 teenagers receives sex information from his parents before learning it from other teenagers, the magazine reported. Only one in 22 learns about VD from his parents.

The reaction among grade and high school students to classroom sex instruction is surprisingly mature, commented the author: Their "curiosity is insatiable, unblushing and healthy."

The article said one of the greatest obstacles in the path toward wide acceptance of sex education in schools is shyness of teachers and the resistance of parents.

"Sex education in the U.S. has been largely prissy, inadequate and confused," the article stated. "Teachers and parents alike seem incapable of comprehending the candor with which teenagers are capable of discussing sex today."

A prominent educator quoted in the report said, "We need a new generation of people to do this right."

College Entrance Exams to Face Possible Appraisal, Says Hines

Reprinted from the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette

Harvard University's successful experience with 200 students selected from backgrounds of poverty and low-educational opportunity may result in a reappraisal of the importance of College Board entrance examinations, American International College President John F. Hines said Saturday.

Admiral Hines said Harvard admissions' officials are due much of the credit in selecting the 200 for scholarship aid.

He said he felt that too much emphasis may be given to the results of College Board entrance examinations and not enough to the particular student's high school record in college admissions.

Harvard announced last week it had great success with the 200, who were selected partly for their courageous response to a poverty-stricken upbringing. More than 50 per cent were Negroes.

Since the experiment began in 1957, 85 per cent of those selected graduated, several with honors and one with a Rhodes scholarship.

The students kept pace academically with their more fortunate associates from the nation's best preparatory schools and its academically strong public high schools.

They did it, said Harvard Dean of Admissions Fred L. Glimp, "without overcompensating, without burning all the bridges of their past behind them."

In selecting the 200, Glimp said Harvard overlooked low scores on entrance examinations to give consideration to those whose records and interviews indicated they were psychologically tough and resilient.

Admiral Hines noted that Harvard's experience in graduating 85 per cent of the group compared with the national college dropout average of about 50 per cent.

"We've been lucky about half the time. Half of those admitted don't graduate — but for many reasons other than academic, such as financial and personal problems," Admiral Hines said.

Future Collegian Editors and Staffers are invited to a training program tonight at 6:30 in Collegian office.

Trees to Adorn Campus

The new Fine Arts Building will be constructed at the south end of the campus pond, causing the pond to be shortened and widened. In this building will be several auditoriums including one that will hold a capacity of 2400.

Two additions to the west of Machmer are planned: a 10-story tower of faculty offices, and a one-floor section with three large lecture rooms.

UNIVERSITY DRIVE in Amherst will be extended to connect with the new boulevard just east of the stadium. From this extension, two roads will lead to the stadium.

The new Administration Building is planned to be completed in the next school year. South College will probably provide faculty offices.

The "new campus-look" will not be without its trees and color. Along the university boulevard between the stadium and the Boyden intersection will be a single line of London plane-trees. Double rows of the London plane-tree will line the boulevard from Boyden to N. Pleasant Street. The Southwest Complex underpass will be lined with pines, maples, oaks, dogwoods, and the underpass itself will be vine covered.

NORWAY MAPLES, flower crabapples, and shademaster locust will provide color and brightness to the new parking area. More flowering trees and evergreen will be planted at the N. Pleasant Street entrance to the boulevard to provide privacy for the two chapels.

Near the Administration Building will be a mall doubly lined with Lindens. The University Drive extension and the two roads leading to the stadium will be lined with red maples.

Already new landscape has provided beauty and color for the campus. "Christmas trees" have been planted in the Quad, the Orchard, and the Southwest. The sidewalks around the library and South College have been widened, and trees and shrubs have been transplanted to improve the appearance of the campus.

Plans only in the thinking-stage include an addition to the Education Building, the removing of Munson Hall and the South College to provide prime locations for further necessary additions, a Northwest residence area, and the total elimination of the N. Pleasant Street section through the university.

Hoping to establish better interracial communication in Springfield, CORE will present The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem Sat., Feb. 26 at 8:30 p.m. in the Springfield Municipal Aud. Tickets can be purchased at the door or in advance at the Del Padre Store in Amherst.

ASCOTS AROUND AT U. OF PENN.

NEW YORK, N. Y. — A pert pre-med student has been honored by Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for her venture into the business world.

Anne Cowan, a 19-year-old University of Pennsylvania sophomore, was presented with a plaque for her selection as the college student with the best original idea for boosting campus income.

She manufactures and sells reversible ascots. They are helping to finance both her and her sister's educations.

The plaque, along with $250 for first prize, was donated by the Development of Student Work Opportunities, a non-profit organization set up to encourage and help students earn money.

Since Miss Cowan and her sister, Mary Kay, obtained a manufacturing license in August, they have earned over $1,000 in ascot profits. And business is improving.

Today, the two have hired other college girls to do their needle work and are selling the ascots wholesale to one of Philadelphia's largest department stores.

The blonde entrepreneur believes that ascots have a good chance of catching on with the campus crowd.

"An ascot is an article which lends itself only to certain areas and to a certain kind of dresser," she says, "so therefore the market would seem limited."

'Collegian' Training Sessions Open For Day Editor Candidates

A series of four training classes opens tonight at 6:30 at the SU's Middlesex Room for candidates for the Collegian elections of editors.

ALVIN F. OICKLE, the newspaper's technical consultant and UMass lecturer in Journalistic Studies, will open the program with a seminar in professional techniques. He will cover copy-editing, makeup and headline writing.

On Friday at 4:30 p.m., Dr. Dario Politella, coordinator of student publications and assistant professor of English and Journalistic Studies, will lecture on "Libel and Legal Responsibilities of the College Newspaper."

The third lecture will be given Monday at 6:30 by Dr. Arthur B. Musgrave, professor of English and Journalistic Studies, on "The Collegian and Its Community."

The concluding lecture will be given March 1 by Mr. Oickle and Milton Mayers, distinguished journalist who is teaching writing at UMass. The topic will be "Social and Technical Responsibilities of the College Press."

Purpose of the program is to help provide candidates for the dozen editorships to be filled at March 3 elections with a background in some of the college press' problems. Each candidate must attend at least three of the four sessions and the first tonight is required for all candidates.

PROPOSED 'COLLEGIAN' REVAMP

The following motions were approved at a 3-hour meeting of the Collegian staff on Feb. 20, 1966. Editor Peter Hendrickson, '66 presided. The motions were submitted by Dr. Arthur Musgrave, adviser to the Collegian from 1946 to 1954 and an honorary member of its Publishing Board.

1. The Collegian shall be organized on the principle of giving clearly-defined authority and responsibility and recognition to a maximum number of students.

2. AT LEAST 12 editorships can have clearly-defined authority on a tri-weekly—these being an editor-in-chief of the News Dept., Editorial (Opinion) Dept., Feature Dept., and Sports Dept. of the Monday and the Wednesday and the Friday newspaper. (In other words, one student can be in charge of each basic function of a newspaper, and each issue of a tri-weekly can have a different student in charge of each basic function, with coordination and cooperation between them being achieved by a variety of means, such as common membership on a Senior Board and common knowledge of journalism norms.)

3. THE NEWSPAPER can and should be organized as a team operation, with the work and responsibility and authority so distributed that no job will require a student to spend more time than one 3-credit course usually requires, or 8-10 hours weekly, in order for the student to do a competent job.

4. NEWSPAPER POLICIES should be determined democratically by a Senior Board that includes the editors in charge of the basic departments on each of the three newspapers—with at least a majority of the Senior Board members being juniors when they take office. (In the fall semester, the Outgoing Seniors should conduct a training program in Advanced Competitions for members of the junior class in order to leave a competent corps of successors behind them—successors who can improve the newspaper.)

5. MEMBERS OF THE SENIOR BOARD should intend to serve for one year; that is, juniors should not intend to leave the Senior Board until near the start of their final senior semester even if they change positions. (An Editorial Page Editor and a Feature Page Editor could, for example, switch jobs (with the approval of the Personnel Director) after one semester, with both finishing their Senior Board terms.)

6. THE EDITORS-IN-CHIEF of the basic departments—News, Editorial, Feature, and Sports or other departments—should be regarded as holding co-equal positions; that is, there should be no other editor who is regarded as holding a higher position for this would create ambiguity over responsibility. (In short, one person should be in charge of each basic function.)

7. THE PERSONNEL DIRECTOR, or the Chairman of the Senior Board, should not use the title of "editor," although they should be regarded as being equally important as the students who are in charge of the basic editorial departments, for these administrative jobs are essential. (In other words, the title "Executive Editor" in the constitution would be changed through proper amendment procedures, and the Personnel Director, or the Chairman, would not use the title "Editor-in-chief." It could be used by at least 12 students who are in charge of basic editorial departments.)

8. THESE 12 OR MORE EDITORS should be elected by the staff and should then appoint their associates. They may also elect their chairman, who will serve as their representative, and their Personnel Director.

9. PERSONS WHO HOLD elective positions shall appoint their staff associates as they think necessary, with the Personnel Director settling any personnel disputes. (The Monday news department's editor-in-chief, for example, could appoint a managing editor, a makeup editor, and several other associates.)

10. DUTIES OF ALL EXECUTIVE positions should be defined in writing and correlated with the time needed to handle them competently.

'COLLEGIAN'—Equal Opportunity Employer

By JIM FOU DY, News Editor

As it was recorded in last Monday's Collegian, this paper will undergo extensive reorganization beginning with the election of March 3rd. Beneath the formal statement of change lie certain principles which are fundamental to the collegiate press and which will hopefully bear fruit as a result of this reorganization.

As a "free and responsible press" the Collegian has an obligation to produce the finest newspaper possible by student journalists. In order to do this the paper must have the cooperation of a minimum of 40 people who are willing to spend a few hours a week putting together a newspaper. Since we have found it difficult in the past to induce people to work on the staff, the first goal of the new policy will be to create incentives for interested persons who might have some latent journalistic ambitions.

Secondly, it is the hope of the present sophomore and junior editors that the new policy will cut down the amount of time spent by one individual and thereby leave more time for academic pursuits. This proposed elimination of the time problem should also help ease the mind of students previously hesitant about joining the staff.

It has never been the policy of this paper to limit elective positions to a chosen few who have proven themselves to be merely friends of the editor. Unfortunately, the turn out for elective positions has been small due to the amount of time and skill required to hold the positions. The creation of 15 co-equal editorships should theoretically reduce the time element and, along with the established training program, should provide the necessary incentive to create a well organized and efficient staff. However, its biggest problem is still manpower.

It is now up to the present staffers and to the interested persons of this campus community to provide the necessary support a newspaper of this size needs. The barrier of skill can be overcome if a few hardworking people show interest. The opportunity is up for the asking; the next step is yours to make.

lion volumes, compared with the 450,000 volumes at Goodell Library and scattered in other buildings across campus. The key to the new idea in construction, suggested by UMass Treas. Kenneth Johnson, will have service areas underground, said Haigis.

APPROXIMATELY $375,000 will be asked in this year's capital outlay appropriation for preliminary drawings and funds for construction will be sought next year. Authorization of funds by the legislature will allow construction under this schedule for a start by the fall of 1967 or spring of 1968, Haigis said.

In other matters yesterday, trustees inspected work at the UMass-Boston building and approved an Atlantic Studies Program in association with the University of Freiburg in Germany. Twenty-five students who qualify will be sent to study in Germany during their junior year.

Protagonist or Protector? Polymer Scientists Will Gather For Conference

by NANCY LEIBOVITZ

"Free press and fair trial involve the rights of every citizen," Alfred Friendly, associate editor of the Washington Post, declared in a lecture Monday at Amherst College.

The distinguished, white-haired newsman reported that pre-trial news coverage of criminal cases can seriously hinder the defendant's right to an impartial jury.

He pointed out, however, that potential juror prejudice is not necessarily transformed into fact, particularly in large cities where people have other things to think about.

He claimed that there can be as much injustice in denying the defendant access to the public as in overwhelming him with press coverage.

"Proposed solutions to this problem have ranged from more intensive questioning of prospective jurors to complete suppression of news until after the trial," he said.

"However, no proposal yet has presented an all-encompassing solution," he went on, lounging casually in a chair. "Journalism means the news today, not six months after it happened!"

He stressed that it is simply not within man's wisdom to devise rigid rules which the press can follow in all cases.

FURTHERMORE, he said he believes that publishing background information or the criminal record of a defendant is often necessary if the public is to get a complete story.

"After all," he exclaimed, "how do you write about Jimmy Hoffa without referring to his past history, especially if he's being tried for bribing a previous jury?"

Tilting his glasses over his nose, he concluded that if the Constitution's authors envisioned the press to be a watchdog of justice, it has no better place to scrutinize than the whole court system.

"In theory, the legal system is perfect, but in practice it doesn't exist," he said strongly.

Polymer Scientists Will Gather For Conference

Polymer scientists from industrial laboratories and leading schools specializing in the field will gather at the University of Massachusetts Sat., Feb. 25, for a one-day conference on polymer education.

The conference is sponsored by the UM Polymer Research Institute, center for advanced research in plastics, fibers and other polymer compounds.

"THE CONFERENCE is an attempt to bring together representatives of leading schools offering programs in polymer science and representatives of industrial laboratories employing significant numbers of polymer scientists in an effort to explore current educational trends, determine their success, and to indicate needs for new programs," according to Dr. Richard S. Stein, institute director and conference chairman.

THE SPEAKERS include Dr. Thomas Fox of Mellon Institute on modern education needs;

Prof. Eric Baer of Cast Institute on a polymer graduate program; Prof. Bernhard Wunderlich of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute on polymer science education; Dr. Rolf Buchdahl of the Chemstrand Research Center on training for research in fibers and textiles.

Also, Dr. S. Aggarwal, research director for General Tire and Rubber Co., on training for industrial polymer scientists; Prof. Malcolm Dole of Northwestern Univ. on Northwestern's graduate polymer program; Dr. John Keane, GE manager of polycarbonate development, on educational requirements for research and development; Dr. Leon St. Pierre of McGill Univ. on industrial research attitudes and orientation; Dr. Roger Porter of the Chevron Research Laboratory on technical specialists with emphasis on polymer science; Dr. R. D. Andrews of Stevens Institute on polymer education there.

Any Student Senator who voluntarily moves from his constituency shall lose his Senate seat unless this move occurs at the end of the Spring semester."

If a bill proposed by Senator Gary Bombardier passes each class treasurer will have to file written copies of all category changes and expenditures over $25 with the Senate Treasurer and the R.S.O. Business Manager.

UNDER SENATE BUSINESS Mike Garjian's bill proposing a $25 loan, available to all students during the two weeks following registration, will be acted on at tonight's meeting.

The Senate Academic Affairs Committee will present a resolution at the meeting by which the Senate, if the action passes, will endorse the activities of those students who are attempting to institute Hebrew as an accredited language at the University, thus fulfilling the language requirement.

Finally, the Senate will consider one further move toward expediency with a proposed resolution that the Student Government Affairs Committee review and revise the SGA Constitution with respect to either modification or complete change of Senate operating structure.

Coeds Integrate the Judo Club!

by LOIS COHEN,
Feature Editor

Women are getting into everything these days, and now they've invaded and taken over a corner of the UMass Judo Club.

These ambitious and sporty coeds are enjoying their Judo lessons and are benefitting by the exercise and physical conditioning they are getting from them.

The Judo Club, run by Robert Giglio, is training this semester for the Collegiate Tournament that will be held in April. Many colleges in the northeastern states compete in this tournament and this year, according to Giglio, UMass has a very good chance of winning.

The girls, of course, are not being trained for competition; neither do they have combat with the men in the club. They are merely being taught Judo exercises for physical fitness, techniques of self defense, and conditioning. The fundamentals—not the practice—are what make up the course for the girls.

Skill in Judo is rewarded with various colored belts. There are three ranks of white belts, three of brown, and ten of black. The tenth black belt is the highest award given.

Men from the UM club can try out for these belts in competitions held every year by showing their skill in the actual combat.

The girls too now have a chance to earn a belt; but their test consists of a demonstration of their knowledge of techniques of throwing and falling, not of their skills in actual combat.

So far there are two members of the club who have brown belts, and four or five more members are expected to try for a belt this May when the competition is held.

Although UMass doesn't have a varsity Judo team as yet, it probably will soon, to keep in step with the many other colleges that are now competing in varsity Judo.

The sport is especially popular on the west coast where even some high schools have Judo teams, and it now holds the position of the third largest sport—membership-wise—in the country.

Yesterday, the UM Judo Club had as its guests instructors from the Northeastern Judo Club who taught the day's class.

They began by giving a set of exercises that "used every muscle in the body" and then demonstrated techniques of throwing and falling.

The club meets three days a week—Monday, Thursday, and Saturday—in Boyden Gym. The new members of the class, the coeds, faithfully attend each session. They enjoy the course too much to miss even one meeting.

Smith Girl to Speak On Indonesian Culture

by M. AARIF GHAYUR

Martha Stoneback, a junior English major at Smith College will talk on Indonesia this evening at 6:15 p.m. in the Governor's Lounge, SU. The program has been organized by the UM International Club.

Miss Stoneback, who had the opportunity to spend six months in Indonesia as an American Field Service scholarship holder, will show color slides with her talk, mostly photos of Java, a province of Indonesia.

The public is cordially invited.

MIXER POSTPONED

"International Mixer," which was scheduled to be held on Fri., Feb. 25, has been postponed till Fri., Mar. 11.

All are invited to the mixer. Admission is 25¢.

TALK ON PAKISTAN

Beautiful slides of Hunza, the northwestern state of West Pakistan, were shown by Mian A.

Qayyum, a UM graduate engineering student, last Wednesday at the International Club coffee hour.

A colorful and informative movie was also shown about the historic city of Labone, capital of West Pakistan and second largest city in the country.

Martha Stoneback from Smith Col. will talk on Indonesia for the International Club.

Comedy or Romance?

by SALLY DOLGIN,
Feature Staff

Prof. Walther R. Volbach, a well-known "merchant of culture" in the theatrical world will lecture on Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice in Emily Dickinson's main lounge Thur., Feb. 24 at 6:45 p.m. All are invited.

His discourse on the problems of adaptation, staging, shifting of scenes, and music will provide a helpful explanation to his forthcoming production of the Merchant on Mar. 3, 4 and 5.

LIFE

Prof. Volbach, a native of Germany, has had experience and held honorary positions in almost every aspect of the theater.

Best known for his studies on Adolphe Appia, the inventor of modern lighting techniques, he has published and translated material in both German and English.

PRODUCTION TECHNIQUES

"Should one interpret The Merchant of Venice as a straight comedy, a comedy with a tragic under-current, or a romance? Should the action be placed in realistic settings or should one rather treat it as fantasy? I decided on the latter," says Volbach, "on defining it as a fantastic comedy, crowded with romance, in which almost everything is unreal."

To further establish this fantastic approach, and to provide continuity, he employs six young ladies as a sort of choreographed stage crew.

Prof. Volbach's talk is sure to be an interesting and informative one which every theatergoer, Shakespearean enthusiast, and casual UM spectator should attend.

Frosh Gain Revenge, Down Leicester, 85-77

by TOM FITZGERALD

Spirit and hustle are vital to success in sport, and the UMass Freshmen gave proof to this statement with a crowd-pleasing 85-77 victory over a muscular Leicester Junior College squad last night at the Cage.

The crowd arrived early for this one, and the Little Redmen put on an exhibition of clutch basketball, racking up their eleventh triumph, as opposed to three defeats, and their seventh consecutive win since being beaten by Connecticut on Feb. 2.

COACH CHARLIE KINGSTON'S boys had to fight continually, however, as Tony Koski, a 6'8" do-everything for Leicester, and 6'5" Pete Gilmarin teamed up to give the Minutemen a 70-55 edge under the boards. Koski was immense underneath, particularly with UMass center Pete Gayeska on the bench, troubled by fouls. Koski was high man in the game in both rebounds, 20, and points, 27.

But his play was offset by the determined play of UMass' forecourtmen of Mike Gemel, Ron Nowakowski, and Gayeska. Gemel, who has reserved his two best games for Leicester, led the yearlings with 29 markers, 14 in the crucial fourth quarter.

Nowakowski, scrapping all the way, added 23 points to the cause, while Gayeska came through in winning fashion, with 12 points and 13 rebounds.

THE UMass GUARDS also contributed some fine all-around performances. John Shockro's soft touch accounted for a dozen points, and Joe DiSarcina dropped in the two biggest points of the game — a pair of free throws to ice the contest with little over a minute left.

With six minutes remaining and UMass ahead by 79-62, the visitors caught fire and reeled off 12 consecutive points to complicate matters. But DiSarcina, the ball-handler with the extra-quick motions, was fouled and filled the bill at the line on a one-and-one situation.

Leicester held sway in the first 10 minutes, 24-19. The lead changed hands several times in the second quarter, but the visitors, behind the shooting of Ken Burns, were on top, 46-41 at half-time.

IN THE THIRD QUARTER, Leicester switched from a full-court zone press to a one-two zone, and the Little Redmen outscored the opposition, 25-14, during that period. UMass took the lead for good at 55-54 on a big basket by Gayeska with 14:24 left.

A number of Leicester fouls in the fourth quarter allowed UMass to sink 10 important free throws in the final canto. Leicester also helped in their own undoing with a woeful .320 shooting percentage, mainly because of a harassing UMass defense. The visitors, nevertheless, sport

Redmen Come Close But Lose to Strong St. John's

by RICK CURWIN

The UMass Redmen played their finest game since intercession and almost upset the powerful seventeenth-ranked Redmen of St. John's last night at the Cage. Great hustle and good overall team play gave the fans something to scream about in the last home game of the season.

St. John's started the game by scoring four straight points. Then Clarence Hill hit a foul shot, and St. John's scored again to take a 6-1 lead. At this point Coach Johnny Orr called time out and installed a full-court zone press that led to several mistakes by the visitors, UMass ahead, 8-7, later increasing their lead to 12-9. Both teams then traded hoops twice, with Jim Babyak hitting for UMass. Bob McIntyre hit on three free throws and St. John's moved ahead, 21-17.

AT THIS POINT John Lisack replaced Frank Stewart and hit a long jump shot. But Sonny Dove paced the visitors to a 27-21 edge. Babyak scored on a jumper, but Rudy Bogad made a three-point play. Then Clarence Hill made two beautiful assists, one to Bill Tindall and one to Babyak, making the score 35-30, St. John's.

Dove was then called for an offensive foul. He protested too strongly and was charged with a technical. Hill missed, however, and the half ended with the score 37-34.

The exciting first half was greatly appreciated by the fans, who gave the Redmen a standing ovation. The reason for the success of the home charges was an effective 2-1-2 zone defense. Sonny Dove, an All-America candidate, was impressive off the boards with 12 rebounds.

THE SECOND HALF was as the first. St. John's began to pull away in the beginning of the half, and they managed to increase their lead to 54-43 with 14 minutes remaining, mainly on the strength of Dove.

But with 12 minutes showing on the clock, Hill took charge and began hitting his jump shot, missed, outrebounded Dove and put it in for a spectacular one-man show. He continued hitting along with Gary Gasperack and Lisack, cutting the margin to only seven points with about three minutes left.

Babyak fouled out with two minutes left, but the Redmen still had momentum and the score was 78-73. St. John's then went into a freeze and got one more basket for a final of 80-73.

THE LAST HOME GAME was very impressive, however, and even in losing, UMass looked like champions. Two Redmen can be given credit in this game for clutch performances besides Hill — Lisack and Gasperack.

In the rebounding department Gasperack had 10 and Tindall 8, with a team total of 50.

The only disappointment of the night was the fact that Hill did not receive the honors he deserved. Not only did the "D.C. Dynamo" keep the Redmen in the game, but he also broke the UMass season scoring record with two games to go, along with his own total career point record, and the career field goal record. It seemed that he should have had a night in his honor, and this being his last home appearance, last night would have been the perfect time. He certainly a team sparkplug for the past two years.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

by DAVE JARNES
Sports Staff

The Moody Blues threw a big scare at the mighty Untouchables, but the winners held off a late rally by the scrappy Moody Blues to triumph 57-51.

THE UNTOUCHABLES led right from the opening gun, but the Moody Blues, led by Joe DiVincenzo's 16 points, closed fast and trailed by just 3 points with 40 seconds left before two free throws by former UMass star Charlie LaPier took the independent champs out of danger. Al Garsys of the Untouchables took the game high honors with 23 points.

The Gorman Maples, the only unbeaten dorm team, built up a huge 29-10 halftime lead and coasted to a 58-33 decision over the Webster Rams. Jeff Eaton's red-hot first half shooting (18 of his 23 points) combined with an ice-cold Webster attack to give Gorman their insurmountable margin. Although he only scored 8 points, Mark Widdess was superlative in his role as a playmaker.

A BALANCED ATTACK earned the Grayson Aces a berth in the dorm finals with an easy 66-47 decision over the Colt '45's. The starting five of Smithers (20), Thomas (16), (Barr (11), Rossi (9), and Nelms (9) broke out with a big early lead and added to it as the game progressed. Again the Aces played with a height disadvantage, as has been the case in almost all of their games this year, but they used their speed and aggressiveness to advantage.

WEDNESDAY'S BIG GAMES will be highlighted by the Zeta Nu-Untouchable and Aces-Maples contests. The winners of these games will play for the campus championship on Monday. The Webster Rams play the Colt '45's for third place in the dormitory division.

Need Members

Lack of strength in numbers greatly contributed to the defeat of the UMass Women's swim team, 77-46, at Northfield Academy on Thursday, February 18. Racing one competitor in events in which two were expected cut any hope of victory to only a mathematical chance of tying before the starting gun was ever fired.

Swimming for UMass were Annette Robichard, Ellen McGill, Henrietta Coupee, Donna Mangan, Sandra Whitehead, Kay Aldrich, and Frances Clines, coached by Miss Beverly Reed. McGill tied the Northfield pool record of 16.2 for the backstroke.

The team needs more members. Qualifications necessary are the desire and willingness to swim and work. A diver is particularly needed. Those interested should see Miss Reed or a team member at free swim Monday, Wednesday or Friday at 5:15 to 6:15 in the WoPe Pool.

SENATE MODIFIES JUDICIARY RULES

by KAREN ROSE, Senate Reporter

Judiciary proceedings will be slightly altered due to the two amendments approved at Wednesday's Constitutional Convention.

In all disciplinary cases undertaken by judiciary bodies a new procedure will be followed in that all evidence submitted and all testimony received must be made openly and in public if the defendant wishes.

All defendants under judicial process are to be informed of this right before proceedings are initiated. The defendants are to be informed in writing.

Summons when used in disciplinary cases henceforth must include: 1. the specific rule or regulation violated, 2. the specifics of the alleged violation, 3. the time and the place of the alleged violation and 4. the person(s) reporting the alleged violation.

The Student Senate President will be relieved of his constituency after the spring elections and a new senator will be elected from his area in the fall, due to a move passed Wednesday at the Convention.

Sen. Lew Gurwitz (Married Students), one of the originators of the bill argued that such a move insures continuity in the Senate in that the possibility of the president as pro tem officer not being re-elected is hereby erased.

JUNIOR CLASS Pres. John Mullin supported Gurwitz by pointing out that "the amount of work involved here necessitates that the president have no constituency".

Sen. Jerry Benezra (Fraternalities) rising in favor of the bill pointed out that "this bill is quite odd because it deals with reality".

Sen. Benezra, in keeping with his reality theme, sponsored a bill by which a meeting of the four class officers and the executive committee of the Senate will be called one week prior to a constitutional convention.

The purpose of this act according to Benezra and others who spoke favoring the bill is to keep the class officers informed and to give them a more active role at future conventions.

Sophomore class Pres. Robert Keough then requested a change in the order of business to consider another bill concerning the classes. Sen. Rick Cass (Commuters) protested this request with comments that it is the responsibility of the officers to attend the Convention and participate in all constitutional actions not only those pertaining to class business.

KEOUGH STARTED to point out that the officers

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1966

Mass Media Announce Communication Board

After much consideration, haggling and discussion on the part of members of UMass communications media, student senators and R.S.O. personnel, a constitution for the creation of a Student Publications and Broadcast Board has been established to create an agency representative of the interests of all segments of the University community in the exchange of ideas and opinions, the formulation of general policies and the exercise of certain authorities and powers with respect to student publishing and broadcasting organizations at the University of Massachusetts.

Student editors and station managers are entrusted with producing fair and accurate communications programs in good taste which shall serve the student body, faculty and staff of the University of Massachusetts. It is recognized that the students involved in the communications media do benefit from the enriching educational experience.

PURPOSE AND FUNCTION

The Board shall function as a general policy board for the student publications and broadcasting media of the University of Massachusetts, with general authority and responsibility as hereinafter detailed in Article III, Sections 1 & 2.

THE BOARD SHALL derive its authority from the President of the University as chief administrative officer representing the delegated powers of the Board of Trustees to administer the programs on the institution, and it shall report to the President through the Dean of Students.

Members of the Board shall be drawn from the student body at large, the respective publishing and broadcasting organizations at the University of Massachusetts.

AUTHORITY

- TO REVIEW, interpret and recommend to the Committee on Recognized Student Organizations approval or disapproval of the separate constitutions of the individual publication and broadcast media and any changes thereto.

- TO REVIEW and approve proposals for any general functional policies initiated by the individual student communications media which by interpretation of the majority of members of the Board would constitute a major or important increase or decrease in the quality or scope of operation, effectiveness or service of said organization to the University community.

- THE BOARD shall review and approve the annual budgets proposed by the several student communications media: namely, The Collegian, Index, Caesura, Yahoo, Engineering Journal, Spectrum, and Radio Station WMUA-FM and shall recommend said budgets to the Student Senate for adoption.

- NON-STUDENT tax supported member media shall submit budgets to the Board for its review, approval and referral to the RSO Business Office.

- TO RECEIVE, consider and make recommendations as deemed appropriate to the President, upon expressions of complaint and dissatisfaction with any student communications medium when action is requested or appears to be required.

- TO RECEIVE, review and recommend (approval or disapproval) to the Committee on Recognized Student Organizations concerning all applications for the establishment of new publications or broadcast media.

- TO REQUIRE that each communications medium include within its constitution an effective statement outlining the specific relationship of its faculty advisers.

- TO RECEIVE, and review the slate of nominations to the positions of editor-in-chief or station manager, and business manager, referred by the separate and individual communications medium and to approve or disapprove of said nominations after full discussion of the qualifications of the candidates.

- TO RECEIVE applications for the positions of editor-in-chief, station manager, and business manager of the individual student communications medium from the student body at large, and to refer said applications to the appropriate medium together with the recommendation of the Board.

- TO RECEIVE minutes of operational and/or policy board meetings of the individual student communications medium, said minutes to be filed promptly when completed with the Chairman of the Board.

Political Debate

"NATO VULNERABLE IN TERMS OF LOGISTICS"

by PAM METAXAS, Staff Reporter

Two points of view were offered Tuesday night in the "Great Decisions" Series by two distinguished speakers. Lt. Col. Henry Tragle, U.S. Army, Retired and Prof. Karl Lowenstein (William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Science, Emeritus, of Amherst College) discussed foreign policy and NATO.

In reference to the fact that General DeGaulle has warned that France might leave NATO in 1969 at the time when the treaty is to terminate Lt. Col. Tragle sought "To reduce what General DeGaulle said to some practical dimensions and to explain briefly the situation in terms of American commitment."

Tragle pointed out there are several troop concentrations in Germany at the present:

- French army (approx. 70,000)
- British army (approx. 50,000)
- U.S. army (approx. 250,000)
- German army

HE EMPHASIZED that logistics were a big part of the NATO problem and said that logistics "has to do with the resupply of personnel, furnishing of supply and also the transportation elements." "In the opinion of many it is in this area that there is the greatest vulnerability in terms of NATO," he said.

There are factors important to the continuance of NATO that cannot be counted on such as railroad or roadmaps, pipelines, landline communication systems and our own budgetary process. In the last point Tragle added, "There is a great temptation for the McNamara people to take a dim view of logistics maintenance." He feels the standby units for NATO "make sense" although "most of these forces have been out . . . operating fat and these have been sent off to duty in more productive tasks."

The Lt. Col. remarked this all brings up several questions including: How can we unload supplies in an emergency situation? and What will happen if we're no longer able to use communication channels across France? These questions must be answered "if we assume NATO is worth keeping," he said.

"THE CONCEPT as I know it is the same old idea given sufficient reason the Russians would launch a ground attack on Western Europe," he concluded.

"NATO is completely superfluous—it doesn't serve any sensible purpose today and the sooner it is reformed, we shall be grateful," commented Prof. Lowenstein.

HE POINTED OUT that NATO was formed after experiences in Greece, Korea, Yugoslavia, etc. "We expected this would be the best defense against Russian aggression but there is no longer any threat of Russian aggression against Western Germany," he said.

"Nobody in Berlin is considering in the remotest way a

Crew Team Voted $625 by Jr. Class

Background music to the tune of "Row, row, row your boat" would have been apropos last night as the Junior Class Executive Council voted to appropriate $625 to the UMass crew team.

President John Mullin suggested to the council that the money be allocated to help further the development and establishment of a crew team.

The original UMass crew team appeared on campus in 1871 and in its first year upset Harvard and Brown Universities. The winning shell of this team now hangs in Curry Hicks. The sport however, was dropped and due to financial reasons wasn't re-developed.

Last year Bob Rhodes, now president of the Crew team, initiated plans to re-establish the sport on campus. This year, the addition of Dave Clarke, an experienced coach, resulted in more complete organization.

Explaining the position of the team before the Junior Class Executive Council, Clarke traced the history of the teams efforts to obtain money for a new shell and equipment.

An approach to the Finance Committee of the Student Senate had resulted in the taking of the proposal to the Athletic Council. The Athletic Council appropriated only $250 to the team but decided not to recognize the organization immediately.

In the mean time the members of the Crew team contacted other schools and obtained two used shells from Harvard and Yale. The boys set about repairing these shells, borrowing equipment and training for the rowing season.

In an attempt to get funds for a necessary new shell the team went to the individual classes. Each class has shared the enthusiasm of interested administrators and students.

As a result, the team will now be able to purchase its own shell and be ready to compete against such teams as Amherst, Harvard, Princeton, Trinity and Holy Cross.

'Merchant of Venice' Next UMass Production

The University of Massachusetts Theatre production of THE MERCHANT OF VENICE will be enhanced by the original and unique incidental music composed by Bruce MacCombie, a music composition major at the University.

Bruce is a stranger to neither the art of original composition nor to the art of the theatre. Already to his credit is the score he composed for the 1965 production of JULIUS CAESAR and in that same theatre season he was seen as the musical director for the well received THE STREETS OF NEW YORK. During the Summer repertory season and again in the past Fall season, Bruce ably provided the piano accompaniment for THE FANTASTICS.

Commenting on the difficulties to be surmounted when composing an original score, Bruce said: "The time limit is a most difficult boundary to adhere to..." Some of the composition techniques Bruce has used include "...canonic imitation, major-minor relationships, and whole tone scales." The music for entrances and exits of characters is intended to reflect the moods and personalities of such characters, but at all times, the music is intended to be subservient to any action on the stage.

The University Theatre considers itself fortunate to have this talented young musician working in conjunction with their efforts. The result of this combination of talents will be presented March 3, 4, and 5, at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium with a matinee performance on March 5, at 2:15. Tickets are on sale now at the Student Union box office.

realize their obligations but that they were not informed of the convention in time to change other meetings.

Here a cross discussion and a few tempers erupted and ended with Sec. Cathy Walsh and others defending the class officers.

Pres. Keough's motion was defeated and later so was the bill requiring class treasurers to file copies of expenditures with the Senate Treasurer and R. S. O. Business Manager.

SEN. CASS, speaking against the bill, claimed that the Senate is becoming an octopus. "Nothing goes on that the Senate does not have a hand in," he asserted.

Shortly after this the Convention was dissolved due to the lack of a quorum.

The Senate budget totaling $13,950 and the R.S.O. operating budget coming to a total of $24,896 were the only actions passed at the regular Senate meeting.

Russian attack," he professor added.

He felt the Russians have been satisfied in terms of land expansion and they have no need of continued aggression at this time. He used Stalin's death as an example of this satisfaction.

"Khrushchev abandoned the dictatorial trimmings of the Stalin regime," he said.

"The idea of a Russian Red is just no longer existing. No body believes in it. Only Americans believe in it because it helps us to maintain the obsolete concept of NATO," commented Prof. Lowenstein.

He also said that Germans don't like fighting any more. They have "no heart in military matters."

"Soldiering for them is just a chore they have to get through exact for the professionals," he said.

One of the biggest defense the Germans have is the new Star Fighter bombers. However, more than 100 have crashed already proving "the fighter is not ready for fighting," he added. And neither are the Germans for many reasons including economic and social ones.

PROF. LOWENSTEIN also emphasized that NATO is superfluous because the NATO forces will not fight in case of attack.

"We assume that in case of war with the Soviets the NATO forces will fight. With the exception of the Americans and Turks and possibly the Germans not a single other nation would go to war again," he said.

In short, Prof. Lowenstein believes "the whole concept is, of course, nonsense." "I consider the whole idea of the Russian attack nonsense," he concluded.

UMASS EXPERT ON VIET NAM, LUTHER ALLEN, EXPLAINS VIEWS

by JIM FOUDDY, News Editor

When Dr. Luther Allen speaks of Vietnam, when he talks about the people and the faces of the war or when he reels off names of towns and government officials, he does it not only with the knowledge of a political scientist, but with the concern of a citizen who has spent a year teaching and living with the Vietnamese people.

In an interview sparked by the recent denunciation of the Central Intelligence Agency by Mr. Huynh Sanh Thong, a close friend and ally of Dr. Allen, the UMass government prof spoke at length about his own active participation in the struggle for political stability in Vietnam and the problems of C.I.A. intervention in the political affairs of a foreign nation.

Dr. Allen first became personally interested in Vietnam in 1960 as the Smith-Mundt Visiting Professor of Political Science, Univ. of Saigon and he was later called back in 1964 at the special request of the Vietnamese government.

During this time, articles which he had written for the Massachusetts Review and the Nation concerning the political state of Vietnam, were being read with much interest by Huynh Sanh Thong, a teacher at Yale University.

Thong saw in Dr. Allen a man after his own heart—a citizen concerned with the welfare of the country and highly critical of the rules at that time, Ngo Dinh Diem.

They met in 1963.

"We began working closely for the overthrow of Diem in support of the civilian leader of the Dai Viet Party, Dr. Hoan," Allen explained.

Dr. Allen and Thong took Hoan to Washington and prepared a memorandum to the State Department encouraging officials to withdraw their support of the Diem regime, but maintained anti-communist support. The four point program read:

1. Send Lodge to Vietnam immediately.
2. Disassociate from Diemist repression.
3. Announce U.S. opposition to a communist take-over.
4. Make it clear that the U.S. will not stand in the way of change in Saigon leadership.

The dispute which has arisen between the Dai Viet party and the CIA stems back to the agency's support of the Diem regime between 1954-1963.

As Dr. Allen pointed out: "The CIA had a chance to treat Dai Viet and other groups equally but chose instead a policy of support for one man—Diem."

Senior Liaison Officer Edward Lansdale was in charge of the agency's operations in Vietnam at that time and is still in the country much to the distress of Dr. Allen and the Dai Viet.

"Lansdale and the Dai Viet both claim to know what is best for Vietnam politically," Allen commented. "The only difference," he continued, is that the Dai Viet are Vietnamese and Lansdale is an American—this is a big difference."

The problem with the CIA was summed up by Mr. Allen's colleague, Thong, when he called the agency's policy "the largest operation in its history to bring about a quick political settlement of the war with the communists, preferably before the next American election." (Yale Daily News, Feb. 7, 1966)

According to Dr. Allen, the CIA has set up their people in the "grass roots" politics of Vietnam with no regard to whether the government exists in Saigon or to its political complexion.

"This activity moves in the direction of creating a 100% puppet regime in South Vietnam," he explained. "This regime could be useful if our purposes were to get out, but, since this may not come to pass, what Lansdale and the CIA are doing is confirming the 10 year old charge of the communists—that we are new colonialists."

In disrupting the idea that the SIA knows best, Dr. Allen necessarily disrupted Lansdale's right to be in Vietnam: "I am not trying to imply that Lansdale does not know about the Vietnamese policy or people; the worst thing is his vanity and presumption that he knows what is right for the Vietnamese."

Casting aspirations on the activities of the agency, Dr. Allen made note of the fact that "crooks were caught selling forged CIA documents to young people to provide a means of avoiding the draft, which suggests that the CIA has been buying off people in the same way."

In a letter written to members of Congress involved in foreign affairs and to Mr. Jonathan Moore, Special Asst. to Asst. Sec. of State for Far Eastern Affairs, William Bundy, Dr. Allen warned that "Gen. Lansdale and his team are too much identified with the hated Ngo Dinh Diem regime in the eyes of the Vietnamese people" and should be withdrawn.

The solution to government stability for Dr. Allen is a "serious alternative to Diem"—an alternative which would be found in an "indigenous Vietnamese political party."

For Dr. Allen, our support of the war in Vietnam should entail a willingness to support a government which has the "dedication and ability to unite groups in South Vietnam into a political construct." He sees some hope in the present military government of Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, who strengthened Pres. Johnson's backbone in Honolulu.

From the point of view of a political scientist, the war is a question of political involvement. From the perspective of Dr. Luther Allen, it is not only a problem in political science, but a personal struggle for the independence of a people with whom he has had close and intimate contact.

Engine No. 2, UMass' famous truck, still runs after swim in pond

Whittie's Engine No. Two, the University's most famous truck is running again after last Friday's three and one-half hour plunge under the ice, according to Edmund J. Ryan, supt. of buildings and grounds.

Ryan said the truck, whose plight made page one of Monday's Boston Globe, was "mechanically sound" after maintenance men did some work on it. HE SAID THEY drained the truck's engine, removed the air cleaner and checked the wiring.

The truck started when they added new points and spark plugs.

Ryan commended Alan Cameron, the maintenance foreman who volunteered his skin-diving services to attach a chain in the rescue efforts.

Without Cameron, Ryan said, "we would have had to call in the services of a professional diver."

THE HISTORY OF EVERY natural pond has the record of at least one "lost" vehicle in its history, he said. Smith and Mount Holyoke each had a sea-monster truck in recent years.

Both were recovered, he said, as was the truck the City of Springfield lost in its Szot park lake.

Ryan said if it is up to him, no more trucks will be allowed on the pond. He said snow-blowers will be used in the future to clear snow from the ice.

'WHAT'S HAPPENING' is happening at Amherst

After several thousand years of completely unexpected happenings, they have been formalized enough to predict when one will occur.

A Happening is audience-participation theatre—"Where one enters into a slight pre-established frame work and contributes what one is moved to do therein."

This Friday the 4-college Xanadu Theatrical Society of the Aspragus Valley is presenting "An Evening with Raymond Eistenstark." (The Xanadu Society is a front organization for the 4-college Psychotics Club.)

Everyone is welcome—Mead Hall at Amherst College, 7:09 this Friday February 25. Admission is 35 cents, $1.00 a couple.

Bela Lugosi to play here

Bela Lugosi, the famous horror movie star, was actually born in Transylvania, Hungary.

He stars in "The Murders of the Rue Morgue" to be presented this Friday night at Bartlett Auditorium at 7:30.

Lugosi, who played the original Dracula, was buried in his dracula outfit when he died.

Boris Karloff and Peter Lorre attended the open-casket funeral. Said Lorre, "Someone should drive a stake through his heart."

On the same movie program will be shown "The Phantom of the Opera" with Herbert Lom. The double feature is being put on by Young Independents, SDS. It is possible to see only the second feature with Lugosi.

Frosh Orientation

Men's Affairs Seeks More Cooperation

by ROMA McSWEENEY

On February 23, the Men's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate held a meeting to discuss future plans for orientation of incoming freshmen. The proposed plan would involve the Maroon Keys, the Scrolls and the Revelers with much of the work force supplied by the Religious Council, Commuters, Men's and Women's Affairs Committees and the present Freshman class.

Jim Better, chairman of the meeting, stated that according to the SWAP report the Keys, Scrolls and Revelers are presently in charge of the Freshman Orientation Program but that there is a lack of coordination among these groups causing the program to be ineffective. Jim said that the purpose of orientation was to help stimulate spirit and also to help the student to discover his goals for himself.

ROBIN BROOKS, representing the Dean of Students Office, stressed the need for academic orientation, stating that the doors are always open to the students but that it is physically impossible for the administration to go to the students. He felt that a tour of the campus, and also tours of the various buildings where a student has his major would be helpful.

The proposed plan for next year includes a type of 'Old Man' program whereby all incoming freshmen for the class of 1970 would be contacted personally by an upperclassman during the summer. Another provision was a continued orientation process throughout the entire semester. Lectures and discussions with members of the faculty, administration and organizations would be offered.

The committee is continuing work of the program and the hoped for result is a class of freshmen who feel welcome to the University and feel that they are an integral part of a larger community.

Free Course Selection Leads to Overcrowding

by BARBARA PROKO, Staff Reporter

Overcrowded classes are presenting a problem at UMass for the first time this semester, but contrary to popular student belief, neither the administration nor IBM is to blame.

Frank H. Balsley, of the scheduling office, recognizes overcrowding as "a definite by-product of the university's policy of freedom in course selection and section changes." Responsibility for "standing room only" classes lies with the department involved, he feels.

THE UNIVERSITY itself, as well as the individual schools and colleges that it encompasses, has course requirements to be fulfilled toward graduation and a major. Current policy, however, allows the student freedom of choice in selecting electives and to a certain extent, required subjects.

The administration is directly involved with the size of classes until registration day. Up to that point, the schedule office plans course sections and rooms according to their ideal size, assigning each department a certain number of appropriate rooms.

"We make sure that classroom size is consistent with the number of students in the computer file," Balsley explained.

"THE COURSE rosters are altered at registration, when control over class size passes to the individual departments. Whether or not students are admitted to classes—some of which are already filled—is left to their discretion.

"For instance, Soc. 101, Sec. 3, was scheduled to be held in an auditorium with a capacity of 118 (Hasbrouck 126). There were originally that many students in the class; there are now 140," he added.

Why do the departments allow such situations to develop? Frequently, Balsley said, they do not want to turn down students. Occasionally one course must be cut in size and a number of its applicants reassigned.

This was the case with Zoo. 101. Originally scheduled for 1,100 students, it could accommodate only 850, leaving 150 without a course.

Latin-American Affairs

The Collegiate Press Service

'Yankee Go Home' feelings will become increasingly prevalent in Latin America if the United States does not change its policies there, according to a series of speakers at a student conference on Latin American affairs held a week ago here.

Featured speakers at the conference were Sacha Volman, one of the leaders of the democratic reform movement in Latin America and a co-founder of the International Institute for Labor Research; William P. Rogers, a Washington attorney who was deputy coordinator of the Alliance for Progress during the Kennedy administration; John J. Johnson, a professor of history at Stanford University and a consultant on Latin America for many firms; Estaban E. Torres, the Inter-American Representative for the United Auto Workers; Dan Kurzman, Latin American correspondent for the Washington Post; and Frank Mankiewicz, Peace Corps Regional Director for Latin America since 1964 and formerly director of the program in Peru.

Sponsored by the U. S. National Student Association and the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, the lectures were designed to acquaint students from all over the country with the problems faced by Latin America.

The most frequently stressed point was that the United States should recognize that there is not "a Red under every bed" in most of these countries. It was suggested that the non-Communist left should be recognized as a constructive group.

This group, composed mostly of intellectuals serves as idea brokers." As such they perform an indispensable service, according to the speakers. If the U.S. does not take note of this, it stands to lose contact with the power structure over the long run, they generally agreed.

The intellectual left, it was pointed out, would be willing to sacrifice some of its ideas in exchange for recognition of Latin

On the other hand, some classes are under-enrolled and cancelled, creating the same effect. Last minute shifts due to illness or complicated teaching schedules in a department are responsible for part of the early semester confusion.

One "lost tribe" of Eng. 126 met in six different places (including a greenhouse tool storage room) before it was finally combined with another section and settled in Morrill. No explanations were given to the class for the increase in number, loss of its teacher, or constant moving from room to room.

BALSLEY BELIEVES that comparatively little of the trouble is really the computer's fault.

"The schedules distributed at registration should report the correct information," he said, adding that "because the scheduling booklets are compiled and printed five months before the semester begins, room information may be somewhat inaccurate."

While there are only three actual scheduling employees, the work involves the entire data processing center staff of 12; the computer research center in the engineering department where the actual filing is done; and 1-3 persons in each department who submit their scheduling requests.

COURSE CHANGES, considered by Balsley to be "the administration's biggest adjustment problem," are made without additional expense to the University.

In previous semesters, changes have run as high as 4,000. This year's fall total was estimated between 2,000-3,000.

Reorganization of schedules and classes creates noticeable chaos on campus for the first few days of each semester. At the end of the second week, classes for the most part are well-organized.

The scheduling office, closely associated with the registrar, began planning for Fall, 1966 two weeks ago.

Conference Speakers Detect Growing Disgust With America

America as something other than a monolithic entity. Most of the countries resent being called 'underdeveloped' in light of their cultural histories, and, as was pointed out, it is often more important to deal with expressed needs rather than real ones, at least at the start.

Leftist groups are crying out for a change in the anachronistic, almost feudal social system that is the Spanish heritage. In this lopsided arrangement it is noted that local officials can ignore a city slum because "nobody" lives there. This means that they have had no dealings with the inhabitants and are able to avoid any reform programs in this area.

Reform through social development was seen as an attempt to bring up-to-date a population which is becoming increasingly urbanized yet retains a traditional lack of any effort in community-wide action. It is at this lack that a large part of assistance is being aimed, for it is necessary to show people how to exert themselves as well as teaching them the basic skills necessary in any industrialized society.

This change, however, cannot be effective in a society in which teachers despise their students and doctors their patients, the speakers argued. Thus, it becomes necessary to do more than build a school. There must also be an education for the teachers, so that the old will not be continued. And it is in this area that American aid meets its greatest problems, simply because those in power cannot cross class lines to begin the work at hand.

Editor's note: It is hoped that this guest editorial written by Dr. Ricci will be the beginning of some positive action concerning the question of finals—action especially taken by faculty.

'KNOW THY STUDENTS'

by DR. RICCI

Two articles in the Collegian served as a stimulus of sufficient intensity to evoke a response—my note to editor Henderickson (Collegian, February 18, 1966)

Bowditch's law still operates.

What is readily apparent, however, is that the "all-or-none law" of Bowditch must be explained in terms of graduation of contraction. Apparently, the magnitude of the faculty response was low. What is essential then is stimulation of dialogue.

I would suspect that a number of any colleagues here and elsewhere do, in fact, excuse A students from final examinations and do allow B students the choice — and the dilemma — of either settling for a B or attempting to earn an A.

Before a faculty member can consider excusing students from a final examination, he must know the strengths and capability levels of each student. The faculty member who administers only one or possibly two hour examinations per semester to a sea-of-faces is at a great disadvantage.

For one who is blessed with relatively small classes, of approximately forty students, in a lecture-laboratory combination, the task of getting to know students is made easy. This lecture-laboratory combination provides me with four contact hours per week. Students can be five or six digit numbers on Hollerith cards but they are also first names, nicknames, and surnames and they live in such places as Adams and Wrentham—places called home. They are important commodities; they are the University.

Evaluation—of quizzes, of quality of class discussions, of inventories of knowledge, and of laboratory assignments—throughout the semester provides a sufficiently adequate basis for the distinction between the good (B) and superior (A) students and those of average or poor accomplishment.

Know thy students means more quizzes, examinations, and creative assignments, and lower actual, not statistical, student-faculty ratios.

SENATE JOKE

by KAREN ROSE, Senate Editor

The Student Senate is continuing in its practice of preoccupation with mundane and ungermaine debate on the Senate floor despite reprimands from President Dacey and, in part, from the Collegian.

Recently a committee report brought to the floor mentioned the possibility of purchasing protective gloves for students in a manual lab because a student had recently been bitten by a rat in this lab. Granted, this situation should be rectified but is it really necessary to bring rat bites up on the Senate floor?

Furthermore, is the floor of the Senate the place to practice for placement in the University Theatre or other drama groups? The way some senators 'leap and scream' leaves little doubt of their dramatic talents. These same actions do however leave questions as to the maturity and intelligence of these individuals.

Resignations in the Senate have become almost a weekly event and are fast becoming a joke. Senators resign for many reasons, among them frustration. It is very annoying for a senator to sit through a series of irrelevant comments on his bill when possibly one thorough, planned explanation could have cleared up the situation.

It is equally annoying to see the hours tick away while senators abuse parliamentary procedure for the sheer joy of hearing their own voices.

Should the Senate continue in its present path it will be interesting to see the lines of students filing into R.S.O. for senate nomination papers . . . if there are any.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Part II

Freedom and the University

These are troubled times for the American university. From Trinity College to Berkeley, the campus is increasingly becoming the seat of student unrest. Students are working for civil rights, for an end to the war in Vietnam, for the abolition of poverty, and for the reform of the university. It is with this last topic that I will concern myself.

The demand for university reform is the demand for democracy. I mean simply the power to make the significant decisions that affect one's life. Thus, democracy, on the campus or anywhere else, implies freedom—freedom to investigate, to choose and decide; in short, freedom to rule one's own life.

In the university, the major obstacle to student freedom is the concept of a "benevolent bureaucracy"—a paternalistic system of regulations which control the student's life. Thus, it is rarely the students that decide what the course requirements will be, what will be taught in the courses, what sort of grading system will be used, and what the class attendance requirements will be. The same holds true for non-academic matters. Curfews, drinking rules, dormitory regulations, visiting hours (or lack of them) all testify to the powerlessness of the student over his own life. If he were out of school and on his own, he would be making these decisions for himself. But, as he is a student, they are made for him.

Students are learning more and more that freedom in America too often means a choice between predetermined alternatives rather than participation in forming those alternatives. Thus, Mississippi Negroes are given the vote, but are hindered in forming a political party (the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party). Americans are free to live where they wish but have little say about the condition of the neighborhoods they live in.

On campus, the situation is the same. A student can select whatever major he wants, but has no say over what will be taught or how it will be taught. Is a student government really free to disburse student funds when student leaders know that the administration will permit donations to the Red Cross but not to the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (as was the case at Berkeley)? Is any student government really free to do anything as long as the administration possesses the power of veto? The on-campus struggle against such administered democracy can be viewed as part of the larger struggle in this country to create a new and meaningful freedom.

But the Dean's office is not the only place that freedom is restricted. The classroom too is essentially anti-democratic. As was noted before, although he is usually free to choose among the course offerings, the student has little freedom to determine what will be offered. Once inside the classroom, the student must yield to the professor most of the decision-making power over the course and over the nature of learning is supposed to take place. The student's recognition and acceptance of the teacher's status stem not from respect for his intellect, but from simple acquiescence to authority, which has been taught and encouraged since grade ne. ivt maes no difference whether or not this authority is legitimate or justifiable—it must be accepted nonetheless. Added to the "necessities" of exams, quizzes, papers, labs, etc., this makes for a technical production schedule long before initial personal contact between student and teacher.

And God forbid that the student challenge the schedule by getting "turned-on" by Dostoevsky the week in which he is supposed to be reading Tolstoy. Any real personal involvement in the learning process, any unleashing of curiosity might well result in a flunked, course. Of course, the students do learn something. Unfortunately, much of what they learn, if you believe that students are willing to determine the course of their own lives, is negative: blind acceptance of authority, intellectual indifference, willingness to do meaningless work, to perform with no sense of internal gratification.

Almost inevitably, this leads to a condition of alienation. "Alienation" here means the condition in which a person loses sway over the condition of his work. The individual does not fulfill himself in working but denies himself. He develops a feeling of misery, not of well-being. This is exactly what happens to the automated student in the process of assembly-line education: his work becomes something foreign and unimportant to him. The student cannot gratify himself in performing his work. And the general university environment will remain bleak and hostile to the student as long as that environment is manipulated by others to prepare him for the world of alienated work if the campus.

Today, students are more and more demanding a personal relevance to what they are taught. They are demanding a relationship between learning and their personal concerns. To demand this is to demand freedom in the classroom—freedom from mechanized learning, from illegitimate authority, from useless rules and regulations. It requires freedom to question, to challenge

Miss Reall Retorts

Dear Mr. Peltzer:

I am sorry you received the impression that I am attacking science and scientists in general. That was not my intention. I meant to suggest that the method of science is an imperfect apparatus for uncovering all possible dimensions of reality, either that of man or the universe as he knows it. To assert, as Dr. Feldman had done, that the scientific method is superior to other methods of explaining the nature of man or the universe is intellectual arrogance. Not all planes of reality can be detected by the same instruments; to insist that one's particular instrument functions with equal validity at several, if not all, planes is sheer bigotry; this is especially true when we consider the fact that the types of reality which we know are probably but a fraction of possibly an infinite number of other dimensions.

If we deceive ourselves completely enough into believing that human nature is thoroughly knowable by the materialistic data we can accumulate about it, we may slowly rob ourselves of the real experience of knowing each other through unobjective confrontation. As people, not as things.

One of the capacities we are in danger of losing is the ability to value persons, to hear what Wordsworth called "the still, sad music of humanity"—this cannot be done through a pragmatic assessment of their demonstrable, observable data. I dislike the nebulous term "spirit" or "soul" as much as the most rigid empiricist (Dr. F., please note), but can we deny that there is a knowledge between selves which cannot possibly happen if we block the channels by the calculating, dissecting, quantifying (but unsympathetic) mechanism of intellect?

The methods of social science, of course, seem to be the only logical object of my argument. But even your rarified field of Physics, which you hold "is not to serve a social purpose" must, in the end, be subject to the same objections. For we are social not scientific beings, and if we ever forget this, we are doomed, physicists, mystics and psychologists alike. We have a common obligation to keep science, physical or natural or social, subservient to man—not man subservient to science. Can you honestly say that Physics "can neither create nor alleviate imperfections in the human condition" after what Curie did with radiation and Einstein did with atomic energy? The human condition they affected, of course, is primarily physical; but their discoveries have crucially affected man's chances of happiness—and happiness is a value. In terms of that value, there is no such thing as a "closed system." The more closed up we get in our closed systems, the more closed off we become from each other—and sometimes we suffocate.

The pure physicist is able to do something else for man—he can enrich his respect and increase his humility before the vast, multi-dimensional possibilities of "truth." The pure physicist and the humanist have something very much in common—the recognition of levels of knowledge which cannot be bottled, boiled, or seen through a microscope. Perhaps human nature, like the infinite possibilities and problems of pure physics, may need hitherto undeveloped or neglected faculties in order to be truly perceived and appreciated.

Would You Believe Cheerleaders

To the Editor:

What is the matter with our cheerleaders? It is disgraceful to go to a basketball game and watch them "give up" after a few feeble attempts. It is even more disgraceful when you compare their's with the spirited performance exhibited by the UConn cheerleaders at Storrs last Saturday. Perhaps they will say the UM fans are inert; but if they had been at the Winter Carnival game versus the University of New Hampshire, they would have seen a small but very enthusiastic crowd.

We would like to see some changes made, specifically:

1. More originality and spirit. This calls for some new and more complex cheers; after all, we are in college and wouldn't find it impossible to learn the words to something more difficult than "R-E-D-M-E-N".
2. During half time and time-out, an original cheer out in the middle of the court would help to spark the crowd as well as the team.

The purpose of a cheering group is to incite spirit, entertain during breaks, give the team moral support, and never give up.—Our cheerleaders are not fulfilling their obligation.

U of Minnesota Prof Probes Effects of LSD

LSD, an hallucinogenic drug responsible for the dismissal of two Harvard psychologists, is currently being used by a University of Minnesota medical doctor to restore normal and abnormal performance in the nervous system.

Although small doses of the drug can do severe brain damage if improperly used, it is being administered here in medically supervised conditions with screened subjects and can cause no harm, according to Amedeo S. Marrazzi, pharmacology professor in charge of the experiment.

Marrazzi said the danger is in the misuse of LSD as in the case of the two Harvard professors, Timothy Leary and Richard Alpert.

The pair's unapproved experiments with the drug sent two student volunteers to mental hospitals. Mentally unbalanced persons sometimes go completely insane under the drug.

Marrazzi's experiment, approved by the UM College of Medical Science's advisory committee on the use of human volunteers, will not harm a person's mental equilibrium because of several safety factors, he said.

YOU PICKED 'EM

Another week of balloting is over and the results will be played tonight on the Old Tunes Show from 7-8 on WMUA Radio. In the second week of the GOLDIE COUNTDOWN two songs maintained their place on the TOP TEN of Oldies and there were eight new additions, thanks to your voting.

The winning ballot was turned in by Rick D'Andrea of 318 Greenough, UMass. Rick gets a free record album, courtesy of WMUA.

Don't forget to vote in next week's GOLDIE OLDIE COUNTDOWN. The ballots are in Monday's Collegian—the ballot box is at the SU Lobby Counter.

YOU PICKED THEM—you hear them—tonite on Radio 91 FM, WMUA — the exclusive playing of this week's GOLDIE OLDIE COUNTDOWN!

1. Venue—Frankie Avalon
2. Walk Don't Run—The Ventures
3. Downtown—Petula Clark
4. Johnny Angel—Shelley Fabares
5. Runaway—Del Shannon
6. Tragedy—Thomas Wayne
7. Little Miss Blue—Dion
8. And I Love Her—The Beatles
9. Don't Be Cruel—Elvis Presley
10. Blue Velvet—Bobby Vinton

All volunteers are subject to a variety of medical checks, in order to find those with "potentially alarming disturbances of mental performance."

Volunteers are given a personality inventory test and are screened by the Clinical Psychiatry Department when there is any doubt about using them as subjects.

LSD, short for d-lysergic acid diethylamide, is derived from a fungus which grows on the grain of wheat and rye.

If taken in excessive doses, it produces weird effects: vision and perception are altered drastically. One sees the world, as Time magazine described it, in "wide-screen three-dimensional vision," sometimes in Technicolor. Thought processes are released from their usual restraints so greater insights may develop, including deep spiritual feelings.

One Harvard student, after a session with the expelled professor, was almost killed as he walked in front of Boston rush-hour traffic. He said he thought he was God and that nothing could touch him.

Dr. Marrazzi said the aim of his experiment is to find how the nervous system handles the impulses of mentally ill persons. By impeding the flow of impulses with LSD, he can imitate the situation in a mentally ill person's brain, he said.

Marrazzi said LSD first interferes with normal perception, which operates through the memory part of the brain. Here, stored information is compared to new information received through the five senses and the brain interprets this.

When a person first sees a pencil, he records it; he will use his memory to recall what a pencil looks like and is used for the next time he confronts one, Dr. Marrazzi said.

LSD "closes the door" of transmission between memory and new information, he said. The results are a misinterpretation of the new information, commonly called an hallucination.

Thus, a pencil will no longer be seen as a pencil; it may be "misinterpreted as a dangerous weapon," Dr. Marrazzi said. This reflects the abnormal performance in an ill person's mind.

In comparing experiments, it is discovered that during the LSD tests, the intensity of distortion (how well a person can integrate his memory with the new information) is low, the doctor said.

Dr. Marrazzi said his experiments with LSD could provide a breakthrough in the diagnosis of supposedly mentally ill people, assessing the efficiency of present psychiatric treatments, and determining who is mentally unbalanced.

Hero Calls Viet War "Lie"

An American hero of the war in Vietnam, the first enlisted man to be nominated for the Legion of Merit and the soldier selected last July to brief Secretary of Defense McNamara on the operations of our Special Forces, charges our men are dying for "a lie" in an article in the February issue of Ramparts out today.

Master Sergeant Donald Duncan, who turned down a commission and captaincy and left the army after 10 years of service, tells in an article "The Whole Thing Was A Lie" of his evolution from "militant anti-communist" to the discovery that "it's no democracy we brought to Vietnam—it's anti-communism."

"IT TOOK TIME"

"It had taken a long time and a mountain of evidence but I had finally found some truths," Duncan writes. "The world is not just good guys and bad guys. Anti-communism is a lousy substitute for democracy. I know now that there are many types of communism but there are none that appeal to me."

"In the long run, I don't think Vietnam will be better off under Ho's brand of communism. But it's not for me or my government to decide. That decision is for the Vietnamese."

Far from criticizing American anti-war demonstrators, Duncan says, "I think they should be commended . . . They are opposed to people, our own and others, dying for a lie, thereby corrupting the very word democracy."

PURPOSE OF WAR

In a final memorial to his fallen comrades, written while still in service for an army publication, Duncan declares: "We can best immortalize our fallen members by striving for an enlightened future where Man has found another solution to his problems than resorting to the futility and stupidity of war."

The magazine reproduces the letter of commendation sent Duncan on 22 July 1965 by his commanding officer, Col. William A. McKean, following his briefing of McNamara: "The salient points which you so aptly presented to the Secretary of Defense may have significant results on future support of Special Forces in the Republic of Vietnam. You are to be congratulated on a job well done."

Some of the highlights of Duncan's revelations include:

American Special Forces are taught techniques of torture. ("When we asked directly if we were being told to use these methods the answer was, 'We can't tell you that. The Mothers of America wouldn't approve.' This sarcastic hypocrisy was greeted with laughs.")

"I was later to witness first hand the practice of turning prisoners over to ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) for 'interrogation' and the atrocities which ensued."

Special Operations Group, composed of CIA, Air Force, Navy, Army and Special Forces personnel, is operating inside of North Vietnam.

"The real question was, whether communism is spreading in spite of our involvement or because of it."

A good percentage of Special Forces men were Lodge Act people—men who came out of the Iron Curtain countries. Their anti-communism bordered on fanaticism.

When "things" did not happen fast enough to satisfy them, many resigned and showed up later in Africa or Latin America "in the employ of others or as independent agents for the CIA."

Special Forces trainees were told, about prisoners: "You don't have to kill them yourself—let your indigenous counterpart do that."

VIET ATTITUDE

Resentment of Americans by South Vietnamese "runs all the way from stiff politeness to obvious hatred. It is so common that if a Vietnamese working with or for Americans is found to be sincerely cooperative, energetic, conscientious, and honest, it automatically makes him suspect as a Viet Cong agent."

"When teaching Special Forces how to set up guerrilla warfare in an enemy country, killing unpopular officials is pointed out as one method of gaining friends among the populace. It is recommended that special assassination teams be set up for this purpose."

I know of a couple of cases where it was suggested by Special Forces officers that Viet Cong prisoners be killed.

"Communists or not, the vast majority of the people were pro-Viet Cong and anti-Saigon. I had to accept also that the position, 'We are in Vietnam because we are in sympathy with the aspirations and desires of the Vietnamese people,' was a lie."

VIET LOYALTY SHAKY

While we view the Vietnamese on our side as "cowardly" and able to accept discipline, our officers describe the Viet Cong as "dedicated," "tough," "disciplined," "well-trained" and "brave."

The Vietnamese on our side fight well in defense of themselves and their teams, but never out of the feeling that they "are fighting for democracy . . . freedom . . . the people . . ."

South Vietnamese troops and commanders "know that if they don't bother the Viet Cong they will be safe from Viet Cong attacks."

In conclusion the much-decorated Duncan says that he has no criticism of young American anti-war demonstrators: "On the contrary, I am relieved. I think they should be commended . . . They are opposed to people, our own and others, dying for a lie, thereby corrupting the very word democracy."

FREEDOM . . .

and to study that which is personally important.

Is this so unreasonable? To ask for an education that means something to the student? I think not. Would students become less educated if their teachers refrained from the exercise of dictatorial authority and the more subtle coercion of grades? Couldn't students learn more (and retain knowledge better) if their courses answered questions which they themselves asked? Isn't the self-discipline that comes with independent study better than the blind acceptance wouldn't students gain a new pride and satisfaction in their work?

The mark of a true university is whether it takes its students seriously. Educational reform towards these goals would require that students be treated as mature human beings who have an interest in directing their own lives. As long as students are regarded as immature adolescents who really don't know what's good for themselves, they will act just that way. But treat them as people who care about what they learn and who care about the lives they lead, and the results could be surprising.

Too Many Students; Not Enough Rooms

by BARBARA PROKO,
Staff Reporter

Speech in a ROTC building, English in Morrill Science Center, history in Goessmann, anthropology in a food technology building—classes schedules like this are the norm at UMass.

For at least a week after a freshmen wander bewilderedly throughout the campus. Map in one hand, semester schedule clutched desperately in the other, they try to find classes being held in Holdsworth Hall, Cheno-weth Lab, even Machmer West.

"Why?" is the question uppermost in their minds. Why not have French in Bartlett, sociology in Machmer, and so on?

The present arrangement is not a freak product of computer scheduling. Because of increased enrollment, it has become a necessity.

The situation began two or three years ago with the sharp rise in enrollment—1500 more students per year, according to Frank H. Balsley of scheduling.

According to Balsley, the incongruous course-building scheduling promises to continue for the duration of the lag in building construction.

"We might consider classrooms on campus as a total resource to draw from, instead of individually for schools and departments. Our biggest problem is going out into the periphery of campus to find rooms for Arts and Sciences courses," Balsley explained.

"At present Arts and Sciences are very limited in classrooms. This was occasioned by the building project which converted 32 of their rooms in Bartlett to office space."

"The decision to do this was made by department heads in order to have all their offices under one roof. Thus it became necessary to utilize space in other areas," he concluded.

The MEN and The BOYS

What makes some men symbols of masculinity while others—often bigger and brawnier—are not?

The impression of masculinity, conveyed as much by a man's attitudes as by his actions and physique, is a subtle thing indeed. Many men, the psychologists tell us, cling to false or outworn notions of masculinity. They may even scorn as "unmanly" the very traits that women like most in a man!

How's your masculinity Quotient? This light-hearted quiz, based on information gleaned from psychologists, sociologists, historians and other experts, may give you an idea of how successfully you project a he-man image to the world.

WANT MUSCLES?

Have you given up wishing your shoulders were broader and your biceps bulgier? Congratulations! You're a hard-headed realist—which, in contemporary American society, is considered a very masculine thing to be.

Besides, you've grasped the essential fact that conquering heroes come in all sizes—remember Napoleon?

One thing you shouldn't be "realistic" about: excess flab. Keep in trim no matter what your build; such muscles as you possess should be lean and hard.

BE NEAT

Do you take an interest in men's fashions? The notion that he-men don't care about clothes may have gone over big in frontier days when a pair of trousers was just something to attach a holster to; it's a little outmoded now.

Women not only appreciate good grooming and clothes sense in a man—many of them consider male sloppiness a downright insult! So do bosses and personnel men, incidentally.

The idea is to give careful thought to your appearance while seeming casual and offhand about it. Like the movie star, symbol of suave masculinity, who is said to spend his leisure hours in custom-made blue jeans!

GOOD SCENTS?

Do you think scents for men make good sense? That noble Roman warrior and lover, Marc Antony, would have agreed. So would Cleopatra—she went wild over the scents of mint and marjoram with which he anointed himself, in accord with the spicy Roman custom of the day.

If you want a less antique precedent, the Shulton Company estimates that some $4 million worth of aftershave lotions are sold each year in the U.S.

ONE BIG PUZZLE

Do you ever feel you just don't understand women? This may be a good sign. Men have long suspected—and many psychologists now agree—that men and women really do speak different languages. Even the everyday word "closet," for example, in a word association test given by Dr. Catherine Cox Miles, provoked different male-female responses: it made most men subjects think of "door," most women of "clothes."

And as for the simple word "no"—well, listen to one authority: "To a man, 'no' usually means 'no'—and that's that. But a woman feels she can always reopen the subject later."

LISTEN, DON'T TALK

Are you a man of fewer words than your wife or sweetheart? Again, a good sign. Though the "strong, silent type" is not necessarily the epitome of maleness, there seems to be some scientific evidence for the male belief that women out-talk men. What's more, they do it at every stage of life.

Girl babies tend to talk earlier and more distinctly than baby boys. Sociologists who studied young children found that when boys and girls of similar backgrounds were compared, the girls as a group had larger vocabularies and spoke in longer sentences!

LISTEN TO THEM . . .

Do you hate to waste words on gossip? Of course you do. Everyone knows that only women gossip; men tell each other what's new with Smith or Jones.

But a rose by any other name . . . the fact is that a startling number of men enjoy a pastime that bears a remarkable resemblance to gossip. And this activity, while enjoyable, does not

Watch Your Wallet

by ALBERT BELSKY

Wallets, pocketbooks, coats, and books are stolen on the UM campus. The number of thefts is not high, but it would be even lower if students took better care of their property.

Out of a total university population approaching 12,000, only about 40 claims of stolen wallets and purses were received by the I.D. office last semester.

Other forms of petty larceny, such as book and clothing thefts, ing for anyone's masculine image.

DECISIONS, DECISIONS

through the centuries, the ability to make a decision and stick to it has been deemed a manly trait—and its opposite attributed (by men, naturally) to the female of the species. "A fickle and changeable thing is woman ever," said the poet Virgil 2000 years ago.

Not only is it still considered woman's prerogative to change her mind at will or whim—but a man's decision-making ability is now more highly valued than ever before.

Do you have a definite personal style? The man who's individual or not—may convey a more masculine impression than the guy who blends in with the crowd. Do you have definite, well-thought-out opinions on politics . . . modern art . . . women's fashions?

Are you a "type"—tweedy or sophisticated—in the way you dress and groom yourself? The gals may love you for it! In a poll conducted by a leading toiletries maker, 80 of the women interviewed said they enjoyed catering to a man's taste in food, fashions and decor.

THE GREAT LOVER

If you're not a Don Juan, are you glad instead of sorry about it? A great many men consider ine; surprisingly, most psychologists disagree. Clinical psychologist Dr. Albert Ellis voices a common view when he states that the Don Juan "is an emotionally weak . . . individual who is trying to reassure himself of how 'strong' or 'masculine' he is."

The one-woman type family man is usually much more of a real malvkvfjvbrfn hl h6

BLOW YOUR COOLS?

Are you soft-spoken . . . keep your temper pretty well under control? Gentleness, especially toward those weaker than yourself, is more masculine a trait than some men think.

The "tough guy", psychologists say, is often trying to compensate for his feelings of inadequacy; the truly self-confident male is usually strong enough psychologically to resist the temptation to bully others.

seem to be somewhat higher, but not alarmingly so. As Dean Barnard put it, "I do not view theft on campus to be a serious problem."

Most cases that do occur, however, have one similar characteristic. They could have been prevented with a little foresight and common sense.

Campus Police Chief Alexander Blasko stated that carelessness on the part of the student body is the primary reason for thefts. "Laxity is an invitation for a thief," warned Blasko.

Dormitory rooms left unlocked while students are out are prime examples of this lack of foresight. Chief Blasko emphasized that since every student is issued a key to his room an unlocked door is an inexcusable negligence.

He added that although students may feel that they can trust the men or women on their corridor, it should be kept in mind that a dormitory is almost as much a public place as any other campus building.

Large sums of money should never be kept in a dorm room or carried around in a wallet or purse. The university provides a free banking system, and the Amherst Savings Bank allows undergraduates to open savings accounts.

Dances, movies, and concerts at the Student Union provide another example of carelessness. The Union usually provides a coat-checking service at these functions, but, nevertheless, many students leave coats, purses and books in the lobby or the ladies' room.

At the Armistice Day dance last November, Chief Blasko reported, several coats and purses were taken—a total of some eighteen thefts—all of which had not been properly checked.

Books are especially susceptible to theft. Left unwatched in corridors or on book racks while students are in class, they can easily be taken.

Chief Blasko expressed his astonishment at the failure of many people to sign their name and address on the inside covers of their text books.

He added that any book turned into the university or Amherst book stores for re-sale that has a name crossed out or otherwise looks suspicious is put aside until the ownership of the book is confirmed.

Signing your books, Chief Blasko said, is your best guarantee that you will recover them if they are lost or stolen.

Surprisingly few thefts are reported at the dining commons even though large groups of students gather there daily. South Commons Manager Robert Blanchard feels that the commons have no more cases of petty larceny than any other buildings on campus.

He said that before the South Commons was built the possibility of providing lockers or checkrooms was considered. There proposals were scrapped, however, because no practical, fast, or convenient method could be found to put such facilities into use.

Mr. Blanchard suggested three steps to follow when personal property is missed: retracing your steps, inquiring at all the buildings where the article may have been left, including the Student Union lost and found counter, and, if theft is suspected, reporting it to the Campus Police.

As Chief Blasko put it, the Campus Police cannot keep track of everyone's property. The burden of caution must rest on the individual student, and the best safeguards against theft are a watchful eye and a little horse sense.

AFC to Premier "Pasht" in Mahar

The American Film Classics is a newly formed campus group, whose purpose is to present to the public a representation of some of America's finest films. Those who follow the Series will be able to observe the cultural influence of the film and note its fluctuations from pure entertainment, to abstract art.

Each Monday night program will include a feature picture that is representative of an epoch in the history of the film and a contemporary experimental film. The experimental film will be shown are the works of some of the foremost men in this field, such as Stan Brakhage, Kenneth Anger, and Andy Warhol.

Monday, February 28 the A.F.C.S. will present Bette Davis and Paul Lukas in Watch on the Rhine. The experimental film will be Brakhage's latest work "Pasht." This will be the first showing of this film, outside of a private showing in New York.

This unique and interesting program will be held in Mahar Auditorium. Admission will be 50 cents.

P.O. Box 215, Church St. Station, New York, N. Y. 10046

General Electric is passing out GENIUS buttons. What's the point?

Only one thing's keeping me from becoming a GENIUS

(Example)

is the kind of person who doesn't know it all. Believe me, I know would rather fight than think

GENIUS

Be nice to me. I'm going to be a GENIUS

Someday

GENIUS

EVERYBODY'S A GENIUS

(Only in different subjects)

We want to spread the word that there's room at General Electric for talented people who want to take on big challenges.

We like to call these people GENIUSES. But what they're called isn't so important as where they're headed. And at the General Electric Company, there's plenty of room for GENIUSES, no matter what their particular field of interest.

If you want to be recognized for your talents come to General Electric, where the young men are important men.

And be among the first on your campus to own a genuine GENIUS button. It will serve as a reminder that G.E. . . . and GENIUS . . . and important challenges . . . all go together.

Controversial Speakers Banned at N. Carolina U.

(CPS)—Students and faculty members at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill have taken a wait-and-see attitude following a decision last week by the university's executive committee to refuse to allow two controversial speakers to appear on campus.

At an open meeting of the newly-formed Committee for Free Inquiry, more than 350 students and faculty members debated the action by the trustees. But there was general agreement that the group should hold back on demonstrations or other forms of protest until after the Feb. 28 meeting of the full Board of Directors.

At that time, the board is scheduled to meet in Chapel Hill and the speakers' question will be on the agenda. The board is expected to give formal approval to some arrangements for inviting speakers to appear at the four branches of the consolidated University of North Carolina.

William C. Friday, President of the University, has proposed the following procedure:

—Campus groups desiring to invite a speaker would consult with their faculty adviser and then file with the chancellor a statement giving details of the invitation and the adviser's opinion as to the speaker's "competence to deal with his topic."

—Then the chancellor would refer the invitation to a joint student-faculty committee for its advice.

Under this system, the ultimate decision would rest with the chancellor of the branch of the university involved. However, a subcommittee established by the executive committee of the trustees is now studying the situation and there is some doubt as to whether the board will be willing to place this authority in the hands of the chancellors.

The executive committee voted 8 to 3 last week to refuse Herbert Aptheker of New York and Frank Wilkinson of Washington, permission to speak on the campus. They had been invited by the Chapel Hill chapter of the Students for a Democratic Society.

The majority agreed with Gov. Dan K. Moore, who is chairman of the executive committee. The governor contended that the invitation to Aptheker and Wilkinson had been issued to create controversy and not for "any true educational purpose."

During its open meeting this week, the Committee for Free Inquiry approved a letter inviting Gov. Moore to speak at Chapel Hill.

The letter asked Moore or a member of the executive committee of the board to "Come to Chapel Hill and make clear to us the reasons for the steps that have been taken."

The letter said the group has no wish "to embarrass you, your administration, the executive committee, or the board of trustees" but that "we simply want to know the truth."

Dr. Corydon P. Spruill, chairman of the faculty, said he was afraid the letter would look "as if we're asking the governor to come over here and be accountable to us."

"In terms of expediency and wisdom," Spruill said, "I think it would be better to write off the Aptheker invitation as a lost battle."

His suggestion was met with a murmur of "no" from the audience, made up mostly of students.

Spruill suggested that instead of the letter that was adopted, the group send a letter to the trustees saying "we have no disposition to renew the request (for Aptheker's appearance) and we earnestly appeal to the trustees for a reaffirmation of faith in the principles of free expression."

This milder letter was rejected by an overwhelming vote.

Durham, N.C. (CPS)—Duke University President Douglas M. Knight has cleared the way for Herbert Aptheker and Frank Wilkinson to fill speaking engagements at the school.

Aptheker had already accepted an invitation from two student groups—the Men's Student Government Association and the Liberal Action Committee—to speak at the university on March 8, but final decision rested with Knight. group lobbying for the abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, had accepted an invitation from the Professional Affairs Committee of the Duke Bar Association to speak at the school on March 1.

mer. Previously announced was a Botany program for college teachers supported by the National Science Foundation and an NDEA history institute for high school social science teachers that is the largest of its kind in the U.S.

The English institute will be held from June 23 to Aug. 3 for 45 participants. The courses will be composition, poetry and criticism, each to comprise lecture hours plus one seminar hour and a half hour of individual conference per week.

Dr. Richard O. Ulin, associate professor of English education at the UMass School of Education, is director, assisted by Robert E. Bagg, assistant professor of English at UMass.

THE STAFF INCLUDES UMass Prof. Joseph T. Langland and seven others from UMass, Smith and Amherst Colleges, and the University of Washington.

Major objectives, according to Dr. Ulin, are to develop skill in writing and teaching of writing, to increase competence in reading and teaching poetry, and to present the essential principles and problems of literary criticism.

Eligibility is limited to those who have taught in Grades 9-12 for at least three years, are now teaching a full English program in those grades, and will be teaching a similar program next year in one of the New England states.

Those eligible must also have at least a bachelor's degree with a minimum concentration of hours in English and have not had a full year of residence at a college or university within the past three years.

PARTICIPANTS will attend classes and be housed in the Orchard Hill residence area at UMass. Stipends and dependency allowances will be paid.

Applications must be made by March 21. Information is available from Dr. Richard O. Ulin, director, NDEA Institute in English, School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, 01003.

Iowa String Quartet To Play at UMass

The Iowa String Quartet, one of the foremost interpreters of chamber music by American composers, will give a concert at the University of Massachusetts Sunday, Feb. 27.

The 8 p.m. concert in Bartlett Auditorium is sponsored by the UMass department of music and is open to the public without charge.

THE GROUP is the quartet in residence at the University of Iowa, where Dr. Philip T. Bezanson, head of the UMass music department, was formerly chairman of composition.

One of the compositions the group will play at UMass is Dr. Bezanson's String Quartet. The others are Quartet No. 2 by Charles Ives and Haydn's Quartet in D Major, Opus 76, N. 5.

FORMED IN 1958 at Iowa, the group includes Allen Ohmes, first violin, John Ferrell, second violin, William Preucil, viola and Joel Krosnick, cello.

The Iowa String Quartet has toured throughout the United States and has won enthusiastic reviews. The Washington Star called it, "the peer of any university quartet in residence in the business and far superior to most of them."

Food Programs to Be Explained

The second in a series of programs on food for developing countries will be given Tuesday, March 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the University of Massachusetts Student Union.

India will be the topic. The program is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts chapter of Alpha Zeta, national agricultural honorary fraternity.

Speaker and moderator will be Prof. John H. Foster of the department of agricultural economics, who has twice visited India. Panelists will include three Indians now guests on campus who will each give short talks.

A question period will follow the formal presentation, which will include slides. The University community and the general public are invited.

Also on March 1, the second talk in the spring plant pathology seminar series will be given at 10:10 a.m. in Room 107, Ferrell Hall. Dr. Bert M. Zuckerman, professor at the East Wareham Cranberry Field Station, will speak on "Administrative Procedures in Phytopathology."

TRUSTEES' VOTE ON MED SCH. CRITICIZED

Trustees of the University of Massachusetts were scored anew for their closed-door decision to locate the new state medical school in Worcester during testimony on a proposal to eliminate so-called loopholes in the open meeting law.

Rep. David M. Bartley (D-Holyoke) supported a bill to require that votes of any state agency be a public record, at a public hearing before the joint committee on State Administration. He criticized the UMass board for "voting secretly" on the Worcester site, and used the trustees' act as an example of the loophole in the open meeting law which does not require votes in closed sessions to be a matter of public record.

"One of the great tragedies here is that you and I have to go on record but people named to the University of Massachusetts' board of trustees want all the prestige and fringe benefits of the job, but they don't want the heat that goes along with it," the Holyoke Democrat told the committee.

THE BARTLEY BILL was supported by David Brickson, publisher and representative of the Massachusetts Newspaper Information Service, who termed the vote on the medical school as an example of how the spirit of the open meeting law could be abused.

County and municipal boards are required under the open meeting law to put all their votes on record but unfortunately the requirement that state boards and commissions be required to go on record was omitted from the open meeting law during its passage, he said.

SUPPORT also was voiced for a bill sponsored by Rep. George L. Sacco, Jr. (D-Medford), which would require a two-thirds vote of any board, council or commission before it could go into executive session. Present law requires only a majority vote for a closed door session.

Rep. Sacco said the bill would protect rights of minorities by keeping before the public discussions it has a right to know about. "Too many of these boards run into executives for hiding," he said.

WOMEN'S JUDICIARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Nomination papers may be obtained in the RSO Office between Feb. 25-Mar. 8 for Woman's Judiciary. Any freshman or sophomore woman is eligible. Nomination papers must be signed by 25 woman students (excluding seniors). A woman may sign the nomination paper of any candidate regardless of her class, but may not sign the paper of more than one candidate per class. Screening interviews will be conducted by members of Woman's Judiciary and the Woman's Affairs Committee prior to the primaries.

Benefit to be at S.U. Ballroom

The Amherst Joint Action for Mission, in cooperation with the United Christian Foundation, is sponsoring dinner in the Ballroom of the Student Union for the benefit of the Mississippi Delta ministry, 6:00 P.M., March 2, 1966, $10.00. The Delta Ministry is a commission of the National Council of Churches empowered by the Council to perform a creative ministry in the Delta region of Mississippi. Members of the Four-College community (faculty and students) are taking part in voter registration and construction during Spring vacation.

Tickets will be available at the Chaplain's Office, Student Union; Wesley Methodist Church, and First Congregational Church. Student tickets may be purchased at a reduced rate from a lobby table Friday afternoon and Monday.

A Coffee Hour featuring Mr. Bruce Hilton is to be held Thursday afternoon, March 3rd, from 2-3:30 P.M., Governor's Lounge, Student Union. Mr. Hilton will speak on the possibility of student participation in Mississippi during Spring vacation and the summer projects.

A volunteer group of Army ROTC sophomores is currently attending a Non-Commissioned Officer Academy. The school meets 2 hours a week, and will last for 8 weeks. One of the main subjects being taught is methods of instruction, where students learn teaching techniques and practice them by instructing their classmates. The purpose of the academy is to train Drillmasters, who will teach next year's freshmen as well as take over important posts in the brigade. From this school will come some of the outstanding leaders of the ROTC brigade.

More Students At Northampton

The Veterans Administration Hospital in Northampton is in the process of expanding their program for college student volunteers at the hospital. Plans are now being made for students to work with carefully selected patients in activities and relationships other than the usual recreational services and under closer supervision by professional personnel.

For the first time in this area, students will be able to see and work directly with the same patients each time they visit the hospital. Professional members of the staff of the Veterans Administration Hospital feel that this kind of program will utilize the volunteers time more effectively and provide for the development of the students unrecognized skills and interests.

Students who participate in this program would have access to the library facilities at the hospital. If their schedule necessitated them being at the hospital during the noon meal, students would receive the meal free of charge. As volunteers, students are also covered under Workmen's Compensation.

An orientation meeting will be held Wednesday, March 2, 1966 at 7:30 P.M. in the Recreation Hall of the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Northampton. For more information, interested students may contact Sheila McRevey, in the Program Office of the Student Union.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

by DAVE JARNES

An amazing second half comeback brought the Grayson Aces a well-deserved 35-33 victory over the Gorman Maples for the dorm championship.

THE ACES TRAILED 23-10 at intermission and had to play without their leading rebounder and top scorer, Dave Smithers, who was forced to leave the game with a head injury after a collision early in the game. At this point the Aces appeared to have no chance at all to beat the talented Maples, but suddenly Jack Thomas and Tom Rossi got red hot from the outside while Grayson's scrappy defense was forcing Gorman into numerous errors. With a minute left the Aces finally took the lead and two free throws by Henry Barr paced the Aces while Lagoy's 12 were tops for the Maples. The Aces now face the unenviable task of meeting the Untouchables for the campus championship this Monday.

THE MIGHTY UNTOUCHABLES were in top form in whipping a strong ZN team 53-32 to gain a berth in the final round of the campus playoffs. The Untouchables' balanced attack was led by Charlie Lapiere's 16 points, Al Garsys' 14, and John Yates' 12 while Brian LaJoie was high man for ZN with 11.

After trailing 18-14 at halftime, the Webster Rams exploded into a 10 point lead in the early moments of the second canto to cruise to a 40-32 win over the Colt .45's. The win gave the Rams third place in the dorm league. Bert Cady had his high game of the season with 24 points.

THE SECOND ANNUAL Lambda Chi Alpha basketball tourney will be held this weekend at UMass. Teams from MIT, UConn, UMass, WPI, Clark, and Rensselaer will be represented. Saturday's games will be at 11 and 2:30 at Boyden while Sunday's games will be at 1:30 and 3:00 at the Cage.

A record number of entries in all weight classes are competing for the various weight class championships in the wrestling tourney.

PSD and PMD have had their problems in other IFC sports this year, but it appears these two fraternities will meet for the IFC title this year in bowling. PSD has a 58-6 record while PMD stands at 57-7.

The squash tournament is in its third round and lacrosse coach Dick Garber, who won the tourney last year has won his first two rounds.

Swimmers to Host Mighty Bowdoin Tonite

The UMass Mermen will be defending their home waters against powerful Bowdoin College of Maine this Friday night. In previous years, Bowdoin has been prominent in small college swimming in the East. This year Coach Joe Rogers compile a 6-3 record for the season.

Daniels and Wilson will be counted on to provide first place points in the 200 yd. and 500 yd. Freestyle. These boys have been doing quite a job for Coach is no exception. The Mermen would have no greater pleasure than to outswim Bowdoin, gaining stature for themselves.

THE MERMEN'S CHIEF hope for victory will be placed on the nucleus of the team, co-captains Dick Daniels and Frank Wilson, Juniors Dick Lennon, Steve Levy, and Chip Wyser, and Soph. "Spider" Nowak. These swimmers have provided the main points in assisting Rogers for four years. With their swimming careers almost at a close, they are determined to finish in victory. Lennon is expected to continue his winning streak in the 200 yd. Individual Medley and 200 yd. Breaststroke. Steve Levy and Chip Wyser will defend their record positions in the Butterfly and Freestyle events. Nowak is working hard to swim his 200 yd. Backstroke even faster.

Maroon Gymnasts Topple UMass

by AL RICE

A new kind of gymnastics doubleheader turned into just another way to lose a pair of meets for the University of Massachusetts men's and women's teams. Both were in action simultaneously at Springfield College's Field House Tuesday night, and the Maroons took both affairs, 180.60 to 145.15 for the varsity and 91.8 to 78.5 for the girls.

Each meet had an event going on continuously although only one competitor performed at a time. UMass probably wished the Springfield team had all its entrants up at once and getting in each other's way because, as it was, there wasn't much that the Maroons did wrong all night.

Ken Henderson won the floor exercises with a 9.2 to beat out Jay Otto who just missed the magic figure with an 8.95. Bob Cargill, the Maroons all-around entrant, came in third to insure all three top spots. Springfield finished with the top three in two other events, and took the top two in all but the long horse vaulting where UMass' Al Cohen nabbed second behind Henderson. Cohen's 9.15 just edged out Tony Auchterlonie's 9.1 for runner-up honors.

Auchterlonie won the side horse with the only nine-plus score of the event. Ron Peek of Springfield and Fred Babakian and Bob LeClair of UMass were bunched within a half point for the next three places. The two Redmen sophomores were the brightest spots in the meet for STATISTICS FROM both teams indicate that this meet will be a close one. Many of the individual events will keep this contest lively and quite thrilling. It should be a good one. The first race begins at 8:00 p.m. in Boyden. Come on down, the water's fine!

UMass just as they were in the loss at Navy last Saturday. Cargill displayed his class on the high bar with a 9.3 score to easily win that event. Al Carver was the only Mass competitor to break the top three with a 7.85. Carver also picked up third on the trampoline behind Cargill and Hickman. The tramp was the weakest Springfield event with only 22.45 team points, but UMass couldn't gain anything since it was also their worst event.

After Springfield racked up nines from all three men in the long horse vaulting competition, they held a 128 to 106 lead that grew in the last two contests. The Maroons dominated the parallel bars and rings with nearly 27 points in each one. Dave Lizadte entered the p-bars for UMass as the fourth man for a safety score in case of trouble by one of the top three. It turned out his 6.55 score was needed because Jack Bradbury, the usual high man, had a pair of breaks that cut his score to bits. The other two for UMass were in the sevens while the Maroons had Cargill winning with a 9.05 and Ron Peek second with a high eight.

Peek broke nine to win the rings, where he is one of the best in the nation. Cargill just missed the top step with 8.95 for a second, and his team also took third. High man for Massachusetts was Jim Dusenbury, a high school teammate of Peek's.

The UMass girls kept their scores closer all night than the varsity, and it might have been even tighter if not for bad luck on the balance beam. Kathy Corrigan won the event with an 8.7 and her teammates chipped in with good scores, while the top two UMass girls both had breaks in their routines. Marianne Davis took the only UMass first with a win over Andrea Hyland in the floor exercises, but she finished second in the vaulting to Miss Corrigan, a member of the 1964 Olympics team and presently one of the top five woman gymnasts in the country. Andrea Hyland won the uneven parallel bars ahead of UMass freshman Sue Clancy, a sensation in earlier meets, who scored a 7.8 despite a major break. Marianne Davis was third with a 7.5.

The girls' next meet will be at Boyden Gym at 4 p.m. Saturday against a high school team from Weymouth featuring Patty Corrigan, number seventh ranked competitor in the country and Kathy's sister, Andover, West Springfield and Mt. Everett Regional will also compete.

Frats Top Dorms

Strong offensive rebounding gave the Fraternity All-Stars a 53-45 win over the Dormitory All-Stars at the Cage last night. The brothers were led by Brian LaJoie's 18 points. Ray Stanelis put in 14 points for the Dormitory men.

In the Nose Bowl, a strong rally enabled AEP to topple TEP, 38-36. AEP was down 25-11 at halftime but stormed back to knot the score 32-32 by the end of regulation time. A free throw by Al White in overtime provided the victory.

BASKETBALL . . .

UMASS WILL try to wind up the season with an 11-13 record when the Redmen meet Maine at Orono on Saturday. In the first game, the Black Bears scored a 70-63 upset at the Cage. Although UMass' won-lost record isn't excellent, the last two games offer promise of a good season next year.

Collin Garstang, number one man on Coach Bill MacConnell's ski team, shows his form in taking first place in the UM Winter Carnival Slalom at Mt. Snow last Sunday.

Skiers Move Into Top Spot After Carni Win

After a successful Winter Carnival week-end of ski racing at Mt. Snow, the UMass ski team, now lodged in first place in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference, will take part in the Pats Peak Slalom tomorrow, hosted by New England College in New Hampshire.

The Redmen moved from second to first place in the league by holding a 44-second edge over B.U. in the UMass Winter Carnival Slalom on Sunday. In the Amherst College Giant Slalom on Saturday, the squad gained 10 seconds on B.U., which held down the top spot in the league.

WITH SIX RACES out of the way and three to go, the only other serious contender for first place is New England College. Located in a skiing hotbed and practicing every day, N.E.C. has a fine stable of outstanding competitors.

It is expected that N.E.C. will make a big push for league dominance in tomorrow's Slalom, which is part of its own Winter Carnival, and in the Mt. Sunapee Downhill on Sunday. UMass has spent five careful years building ski racing excellence and hopes to spoil the festivities for I.E.C. by winning the Carnival race for the second straight year.

SOPHOMORE COLLIN GARSTANG led the University to victory Saturday by placing first out of over 100 racers. Bill Toof of B.C., John Waite of N.E.C., and Rick Rubenstein of Amherst followed Garstang, in that order. Tom Pittendreich '67, Fred Foster '67 and Don Piezza '66 rounded out the score for UMass. The order of school finishes was 1—UMass, 2—B.U., 3—N.E.C., 4—Northeastern, 5—B.C., 6—Tufts, 7—Amherst, 8—Princeton, 9—Brown, 10—A.I.C., and 11—Keene.

On Sunday Garstang was again first, to give him three first places and one tie for first in the six races so far this season. Four gold medals for six times out is a fabulous record for a skier in his first year of varsity competition.

PITTENDREICH FINISHED second to cop a silver medal in his best performance of the year. Co-captain Pete Plastridge placed ninth and Foster 28th to round out the UMass quartet.

UMass was five seconds behind N.E.C. in this one for second of finish, were 3—Amherst, and place. Other schools, in order: 4—B.U., 5—Northeastern, 6—Tufts, 7—B.C., 8—A.I.C., 9—Brown, and 10—Princeton. Keene did not compete.

GUN FUN

The Varsity Pistol Team will hold a spring clinic during March and April. The first meeting will be held on Mar. 14 at 8 p.m., in Dickinson Hall. Any persons interested in pistol shooting please contact the University Varsity Pistol Coach, Sp5 Norman Twait, at Dickinson Hall, Room 106, Tel: 545-2321/2322, or attend one of the spring clinics planned.

UMASS PRESS BEATS CROSS 85-79

by DAVE JARNES

Led by the fine all-around play of Billy Tindall and Clarence Hill, UMass beat Holy Cross for the second time this season before an enthusiastic crowd of 2109 at the Worcester Auditorium, 85-79.

THE REDMEN began the game with the same 1-2-2 zone which proved to be so successful against St. Johns earlier this week. For the first ten minutes both teams traded baskets as UMass was exploiting its fast break effectively while the Cross was content to use its deliberate offense to set up rugged Keith Hockstein in the bucket and Richie Murphy from the corner. In the next five minutes the Crusaders spurred into a 1-23 lead behind the red-hot shooting of Murphy. Coach Johnny Orr called time out and the Redmen switched to a full-court man to man press which brought astounding results. UMass ran up 13 straight points without an answer from Holy Cross and outscored the Purple 21-4 for the remainder of the half to take a 44-35 lead into the locker room. This scoring explosion was similar to the surge during the first meeting of these two teams when the Orrmen ran off 19 straight points.

A LARGE FACTOR in UMass' first half success was Billy Tindall's ability to maneuver on Hockstein to the tune of 13 points and 10 rebounds. Clarence Hill had a cool-shooting half with 9 points but he set up Tindall, Jim Babyak and Gary Gasperack with his six assists.

Babyak started the second half with a jump shot to give UMass its biggest lead of the night at 46-35. However, Holy Cross began to chip away at the deficit behind Hockstein and Murphy, taking over the lead at 59-58 with 11:05 left on a basket by Hockstein. Tindall then followed with a jumper but Hockstein scored again to give the Cross its last lead at 62-61. Mr. Clutch himself, Clarence Hill, began to go to work, scoring on a pop shot and a steal to give the Redmen a 66-63 advantage which they maintained until the last 2 minutes when baskets by Hill and Babyak gave UMass a fairly comfortable 6 point lead.

HOLY CROSS' POOR ball handling and lack of team speed were deftly exploited by Coach Orr. Whenever UMass pressed the Crusaders, Holy Cross was helpless. After abandoning the press in the early part of the second half UMass reinstalled it when the Cross took the lead and was able to regain the momentum to pull out a well-deserved victory.

CLARENCE WOUND up as high man with 23 points, most of which came in the last 10 minutes while Billy Tindall, chipped in with 20 and hauled in a flock of rebounds. Consistent Jim Babyak hit the nets for 18 points while Gary Gasperack scored all of his 8 points in the first half. John Lisack added to the balanced Redmen attack by playing a superb two-way game

A.I.C. SNAPS FROSH PUCK WIN STREAK

by TIM MURPHY

Coach Joseph Faucette's determined but undermanned yearlings, undefeated in six previous hockey contests, met their match in a powerful, fast-skating A.I.C. contingent Thursday night at the Eastern States Coliseum in West Springfield as they dropped the encounter, 13-0. A.I.C., whose only losses in 18 games have been to R.P.I. and Army sextets, utilized its size and depth advantages to gain the hard-fought, though one-sided victory.

The Yellow Jackets repeatedly stung the Little Redmen, skating only 11 men, from close range as Gary Socha started things with a disputed tally at 1:34 of the first period. Tim Wright followed with a tip-in at 12:16 and Don Temple netted two of his four goals within a span of three minutes. Tom Dolan made it 5-0 with a five-foot slap shot to finish the first period scoring.

A devastating passing attack in the second period fostered three additional A.I.C. tallies as Ian Caldwell, Bob Doran and Temple lit the red light. Nolan's three counters in the final canto, sandwiched around classy goals by Dave Clark and Don Temple, were the icing on the cake.

Scrappy UMass netminder, Bob Balcom, and Canadian import Gary Young of the Yellow Jackets were forced to call upon their resources of hockey know-how to frustrate numerous offensive thrusts. Balcom, a busy boy all evening, kicked out 46 shots while Young, the master of every situation, stopped 28.

LITTLE REDMEN NIPPED IN THRILLER

by TOM FITZGERALD

The game of the year for UM was played last night at Worcester Aud. as the Redmen Frosh dropped a thriller to the Holy Cross Frosh, 93-90. Despite the loss, the Little Redmen finished with an excellent report card of 11 victories and four defeats.

TWO FREE throws by Joe DiSarcina with 40 seconds left had brought Coach Charlie Kingston's boys to a deficit of only 98-88, when the twin towers of the Little Crusaders—Ron Teixeira and Ed Siudut—went to work. Siudut made a tap-in with 19 seconds to go and Teixeira followed shortly with a pair of foul shots to clinch the verdict, although Ed Griffith of UM sank a long bomb at the buzzer.

BOTH TEAMS traded points evenly until the Teixeira-Siudut combo came through for the hosts, who now own a 16-1 record, having been beaten only by Boston Col., a team that UM has mastered.

In the first half, Holy Cross shot and rebounded on all cylinders. It was Gemei's 20 points in the half, including one stretch of eight in a row, that kept UM in the contest at all. The Little Redmen held a 9-point lead halfway through the first quarter, but Holy Cross took over on a jump shot by Foley to make it 24-22 with eight minutes gone in the game.

HOLY CROSS reached an 8-point bulge at 40-32 with five minutes left in the first half, but Gemei accounted for 9 of the game's next 11 tallies. H.C. moved ahead to hold a 50-45 halftime edge and a 69-65 lead after three quarters, before UM made a final, but futile, rally.

Gemei, in his best effort of the season, led all scorers with 35 points, followed up by Little Redman Ron Nowakowski (19), John Shockro (12), and DiSarcina (11). Siudut and Teixeira, two future Holy Cross greats, paced the Purple with 27 and 26 points.

Collegian Returns Former Structure

After long debate and consideration, the Collegian Publishing Board decided last night to continue the present staff organizational structure. March 3 elections will be conducted in the past with openings for the positions of editor-in-chief, managing editor, news editor, sports editor and business manager.

The reversal of procedure, tentatively approved by a staff meeting of 21, was a result of what Editor-in-chief Peter Hendrickson called "doubt and uncertainty" toward the new system on the part of many staff members.

The decision was also based on the fact that few qualified upperclassmen applied for "senior board" positions.

The "senior board" would have consisted of 15 co-equal editors-in-chief of the five major departments which many people felt would have given too much authority to too many people—people who in many cases do not want the responsibility of handling a department.

Following Thursday's election, the new editors will meet to decide on the feasibility of creating elective day editor positions and possibly modifying the proposal of 15 co-equal day-editors. The proposal is not dead; it has been temporarily put aside.

Nomination papers submitted for membership on the "senior board" will now be used by the editors to select qualified appointees for day editor positions.

People who applied for "senior board" positions can now run for one of the five basic editorial run for one of the five basic editorial requirements:

Univ. Women Will Present Fashions

"New notes in Fashion" will be the theme of the Luncheon and Fashion Show to be presented by The University Women in the Coachlight Room of Hotel Northampton on Tuesday, March 8, at 12:30 p.m.

A delightful afternoon has been planned by Mrs. Stevenson W. Fletcher and her committee: Mrs. J. T. Clayton, Mrs. William H. Collins, Mrs. Douglas E. Crabtree, and Mrs. Robert C. Perriello. The fashions shown will be by the Salt Box of Amherst and will be modeled by members of the organization.

Reservations must be made by March 3rd. No cancellations can be taken after March 3rd. Guests (those women not eligible for membership in the organization) are welcomed. Ticket prices are $2.75 for members and $3.25 for guests. For tickets contact Mrs. Robert Perriello, 551 West St., Amherst. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets.

Election Notice

Elections for senators from Knowlton, Brooks, Wheeler, and Brett Houses will be held Thursday, March 3 in the respective dorms from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Each candidate must file no later than four p.m. Tuesday, March 1, 1966, with the Collegian secretary, Mrs. Barry:

1—For editor-in-chief, managing editor, news editor and sports editor:

A—Three examples of writing, not necessarily published.

B—Two pages of makeup with original headlines by the applicant; stories to be taken from the Feb. 14 and 18 editions of the Collegian.

C—One semester of Collegian editorial staff experience.

D—The election procedures committee may waive the one semester experience requirement for any candidate who gives evidence of equivalent editorial experience in another organization.

2—Business Manager:

A—One semester of Collegian business staff membership.

B—Two facing pages of advertising dummies.

C—Demonstrate a working knowledge of Student Senate financial procedures, advertising procedures, circulation, promotion, marketing and management to be determined in an interview between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Wednesday, March 2, 1966, with the RSO business manager and the Collegian business manager.

D—The election procedures committee may waive the one semester experience requirement for any candidate who gives evidence of equivalent business experience in another organization.

Each candidate will be given an opportunity to speak Thursday, March 3 at 6:30 preceding the elections. Each candidate will be given a maximum of five minutes to outline his qualifications for the office.

Eligible to vote on March 3 will be all staff members listed on the masthead of Friday, Feb. 25, 1966.

Charity Drive Opens Today

Campus Chest Drive is the charity organization which conducts a fund-raising drive in the spring of each year. As it is the only drive which is aimed directly at members of the UMass campus and the Amherst community, it is hoped that everyone will contribute his share to make it a successful one.

The money raised by the end of this campaign is put to use in various ways. In the past it has been distributed mainly among campus scholarships and World University Service projects. This tradition will be followed again this year, but along with it will be the establishing of Campus Chest as a "clearing house."

By this it is meant that various other charity organizations (Continued from page 3)

Fighting Mechanization

Reform Committee Announces Conference

The University Reform Committee, a broadly-based group composed of members of all parts of the University community, announced today that it is holding a Conference on Academic Reform at the University of Massachusetts, Sat., Mar. 5, 1966 at 1 p.m.

According to Peter Goodman, a spokesman for the Committee, the group was formed several months ago by various persons concerned by a growing trend toward mechanization at the University.

The stressing of managerial efficiency at the expense of the individual student, the increasing hand in properly academic matters being taken by the administration, and various other problems facing UMass will be discussed.

The Committee has been working on plans for two initial conferences; this first on academic affairs, and a second on social problems, to be held sometime in the spring.

Goodman stated that the purpose of these conferences will be to develop programs dedicated to effecting changes in UM's academic and social programs and policies.

To this effect, the format of the first conference, to be held in the Council Chambers and other conference rooms in the Student Union, will have two parts.

The first will be a panel discussion centered around the general subject of the meaning of education and its application at UMass.

On this panel will be Dr. William Venman, Asst. to the Provost; Dr. Jules Chametzky, Assoc. Prof. of English; Dr. John Brentlinger, Asst. Prof. of Philosophy; and Kenneth Hardy, '67, chairman of the University Reform Committee.

The panel will be moderated by Peter Hendrickson, '66, editor-in-chief of the Collegian.

After the panel, the conference will break up into four workshop discussions.

These discussions, which will be structured very informally, will be a chance for students and faculty to voice their grievances, air their suggestions, and ultimately to formulate programs to correct specific ills in UM's academic procedures.

Robert Rotstein, also of the Committee, stressed that the conference is not meant as a symposium, but is designed to bring together those persons who wish to work actively on problems of university reform.

Senate Preview

Committee Will Investigate Grading Systems

by KAREN ROSE,
Senate Editor

The Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate will be called on to investigate the present policies of the Chemistry, Psychology, and Statistics Departments concerning their grading systems. This bill will be brought to the senate floor on Wednesday night by Sen. Larry Marcus ('68 at large).

A motion will be brought to the floor at Wednesday's meeting by which men counsellors will not be eligible for selection or election to the judiciary system in any branch.

The bill starts with the following assertion: Whereas the counsellors are in fact paid administrative staff, and are in the formal position of bringing charges before the Judiciary; be it moved that counsellors in residence halls not be eligible for selection or election.

Much of the rest of the Senate agenda contains bills which were not discussed at the last meeting including Sen. Mike Garjian's (Southwest C) bill calling for a Senate appropriation of $2,000 for a special student loan fund to be available for the first two weeks of each semester. The loan is limited to $25 per student and, if the bill is passed, will require no co-endorser. The loan would become effective in September, 1966.

Sen. Lew Luchans (Commuters) bill moving that all motions, except those brought up under special business, be tabled for one week will be discussed at the meeting.

The purpose of the bill is to clear up questions, make revisions, and so forth during the tabling period and thus saving time on the Senate floor and probably producing better bills.

Sen. Arnie Kaufman (Greenough), Lynn Stowe (Field) and Lew Gurwitz (Married Students) will present a bill by which any RSO which has business before the Student Senate may send one representative before the Senate who shall have all the privileges of a Senator, except the vote, during the consideration of the legislation the issue with which the organization is concerned.

The Academic Affairs Committee will bring a resolution to the Senate by which the senators may choose to endorse the activities of the students who are attempting to institute Hebrew as an accredited language at the University, thus fulfilling the University language requirement.

S. Vietnam Students Support Ky Regime

"The bombings in the North should be continued, but the war must not be escalated rapidly." This was the consensus of five South Vietnamese student leaders who visited Tufts University. The students, touring the Uni-ed States to study American student government and to disseminate first-hand information on the situation in South Vietnam, participated in several informal seminars at Fletcher School.

The students were Doung Thien Dong, 26, School of Medicine at the University of Saigon; Dang Van Thu, 21, School of Law, University of Saigon; Nguyen Vinh Duc, 27, School of Medicine, University of Saigon; Tran Tien Tum, 22, graduate in Economics, Van Hahn University; and Nguyen Anh Tuyet, 26, graduate in Literature at the University of Saigon.

Protestors Misinformed

They feel that Americans who protest the United States presence in Vietnam are misinformed, and they are attempting to bring the truth to American college students. Their itinerary includes visits to campuses in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Boulder, Madison, New York City, Boston and Washington.

At a press conference the students introduced themselves to the representatives of the Boston news media, and are involved with the Summer Youth Program, which works with the peasants throughout South Vietnam.

Following the press conference, the five Vietnamese joined Professor Allan Cole's Seminar in Communist Chinese Foreign Policy.

UM Receives Navy Grant

The University of Massachusetts has been granted $19,750 by the Office of Naval Research, Department of Navy, to continue a research project in the study of non-Newtonian liquids.

The project was begun in 1964 under a $14,653 grant and is part of a general hydromechanics program sponsored by the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships, with the David Taylor Model Basin acting as administrative agent.

Dr. Charles E. Carver, Jr., professor of civil engineering, is in charge of the project. Non-Newtonian liquids, he explained, differ from ordinary fluids in that their viscosity changes as stresses on them change. Examples are human blood, printers ink, and paint.

Current work in the project, according to Dr. Carver involves an unusual technique — high-speed motion pictures taken through a microscope to study the turbulent flow of non-Newtonian fluids.

WEEK IN REVIEW

by PAM METAXAS,
Staff Reporter
THE NATION

IN A HISTORIC shot that put the US one step closer to the planned moon shot in 1969, an unmanned, 45,900 lb. Apollo spacecraft was blasted into orbit by the Saturn 1B.

It was in flight for approximately 40 minutes, covered 5,500 miles across the Atlantic Ocean and then came down near Ascension Island in the South Atlantic close to its pre-planned target.

The carrier Boxer was on hand to recover the capsule.

One of the main aims of the Saturn shot was to observe the effects of heat on the heat shield that protected the capsule.

VICE PRESIDENT Hubert H. Humphrey arrived home this week after an Asian and Pacific tour that covered 43,000 miles. Addressing a crowd on the White House Lawn he told the nation and the President, "I return with a deep sense of confidence in our cause and its ultimate triumph."

GOVERNOR George C. Wallace of Alabama announced that his wife, Lurleen Burns Wallace, would run as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in the May primary. The official announcement confirmed what everyone had known for months—that the governor had chosen his wife to succeed him in office and to continue his policies.

PRESIDENT Johnson informed Congress of his new "Great Society" war on water and air pollution. He has asked for $50 million in the program that would restore the Nation's waters and atmosphere to its original fresh state.

The President is anxious "to make the waters of our entire river system clean and make them a source of pleasure and beauty for all of our people" along with the air polluted by fumes and gases.

SOME PRO-VIETCONG demonstrators were part of a crowd of nearly 4,000 demonstrators that picketed in New York while Pres. Johnson spoke in a nearby hotel.

The demonstration that included large signs and placards was a protest against US involvement in Vietnam.

THE REV. William H. DuBay was suspended by the Archdiocese of Los Angeles after proposing a plan that would unionize the nation's priests.

The 31-yr.-old Rev. believes priests should have more freedom in their work. "It's time for priests to create for themselves the freedom to do those things for which they were trained and to which they aspire."

FIGHTING continued near the border of North Vietnam Saturday. In two battles government infantrymen and paratroopers killed 133 Vietcong guerrillas, it was announced by U.S. sources abroad.

South Vietnamese forces suffered more serious casualties than the American troops.

A 60-FT.-HIGH "tower of protest" was unveiled in Hollywood, Cal. The tower, located on Sunset Strip, is meant to symbolize opposition to the war in Vietnam. It was built by the Artists Protest Committee.

THE STATE

A RETAIL sales tax was finally approved by the Senate, 21-17, after a tax battle that was waged in the legislature for nearly 14 months. The tax will provide $180 million in new revenue at a time of financial crisis in Massachusetts.

After expected agreement on the tax by the House, the bill will be made law sometime next week.

Gov. John A. Volpe commented that the Senate vote "clearly demonstrated a responsible action in facing up to a financial crisis."

IN BOSTON an investigation has begun concerning Gov. Volpe's Commissioner of Administration, John J. McCarthy. It is being conducted by a Senate committee.

McCarthy has long been insinuating that many situations in Mass government such as "inefficiency and waste" are due to the actions of the Democrats.

The investigation being conducted at this time may hurt McCarthy's chances in this year's elections.

THE CAMPUS

AFTER consultation with many campus agencies and the Treasurer, it was announced Monday that student workers at the SU and the Dining Commons will receive a raise in pay as of Feb. 1, 1966.

Those who were earning wages ranging from $1 per hour-$1.15 per hour will now earn $1.15 per hour-$1.25 per hour.

The study of part-time student employment at UM conducted by the Placement and Financial Aid Services is also continuing.

THE COLLEGIAN is presently undergoing a complete reorganization. Dr. Arthur Musgrave, head of the Dept. of Journalistic Studies, proposed the reorganization.

Instead of single editors, there are plans that will include three News Editors, three Feature Editors, three Editorial Editors, three Sports Editors and three Photo Editors—one for each issue.

These positions are open to any student on campus. There are also four training sessions for future Collegian editors which began last week and will continue this week.

THE JOINT legislative committee on Military Affairs is currently studying a series of bills concerning state bonuses ranging from $100 to $500 for Vietnam veterans.

After a great deal of controversy about the definition of a veteran and who should receive the bonus, the committee is attempting to answer these questions.

THE STUDENT SENATE has announced new rules are going into effect for judiciary proceedings.

All disciplinary cases will include:

1) mandatory disclosure of submitted evidence and testimony to the public if the defendant wishes it so and

2) disciplinary case summons must contain an exact breakdown of the alleged violation including the person reporting the alleged violation.

The two amendments that caused a change in campus judiciary proceedings were approved by the Constitutional Convention Wednesday.

A STUDENT Publications and Broadcast Board is in the making.

This Communication Board will represent all aspects of the University Community life, specifically, in the communication of opinions and ideas through student publishing and broadcasting organizations.

Board membership will include a cross-section of these organizations coupled with the faculty and the administration.

Head administrator of the new Communication Board will be the President of the University.

THE JUNIOR CLASS Executive Council approved $625 for the University crew team. It is part of the plan to re-establish the sport on campus after a drop because of financial reasons.

The team plans to buy a racing shell for future competition against the crew teams of Amherst, Harvard, Princeton, Trinity and Holy Cross.

IN ACTION taken by Men's Judiciary, three students were suspended—two for theft of books and a third for theft.

Four students were placed on disciplinary probation with restrictions for conduct unbecoming a University student.

'Merchant of Venice' Opening Thursday

The Shakespeare classic "Merchant of Venice," directed by a distinguished visiting professor and with original music, will be the next presentation this season by the University of Massachusetts Theatre.

Directed by Dr. Walther R. Volbach and with original incidental music by Bruce MacCombie, the play will be given March 3, 4, and 5 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, plus a 2:15 matinee March 5.

Dr. Volbach, theatre historian, director and writer, received his Ph.D. from the University of Westphalia, Munster, Germany. He served as assistant to Max Reinhardt at the Deutsche Theatre in Berlin and as stage director at municipal theatres in Zurich, Danzig and Kiel.

He has also directed at state theatres in Stuttgart and Berlin, and at the Volkstheater and Volksoper in Vienna. He was an instructor at academies in Kiel, Berlin and Vienna before coming to the U.S.

Dr. Volbach was an instructor at Marquette University and director of opera for the Cleveland Institute of Music before joining the faculty of Texas Christian University, where he became director of theatre in 1946 and chairman of the department of theatre arts in 1948.

He has served as stage director at a number of summer theatre and opera groups and has contributed articles to theatre and music publications on both sides of the Atlantic. His book "Problems of Opera Production," was published in 1953.

Bruce MacCombie, senior from Swansea, has composed a number of independent pieces, to be played by flute, oboe, clarinet, two trumpets, two horns, trombone and violin.

One of William Shakespeare's most popular works, "Merchant of Venice" tells the by now familiar story of the moneylender Shylock and his insistence on extracting his pound of flesh as penalty for non-payment of a loan.

Graduate student Frank Klanger of Swampscott plays the moneylender; Mary Grace Penisi of Lawrence, also a graduate student, plays Portia, whose mastery court argument foils Shylock and saves the life of Antonio the merchant, who is played by Philip Fisher of Worcester.

University Theatre operates as a performing arts laboratory under the drama faculty of the UMass speech department. "Merchant of Venice" is the fourth production of a scheduled six this season.

Earlier works included "The Fantasticks," a chamber-type musical, a world premier of "The Martyred," and "One-Way Pendulum"—first UMass Master of Fine Arts thesis production.

Four College Playwriting Award Announced

The Denis Johnston Playwriting Award, to be given annually for the best play or musical written by an undergraduate attending Smith, Amherst, Mount Holyoke Colleges, or the University of Massachusetts, has been announced by President Thomas C. Mendenhall at Smith College.

The award has been created through a gift of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Sobieski of Glendale, California to perpetuate Mr. Johnston's interest in encouraging young writers for the theatre. Mrs. Sobieski was formerly Miss Caroline O'Brien, class of 1960 at Smith.

Mr. Johnston, Irish born author, lawyer and educator, will retire from Smith this June and return to the Channel Islands to live and write. He has served as a member of the faculty since 1961 when he was named professor and chairman of the department of theatre.

Mr. Johnston is the author of nine plays which were published by Jonathan Cape, London. Six of these have been published in a collection edition in this country by the Atlantic Press—Little Brown. His play "The Moon in the Yellow River," originally produced by the Theatre Guild in 1932, had an enthusiastically received off-Broadway revival in 1961. It has since been performed in German, Polish, French and Spanish, and appeared on television in Ireland in 1964.

MT. HOLYOKE WINS SECOND ROUND IN COLLEGE BOWL

A team of Mt. Holyoke College students were victorious Sunday night for the second consecutive week in a nationally televised contest against Loyola College of Baltimore, Md., on the G. E. College Bowl.

Mt. Holyoke defeated Loyola 220-145, won a $15,000 scholarship and earned the right to meet Princeton University of Princeton, N. J. next Sunday.

On the previous Sunday Mt. Holyoke defeated Reed College of Portland, Ore., by a score of 230-200.

Chosen by a faculty committee after a series of tryouts, the

Mt. Holyoke team consists of Lucy Fowler of Wayne, Pa.; Martha Ferry of West Acton; Margaret Wheeler of Chandler, Ariz., and Mary Brodie of Madison, Wis.

Mt. Holyoke College has made three previous appearances on College Bowl, two of them on radio and one on television in June, 1959. On that occasion, the students scored three victories before being defeated by a Brandeis team. A winning team continues to compete until it has made five appearances.

Coeds Look at 'Playboy'

Sex according to Playboy magazine editor Hugh Hefner, was discussed by a four-woman panel sponsored by the YW - YMCA Tuesday night.

Starting with the occupational aspects of being a Playboy Bunny, the coeds discussed Hefner's view of women and premarital sex and its relation to the college student.

"These girls come from all walks of life and are given the opportunity to travel, to meet financially wealthy men who can supplement their $200 a week wages with pretty big tips," the panel said.

"They are even provided a 'club' mother who advises them on any problems they might have."

Seeking to reveal what many women think concerning Hefner's philosophy, the panelists gave a brief description of the role of the female in his world.

"He essentially equates the function of a woman to that of good food or nice clothes or a comfortable house, and each is a thing to be enjoyed when you want to enjoy it," one of the panelists said.

"He does not advocate a lasting relationship between a man and a woman. But then, his marriage ended in divorce, and he seems to be scared of women," one woman added.

Discussing the magazine, one panelist related, "The cartoons in Playboy seem to be mocking sex, which is exactly what the pictures try to arouse in men, their sex drive."

"For as many men appreciating this magazine, there are just as many women who find it equally grotesque," one bold panelist asserted.

After these brief discussions, some elements of the philosophy were challenged. The consensus of the panel was that women are equal to men, but Hefner does not treat them as such in his philosophy.

"Hefner has reduced the female to a pleasure unit. She is merely a tool or source of pleasure for a frustrated man. The emphasis is on kicks—sex for the fun of it," suggested one coed.

The consensus of the panel was that society needs to revamp many of its formal and informal mores regarding sex and love.

Prof. Steele Is Named Outstanding

The University of Massachusetts Department of Music has announced that Professor Ronald Steele, conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra, has been selected to be included in the 1966 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America.

The Ten Outstanding Young Men of America selected each year are featured in the Annual biographical compilation, which is sponsored by the Montgomery, Alabama Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Members of the Board of Advisory Editors, who make the selections, include university presidents and business executives. The book will appear this year with a foreword by President Lyndon Johnson.

Steele is the founder of the University of Massachusetts Symphony, and a violinist on the faculty of the Department of Music.

Senate to Hold News Conference

The Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate will hold a news conference on the proposed calendar changes for 1967-68, on Wednesday, March 2, at 12:30 in the Colonial Lounge.

The purpose of the conference is to clear up any questions that students, especially the freshmen and sophomores, may have. Any students are welcome to attend, although the changes will affect only the members of the classes of '68 and '69.

Dr. Wellman of the Faculty Senate will be among those present to discuss the proposed changes. The calendar itself appeared in the Collegian on February 18.

1966 Carolina Symposium Seeks Participants for Seminar Program

"Man, Mind and Myth: The Conditioned Society" will be the topic for the 14th presentation of the Carolina Symposium in Chapel Hill this spring. During the week of Apr. 17 - 21, speakers such as Walter Kaufmann, Daniel Boorstin, Ralph Ellison, Morris K. Udall and Tom Wolfe will participate in an examination of the forces of myth, and its role in shaping society's values. An integral part of the Symposium will be the Intercollegiate Seminar, which brings together selected students from many colleges and universities. Those chosen to participate are given a unique opportunity to explore the topic in depth in small, informal discussions with the Symposium speakers of the day.

Colleges Clash on New Role in Draft

Reprinted from
The Boston Globe

College men have been edgy since early January when it was announced they might be drafted if their grades were low.

The Selective Service System said it was reviewing the possibility of placing students who were in the bottom quarter or third of their college classes in a draft eligible pool.

They would be subject to call if manpower needs for the Viet Nam war could not be met from volunteers and existing draft procedures.

The proposal, similar to a plan enacted during the Korean conflict, has triggered some outrage.

Members of the Brandeis University sociology department said they were considering giving everyone the same grade, rather than be involved in determining which students might be drafted.

Prof. John R. Seeley, chairman of the department, wrote in the student paper, "We refuse to be professors under such an invasion or misuse of our role."

HARVARD DEAN John Monro said if a student made a specific request, the college would not send his class rank to the draft board.

Some college officers, however, consider the impending change as perfectly reasonable.

Kenneth Ballou, Northeastern University director of admissions, said he sees no reason why the government shouldn't invoke the changes made during the Korean conflict.

IT IS IN THE national interest to try not to deplete the best intellectual talent," he said.

Yale President Defends Right Of Dissent

Reprinted from
The Springfield Union

Yale President Kingman Brewster Jr., has upheld the right to campus dissent in a speech to alumni, many of whom have been boiling over Prof. Staughton Lynd's Viet Nam protests.

Brewster did not mention Lynd by name, but he told some 1000 old Blues back on campus for alumni day Saturday that there was no place for paternalism or pressure in a free university.

"The fact that the outer limits of this faith are tested by actions which do seem to be naive and misguided, the fact that in my opinion these actions do a disservice to the cause of both peace and freedom, does not warrant a retraction of our basic purpose," Brewster said.

Lynd, 36-year-old assistant professor of history, drew alumni criticism—and some support—for his unauthorized trip to North Viet Nam and his remarks about U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

"We are engaged in education, not indoctrination," Brewster said, "our faculty is engaged in the discovery of truth and we expect them to do this on their own and without university control."

Brewster's speech drew a standing ovation from the alumni.

"When the government asks us for information we will cooperate."

Ballou also noted that if the same rules apply as did in the Korean conflict, students in the low-ranking group would be allowed to take an exemption exam. If they passed, their deferment would be continued and they could finish college.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY veterans' affairs director J. G. Larkin had some rebuttal for both the Brandeis and Harvard views.

He pointed out that if a student tells the college not to send his record, the draft board would simply consider him "another available man." That would hardly be a solution for the student, Larkin said.

"And it's stretching things a country mile," he commented, "for professors to feel they are sending their student off to war by giving him a bad grade."

Larkin said students have only had their deferment arrangement since President Truman started the policy and it has constantly been adjusted since that time.

In his opinion, the policy would affect very few students and would likely touch many who would be leaving college before graduating anyway.

THE ADMISSIONS HEAD at the University of Massachusetts said there seems to be one glaring inequity in such a proposed policy. William D. Tunis commented, "It would be unfair for the lower half of the class at a college with high academic standards to be considered in the same light as the lower half at the school with very low academic standards."

This general opinion is echoed by Brandeis Dean Kermit Morrissey, who feels the fairest thing is to draw names from a fishbowl.

In any event colleges will likely go along with whatever the government asks of them—though objections will be heard.

THE PROBLEM OF drafting college students might never have to be faced in the near future. The Viet Nam war has stirred such high numbers of volunteers that the draft call has been cut a third this month.

Of course, students who want to be sure they aren't involved in the collegiate callup can avoid it by getting good grades.

THE MILK FACTORY

By ANDY COSTELLO, Editorial Staff

Many people have accused the University of Massachusetts of being a factory. I'd like to carry the accusation one step further and specifically categorize the analogy. UMass is not any factory; it is a milk factory. At Moo U. we have a three class beaurocracy lead by President Lederle and his conservative administration. The laborers, or teachers, pour milk (knowledge at Moo U.) into the milk bottles—none other than the students. The administration is very cautious in its selection and gradation of milk; only milk which it selects is poured into the containers.

Are students merely receptacles into which knowledge is poured? As long as there are required subjects I'm afraid they will be. Why must we be forced to learn what an administration wants us to learn rather than what we want to learn? Freedom is inherent in the character of education; yet, under the present system the means of education are dictatorial. Unjust means will never result in a justifiable end.

In order to acquire knowledge one must have desire to learn. If an English major is compelled to learn Chemistry when he has no desire to do so, frustration rather than knowledge will result.

Education is individual. Its selection belongs only to those to whom it directly applies. If we invest others with the awesome power of deciding what we can or can not learn, we will breed submission and conformity. Is it necessary to produce a stereotype student to satisfy the needs of a mechanized society? Perhaps if the milk bottles were permitted to choose their own milk they might be transformed to students and the factory to a University.

EDUCATION vs. EFFICIENCY

(ACP)—The question to ponder at graduation and at the start of each new semester, says the UCLA Daily Bruin, is a difficult one: will those students now entering receive a better education than those who have graduated? Our joyless answer is—probably not.

Why? Because the University of California is still not a true University and because most students have not entered into the true educational process. The element missing from UCLA is a commitment to educational excellence. In its place is a commitment to efficiency, to an imposed "consensus" from above and to intellectual mediocrity.

The rhetoric of academic excellence is abundant, but where has the University's commitment been? It has been with football stadiums, recreation centers, federal grants and satisfying local nabobs. To top it all off, the University's most conspicuous failure will become apparent next September when the quarter system begins operation, without any major academic reform.

In pressing for the quarter system, the University stressed two advantages: financial savings and the chance for academic reform. In the interim, UCLA has forgotten the latter.

The blame must be shared by the administration and the Academic Senate. The administration failed to exercise the power it wields to push for reforms, and many faculty—particularly unimaginative department chairmen—simply juggled numbers and hours to come up with class lists. Students and faculty who have called for smaller classes, individual studies, innovations in requirements and grading have generally been laughed off as visionaries or told the money is not available.

Lest we sound both completely cynical and pessimistic, there are some bright spots, among them a moderate loosening of political regulations and increased awareness among students, a few outstanding departments and many outstanding professors, and some excellent programs, such as Project Amigos, which have been developed by administration and students.

At the same time, it is incumbent upon students, especially new students, to become a part of the University. There is a great deal more to college than units, blue book exams, and cramming. This system must be beaten and transcended. This means more than attending three lectures a week in four subjects, taking a midterm or two and a final in each and collecting 12 units. It means reading outside assigned books; it means talking to professors not only when you want to complain about your grade; it means making known your gripes to the people who count; it means being a student in the widest sense of the word.

Why Arnold House?

To the Editor:

Arnold, some counselors have announced, is definitely going to be an office building, and is definitely not going to be a dormitory next fall. Apparently those who make the long-range plans envision office space complementary to the proposed new graduate center. Administration offices would supposedly be concentrated behind SBA, and classroom buildings are not generally a part of anybody's plans.

But will this new space really be needed so soon?

It is not likely that the new grad center can be built before the legislature appropriates the money; realistically, some time will pass before the money will be available. Why would an office building be needed until after the graduate center is built (IF AT ALL)? Why can't the grad center be a few stories taller or placed by SBA instead of that Administration Building? After all, don't most grad students live in town or in the wonderfully abundant housing over there? (Wouldn't one even think that graduate housing down there would be conducive to attracting grad students rather than a classroom-office building of their own?)

Why not wait another year for the convenience of the Quad-rangle and Arnold residents?

In another year, the Southwest Complex will have more space and greater "finishing" to it. In another year, girls might voluntarily leave the Quad to move to the SW Complex. Then there would be more room in the Quad for those who want to stay there and who are strongly opposed to moving now.

Why not take Hamlin House, instead, in another year (I'm sorry to pass the buck, it's contagious around here.)

It's smaller than Arnold; it is in less attractive physical condition, including its furnishings; and, I believe, its residents—for reasons of their own—would not object to moving as much as Arnold residents.

Why not forget the whole idea?

The Quad should remain a resident area. It is the best place on campus for girls to live—especially for those taking, and majoring in, WoPe and/or education courses. It is presently the cheapest place for girls to live, and we might note that girls generally earn less in the summer months than guys. Furthermore, the integration-of-the-sexes-plan is genuinely opposed and presumably will be dropped—leaving the Quad to its identity and function in part.

Is the Quad to be "done in"? Why?

Why not leave a few houses convenient and accessible to major parts of the campus?

Why can't those agriculture fields be moved into the virgin land of the next township. Certainly, it would be expensive, but it would be rectifying poor planning—not breeding it. Just think of the scientific experience and gain in attacking obstinate soils—aren't those "fields of study" designed for such purposes?

Inasmuch as all the above will be disregarded, why haven't the reasons been brought forth for this bold venture?

Are they that bad?

Wouldn't it be nice if residents of Arnold were given an opportunity BEFORE incoming freshmen, and AT THE SAME TIME as residents of the remainder of the Quad of their same class, to choose any rooms they want? Two reasons support this suggestion: the advantages of the Quad, and the fostering of house-corridor, etc., unity. For the avowedly-Administration-encouraged unity, wouldn't it be nice if this first choice were extended to all women's residences? Wouldn't it be nice if residents—evicted and moving to more expensive houses—were given a corresponding rent rebate for the remainder of their residency?

Wouldn't it be nice if some plans like this were announced?

Wouldn't it be nice if some motion that suggestions might be entertained were made?

N.B. The Student Senate is welcome to initiate soothing proposals.

4-H Leaders Meet at UM This Weekend

GREENFIELD—Theme of the annual Franklin-Hampshire 4-H Junior Leaders Weekend at UM to be held Saturday and Sunday is "Community Services," it was announced Thursday by 4-H County Agent Everett B. Hatch.

Speakers include Marvin Boss, Asst. state 4-H Club leader, who will emphasize the importance of community service projects to 4-H club members; Mrs. Irene Wright and Mrs. Edythe Owen of the Belchertown State School, who will outline service projects 4-H clubs can perform for the school.

The third topic will include international service projects, Hatch said. Speaker for this session will be Dorothy Haskell, a student at UM, who has served as an International Farm Exchange Delegate to Panama. A film on the Peace Corps will be shown and the 4-H CARE program will be explained.

Final speaker for the program will be Hatch, who will talk on organizing service projects.

Club members will stay in the 4-H clubhouse on campus. The program will begin at 10 Sunday and conclude at 3 Sunday.

College Goal

FRANCONIA COLLEGE: SELF ADMISSION POLICY

It's not unusual to hear of a student refused admission to a college because of his past record. But Franconia College in New Hampshire is experimenting with a new admission system that's designed to let a student start "clean."

The basis for the system is that the student makes the decision for admission himself.

Franconia, a small liberal arts college, has invited every third person inquiring about admission to participate in the experiment. If he agrees to do so, the student sends his admissions application to a neutral consultant from Boston or Brandeis Univ.

The student is then invited to visit the school and to, in a small way, become involved in the student life. He lives in the dormitories, is given ample opportunity to talk to students, and attends classes that interest him.

After this visit, if the student feels Franconia is where he wants to go to college all he does is inform the school of his decision. He will automatically be "accepted" on the basis of his decision alone if there is room in the student body.

During the entire process, the college does not ask the student to give them any information about his background, academic or otherwise, that he does not want to reveal himself.

Robert G. Greenway, director of educational research at the college and designer of the study, said, "By allowing students to come in 'clean' we hope to try to break the vicious circle of academic success or failure which frequently results when students are judged on the basis of their past record."

Periodically, during their stay at Franconia, the students will be studied and their academic record will be analyzed to determine the outcome of the study.

Dr. Greenway said he hopes that these students will feel a higher obligation to learn and a more candid relationship with the school than if they had been admitted in the conventional way.

Greenway predicted that the study would prove students who have defined their goals more carefully after an earlier failure can succeed in college and go on to successful careers in graduate schools. He points out that it will be sometime before any conclusions are reached.

STATE SCHOOLS LEAD IN RELIGION STUDIES

reprinted from The Christian Science Monitor
Is a person educated who has never studied about religion—its comparative forms, literary significance, its impact on civilization?

If not, can state universities teach about religion without indoctrinating in violation of the First Amendment to the federal Constitution?

In the dramatically changed legal climate following recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States on religious issues, these questions appear already to have answered themselves.

Indeed at a three-day conference sponsored by Southern Illinois University at Carbondale on religious studies in state universities, it was surprising to discover that the question was not whether religion will be taught but how it is going to be done.

The consensus of the conference was that religious studies certainly should be taught and can be taught with the same academic objectivity accorded studies of philosophy, economics, and political science.

'A Quiet Revolution'
Almost suddenly religion is becoming a respectable academic discipline. A generation ago less than 10 percent of the nation's state institutions of higher learning dared touch the subject. Today 90 percent offer courses in religion or theology.

Momentum in this developing area is accelerating so rapidly it is difficult to keep track of nationwide changes. In a word, the lid is off.

Dr. Robert Michaelson, author of "The Study of Religion in American Universities," calls it "a quiet revolution."

As professor and chairman of the new department of religious studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara, he addressed the conference attended by professors of religion and administrators from more than 50 state universities.

He told of a girl student who suggested to a professor of religious studies that she would like to sign up for a course in his department. By way of explanation she remarked, "You know, I'm kind of a 'kook' myself."

Whether "kooks" or conformers, Dr. Michaelson says, the present student generation is displaying "a remarkable amount of interest in the study of religion."

He doesn't claim a revival of religion is taking place. But he says this interest "springs to no small degree from personal probing and searching. Their mood is more serious than casual" and they are taking courses in religion in ever-growing numbers.

Courses Dropped
One of the most popular courses at the University of Iowa is a religion unit attracting nearly 1,000 students each year. In Dr. Michaelson's own department at Santa Barbara enrollment has averaged more than 350 a semester since it began in 1964. He cited similar student enthusiasm elsewhere.

In the early 1930's when state universities were ignoring religion, even at such private universities as Princeton courses on religion had almost ceased to be offered.

Today the picture is very different. Princeton has a substantial department of religion, a faculty of 10 and enrollments averaging more than 1,000 a year. Stanford University now has a curriculum in religious studies manned by a faculty of four scholars.

The universities of Illinois, Minnesota, and Michigan are following the trend as well as the newer state campuses across the nation.

Of 10,000 courses offered in 1962 by the sprawling University of California only three or four were in theology. In three years the climate has changed. An informal arrangement has been quietly negotiated for the introduction there of graduate work in theology.

Dr. Michaelson says this arrangement "could well pave the way for the development of a the Berkeley campus."

He says it is "once more becoming academically respectable to take a serious scholarly interest in religion. Indeed, one could go further and say that the mood of the present is one in which there is even excitement in some academic circles over the study of religion."

Students 'hungry'
Father John A. Hardon, a Jesuit priest, is on the faculty of the Department of Religion at Western Michigan University. He urges the teaching of religious studies at state universities as "crucial" to students, to the future of tax-supported higher education, and to the welfare of the United States.

He says students are "hungry for religious maturity" and need a "value-centered education."

He points out that state universities are growing at an unprecedented rate, that higher education is "becoming more dominantly state university education."

He argues that since the nation was founded on religious principles the state universities which educate most of America's leaders cannot afford to ignore the teaching of those principles.

But, he stresses, "religion when taught on a university level should not be indoctrination."

There were reports of developing plans to introduce the study of religion into public school systems.

ONE OF EVERY FOUR COLLEGES IN THE UNITED STATES IS NOT GOOD ENOUGH TO BE ACCREDITED.

New England is no exception. In fact, latest figures of the New England Board of Higher Education show only 140 of the region's 219 institutions have earned accreditation.

Certainly the sign of acceptance is one every college wants. It makes student transfers and admission to graduate school that much easier. The mark is a prerequisite for federal and most private foundation aid.

Those who bestow the honor—in this area, members of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools—argue the biggest assets are institutional improvement and public service. The college which jacks up its standards to meet the norm has just got to be better, they argue.

"One of our jobs is to protect the public against educational quackery," adds Ralph A. Burns, director of evaluation of the association's Commission on Institutions of Higher Education . . . Parents need guidance and assurance of an honest deal."

Time Required
The process of accreditation, he admits, is neither easy nor short. Even the most respected institutions must bide their time.

Maine's Nason College, established in 1912, did not receive the honor until 1960. Goddard College in Vermont dates back to 1938. It was accredited in 1959.

Minimum time required is usually six years, says Dr. Burns.

Generally a state agency must first grant the right to be called a college or university and to confer certain degrees.

Then the institution tries to bring its standards in line with those of the accrediting association. When the school feels it is ready, it gathers the faculty and administration together for a lengthy and detailed self-evaluation report.

After digesting this for six months to a year, a visiting team from the association treks to the campus. Discussion and criticism follow.

Criteria are always established in terms of the stated purpose of the particular institution, Dr. Burns stresses.

Diversity Encouraged
"We believe in diversity," he says. "A lot of people think we are going to try to make them into a little Harvard. But we're very much opposed to the development of a model college."

"We try to make the decision subjective. We don't say, 'How many books do you have?' or 'How many faucets in your laboratories?' because that just is not meaningful. We try to look at the total picture."

As important as faculty-student ratio, for instance, are faculty salaries, the number teaching full time, the number with graduate degrees, and the number teaching in their fields of specialty.

UMass Frat to Aid NES; Wants Student Support

This semester Alpha Phi Omega, the national service fraternity on campus, is continuing a program of educational opportunity for the deprived students of the greater Springfield area. A Phi O is acting as a liaison between our campus and the Northern Educational Service, which was organized to deal with these educational problems.

Our society demands an unlimited productive capacity which will utilize less and less manual labor. For the members of our deprived communities, this means a loss of jobs. It is obvious that education is the major hope of these people.

It is the purpose of NES to bring about these goals through a tutoring service on a highly personal basis. Each tutor will work with his pupil once a week for approximately a one-hour session.

Since it is the desire to maintain his personal relationship, the tutor will meet with the student at the same time each week for the rest of the semester. Since the students are in grades 4 through 12, it is not essential that the tutor have any specialized training, although you may choose the field in which you desire to tutor.

All that is necessary is a realization of the problem and a sincere desire to help by donating a few extra-curricular hours each week.

The opportunities presented in this program work both ways. First, to the student it offers a chance to obtain educational help which might otherwise be lacking. Second, it gives to the tutor a possibility for meeting people and obtaining a sense of accomplishment in doing things for others. It is also an excellent opportunity for prospective teachers to gain valuable experience.

The tutoring sessions have tentatively been scheduled for 4 to 5 p.m. and 8 to 9 p.m., Monday through Friday. Transportation will be provided and is scheduled to leave the campus at 2:15 and 6:30 p.m., respectively.

Anyone wishing to aid this project or desiring further information should contact Amy Klayman, 320 Wheeler, as soon as possible. Your help in this program will be appreciated. Please consider this project seriously.

STATE SCHOOLS . . .

Florida State University at Tallahassee, reports that his university opened a new department of religion this fall. It is pressing forward, he says, in developing master's and doctoral programs with particular interest in preparing teachers to teach religion in the public schools of that state. A program now is in the discussion stage.

Deferment Rules Stir Up Protest

Seven sociologists at Brandeis University said Thursday they might cease grading their students rather than cooperate with a new Selective Service policy determining student deferments.

In a statement published in the Brandeis student newspaper the seven questioned whether professors will be "willing" to enter so intimately into a process whereby they in effect load the dice for and against the survival of students.

"We might cease to grade at all (except privately for the information of each student) or we might grade every one equally high," said the statement written by Prof. John R. Seeley, chairman of the Sociology Dept.

Dean of Students Kermit Morisud's method of reclassifying students announced in January by Gen. Lewis Hershey, Secretary described as "totally abject Service director."

At Harvard, Dean John Monro said that in response to the new policy the college would begin computing the class rankings of the students.

But Monro said the information would not be sent to a local draft board unless the student authorized it.

Hershey announced in January that student deferments would be reexamined to meet the manpower demands of the Vietnam conflict.

He said freshmen ranking in the lower half of their classes and upper classmen in the lower third and quarter might lose their student deferments.

National tests will also be administered to students and the results will also figure in their classification.

D.V.P. Wants New Members

The Distinguished Visitors Program Committee is now accepting applications for new members to serve on the Program, Publicity and Production Committees. The applications are available in the RSO Office and are due on Monday, March 7.

As a student sponsored organization, DVP has brought to the campus this year outstanding guest speakers, including Ambassador Sievert Nielson and satirist Jules Feiffer. The Committee, widening its field of interest, will sponsor two plays in April, the Yakims, a pantomime production and Sean O'Casey's Pictures in the Hallway.

Students who feel they can contribute effort and ideas to the mechanics and scope of interests of D.V.P. are urged to apply. The newly selected members will work this year's committee in presenting a final program as part of their orientation to the DVP organization.

States Strict with Reds

The Michigan State Senate voted 15 to 14 last week to ask state university presidents to ban Communist speakers on campuses in the state.

The resolution—which does not have the force of law—was passed only hours before Herbert Aptheker was scheduled to speak at Wayne University in Detroit.

Senate Majority Leader Raymond Dzendzel insisted "the intent of the resolution has nothing to do with free speech. It asks the institutions to stop permitting the enemy to infiltrate upon a captive audience."

The resolution did not mention Aptheker by name but Dzendzel said that's who it was initially aimed at. Aptheker is also scheduled to speak at other Michigan campuses in the near future.

In Baton Rouge, La., the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have begun a drive to outlaw Communist speakers on state-supported campuses in Louisiana.

The veterans group was reacting to the appearance at Louisiana State University of Albert Nelson, a member of the editorial board of the magazine Spartacist. An avowed Communist, Nelson advocated the overthrow of the U.S. government in a talk before the LSU Student Liberal Federation.

Gov. John J. McKeithen called

by JOHN CUNNINGHAM
The sign on the snow-covered lawn in front of the old white house on North Pleasant Street reads:

"For Sale—Rental Land, Income Investment."

This sign marks the final chapter in the history of the Saladin Coffee House.

In the late fifties when the beatnik came into vogue, the Saladin was at its heyday. It became the favorite meeting place of the beats and the folk-singers. Many UMass students performed on the small area in front of the fireplace that served for a stage.

The pay for performing was often small and more often nonexistent. The intense young men and women performed for the sake of expressing their feelings in song and for the chance to see audience reaction to their efforts.

TO THE UNINITIATED outsider who came in just to see the "nuts" the Saladin was a strange place. Upon entering one would find himself in a small, dark, smoky room. He would have to sit at a table that looked like a Salvation Army reject.

Service was poor and the refreshments for sale were even poorer. For about fifty cents the menu offered a cup of espresso coffee that had a consistency and flavor somewhat like mud. In an emergency you could get a sandwich.

No matter. Few people came to indulge their culinary appetite.

The "in group" came because it was a convenient place to meet to discuss art, folk music, or "beat" philosophy.

The "outsiders" came either to criticize or to try to gain an insight into the beat world.

Both groups came to hear the music.

Bluegrass, balads, blues were the musical bill of fare. Some-for an FBI investigation of Nelson. The governor said the only place Nelson should be allowed to speak is in jail.

The LSU chancellor said the university did not endorse anything at the meeting but defended the role of a university as a "forum for various discussions."

times the performer was a fellow that was just passing through Amherst while bumming his way around the country. He would play and sing and then the hat was passed to help him out.

Many University students got the chance to perform there. If one was good he would be treated to the applause and acceptance of the "in group." If he was not so good, nobody would even pause in their conversation to listen to him.

PEOPLE FROM THE audience would be called on to perform by the proprietor because they knew a certain song. And, anybody who volunteered could have the stage to himself. It was a strictly informal atmosphere.

THE PERFORMER would talk with the audience; the audience would request a certain song; and many of the performers would be happy to teach someone who was interested how to play a song, after the performance was over.

Two of the most popular performers to get their start in the Saladin were Taj Mahal and, of course, the now-famous Buffy St. Marie.

Taj Mahal, who was one of the most popular campus characters during the years he attended the University, was the lead singer in a rock-and-roll band, and was also a member of the Pelham Hill Log Jammers, a local bluegrass group. Taj's versatility allowed him to be a top performer in both the rock-and-roll and folk fields.

Many times Taj sang at the Saladin and his popularity was exceeded only by that of Buffy St. Marie.

Buffy, who is now one of the top female folk singers in the country. Introduced many of her original compositions at the Saladin. This big-eyed, dark Indian girl performed at some places for money even then, but for the Saladin audiences she performed for free. They were her friends.

WHEN SHE WAS not performing, she would be found sitting in the audience with her boy friend, a tall, lanky, long-haired poet with a van-dyke beard who lived in one of the rooms on the second floor of the Saladin.

Performing or just sitting there, the dark beauty was the Saladin's top attraction.

If one went upstairs he would be likely to find one of the permanent residents writing poetry or painting the great masterpiece.

In keeping with the informal atmosphere, these budding artists would be happy to answer any sincere question about their work or allow you to stand around and watch them paint.

The beginning of the end came in 1963 when a new owner took over. He tried to commercialize the Saladin. He brought in name folk singers like Mike Seegar, and Jesse Colin Young and started to charge admission.

You couldn't blame him. Not much money was to be made by selling a cup of espresso that the buyer would dawdle over all night while listening to the music.

With the advent of the admission charge the old atmosphere was ruined. The regulars started staying away. No one was willing to play for free any more while others were getting paid.

THE OLD HOUSE was given a new paint job and with that it ceased to be the folksy, friendly old place it once was and in the eyes of the students became just another Amherst business looking for student money.

The artists and poets moved out and the old clientele found other places to hang around. Fewer and fewer people came to the performance and at last the latest owner had to give up.

The name "Saladin" which was once written in big purple exotic-looking script on the front of the house is now gone. There is no bulletin board out front to tell passers-by who is to perform this week.

Redmen Minus Hill, End Season With Win Despite Maine Comeback

In their last game of the season, the Redmen built up a big lead and held off a Maine rally to win, 73-69, Saturday night at Orono, Maine. The game was marred by the absence of UMass star Calence Hill, who apparently did not play because of disciplinary actions by the faculty judiciary. Further explanation was unavailable at the time. The win left the team's record at 11-13 overall, and 5-5 in the conference.

THROUGHOUT THE FIRST half, it was obvious that the Redmen were out to avenge a 70-63 loss to the Black Bears earlier this year. UMass could hardly be stopped offensively and an effective zone defense held Maine in check. Hill's scoring punch was not really missed as Bill Tindall, Bob Murphy and Jim Babyak paced the visitors to a 47-29 half-time lead. The first half saw UMass hit 17 out of 34 for a brisk 50% field goal percentage.

The second half opened with more of the same, and the Redmen built up a 22 point lead early in the half, their largest lead of the night. The teams traded baskets until with about eight minutes remaining, when the UMass domination of the game ended. The Redmen held a comfortable 67-49 lead at the time, but then the tables began to turn. Massachusetts' shooting fell way off, and the Black Bears finally figured out the zone. Terry Carr and Guy Strang, the twosome that did a job against the Redmen at Amherst, led a remarkable comeback to put Maine right back in the game.

CARR BECAME RED HOT, and combined with Strang's scoring and rebounding, the Black Bears pulled to within four points of the Redmen with a minute and a half left. Billy Tindall then hit a crucial basket to give the visitors a 73-67 lead. Maine managed another basket, but they fell short and the final was 73-69 in favor of UMass.

Although Hill was not needed in the first half, he might have been helpful in the second, as the Redmen shot a poor 29% from the floor. They wound up with 39% for the night, compared with Maine's 41%. In the individual departments, Tindall led the winners with 23 points and 14 rebounds. Murphy had 17 points and Babyak added 15. Terry Carr of the Black Bears led all scorers with 26 points.

THE WIN ENDED a somewhat disappointing season for UMass, and it gave them third place in the conference. Maine's record dropped to 8-13 overall, and 3-6 in the YC.

The representative of the Yankee Conference in the NCAA tournament will be decided Tuesday night, when Connecticut meets Rhode Island on the Huskies' home court. Rhody, conqueror of mighty Providence, has a 9-0 YanCon record, while UConn, who defeated Vermont 92-70 Saturday, is second with an 8-1 mark. The Huskies' have to win this game to necessitate a playoff for the championship.

Varsity, Frosh Gymnasts Bow To Orangemen and Maroons

by AL RICE

All three University gymnastics teams were in action over the weekend, but both the men's varsity and freshman teams lost in their last dual meets of the year.

THE VARSITY LOST 175-144 to a strong Syracuse team Saturday and the UMass freshmen dropped a 135-119 meet to Springfield College in home action Friday night. The girls hosted an individual competition meet with four of the state's top high school teams.

The Syracuse loss ended up UMass' Eastern League record at 1-6 with the league championship meet scheduled this weekend at Pittsburgh. Syracuse had a well rounded team strong in every event while UMass had a worse depth problem than usual since three men missed the meet.

THE HIGH SPOT WAS the performance of Pete Grosso, Jim Dusenbury, and Dave Lizotte on the rings, an event that is usually the worst problem for the Redmen. Grosso had his best score of the year with an 8.0, but Walters of the Orange, the defending league titleist in that event, won with a 9.2.

Syracuse picked up big point advantages on the high bar and parallel bars. Dean Bellavea won the high bar and also beat Al Cohen by .4 in the long horse vaulting. The loss of Steve Brown Junior Ted Severn on the turn in the 200-yd. Breaststroke.

Swimmers Fall to Mighty Bowdoin

by RALPH DWORMANN

The UMass Mermen lost to Bowdoin College Friday night, 51-44, in the Boyden Pool. Bowdoin took the lead from the beginning and never relinquished it for the remainder of the meet.

Ken Nowak took two firsts, the 200 yard backstroke and the 200 yard individual medley, in which a new school record was set. Dick Daniels just couldn't catch his man in the 200 yard freestyle and lost by a second. He later took revenge by overtaking the field in the 500 yard freestyle.

Fred Anderson gave his opponent the closest race of the evening in the 200 yard backstroke, only to lose in the last five yards. Fred is Coach Rogers' most improved swimmer on the team, and much will be expected of him in the future.

Dick Lennon took first in the 20 yard breaststroke and Ted Severn got touched out for first place in the same event. Overall, it was a well-swum meet for UMass, but they did not have enough power to topple the strong Bowdoin team.

The mermen will swim their last meet on Tuesday night at 8:00 by hosting MIT at the Boyden Pool. Taking attention will be the final performances of co-captains Dick Daniels and Frank Wilson, who have swum well and led the team throughout the long season.

IM Report

by DAVE JARNES

After this Tuesday's championship game at 8:00 between the powerful Untouchables and the Grayson Aces, the so-called minor sports will share the limelight until the softball season begins after the spring vacation.

IN BOWLING THE Baker Buffaloes appear to have firm command of the Dorm C league after their 8-0 sweep of the Cherrys. The Garfields and the Barracudas shut out the Bengals and the Redwoods, while the Mills Birch took 6 of 8 from the Helocks. The Buggers (38-2) and the Silver Foxes (44-4) continued to chase each other in the independent league after sweeping the Forestry Club and Cellar Savers. In other independent action the Hermits took 7 of 8 points from the Plywoods while the Zeros were winning 6 of 8 from the Chem Club.

THE BUTTERFIELD Lemons opened defense of their dormitory title in volleyball with a 15-5, 15-5 win over the Garfields. The Butterfield Limes were not quite as successful, dropping two tough games to the Maroons 15-13 and 16-14. Other victorious dorm teams were the Maples, Buffaloes, Bruins, Cherrys, Hicks, Trojans, Aces and Redwoods. SAM, PMD, BKP, AEP, TEP, and ZN all won in the fraternity division while defending champion SPE did not see action. The LA Jr.'s, LA Sr.'s, Ma's Boys, the Phantoms, KS Pledges, and the Cartwrights started the season on the right foot in the independent division.

The squash tournament has reached the quarterfinal rounds in the dorms and fraternities while Norton, Dr. Bischoff, and Nick Garber have reached the semifinals in the independents.

ing the coach profession to accept a position in the insurance business and will be living in Illinois.

"I have enjoyed my many years of basketball coaching," Orr said today. "But I have had several wonderful opportunities in the business world the past few years and in fairness to my family the one I have accepted was just too good to turn down."

Orr's teams at Massachusetts won 39 games while losing 33 and in his three years the Redmen placed second in Yankee Conference competition once and third twice.

McGuirk indicated that Orr would officially terminate his work at the University on April 16th and said that a four man screening committee has been appointed by President John W. Lederle to name Orr's successor.

Sport Shorts

Plenty of sports action is slated for the Amherst area this week. Tomorrow afternoon at Boyden Pool, the swimmers meet MIT at 3:00. Tomorrow night at Orr Rink in Amherst, the hockey team meets a powerful Colgate team at 7:00. Also in action tomorrow night is the UMass wrestling team, in a Boyden Gym meet at 8:00 against URI.

The Cage plays host this week to the Western Mass. Small Schools basketball tourney. Tonight at the Cage, East Longmeadow meets Mt. Everett at 7:00, while Easthampton clashes with Mahar at 8:30. Tomorrow night, Ludlow meets St. Michael's at 7 followed by Smith vs. Turners Falls at 8:30.

SUGGESTED RULE IMPROVEMENTS

After many years, both men and women students at the University are looking critically at regulations on female students. These rules are perpetrating a double standard and are unfair not only to those directly affected, but also to those indirectly affected. Most of the rules currently in effect are felt to present unnecessary restrictions on personal life. The changes recommended here were put together by a group of students, strengthened by many suggestions from key people, and were prompted by the opinions of an increasingly concerned student body. It is hoped that this paper clarifies the issues discussed chiefly up to now by girls in late-night dorm bull sessions. HERE ARE SOME OF THE MAJOR IMPROVEMENTS

- *Uniform 12:00 curfew for 2nd semester Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors (thus eliminating late libe)
- *Parietal rules
- *Abolishment of sign-out sheets

Curfews must be extended And made uniform

There is no real reason for a junior to have a higher curfew than a sophomore or a 2nd semester freshman. Once accustomed to living on campus, there is no reason an upperclassman can handle a later hour than a lowerclassman cannot. Comparing the situation to men's rules once the men reach college, they all face the same regulations. (Comparison of women's and men's regulations is not irrelevant, it can illustrate some basic points, especially the perpetration of "the double standard.")

Suggestion: a uniform 12 p.m. curfew for 2nd semester. Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. Senior women should have the right to live off campus or in a senior dorm. Most girls believe that Freshmen should retain their first week's 8:00 curfew; after that they should be considered enough a part of the school to have a 12:00 curfew.

Reasons: Many of the reasons for this later curfew have to do with the problems connected with the several different curfew hours.

—Later curfews will eliminate late libe and the problems connected with it. As it is now, anyone signed out for the library cannot return to the dorm between 11:00 and 11:45, whether or not they are through studying and wish to go to bed!

—It will facilitate counselor's duties.

She's signing out "campus," and just where is "campus?"

WHERE IS RESPONSIBILITY?

Any student who has ever visited a student of the opposite sex in his room at another college cannot possibly understand our lack of parietals. It is obvious that because of the way the dorms are set up here, visitors cannot come in at just any time, but there is no reason for not allowing any visitor into the dorms on Sunday, at the hours currently reserved for parents and relatives.

The women's rule reads:

"Male relatives (fathers and brothers) may visit students' rooms on Sunday between 1:00 and 7:00. They must be cleared with the Head of Residence."

fathers?!)

—As mature college individuals there is no reason for not being allowed to have any friend visit your room during Sunday afternoon.

—The spirit generated during the annual Christmas Open House should be fostered year round.

—There is an unnecessary, archaic and Victorian stigma attached to having a male visiting a female in a room.

Regarding the clearance of all callers with the Head of Residence, the Housemother may not be in or may be too busy; it is overburdening her to introduce her to countless guests each Sunday; and more important—

LITTLE RULES ARE REALLY QUITE LITTLE

Overnights with permission: All overnights Monday thru Thursday must have the Housemother's permission and signature. If the purpose of these cards is truly for litation in case of emergency, the signature is unnecessary.

The SWAP Conference indicated reasons for change in permission on the weekend—the same reasons apply during the week. Emergency Call Collect: In calling the Head of Residence on her personal extension when emergency lateness is unavoidable, the Head of Residence should not refuse to accept a collect call. If she refuses and the girl has no money (as has happened in the past) her refusal to accept the call defeats the purpose of the rule, which is to let the housemother know where each student is.

Overnight guests: Presently girls can have guests only on Friday and Saturday nights and the night before a full holiday. Approval of the Housemother is necessary on a signed card by 7:00 of the night the guest is to stay. The student may only host two guests on one night.

If a bed can be found a guest should be allowed during the week in one of the infrequent cases where this might come up: a person considering attending the University who is interested in the routine of classes and dorm life; special university cultural events or functions which interest those outside the school (remembering the Beach Boys concert earlier this year), etc.

Approval of Housemother by 7:00 of the night the guest is to stay: girls should try to get card approved as early as possible, but, in case of emergency, should be able to get card signed up to an hour before curfew because:

—A friend may arrive unexpectedly

—The housemother and the girl may not be able to get together before 7:00.

In this case as well as others, the housemother should not be able to impose her own regulations, as this is completely against University policy. Just as at all times girls should have respect for their housemother and her time, so the housemother should have respect for the girls in her dorm and the rules which they must all live under, without imposing additional restrictions.

Students should be able to host as many girls as there are available beds—bed space should

Sign-out Sheets Are Worthless

• Many students sign out "campus" when leaving the dormitory in the morning, and obviously they could not be located in case of emergency—they could be anywhere on or off "campus."

• Most students in fact always sign out "campus" regardless of when they leave the dorm or where they leave for.

• Probable time of return: a glance at the sign-out sheets shows most girls sign out for curfew, either not knowing when they will return or merely because it is easier than determining an accurate time of return.

• Many students fail to sign out, altogether—it is an inconvenience. They may entirely forget. It is a burden on the housemother to be continually called to sign out students or to inform her of an unexpected change of location.

She finished her homework, but can't leave the libe for her dorm for another 35 minutes. So what can a girl do to kill time?

SAM SPARC SPEAKS OUT

"In The Beginning, Dean Helene..."

In the beginning, Dean Helene created the dorms and the quad. Now the rules were unformed and void and a liberal attitude was on the face of the deep and the spirit of Dean Helene hovered over the grass at the quad. And Dean Helene said, "Let there be women residents." And there were women residents. And this was bad, for the women were happy and carefree. And there was evening and mature, clean fun and responsibility and freedom; and there was morning, one day.

And Dean Helene said, "Let there be a curfew, and let it divide the men from the women." And Dean Helene divided the men and the women, and they saw little of each other—legally. But now there was sneaking out. So Dean Helene created Women's Judiciary and house councils and floor councils and section councils to check on trouble. And suddenly there was trouble. And there was morning, a second day.

And Dean Helene said, "Let there be Freshmen, and let them gather from their homes as young girls, so that in four years they can leave here as young girls. And Dean Helene said, "Let all Freshmen gather together for a welcome tea and sing. Let the counselors put forth greetings and let every single Freshman be welcomed. And it better be so — or else." But Dean Helene found one heathenous girl who wished to study instead of teeing. And this girl was expelled from the garden of the quad for daring to not want to be welcomed: And thus came about the original sin. And there was evening and there was morning, the third day.

And Dean Helene said, "Let there be sign-out sheets, so that in case of flood or famine or plague you girls may be contacted. And one girl inquired, "How can you find me if I only must sign the general word 'campus'?" And this girl was expelled for being rebellious. But yet another asked, "Don't the boys too have plagues and floods and famine, but there is no such stringent rule for them: why is this?" And the girls around nodded in agreement. So Dean Helene expelled all of them, for they had to be punished for questioning the tenance of Dean Helene. And there was evening and there was morning, the fourth day.

And Dean Helene said, "Let them go to the hall of books and partake of knowledge. And let them sign out and give a time for return. But if they should want to return before the hour of twelve, then let them be smitten with lightning and plague and locus and frogs, and late minutes will abound on the quad if need be. For returning a minute early is a sin whose wrath knows no bounds. And there was evening and there was morning, the fifth day.

And Dean Helene said, "I shall allow the mixing of the sexes on this day, but not very much. Very, very little. And I shall place counselors in the gardens and up the trees and behind the chairs and in the booths of telephone to assure that there is very very little. And should there be an excess of the sin of the neck, you shall be brought before the Council of the House and be punished, fined, and, if at all possible, expelled from the dorm. And your parents likewise will hear of this sin of the pet in the lounge, and when your return home for the Feast of Easter, your punishment will be doubled. And Dean Helene saw everything she had ruined, and behold, she felt it was very good. But there was great discontent among the people of the quad. As if Dean Helene careth. And there was evening and there was morning, the sixth day.

And the women and the rules were finished. And on the seventh day Dean Helene rested from all her work which she had made. And Dean Helene was satisfied, because she saw the young girls remaining young girls: protected, sheltered, having little responsibility of their own. And Dean Helene rested—for thirty years.

"...to allow her to learn discipline."

Some universities, reluctant to grant general curfew-free privileges to all women, have at least recognized the fact that girls who have proved themselves good students deserve the opportunity to be the judge of their own schedules. Therefore, they have instituted a system of late leaves granted to a student on basis of class and grade point average. The system has been found generally effective.

At the University of Wisconsin, where regular Sunday thru Thursday curfews are 11:00, all freshmen are allowed to extend one of these each week to 1:00. Sophomores with 24 credits and 48 grade points may take two a week; juniors with 58 credits and 116 C.P. may remain out until 1:00 on all weeks nights and are not restricted to weekend curfews if parental permission is given. Seniors are women over 21 with 86 credits and 172 C.P. are not bound by any curfew on any night with parental permission necessary if under 21. Well, girls, who's for moving to Wisconsin?

At U. of New Mexico (UMass' exchange school) where nothing as dynamic as the Wisconsin system has yet evolved a unique plan is followed. It seems that besides the late permissions distributed to girls on class basis, students with a 2.70-3.39 cum are entitled to 2 extra "bonus specials" while those with 3.40-4.00 cum are entitled to 3 more of these "bonanzas".

The University of Washington awards their specials only on Wednesday nights. 1:00 nights are granted according to cum as follows: in the 2.00-2.49 bracket

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"I HOPE I DON'T LOOK 'MUSSED'—OUR HOUSE MOTHER MAKES US PASS A PRETTY TOUGH INSPECTION WHEN WE COME IN."

fresh receive 1, sophs 2, juniors-seniors 4 (per semester); in the 2.50-2.99 group, frosh have 2, sophs 3, junior-seniors 5; 3.00 and over, frosh have 3, sophs 4, and juniors-seniors 6. All women over 21, and seniors with parental permission are exempt from all University closing hours. The faculty committee studying these regulations made this statement; "More liberal hours are not given to encourage a student to stay out later, but to allow her to learn to discipline herself... to allow a wider freedom of choice to more mature women." The Dean of Women at U. of Washington has strongly endorsed this policy.

What's Happening At Other N.E. Schools?

The University of Connecticut maintains a rather unique and beneficial system for penalizing late returners to dorms. Instead of "punishing" a student by subjecting her to confinement in the dorm on a weekend night, a system by which both the girl and the dorm gain nothing, UConn puts its violators on office duty according to the number of late minutes accumulated. In this way the girls aren't being unjustly restricted from visitors or phone calls, but are doing a constructive job for the dorm.

The system runs something like this: No action is taken until 30 late minutes are accumulated. After this point students are put on what is called the "1-5" system. 1-5 further late minutes require one hour of hostess duty; 6-10 minutes, 2 hours duty; 11-15 minutes, 3 hours; 16-20 minutes, 4 hours. Of course, this doesn't mean women can keep coming in one minute late when on the system. After 3 latenesses the case is referred to the Judiciary Board.

Admittedly, this system still subjects a girl to a form of punishment for being late, but it is much more desirable than the current UMass policy.

There Can Be Fair Penalties

EVER WONDER how women's regulations at our brethren New England universities vary from our own? Although most of their rules are not earthshaking, here are a few worthy of mention.

THE UNIVERSITY OF

IN A NUTSHELL

The difference in a nutshell: UMass Women's Reg Book says, "... the final responsibility... must always rest with the administration", while the UWashington Reg Book states, "... (we) allow her to learn discipline herself... to allow a wider freedom of choice to (make) more mature women."

MAINE has an interesting system of late returns. Freshmen are allowed 3 per semester, sophomores get 4, juniors 6. These are midnight permissions to be taken on weekdays. First semester seniors are allowed 5 returns for 1:00 A.M. each semester.

AT THE UNIVERSITY OF RHODE ISLAND freshmen and sophomore women are granted 2 and 3 lates per semester respectively. One of these is for 1 A.M., the others for midnight. Besides this, frosh receive one 2 A.M. and sophs receive 2 of these, all to be taken on Saturday nights. Juniors get one 1 A.M. per month, 3 2 A.M.'s per year, seniors have 3 1 A.M.'s per month, 2 2 A.M.'s per semester.

AT BOSTON UNIVERSITY, where Friday-Saturday curfews are 1:0 for freshmen and 1:30 for upperclassmen, freshmen are given 4 lates of 1:30, sophomores 6 lates of 2:00, juniors, 8, and seniors 10 per semester.

UConn Women have a Friday and Saturday curfew of 1:30 A.M. Well, that's all, folks. Thought these bits of statistics might raise your brows a bit and make you wonder what's holding UMass back.

Ohio State Realizes Sign-out Senseless

One university has finally assessed the true value of sign-out sheets for women. At Ohio State University, where liberal regulations are the thing, students are required to sign out only if they plan to return to their residence after 11:00. Girls don't have to run to their dorms to sign out if they will be out after 7:00. On the sign-out sheet it is not necessary to state one's destination. In cases where the student will not be out after 11:00 signing out is entirely optional to the student.

At least Ohio State realizes the senseless basis for having girls state their destinations and has taken a step toward issuing the girls more discretion and responsibility without the careful watch of Mrs. Housemother's eye.

Neighbors Are Beyond UMass Regs

At Smith College in Northampton curfews are the same for all classes. These are 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday, midnight on Friday and Sunday and one o'clock on Saturday. Being late beyond curfew less than ten minutes any night makes a person subject to a ruling of the house council, i.e. student officers of the house which may issue a penalty of an extra dinner wait (girls eat in their houses) or a shortening of curfew on a specific night. Special lates are available on weeknights for one hour.

Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley has a curfew identical to that of Smith. Like Smith also, special lates for one hour are available in steps. Freshmen have five the first semester, ten the second. Sophomores are granted fifteen per semester. Juniors and seniors may take twenty special lates per semester.

Coordinator of Student Activities

1. Write a concise and coherent essay on parietals. "I am in favor of open houses, but am opposed to a regular prescribed set of hours for the open house. I believe the open houses should be at the prerogative of each dorm. They should be flexible enough for dorms to have one when they want one. I don't think the open house should be uniform for the entire campus. I would like each dorm to have its own program for its own needs. I believe the larger the system becomes the more necessary it becomes to have autonomy in the dorms. It is self-defeating if everything is central. Therefore I would let the students elect within each dorm what they want."

SCORE—19

2. Give your opinion of library curfews. "The hours for women should correspond to the hours of the library. Not coming back before twelve o'clock is an utterly ridiculous and absurd archaic rule."

SCORE—20

3. Do you think that sign-out sheets are necessary? "Sign-out sheets should be encouraged, but on a voluntary basis. The students should recognize the sign-out sheets as a service to them; if it makes them deal dishonestly, it becomes a disservice and defeats the purpose."

SCORE—15

4. Do you believe that dorm meetings should be compulsory? "In a mature community, I question the value of compulsory house meetings. I believe that we should look for more effective ways of communicating with the students through the counseling system, in which the counselor would have the responsibility instead of the dorm meeting."

SCORE—20

5. What is your opinion of the curfew system? "I am not in favor of curfews that lock people out of the library. I am not in favor of early curfews for freshman the first weeks in fall. However, I am in favor of the curfew system. Curfews lend a significant order to a community of scholars devoted to an academic pursuit. I believe that every life should have some order to it."

5. What is your opinion of the curfew system? "You can't make special cases, so although curfews are not ideal, we are stuck with them. I don't think it is valid to equate home life with campus life. They are in different social contexts. When translated to college life, it is easy to rationalize behavior. We must keep in mind that the policies are designed to protect girls, not to hinder them. There has been a wrong emphasis."

3. Some girls have said that with the tendency for everyone, particularly on a weekend, to come in just before curfew, there is sometimes a big crowd around the desk waiting to sign in. Girls have said that if they are within the dorm and waiting to sign-in they are given late minutes if they do not get to the sign-in sheet before curfew. What do you think of this and what do you think of sign-out sheets? "Getting late minutes for being in line waiting to sign in is so much nonsense. The signing in is good, realizing that the housemother represents the authority of the university and it is best that she know that all girls are in at night. If a girl doesn't sign in people will know and perhaps someone could be sent out to look for her. But to make a fetish of her standing in line and getting docked is not in keeping with the spirit of the thing. It sounds as though it has been made a punishment rather than a way of looking out for people's safety."

SCORE—10

4. Do you believe that dorm meetings should be compulsory? "No meeting should not be compulsory. No group should impose on others a requirement to attend a meeting. This isn't an army. When a person comes to college, he comes to get an education. He does not agree to come to meetings of any other sort."

If women's regulations were to be reviewed with a look toward revising them, what sort of committee do you think should do the reviewing? Do you think students should be on such a committee?

"Students should definitely be able to take part. A person should be able to have some say in what rules he will be willing to live under, especially at college age. Any review committee should be at least fifty per-cent students, in a voting capacity. It should be necessary that these students would be representative of all the students on campus. How that could be done I don't know. But the students should, if they are in total agreement, be able to have the final say regarding any such regulations which would be established."

Letters To The Editor

End This Hypocrisy!

To the Editor:

Many letters and editorials have been appearing in the Collegian criticizing women's curfews, but each one has focused on an individual point and not the major issue. True, it is the minor points that make curfews so disturbing to girls, but it is the reasoning behind them that is particularly upsetting.

The Dean of women has stated over and over again that the reasoning behind the sign-out sheets is protection of the girls. No girl can be found in an emergency through the "on campus" or "off campus" on her sign-out sheet. Besides this, there seems no reason why girl students receive this "Emergency protection" not afforded to men on campus. Dean Curtis has also said that it is assumed men students will return to their dorms after women's curfew. Does she really believe this? A walk through the campus and the town of Amherst shows the fallaciousness of this argument.

The hypocrisy of these regulations can be seen by anyone who thinks about them. They are not actually for emergency cases, but to legislate morality on the girls, and the University is not in the position to do this. The school policy is in loco parentis, but it is failing. It is failing in that a girl either returns to the dorm at curfew, or must stay out all night to gain an extra hour.

The dean of women, backed by most of the administration, can insist repeatedly on her reasons behind curfews: to force the girls to study, or to find them during emergencies; but any one considering the argument can see through it. It is time for a re-evaluation of these regulations so that women on campus can have a chance to mature in an atmosphere of responsibility and trust. It is time that women on campus are judged able to decide for themselves on what they should or should not do. It is time to stop considering women students less mature and able in these decisions than men students. Above all, it is time to end the hypocrisy under which these regulations are continuing.

JR, '68

It's a minute 'till curfew, and all the girls made it back to the dorm on time. But alas, because of the crowd near the sign-out table, the girl in the rear couldn't get to her sheet on time. But she is still penalized as if she hadn't returned!

Quigley Pro Curfew

Father Joseph Quigley was asked to comment on women's regulations, and in a telephone interview he stated that basically he was sympathetic to curfews and sign-out sheets. He said that through devices such as these, a girl becomes conscious of the fact that other people are interested in her and where she is.

However, the Chaplain was opposed to the "late-libe" restriction: "If the dorm is open until 12, and she had a legitimate right to go out, then she should have a legitimate right to come in when she is ready."

Curfew

—Late permission is now left to the discretion of the House-mother, who, being human, may use her prejudices to the unfair advantage of some girls. With a 12:00 curfew this problem would for the most part, be eliminated.

Also, Midnight is a more reasonable and acceptable hour. It would be easier for the students to take advantage of 4-college facilities and cultural events in the Springfield area, to participate in extra-curricular campus activities, such as the Collegian, Senate, or Sophomore Exec Council which often need help after curfew hours. (This is especially important for girls living at distances from the Student Union, and every dorm except those in the Quad are at a distance).

Additionally later curfews will give students a feeling of responsibility and maturity—it is demoralizing to a 20 year old to be told to return to her room at 11:00 at night—and not one second later.

Even now, there is a constant misuse of curfews. Girls sign out for "late libe" and never see the building, because it gives them a chance to spend an extra hour doing something their house-mother did not deem "cultural."

Weekend Curfew: The ad-hoc committee suggests that weekend curfews be raised to 1:00 and 1:30 for Friday and Saturday. Last year 12:00 on Friday proved too early—a half hour has not sufficiently improved the situation. There is as much social activity on Friday night as on Saturday night—particularly in the 4-college area. (Although the administration tries to tell everyone to use the 4-college programs, they make it hard by forcing UMass people to leave curfews.)

Opposition to a 1:00 Friday curfew in light of classes on Saturday is not very relevant. The majority of students have no classes on Saturday. Also, an early curfew does not improve study habits, as girls may stay up as late as they wish in the dorm, not necessarily studying. Most important, girls should be given the responsibility to judge whether it is necessary for them to return earlier because of schoolwork.

A 1:30 Saturday curfew is thought to be more fair than the current 1:00. (See report on Smith College).

Little Rules

be worked out with the girls in the corridor.

Violations, late minutes: With the establishment of the proposed later curfews, penalization for late minutes is more justifiable. However, true emergencies and reasons should be recognized as such by House Councils and Women's Judiciary.

Present curfews are too restrictive to justify accumulation and penalization. Regarding the rule forbidding penalized students from receiving callers or phone calls, this serves no purpose. The violation lies in abuse of curfews and the violator should be punished by restriction from social functions. Callers and phone calls shouldn't be restricted as they are not pertinent to the offense.

Parietals

the responsibility of the guest in the room should be the student's. If the student does not receive training in responsibility here in college, what will the result be in the years after graduation?

Signing Out

• A parallel to men's rules: why is it more important to locate a woman student than a man in case of emergency?

An implied reason for sign-out sheets is to insure girls will return to their dorm at the proper hour. This gives girls no credit for their own responsibility and maturity.

Lederle's Goal--Nothing Less than Best Possible

The goal of the University of Massachusetts "must be nothing less than the best possible living and learning environment," says UMass President John W. Lederle in his fifth annual report on University operations.

He calls for holding tuition down as the best scholarship system in the world, retaining efficiencies and economies gained under the fiscal autonomy act of 1962, and keeping the focus—despite rapid growth and automation—on individual needs, human betterment, and productive citizenship.

Maintaining quality while increasing quantity is a difficult and expensive task, he says, but "inferior education is worse than a total waste of time."

PRES. LEDERLE points with special pride to the establishment of the University of Massachusetts-Boston, authorized by the Legislature in June of 1964 and opened this past fall to 1200 freshmen. Within a period of 15 months a quality staff and faculty were assembled and the 13-story building at Stuart and Arlington Streets was selected and remodeled.

"This administrative achievement," says Lederle, "exemplified the swift action the University can and will take in meeting the growing needs of higher education in the Commonwealth." The University is currently searching for a permanent site to take care of additional thousands in the years ahead at UMass-Boston.

RECENT UNIVERSITY educational experiments have also proven successful, according to Lederle. The residential college program, initiated in the fall of 1964 in the Orchard Hill dormitories and assisted by private funds provided by the Danforth Foundation, has proven so successful that many features have already been extended to the new Southwest Residence area. This experimental environment, with students and faculty living as well as learning together, allows increased opportunity for individual attention.

Another successful experiment has helped to alleviate the admissions crush. Under a special "swing-shift" plan, 180 students who would have been turned away for lack of space, began the first semester of their freshman year in Summer School in 1964. They took a fall vacation, and 178 then rejoined their freshmen classmates for the second semester in February.

A source of deep pride to the University was the establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter at UMass during the year in recognition of the University's increasing academic stature. UMass was one of seven institutions granted a chapter out of 42 applicants.

In reference to the excitement of a growing campus, Pres. Lederle says, "For the increasingly mature student here, there is an infectious exhilaration about a University in which everything is growing and constantly being renewed. For the faculty and staff, this is adventure on the highest level, and a fascinating challenge."

"TIME, one of our most vital resources, is being used to the fullest. Our academic calendar covers the entire year. Aside from necessary recesses and holidays, not a day of the 365 is now idle, including the summer.

"We continue our insistence on Saturday classes, and keep our library open to students until midnight. The maximum use of our physical plant allows maximum access to our educational product."

Commenting on current student unrest across the country, Lederle says, "The morale of our students remains high, and they continue to combine a healthy concern with the affairs of the world with an equally healthy acceptance of their roles as responsible members of our academic community."

"MOST IMPORTANT, we do not forget that our students are our prime reason for being, and that the human values we foster in them are the University's very blood and bone."

In his report, Pres. Lederle lauds the passage of the Harrington-Willis Act as a "real breakthrough toward establishment of a truly state-wide University." This Act coupled with the establishment of UMass-Boston, and the decision this past year to locate the UMass Medical School in Worcester have spread the University's service across the Commonwealth.

IN SERVICE to the Commonwealth and beyond, the University established a Labor Relations and Research Center, prepared initial plans for a badly-needed Continuing Education Center, established a Water Resources Research Center, and formed a Cooperative School Service Council to provide liaison between the University and public schools in the State.

On the international level, a major project came to fruition when the Tororo Girls' School in Uganda, Africa, for 420 students, built and staffed by the UMass School of Education in cooperation with the U.S. Agency for International Development, was completed and dedicated. Another University-AID program, aimed at establishing a basic agricultural program, continued to make progress in Malawi, Africa, under direction of the University's College of Agriculture.

In reviewing the University's accomplishments in the past year, Lederle lists these highlights:

● THE UNIVERSITY now offers more than 1000 courses, 63 undergraduate major programs, 46 fields leading to the Master's degree and 29 doctorate programs.

● ENROLLMENT reached 10,497 in 1964-65, double that of six years ago. It is expected to double again in the next six years, reaching 20,300 by 1971-72 at Amherst. The University admitted 2439 freshmen at Amherst in 1964-65, one fifth of the 11,869 who applied.

● THE LIBRARY expansion program—top priority at UMass—is progressing toward a minimum goal of one million volumes by 1970.

● MORE THAN 4500 students attended Summer Session, to take more than 200 course offer-

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1966

Dr. Valther R. Volbach, visiting professor of drama, directs Mary G. Pennisi and Dan Weir in a scene from The Merchant Of Venice. The University of Massachusetts Theatre will produce this play on March 3, 4, 5 with a matinee on March 5 at 2:15 p.m.

Guest Professor Volbach Directs U. T. Weekend Production

GUEST PROFESSOR - director WALTHER R. VOLBACH will direct the University of Massachusetts Theatre production of THE MERCHANT OF VENICE. Mr. Volbach has had a long and varied career in professional as well as academic theatre. The University Theatre is very fortunate to have this outstanding man as its guest this year.

MR. VOLBACH received his Ph.D. in comparative literature from the University of Westphalia, Münster, Westphalia. From there he went on to be Max Reinhardt's assistant at the Deutsche Theatre in Berlin and then stage director at various European Theatre including the municipal theatres in Zurich, Danzig, Kiel, and Vienna. He also taught at academies in Kiel and Berlin.

When he came to the United States in 1937, Mr. Volbach became director of opera at the Cleveland Institute of Music, and stage director of the Cahn Park Theatre in Cleveland Heights. In 1940, he moved to Missouri where he assumed the directorship of the St. Louis Grand Opera Association.

SIX YEARS later Mr. Volbach became director of Theatre at Texas Christian University and in 1958 he was given the chairmanship of the department of theatre arts. While in Fort Worth he was stage director of the Fort Worth Civic Opera Association.

He has published articles in every Major Theatrical Magazine and Journal in the United States and Europe. His book, PROBLEMS OF OPERA PRODUCTION was published by the Texas Christian University Press in 1953, and a new book, ADOLPHE APPIA, is slated for publication this year.

MR. VOLBACH has been president of the Southwest Theatre Conference, the Fort Worth Theatre Council, and the Texas Educational Theatre Association. He has been chairman of various American Education Theatre Association projects and guest speaker at various conventions and festivals the world over.

Sales Tax Clears House; Signing Expected Today

Reprinted from
The Boston Herald

Gov. Volpe's $180,000,000 tax program cleared its last major hurdle Monday when the House voted 121-94 to concur with changes made in the bill by the Senate.

The measure was expected to receive final enactment votes in the House and Senate yesterday so that Gov. Volpe could sign the revenue bill into law by Wednesday at the latest.

BARRING an unexpected legislative snag, the House was scheduled to vote on attaching an emergency preamble to the bill as the first order of business on convening at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

The emergency preamble is necessary so that the two cent cigarette tax hike, corporation tax revision, liquor tax hikes and a new 5 percent hotel-motel tax can go into effect immediately after Gov. Volpe signs the bill.

The three percent limited sales tax will not take effect until April 1. This effective date was one of the changes made in the bill by the Senate, which the House accepted Monday.

If the House and Senate do not attach an emergency preamble to waive the customary 30-day waiting period before a new law goes into effect, Gov. Volpe can attach the preamble when he signs the bill.

However, both branches are expected to approve the clause because the state cannot afford to lose 30 days of collections from the excise taxes with a $45,000,000 budget deficit for the current fiscal year ending June 30 in the offing.

AIDES in the Secretary-of-State's office were prepared to work through the night to expedite in old English script.

Once the emergency preamble has been settled in the House, then the bill will be up for enactment.

If there is no prolonged House debate, the measure could be shipped to the Senate forthwith and the upper branch would be in a position to give its final assent Tuesday.

THE HOUSE vote Monday concurring with changes in the tax bill made by the Senate last Saturday was marked by a last ditch attempt to settle the measure.

Rep. James H. Kelly (D-Boston), leader of the "no tax" forces, opposed to providing any new revenue to cities and towns, vainly attempted to block House concurrence.

Kelly urged the House to balk at the Senate changes, with a view to tying up the bill between branches in a conference committee where he hoped the conferees would agree to disagree on the Senate changes.

HE PREDICTED that expected reductions in local property taxes aid to municipalities will not materialize, warning:

"Just wait until the greedy officials in cities and towns got their hands on all that money. Any tax reduction will be infinitesimal."

Kelly, who has been a critic of Speaker John F. X. Davoren, ended his attack on the sales tax by criticizing Davoren for

House Rejects Pay Raise In View of State Fiscal Crisis

The House Monday rejected legislation that would boost the salaries of lawmakers from $7800 to $10,000 starting Jan. 1, 1967. At the same time the pay raise legislation was going down the drain, the Senate was rejecting proposals for the state to assume the cost of county government.

Debate on these proposals was sharp. The principal objections to both bills was that this is not the time to take up such expensive legislation in view of the state's fiscal crisis.

However, the door is still open for reviving both measures and it will not be a surprise if reconsideration is sought at a later date.

Significantly, members of the House refused to be recorded via roll call on the question of whether lawmakers should be paid $10,000.

Similarly, Democratic and GOP senators refused to force a roll call on the state assuming the cost of county government that now is financed by the real estate tax.

Estimates on the cost of county government range from $40,000,000 to $61,000,000.

Carrying the fight for the pay raise was Rep. James R. Nolen (D-Ware).

He insisted that the present salary for lawmakers "is shameful" in view of the time spent by legislators and the responsibility which lawmakers must exercise.

Nolen predicted that the quality of the Legislature—which he described as "excellent" at the present time—inevitably will go downhill unless a wage commensurate with the time and responsibilities of the job.

He noted "we have decided to pay a majority of professional state employees from $10,000 to $20,000 and higher. We set the salary of a judge at $20,000. We set the salaries for those in higher education over and above $10,000. We should know enough about our own job to set our own compensation at a reasonable level but we haven't done so."

Nolen warned that the present salary schedule encourages governors to influence legislation by waving $10,000 patronage jobs under the noses of underpaid lawmakers.

Moreover, Nolen insisted that by voting a pay raise which would not take effect until 1967 when a new Legislature takes office that incumbents cannot be tarred for voting themselves higher salaries.

Rep. H. Thomas Colo (D-Athol), while agreeing with the theory that the job of lawmaker requires more adequate compensation, said the "timing is poor."

Colo then rapped the present expense allowances for legislators who must travel long distances or live in Boston when the Legislature is in session.

He said that far too many lawmakers regard such expenses "a realistic revision of these reimbursements."

In the course of debate Rep. Paul Cataldo (R-Franklin) and Rep. John M. Eaton (R-Concord) separately announced they would not seek re-election this year.

Both said the salary issue was not the major reason for not seeking re-election, but acknowledged it was a factor.

They endorsed the higher salary and backed Nolen in his contention that inevitably the quality of the Legislature will deteriorate unless adequate compensation is offered lawmakers.

Meanwhile, in the Senate, Sen. John J. Conte (D-Worcester) led the losing fight for the state to assume the cost of county government which he pegged at about $40,000,000.

The chief foes of the bill were Sen. James J. Long (D-Woburn) and Sen. James J. Burke (D-Brockton), chairman of Senate committees on counties and taxation, respectively.

Long warned that the measure was aimed at eliminating county government and Burke said the state could not afford to pick up the cost of county government.

ONE-MAN SHOW

"The Art of Peter Charles McLean," a one-man show of recent paintings, is currently being presented at the University of Massachusetts Student Union Feb. 27 to March 11.

The show, open to the public without charge, is presented by the UMass art department and the Student Union Art and Music Committee.

An opening reception will be held Sunday, Feb. 27, from 7 to 9 p.m. Refreshments will be served and the public is invited.

MCLEAN WAS BORN in South Hadley in 1936 and received a bachelor of fine arts degree from the Massachusetts College of Art in 1963.

He received a master of fine arts degree from Syracuse University in 1964 and was an instructor in drawing there that same year.

McLean now teaches drawing and painting at the Hartford Art School, where he is also director of admissions. He also teaches graphics for the Canton Artists Guild.

He has exhibited extensively for the past five years and is represented in many private collections. The UMass show will include 15 large paintings, all done in a round format.

Amh. Prof Publishes Bellows Biography

CHARLES H. MORGAN, Mead professor of fine arts at Amherst College, has recently published "George Bellows: Painter of America," the first full-length biography of the well-known American artist. This is Professor Morgan's second biography of a famous painter, his first being "The Life of Michelangelo" published in 1960.

Born in the Midwest in 1882, Bellows came to immediate prominence in New York in the early 1900's, and was featured among American painters at the famous Armory show in 1913. Unlike most of his contemporaries, he never went to Europe, although he absorbed many of its revolutionary movements in his art. He painted America from coast to coast, and his reputation has increased rapidly and steadily over the years. Since his death in 1925 at the age of 42, his works have been acquired by nearly every major collection of American art in the country.

A LONG-TIME ADMIRER of Bellows' work, Professor Morgan was prompted to begin work on his biography in 1962 by Gordon Allison, the New York art dealer whose firm had been the primary agent for the artist's work. Since that time he has done extensive research and has been in contact with friends and contemporaries of Bellows, some of whom are now deceased to reconstruct the most nearly complete portrait of the artist and his times as possible. The book is illustrated with four full-color and 64 black and white reproductions of Bellows' best work, secured from many galleries and private collections.

A native of Worcester, Mass., Professor Morgan is a graduate of Hotchkiss School and Harvard University, where he received his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees. He joined the Amherst College faculty in 1930, and since 1938 has been Mead professor of fine arts and director of the Mead Art Gallery. Dr. Morgan has for many years been closely associated with the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, of which he is now a trustee, and is also chairman of the American Friends of Greece.

German Chemist Visits Four College Area

DR. MANFRED EIGEN, director of the Max Planck Institute for Physical Chemistry, Göttingen, West Germany, will deliver the Four-College Lecture Series in Chemistry on Mar. 3, 4 and 5. His first lecture, entitled "Methods of Studying Rapid Reactions," will be presented in Stoddard Hall at Smith Col. at 8 p.m. on Mar. 3. All of the lectures are open to the public.

The titles and dates of Dr. Eigen's other lectures are:

"Proton Transfer, Acid-base Catalysis, and Enzymic Hydrolysis," Fri., Mar. 4 at 8 p.m. in Moore Chemistry Laboratory at Amherst College.

"Coordination Chemistry and Metal-ion Activation of Enzymes," Sat., Mar. 5 at 10:30 a.m. in Cleveland Hall at Mt. Holyoke.

"Conformation Changes in Biopolymers," Sat., Mar. 5 at 2:30 p.m. in Hasbrouck Physics Lab at UMass.

DR. EIGEN was born at Bochum, Germany and studied physics and chemistry at Georg-August-Universität in Göttingen. He joined the Max Planck Institute in 1953.

His many honors include the Kirkwood Medal of the American Chemical Society, New Haven Section (1963), the Harrison Howe Award of the American Chemical Society, Rochester Section (1965), and a foreign honorary membership in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Eigen will serve as one of the Western Reserve Univ. 'Frontiers in Chemistry' lectures this spring. He has held the Folk-Plaut Lectureship at Columbia, the Baker Lectureship at Cornell, the Bourke Lectureship of the Faraday Society, and the Harkins Lectureship at the University of Chicago.

WOMEN'S JUDICIARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Nomination papers may be obtained in the R. S. O. Office between Feb. 25-Mar. 8 for Women's Judiciary. Any freshman or sophomore woman is eligible. Nomination papers must be signed by 25 woman students (excluding seniors). A woman may sign the nomination paper of any candidate regardless of her class, but may not sign the paper of more than one candidate per class. Screening interviews will be conducted by members of Women's Judiciary and the Woman's Affairs Committee prior to the primaries.

Civil Rights Symposium Thursday at Smith

"What's with Civil Rights," a symposium-discussion on the role of the Church in the current struggle of minority groups to achieve civil rights, will be held on March 3 at 7:30 p.m. in Sage Hall at Smith College. The event is open to the public.

Participants in the symposium will be the Reverend Bruce Hilton, member of the National Council of Churches' Delta Ministry, and the Reverend James Crawford, a member of the staff of the East Harlem Protestant Parish in New York City.

MR. HILTON WILL speak from the context of his work with the Delta Ministry, the only organized civil rights activity still at work in Mississippi. Mr. Hilton's work involves voter registration and providing relief for more than 75,000 Negroes evicted from plantations in the Delta region this year.

MR. CRAWFORD WORKS with the East Harlem Protestant Parish in New York City as a liaison between residents of the suburbs and the inner city, in helping them join together in the problems of metropolises.

On Thursday afternoon at 4, Mr. Hilton will meet in the Chapel Lounge with students who are planning to devote their Spring vacation period to civil rights work in the South.

Lederle's Goal . . .

ings. In addition, more than 20,000 persons attended 134 conferences on the campus.

● APPROVED during the year were new Ph.D. programs in physics, mathematics, and agricultural engineering, as well as a Four College Ph.D. program in philosophy. New master's degree programs were added in labor studies and computer science.

● GRADUATE SCHOOL enrollment almost doubled to a figure of 1846. Advanced degrees awarded rose from 256 to 315. UMass ranked 28th in the nation in number of National Defense Education Act fellowships received with 43.

● GRANTS to UMass for sponsored research jumped from a half million dollars to seven million dollars in five years.

● PLANS have been drafted for a 20 million dollar Graduate Research Center for the physical sciences. Work is expected to begin on the project next year.

● A NEW 1.5 MILLION dollar School of Business Administration building was dedicated during the year, and plans were approved and construction has now begun on a new administration building.

● THE UNIVERSITY of Massachusetts Building Authority was working on or completed 22 million dollars in construction during the year. Projects include a stadium, residence halls and dining commons, all built at no cost to the taxpayer under self-liquidating bond issues.

● THE UNIVERSITY received $27,852,888 for operating expenses, $17,848,287, of which was appropriated by the Commonwealth. The University returned $3,780,000 to the Commonwealth in various funds collected, bringing the net cost to the taxpayer for running the University to only $14,068,000, or 50.5 cents out of each operating dollar.

● APPROXIMATELY three-fifths of UMass undergraduates come from Eastern Massachusetts, and 65% of them live in the Commonwealth's eight major city areas.

Looking to the future, Pres. Lederle said, "We do not believe, nor do we hope that our task will be easy. We accept its rigors, and welcome its challenges. We realize that the easiest roads lead surely to oblivion. We seek the support of all Massachusetts citizens, the Governor and the General Court, as we move along the steep and narrow pathway toward greater service."

Iowa String Quartet Plays Work by UMass Composer

The Iowa String Quartet, nearly halfway through its string of 84 concerts this year, stopped off at the University of Massachusetts Sunday night long enough to play three pieces.

One was composed by Philip Bezanson, head of the music department at the university and for several years a member of the music department at the University of Iowa where the visiting string quartet is in residence.

The other two quartets on the program were Haydn's Opus 76, No. 5, and Charles Ives, No. 2.

Of most interest, of course, was the quartet by Bezanson. It came last on the program and, judging by the composer's pleased expression, it was given a satisfactory performance by the players.

It proved to be strong, nonsense music of medium dissonance and unrelenting seriousness organized in three movements titled "Fast and Vigorous," "Slow (Tempo rubato)" and "Very Fast."

The first movement was characterized by a tightly woven web of melodic strains propelled by a series of fairly regular thrusting, stabbing rhythms.

The middle movement presented the separate instruments singly in turn with a wailing melancholy, lonely melodic line backed by the remaining three in support with dense harmony.

The third movement appeared to be structurally a combination of the first two with fragments of melody recurring and swelling up from the dense harmony and with rhythmic repetition. It began not uncomfortably and gradually returned to an atmosphere of agitation not unlike that which began the quartet.

It was a tight, full quartet with lots of things happening. There was plenty of action held together by a continuity of harmony, rhythm and melodic atmosphere that made the movements seem rather like mildly different versions of the same idea.

It was held together also by a performance of precision. The Iowa players showed themselves to be members of a highly talented and carefully prepared group.

They are Allen Ohmes, first violin; John Terrell, second violin; William R. Preucil, viola and Joel Krosnick, cello. (Krosnick is preparing to enter the Tchaikovsky competitions in Moscow in June).

The basic quality of the group's sound (most easily recognizable during the Haydn piece) seemed to come from a clear, cool, well-defined, dry, neutral tone that presented the music straight from the page unfiltered or altered by human opinion.

Thus the Haydn piece which could easily have been sweetly cloying in its old-fashioned classicism, was unsentimental and vigorous, a dancing, happy (especially in the last movement) piece of simplicity.

And the Ives piece came across highly dissonant, caustic, strong, agitated, rebellious — packed from the beginning with nervous tension and surprising directions.

Ives relented a couple of times and relieved the tension with comic references to traditional tunes and he ended the piece with a strain of semi-placidity that seemed to say: "Don't worry it's still the same old mixed-up world."

The Ives quartet was composed in 1913 and sounds much like contemporary, polytonal, polyrhythmic chamber music, probably because some contemporary composers, traveling a different route, are catching up to Ives' old experiments with varying degrees of tonal and rhythmic order.

Also, contemporary ears seem to be more receptive more often to such auditory high jinks.

UMass Air Society Named Honor Squadron

The John P. Granville chapter of the Arnold Air Society here at UMass was honored by being selected as this year's Honor Squadron for the New England area.

The award was presented to Cadet Edward Parks, the Squadron's Commander, by the Area A-1 Commander, Cadet Louis Plotkin, at the annual Area Conclave held at Boston University on Saturday, February 19th.

The selection of the outstanding squadron was made on the basis of activities sponsored and as a result of inspections made by the Area Commander and his staff to the various Arnold Air Society Squadrons located at some twelve colleges and universities in New England.

Because the Arnold Air Society is a service organization, emphasis is placed upon the activities of each squadron in relation to Air Force ROTC, the campus, and the community.

Some of the programs sponsored by the John P. Granville Squadron during the past semester were the following: the sponsoring of briefings to explain Air Force ROTC to high school students; assistance in ushering at various campus athletic events; and initiation of a visitation program in the 370th Cadet Wing to the Belchertown State School.

Amherst Masquers to Give 'The Drunkard' at Kirby

KIRBY'S OPERA HOUSE, at the college in Amherst, will present six mammoth performances of THE DRUNKARD or "The Fallen Saved" beginning Friday, March 4. This gala revival of the internationally acclaimed moral domestic drama is billed by the Kirby management as "a guaranteed attraction." Additional performances are scheduled for Mar. 5, 11, 12, 13 and 14.

The players, carefully selected from the gentlemen of the Amherst Masquers and the ladies of Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges are dedicated to presenting a first-class performance of this ever-popular Temperance Drama.

MR. GREG PRENTISS will be seen as Edward Middleton, the dissipated collegian who sinks to the depths of alcoholic degradation before his reform and subsequent prosperity. Miss Cynthia Mitchell of Smith portrays Mary Wilson, the drunkard's devoted spouse who unwarily falls prey to the snares of Lawyer Cribbs, presented by Mr. Bruce Boyer.

Tickets for THE DRUNKARD or "The Fallen Saved" may be secured from the box office of Kirby's Opera House weekdays, 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon and 2:00-5:00 p.m.

UMASS WOMEN TO PRESENT LUNCHEON AND FASHIONS

Tomorrow, March 3, will be the last day for making reservations for the Luncheon and Fashion Show to be presented by The University Women in the Coachlight Room of Hotel Northampton on Tuesday, March 8 at 12:30 p.m.

MRS. ROBERT PERRIELLO, 551 West St., Amherst will be accepting reservations. When sending your check, made payable to The University Women, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets.

The following ladies, who are members of The University Women, will be models for the 'New Notes in Fashion' by the Salt Box of Amherst: Mrs. Donald Fairbairn, Mrs. Robert W. Gage, Mrs. H. R. Hartzler, Mrs. William C. Havard, Mrs. Kirby Hayes, Mrs. R. Bruce Hoadley, Mrs. Bruce R. Nilsson, Mrs. Marvin D. Rausch, Mrs. William N. Rice, Mrs. Richard A. Rohde and Mrs. William D. Tunis.

Mt. Mansfield Picked for International Ski Races

THE MT. MANSFIELD Ski Club, active since 1952 in the sponsorship of international ski events, will host the 1966 U. S. Alpine and International championship ski races on March 18-19-20, at Mt. Mansfield in Stowe, Vermont.

This year, for the first time, the U.S. title can be presented to foreign competitors. Senior class "A" skiers from the eight divisions of the U.S. Ski Association are eligible on quota-qualification basis. U.S. head ski coach Bob Beattie explains "if foreign competitors are invited to participate in our races, more of our youngsters will have a chance to compete against the best skiers in the world than ever before. With people like Karl Schranz and Jean-Claude Killy in our races, the results will have greater meaning in establishing international seeding lists."

THE CBS TELEVISION NETWORK has purchased the rights for the event and will carry the slalom portion of the meet "live" on the national network program, Sports Spectacular on Sunday, March 20th. This will be the first time a ski meet has been seen live by viewers across the nation since the 1960 olympic games at Squaw Valley. A former member of the 1960 women's team and silver medal winner, Betsy Snite, will commentate the events with Bob Beattie.

Although Beattie and Austrian coach, Sepp Sulzberger have recently exchanged verbal blows over the international sports wire, officials at the Mt. Mansfield Ski Club in Stowe report at this writing, they have confirmation of the Austrian skiers participation in the Stowe meet. The five man and four woman teams from Austria, France, Switzerland and Canada have been invited by the U. S. Ski Association to fly from the Arlberg-Kandahar in Murren, Switzerland to Stowe, arriving on March 15th.

THE EXPECTED field of 30 women and 50 men includes for-ign stars Guy Perillat, France, Karl Schranz, Austria, Jean-Claude Killy, France, Willi Favre, Switzerland. Stowe's famous son Billy Kidd, Jim Huega and Bill Marolt, both Olympic teammates of Kidd, Harry Ryan, Peter Rusch, both Vermonters from Rutland and Stowe respectively Roger Buchika of Middlebury, Vermont, College will be among the field of American entries. Canada's Nancy Greene, the Goitschel sisters from France, Traudl Hecher, Austria and a lone entry from Belgium, Patricia Du Roy. Jean Saubert, and Joan Hannah, veterans of the 1964 Olympic team, Sue Chaffee of Rutland, Vermont, Lee Hall, former Middlebury student and of Waitsfield, Vermont will headline the American girl entries.

Times and places of events will be contained in a daily release. The press headquarters will be located in the base shelter at Mt. Mansfield Western Union and telephone facilities will be available in press room.

House Voting on Sales Tax

not taking the floor personally to oppose the sales tax.

He accused Lavoren of being a silent sales tax ally.

DAVOREN THEN took it on the chin debatewise from a Democratic sales tax proponent, Rep. Charles Iannello of Boston, who chided the speaker for failing to exercise leadership on the sales tax issue and demanded he resign as speaker.

Kelly got in the last verbal punch, however, insisting that Iannello was confused because "you and the speaker are on the same side."

Meanwhile, Senator James P.

Rurak (D., Haverhill), made a appeal Monday to Gov. Volpe to abandon the three percent limited sales tax in favor of a one percent general sales tax on sales.

RURAK, who consistently has voted against a sales tax, said that businessmen in his district—who stand to be hurt by customers going across the border to New Hampshire to evade the tax—have informed him they could live with a one percent general sales tax.

He pledged to lead an all-out fight to kill the governor's tax program at the enactment stage.

Rurak warned that businessmen in Haverhill and other communities close to New Hampshire face economic ruin if the sales tax goes on the books.

Noting that New Hampshire state liquor stores thrive on economy-minded Massachusetts customers, Rurak said:

"Come up and see the people buying liquor in New Hampshire. It isn't buying a bottle new—it's filling the trunk of the car with liquor bought at less than Massachusetts prices."

"Some will say it is too late for a general sales tax bill. It is never too late. It would take only a few days and we can afford time."

WE'VE SHOOK UP THE WORLD

by JEROME HORVITZ, Editorial Co-Chairman

Scream it from the 'hill'; echo it from the quad; yell it from the South West; hail it from Old Chapel—"the time has finally come"!

Yesterday the Collegian did its own screaming and yelling. The cause—women's regulations.

But that is where our responsibility ends and yours (female students) begins. It is now the job of every interested student to get off his or her rump and take a stand. Why? For the simple reason that nobody in this world, particularly the administration, will start the wheels of change grinding. Some lubrication is needed. For a starter, let's send an avalanche of letters to the editor.

It must be understood that change (positive change) will never occur unless you, the student, can show the administration that you sincerely want it. The way to this end is to show that you are capable of independent, rational and mature thinking. The responsibility is yours, and it is quite certain that administration will not yield to you, particularly to a modification of women's regulations, unless this is demonstrated.

The Collegian has by no means ended its work for the cause of women's regulations. But, again, you as students must take up the momentum. Your job is to set a responsible example, and initiate action in the form of letters—we will print them—support for your representative organizations; and planned attacks should be formally organized.

Now is the time! The spotlight is on change. You the student are in the arena. And, not until you have won the bout, can you say: I'VE SHOOK UP THE WORLD!

Food for Thought

by SCOTTIE INGLIS, Editorial Staff

Human beings have to eat in order to survive. On our campus the general principles of nutrition are known to all. After 18 years or more of living in contemporary society, students are conscious of what constitutes good eating habits and what does not. Even though we all have this basic knowledge of nutrition, you still can't force an individual to eat when, where, and what he doesn't want to.

It is University policy that all students who are under 21 years of age and are members of the Freshman, Sophomore, or Junior classes must purchase meal tickets. Regardless of how many meals an individual eats per week he must pay for 15 meals. Fully conscious of the fact that a sizeable portion of boarding students do not regularly attend all meals, this University demands payment for food that will not be consumed.

To some, a college education is an expensive luxury. Students in this category must work all summer, work after classes, and take federal loans. It is entirely unreasonable to demand that these students forfeit their hard-earned money for something that they neither want nor will make use of.

Other students do not relish waiting around down on campus until its time for the dining commons to open its doors. The student who has no early classes is certainly not going to lose two hours of precious sleep in order to breakfast at the commons. Yet, if he is hungry when he gets up, he must pay twice for the same meal. Finally, there are those students who dislike eating with the "gang", in a large, noisy hall. It is not an abnormality to desire that mealtimes be in a peaceful and quiet atmosphere conducive to relaxation.

There are several courses of action through which the University may remedy this unjust situation. First of all, the purchase of meal tickets could be made optional. This decision is rightly the responsibility of the individual and his parents. A less radical step would be allowing the student to buy separate meal tickets for breakfast, lunch, and supper. In this way, the student would have to pay for only those meals that he regularly attends. The third and most troublesome proposal involves refunds for individual meals not consumed. A step such as this would involve endless paper work and is not at all practical in application.

CANDIDATE'S FORUM

BRETT HOUSE

As a candidate for the Student Senate from Brett House, I offer the following qualifications:

I am a junior, majoring in government, and am interested in a career in politics. In high school I was a member of the Student Council, where I initiated several projects which have strengthened student government there.

I have attended many Senate meetings and am already familiar with Senate rules and procedures. I also know on a friendly basis the Senate officers and many other Senators.

In addition, during my past two years as president of a campus organization, I have come to know many of the administrative personnel with whom a Senator must work if he is to accomplish things for his constituency.

I hope that my friends in Brett will consider these qualifications in making their choice.

Joseph Ross

Brett House

The function of a Student Senator is promoting the welfare of the student body he represents. Yet in any legislative group, direct representation is merely impossible. As a Student Senator I would leave myself open for opinions on various issues and would vote in the best interests of my constituency. If views were not expressed then I would be forced to act in accordance with my own inclinations.

I should also like to point out that as a member of the Freshmen Executive Council I would act as a liaison between the class and the Senate improving the coordination between the executive and legislative branches.

Wilkie Ward

Knowlton House

I, Elaine Goldberg, am running for the position of Student Senator from Knowlton House. I am presently a freshman, majoring in sociology.

In high school I was on the National Honor Society in my junior and senior years and was also Secretary-Treasurer of the Debate Club during my senior year. Throughout high school I also participated in many sports activities such as Varsity Field Hockey and Ski Club. At graduation I was in the upper 10% of my class.

The Senate here has a great deal of influence over the student body. This representative body is the foundation on which our student government is based. I feel that I would like to represent the students to the best of my ability and therefore ask for your support.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"TO-DAY'S STUDENTS SEEM TO BE COMING TO COLLEGE WITH NO REAL GOALS OR PURPOSE."

'COLLEGIAN' Under Fire

To the Editor:

The time has come to comment on the fall of the Collegian. Since November the quality of the newspaper has slipped below what I consider the minimum level of acceptability. The issues have been consistent in their lack of originality, minimal scope, and failure to achieve any level of technical competence. One wonders what the editors have been doing all year. The conglomeration of headline styles, lack of proofreading, and poor editorial and news coverage is obvious to a 'layman', let-alone to the staff of the Associated Collegiate Press, the Collegian's rating service.

There is no excuse for the failure of the Collegian to maintain a first class level of publication. The editors complain that they are spending too much time on an extra-curricular activity. I want to know what they are doing with their time, besides wasting the students' money and insulting their intelligence with wrapping paper covered with type.

The time has come for the editors to cut back on publication, refrain, and listen to constructive criticism, instead of looking for co-equal panaceas. Stop running a newspaper that missed an All-American rating (Spring Semester 1965) by 20 points into the ground.

Scott Freedland '66

To the Editor:

Realizing that election time has numerous repercussions, I could forgive occasional laxity in Collegian coverage or minutia. However, the front page of the Mon., Feb. 28 Collegian was so blatantly unacceptable that I felt compelled to comment.

I haven't seen a greater lack of skill and imagination since I stopped studying the Weekly Reader. A college newspaper that would undoubtedly lose a rating contest to Jack and Jill is certainly not one to be proud of.

Monday's page one contains a mixture of serif and sans-serif headlines—a visually unappealing combination. To make matters worst, the layout offers the reader a disorganized mass of print. The articles are negligently placed, with no attempt to break up the blackness with a drop headline or a photograph.

A newspaper that could be composed with equal competency by an undertrained chimpanzee is both a detriment to its parent university and an insult to the student body. If the Collegian lacks competent personnel, it should admit its deficiency, cut back its publication schedule, and refrain. If there are competent people responsible for Monday's journalistic abortion, they have every reason to show heartfelt shame.

The Collegian is financed by the student body, and read by students, alumni, faculty, administration, trustees, parents, and officials of other schools. It claims to be the voice of the student body, but, as a student, I would hesitate to admit that I am as inarticulate as my "voice" would tend to indicate.

A bit of pride in one's work might save a lot of shame for the product of that work. As for the poorly presented collection of reprints and news releases that have characterized the Collegian of late, they have become quite popular with local parakeet owners.

On the positive side, I do hope that your photography staff recovers from the ailment that has prevented them from functioning in the last few weeks.

THE HUMAN MIND IS AN INVIOLEATE THING

To the Editor:

I REGRET that I missed Part I of "Freedom and the University"—your delivery of faculty copies to the Abbey is still erratic. But I read Part II (in the Feb. 25 Collegian) with interest, regretting that you omitted the author's name or names. (The article resembled an editorial in that it was a presentation of opinions; therefore, it should have been denied the anonymity accorded a factual account.)

Because I am (1) a veteran of several years' graduate study at Berkeley (ante-bellum), (2) a young faculty member who still feels fairly capable of identifying with students, (3) a citizen of an academic "community" characterized chiefly by its bland sponginess (receptivity to all ideas, resistance to none), I encounter any proposal for reform with eagerness. The intention of this proposal was apparently to eradicate some of the conditions which, when they existed at Berkeley, led to trouble—conditions like "alienation," "depersonalization," "intellectual apathy," and various kinds of social "immaturity."

THE AUTHOR (I intuit female authorship) has learned in some English course the importance of defining her terms. She defines "democracy" as "the power to make the significant decisions that affect one's life;" "bureaucracy" as "a system of regulations which control the student's life;" and "alienation" as "the condition in which a person loses sway over the condition of his work." The latter term has some connection with something that may be called "anti-democracy," (a word not actually used, but suggested by the phrase "anti-democratic... classroom") which exists when the student has "yield[ed]" to the professor most of the decision-making power over the course and over the nature of learning [that] is supposed to take place." Now, except possibly for the definition of "bureaucracy" (which depends in turn on the meaning one gives to "control"), all these definitions are arbitrary and fanciful.

IS IT TRUE, for instance, that "democracy," as a system of government, allows everyone to decide what is best for him? No, democracy depends on the power of the majority to decide what is best for everybody, often through representatives who must interpret the majority's wishes in their own way. What happens to minorities under such a system—particularly when the minority is better-informed, more altruistic or in some other way superior to the majority—has been a problem on every level from that of federal government (Shall the Defense Department spend the pacifist's tax money on armaments?) to that of student government (Shall Yahoo spend the activity fee of students whose sense of humor prevents them from enjoying the magazine?)

IDEALISTS BELIEVE that democracy should also include protection for the minority, even the minority of one. To have a majority with whom one does not agree making the "significant" decisions that affect one's life seems just as unfair and repressive as to have a dictator making them.

Again, in the definition of "anti-democracy," is the notion of students' "yielding" power to a professor really so different from the notion of a legislative body's "yielding" various powers (like the power to retaliate in Vietnam) to a chief executive?

(I must admit that I think the word "yield" was both inadvertently and unadvisedly chosen. It implied that the students at one point had the decision-making power to give up, and that there was some sort of "social contract" whereby the professor appropriated this power. Not only has there never been a university in which the power was vested in the students, but it is devoutly to be hoped—even, I think, by the most radical students, upon reflection—that there never will be.)

ALL THESE DEFINITIONS suffer from the use of vague and ambiguous words, the definition of "alienation" most of all. The two "conditions" in the definition obviously do not mean the same thing; and what does "sway" mean, or "his work," for that matter? (His reading, his written work, his classroom performance his thinking? In none of these areas do I, as a faculty member, have the power to insure that they are done in a certain way. I can only make suggestions and hope for the best.)

But semantic considerations aside, it is obvious that the author of this article is pressing for more of "a say in what will be taught [and] how it will be taught." The implication is that on the first day of English 126 I should ask my students whether they "prefer" to read Anthony and Cleopatra or Coriolanus, when most of them have never read either, never heard of the latter, and think the name of the hero of the former is spelled Anthony, the name of its author spelled Shakespeare. Because I am familiar with both plays, I decide. "Whether or not this authority" of mine "is legitimate or justifiable—it must be accepted nonetheless." Yes. I am afraid it must.

AS FOR THE STUDENT who gets "turned-on" by Dostoevsky the week he is supposed to be reading Tolstoy, thereby flunking the course, I doubt that he is really going to flunk, provided both Dostoevsky and Tolstoy appear somewhere on the syllabus. Of course, if Tolstoy does not appear on the syllabus and he never gets around to reading Dostoevsky—!

The sort of student who feels he ought to be allowed to read Lassie, Come Home while everyone else reads Dante reminds me of Joseph Haller's creation, Milc minderbinder, who thought he was justified in selling the contents of the U.S.A.R.'s first-aid kits on the black market, thereby leaving our friend Yossarian with nothing but a band-aid to stanch a gaping wound. Catch-22 presents a picture of generalized revolt against "illegitimate and unjustifiable" authority that is far from a triumph for "democracy." It is, rather, a triumph of anarchy.

ONE OF THE PURPOSES of a college education is to encourage intellectual self-discipline, and this is not the same as mere "blind acceptance of authority." Thus, for the sake of intellectual self-discipline I require all my students to read Crime and Punishment the same week. But they have the power to decide what they think about that novel: to accept its ideas, reject them, debate them, ignore them. They have that power not because they "calmed" it or I "yielded" it, but simply because the human mind is an inviolate thing.

TIE Looking for New Chapters

To the Editor:

We have ambitions, and we need your help.

We are an active fraternity, organized in the City of Milwaukee and chartered as the Gamma Chapter under the authority of the Mother Chapter of Fenn College in Cleveland, Ohio. We hold charter under Wisconsin laws and have been continuously active since our formation. Our present membership is 20 actives and fourteen pledges.

Our purpose is writing to you is to enlist your aid in bringing our invitation to your readers to form a Chapter of Tau Iota Epsilon fraternity.

We would welcome through investigation of our purpose, our philosophy and our activities by interesting students.

We feel that fraternal life should be a rich and enduring experience that will create for the individual lasting and pleasant memories. We also believe that fellowship and brotherhood are the essence of fraternal association. Political activities and considerations are confined only to governing the fraternity. We believe each individual member has his right to his individual beliefs, and that the fraternity has no obligation to espouse any cause which conflicts with our historical American precepts.

Tau Iota Epsilon fraternity believes in promoting the educational institution of which it is affiliated and will strive to enhance the growth and prosperity of that institution.

Tau Iota Epsilon fraternity believes in taking an active part in the social, athletic, and cultural aspects of college activities.

Our fraternity has ambition and we need your help. Your consideration of us will be deeply appreciated.

From the President...

To the Editor:

The Campus Chest drive at our University provides an annual opportunity for all of us—students, staff, faculty and administration—to show in a very special way our deep concern for the welfare of our fellow man.

This is the only time during the year that we are asked to join as one on behalf of a charitable cause. Campus charities, students in need of scholarships, and a World University Service project will all receive the benefit of our collective generosity.

I urge everyone to give us as much as possible to the Campus Chest in order that our efforts as a university community may make a significant contribution to human betterment.

With full participation and cooperation from all of us, I am sure we can make this the most rewarding Campus Chest drive we have ever had.

Foreign Student to Talk on Israel

by AARIF GHAYYUR

Everyone is invited to participate in the "International Mixer" to be held on Friday, March 11, at 8:00 p.m. in the Farley Club House (behind Machmer Hall).

This mixer has been arranged by the UMass International Club and is open to all students—both foreign and American.

The purpose of the mixer is to bring people of all lands closer and to promote international understanding.

There will be an entrance fee of 25c.

TALK ON ISRAEL

Participants in this evening's coffee hour in the Governor's Lounge will hear a talk on Israel (with color slides) by Yehoshua Tidhar, an undergraduate student at UMass from Israel.

The slides and commentary will constitute a tour of modern Israel.

The coffee hour will begin at 5:30, and the talk will start at 6:15. All are invited.

SMITH GIRL ON INDONESIA

Last Wednesday night members of the International club enjoyed a talk, with slides, on Indonesia. It was presented by Martha Stoneback, a senior English major from Smith College, who had been in Indonesia for six months under the AFS program.

It is interesting to note that in such a short stay Miss Stoneback learned to read, write and speak the Indonesian language, plus some dances and songs of the country.

Because of popular demand she has promised to give a demonstration of Indonesian dances and songs on International Night at UMass.

Have astronauts made pilots old hat?

Sure, the boys who go off the "pod" get the big, bold headlines. But if you want to fly, the big opportunities are still with the aircraft that take off and land on several thousand feet of runway.

Who needs pilots? TAC does. And MAC. And SAC. And ADC.

There's a real future in Air Force flying. In years to come aircraft may fly higher, faster, and further than we dare dream of. But they'll be flying, with men who've had Air Force flight training at the controls. Of course the Air Force also has plenty of jobs for those who won't be flying. As one of the world's largest and most advanced research and development organizations, we have a continuing need for scientists and engineers.

Young college graduates in these fields will find that they'll have the opportunity to do work that is both interesting and important. The fact is, nowhere will you have greater latitude or responsibility right from the start than on the Aerospace Team—the U.S. Air Force!

Interested? The place to find out more is at the office of the Professor of Aerospace Studies, if there is an Air Force ROTC unit on your campus. Ask about the new 2-year AFROTC program available at many colleges and universities. If you prefer, mail the coupon below.

UMass Exchanging Students

by BARBARA FULTY

"I've never seen snow before!" commented one of the Southern-born-and-bred coeds attending UMass this semester.

There are currently 30 such exchange students enrolled at UMass. They are from three universities participating with the University in the Student Exchange Program.

The Student Exchange Program was established here in 1961. Its purpose is to dispell the provincialism found in many college students.

The program offers a student the opportunity to combine a semester's study with travel in another area of the United States very dissimilar from his home state.

The universities presently participating in the exchange program are Florida State University in Tallahassee, the University of South Florida in Tampa, and the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

The program is sponsored by the School of Education under the supervision of Dr. Ambrose Clegg. It is open to both men and women in their junior year and is not limited to education majors.

Interested students are urged to attend an informative meeting about the exchange program on March 2, 1966 at 7 p.m. in the Nantucket room of the Student Union. Applications are due March 30, 1966 and will be available at the meeting and in room 200 of the Education building.

Doctor Claims Drugs Good for Mentally Ill

The most widely used tranquilizer, Thorazine, and its related drugs are credited with definitely reducing psychotic symptoms.

Many psychiatrists and analysts consider all tranquilizers to be no more than fancy sedatives and will not prescribe them. Dr. John M. Davis, of the National Institute of Mental Health, Bethesda, Md., reported recently in a communication to the Archives of General Psychiatry.

For this reason, he says, a sizeable number of psychotic patients are not receiving the help they need.

All state hospitals use drugs in treating schizophrenic patients. The problem is with private hospitals and the initial medical aid a mentally ill patient receives from his doctor.

Though a tranquilizer will not remove psychosis, it can make a profound difference if administered at the onset of mental illness, Dr. Davis said.

To determine the effectiveness of various tranquilizers and antidepressants, Dr. Davis analyzed all test results to date. He found two tranquilizers that probably should not be used; Sparine and Pacatel.

Wood Expert Speaks at UMass

by BOB GORMAN,

Feature Staff

At Monday night's Forestry Club meeting Dr. Ben Bryant, from the University of Washington, gave a talk on "the Relationship of wood utilization to forest management."

Wood utilization is the field of forestry which deals with the efficient uses of the tree.

Dr. Bryant stated that there are three basic needs for wood: the aesthetic uses, such as furniture, millwork, etc., the novel uses such as axe handles, skis, and the like, and for the structural uses.

Dr. Bryant also told of the changing field of wood usage. Today an eleven-inch tree can be used for board lumber, paper chips and pulpwood. The wood technologist can now state what properties he wants in a tree, and the forester can grow the tree to his specifications.

This can therefore, reduce the waste in converting a tree to usable wood products.

The Forestry Building at the University of Washington is a good example of wood utilized to its highest degree. Made of wood combined with steel and reinforced concrete, this building escaped unharmed the recent earthquake which did extensive damage to many solid concrete buildings in the area.

Before leaving, Dr. Bryant said the need for board lumber will diminish quite a bit.

In the future the use of pulpwood, ply board, laminated beams and fiber board will simultaneously reduce the need for board lumber as it increases the demand for wood products.

Grad Dance

Overwhelmed by the response to its Fall Dance, the Graduate Student Senate will hold its first dance of the new term at Johnny Green's Oide Lantern Inn this Friday, March 4.

Though the Senate is already sponsoring a bi-weekly coffee night, it has decided to hold the Johnny Green dances on a regular monthly basis as part of its effort to enable graduate students to be aware of themselves as a group.

The March 4 dance, to begin at 8:30 p.m. will cost $5.00 per person. A band will be provided and drinks will be quite reasonable.

PMD Bowlers On Top; Grapplers in Tourney

by DAVE JARNES

PMD clinched first place in their bowling league with an impressive 8-0 sweep of TKE, the second place team. None reached 500 for PMD but all of their bowlers were around 480. TEP, last year's campus champion, upset league-leading PSD, 6-2, but QTV missed a golden opportunity to gain on PSD, when it too was upended, 6-2, by ZN. The standings show PSD on top with a 60-12 record while QTV and TEP are tied for second at 52-20.

IN OTHER FRATERNITY bowling matches, LCA, AEP, and PSK won 6 of 8 points from SAM, BKP, and ATG while KS swept ASP.

Turning to volleyball, the Webster Rams lost their first game 8-15 but bounced back in the last two 15-11 and 15-13, to beat the Aces. The Pines were shut out in their first game, 15-0, but were able to take the match from the Barracudas by winning, 15-9 and 15-11. The Trojans, Hemlocks, and Bruins won their matches from the Elms, Flaming A's, and Oaks in straight games.

UCONN MAULS R. I.; PLAYOFF ON FRIDAY

UConn's tremendous home court advantage made itself felt again last night, and this time it meant the demise of powerful Rhode Island, 96-72.

As a result of the contest, Connecticut and Rhode Island are co-champions of the Yankee Conference with identical 9-1 records. But a tournament berth is still up for grabs, so both schools will play again Friday night, with the winner meeting Davidson on Monday in the first round of the NCAA Tournament at the Palestra in Philadelphia. A toss of the coin after last night's game determined that the playoff will take place in the UConn Field House at Storrs, the famous "torture chamber" for UMass.

The scoring and rebounding of Bill Corley and the hustle and shooting of Bill Holowaty enabled the Huskies to coast much of the way against the Rams. Corley helped break the game open with only two minutes gone in the second half as UConn outscored Rhody, 12-2, during one streak to hold a commanding 60-45 edge with 15 minutes left.

Corley paced the Huskies with 25 points, while Wes Bialosknia and 22 and the red-hot Holowaty had 20.

SAM, ATG, TEP, PMD, AEP, and KS had little trouble in subduing TC, TKE, ZN, PSK, ASP, and PSD in consecutive games while BKP toppled QTV, 15-6, 12-15, 15-8.

THE UNTOUCHABLES, preseason pick to win the campus championship, took the measure of Harry's Horses 15-5, 15-8. In other games the Hot Rod Raiders and the Chem Club were victorious.

Dame reached the semifinals in the dormitory division of the squash tournament in Monday's only match.

The wrestling tournament, which has a record number of entries in all weight classes is still progressing in the first elimination round.

Marksmen Bow

The Redman pistol team bowed to national power West Point last week at the Academy by a score of 2252 to 2113. West Point has long had one of the top collegiate pistol teams in the country and, with four All-Americans, this year's squad is continuing the winning tradition.

WEST POINT CAPTAIN and All American Jim Dickens led the Cadets with a performance reminiscent of those of UMass' own All-Americans, Roy Fritz and Danny Sullivan, two years ago. For the 600-point aggregate, Dickens fired a 570, including one slow fire target with a score of 99.

UMass junior Charlie Seavey topped the Redmen with a score of 544. Mike Greno, fresh from an emergency appendectomy, rang in a 539. Captain Eric Musen contributed a 526, and Roger Yee finished the scoring with a 504. The remaining Redmen were not counted in the team scoring, but were competing for standing in the Northeastern Intercollegiate Pistol League. Bruce Fifield had a 531, Donald Hawkes a 498. # Pucksters Bury M. I. T. 11-0; Wind Up with 3-16 Record

The Varsity hockey team dropped three of its last four games in the past week to end with an unimpressive 3-16 record.

ON TUESDAY the 22nd, the Redmen journeyed to Vermont for an afternoon contest. Vermont was hot off a big upset of New Hampshire and lost none of its momentum as it toppled the locals, 6-2. Bill Skowrya tallied twice for the Redmen in the losing effort and goaltender Ed Sanborn turned back 27 shots by the Catamounts.

The tables were turned on Friday, however, as the Umies made their best all-around effort of the year, turning back M.I.T. with an 11-0 effort. Matt Connolly, Bill Skowrya, Dave Eaton, and Ed Polchlopek each tallied twice for the home forces and Ed Kinsella, Fred Molander and Bob "Batman" Scott ended one apiece. Sanborn turned back 14 shots in earning the Redmen their first shutout of the season.

NORWICH was next on the schedule and once again the Umies boarded the bus for an arduous journey into the wilds of Northern Vermont. Once again the Redmen, who have not won a game on the road since Dec. 4, fell to a hustling Norwich sextet by a score of 7-3. Frank Buckler, Polchlopek, and Eaton hit the nets for the Umies while Connolly, Skowrya, Buckler, and Molander each made an assist. Sanborn, shellshocked and bleary-eyed, turned back 47.

The season ended with a bang as the tournament-bound Division I power, Colgate invaded Amherst for a Tuesday afternoon tilt. Unable to contain the visitors from Hamilton, the Redmen went down in defeat, 13-2. Polchlopek set a new UM record as he scored his twenty - first goal of the season early in the first frame, but Colgate quickly retaliated and led, 3-1, at the end of the period.

ED GRANNEY, a former Colgate student, proved that revenge is sweet, with his eighth tally of the season at the 10-second mark of the second stanza. Colgate came alive at this point rallying for three markers in the second period and adding seven more in the finale. Sanborn and Bob Eddy teamed up in the nets and combined for a total of 57 stops.

The pucksters meet for their breakup banquet and election of next year's captain on Monday in the Student Union, bringing an end to a long three-month season.

Skiers Second at Pat's Peak; Championship Race Saturday

In a long, tough two-run slalom event at Pats Peak, N.H., which took place Saturday and lasted until after 5 p.m., the UMass skiers finished a poor second to New England College but ahead of the nine other schools in competition. With six skiers per team, the best four counting, N.E.C. had a team time of 470 seconds, UMass 535, Northeastern 545, Princeton 576, Tufts 583, Boston U. 590, Amherst 678, Boston C. 808, and A.I.C. 849. Keene had only three competitors and Brown only two.

N.E.C. PLACED FIRST, second, fourth and tenth in the individuals while U Mass placed fifth, eleventh, twelfth and twenty-second. Brian Hendrick, a sophomore who sprained his ankle in winter camp downhill practice, was twelfth against over a hundred competitors.

Tom Pittendreich missed the next to the last gate in his second run to ruin a brilliant race record this season. Collin Garstang fell and finished fifth, Pete Plavridge had a solid run for eleventh, and Bucko Foster fell twice and was twenty-second.

THE TUFTS DOWNHILL on Sunday on the Flying Goose trail at Mount Sunapee had excellent weather and exceptionally good snow conditions. Cocaptain Don Piegza fell during the downhill practice, breaking a ski pole in half and twisting his ankle, but he decided to compete anyway.

Two seconds separated the top Winslow surmounted the flu to post a 465.

THE TEAM WILL be running two spring clinics to round up talent for next year's team. Coach Norman Twait says that it is not necessary for participants to own their own pistols, as the team has just acquired five brand new Smith & Wesson target models. The first meeting will be held on March 14 at 8 p.m. in Dickinson Hall. Interested persons should contact the Varsity Pistol Coach, Sp5 Norman Twait, at Dickinson, Room 106 (Tel.—545-2321/2322), or attend one of the clinics.

Don Piegza shows his form in the Tufts Downhill last Sunday on the Flying Goose Trail at Mt. Sunapee. The Co-captain finished eighteenth in the event despite a sprained ankle, suffered during practice.

ten finishers. Bill Toof of B.C. was first with a 58.6-second run, Waite and Nelson had times of 58.7 and 58.8, and Garstang of UMass was fourth with a 59.6. Pittendreich was fifteenth, Foster seventeenth, and Piegza, in spite of a sprained ankle, was eighteenth to round out the UMass quartet.

THE UMass RECORD now stands at 68-12, good enough for second place in the league. The final championship race, a two-run slalom at Mount Whittier in New Hampshire, next Saturday, will tell the story.

UMass is far behind New England College, but if the Redmen have an exceptionally good day and N.E.C. a bad one, they could wind up on top. In any event, UMass has had its best season in nearly thirty years of intercollegiate competition.

Women Skiers Place Fifth In Slalom Race

The women's ski team, coached by Miss Gail Bigglestone, traveled to Wildcat Mt., N. H., Sunday for the Radcliffe Third Annual Giant Slalom Races and finished among 13 participating schools. The first three places were taken by Radcliffe, Cornell and Keene State.

UMass freshman Kim Garison placed eighth among the 60 racers with a score of 1.20. Other scorers for UMass were Carol Wiggians (1.31), Barbara Bund (1.38), Sally Gerry (1.41), Shari Nanantonis (1.59), Judi Beers (1.52), and Sue Barber (2.12).

'All RSO Activities to File Monthly Reports'--Student Senate

by KAREN ROSE, Senate Reporter

The Student Senate actions Wednesday night will effect most campus activities in so far as budgeting and legislative procedures are concerned. Action was also taken to further moves to raise minimum student wages and institute Hebrew as an accredited language at UMass.

All organizations receiving Student Activities Tax funds are now instructed, by vote of the Senate, to file monthly reports of financial position in triplicate—copies going to the Senate Treasurer, R.S.O. Business Manager, and in the case of the classes, to the exec council members.

Organizations failing to comply with this new Senate authorized procedure may find that the Senate, by majority vote, will freeze all their funds.

THE GRADING policies of three departments are shortly to be investigated by the Senate Academic Affairs Committee.

Sen. Larry Marcus ('69 at large) brought the motion to the floor whereby the committee will investigate the grading systems of the Chemistry, Psychology, and Statistics departments.

The complaints listed on the bill read: In introductory chemistry courses a student must pass at least one of the three exams which together account for 400 of 810 points. The psychology and statistics departments grade using a normal curve distribution system. The senate action will be to determine the fairness of these procedures after investigation.

ANY R.S.O. having business before the Senate will be allowed the prerogative of delegating one of its members to speak on the Senate floor during the consideration of its legislation, due to the passage of a bill sponsored by Sen. Lynn Stowe (Field), Lew Gurwitz (Married Students) and Arnie Kaufman (Greenough).

Senate operating structure may face change or revision in light of Sen. Rick Cass's bill charging the Student Government Affairs Committee to review or revise the S.G.A. constitution in respect to Senate operations.

Official Senate endorsement was granted to the activities of those students trying to institute Hebrew as an accredited language at the University at Wednesday's meeting despite questions raised concerning salaries, available professors and such.

A MOTION to obtain a minimum student wage of $1.25 for student union employees was also passed at Wednesday's meeting.

In other business two new Senators were sworn in—Sen. Maybeth Mosher (Crabtree) and Jim Boyle (Hills South) and three resignations were read—Bob Flynn (Commuters), Charles Pappas (Greyson) and Ron Kelcourse (Butterfield).

The actors for the University Theater production of The Merchant of Venice go through the final steps of preparation for Thursday night's opening. The characters here are Gratiano, Lorenzo and Bassanio.

At last night's election of the Collegian's new editors, there was only one office contested, that of Editor-in-Chief. For this post, Tom Donovan defeated last year's editorial chairman, Joel Hartstone by a vote of 24-17. Jim Foudy, former news editor, was elected managing editor by a vote from the chair, as he was unopposed. His vacated post was filled by former day editor from the news desk, Gordon Davidson.

Mike Gould was elected sports editor after being nominated from the floor. He had already been in that post for the last three months.

Because the only candidate for the position of Business Manager was disqualified by the Election Committee, the office was not filled at the election. The matter has been tabled until the Collegian Publications Board has had a chance to review the candidate's qualifications.

STOCKBRIDGE SENATE PASSES VITAL LAWS

At the Stockbridge Senate meeting Tuesday, March 1, the biggest proposals of the year were made into laws. Senate President, Ed Sprissler, opened the meeting.

Senator Joe Roseberry told the Senate of the committee, recently formed by the University Senate, to look into the problems of Stockbridge Integration. On Feb. 13, this committee met with Dean Wells and discussed the four major problems of integration.

These problems are: 1. Will Stockbridge Seniors be required to purchase meal tickets; 2. Will Stockbridge seniors be allowed to have cars on campus as they now do; 3. Students will live in the ten dorms on the "hill"; 4. Residence Hall rates will be increased. All discussions were tabled until the next meeting due to the integration meeting with Dean Jeffrey, Dean Wells, and Mr. Thomas on Wednesday night March 2.

Senator Dennis Dujek, head of the Stockbridge Senate's Activities Committee proposed two amendments. First, to Amend Sec. 6, Art. 3, in order "to provide for new rules for electing senior class officers."

This proposal changed the time of elections to the third week of the spring semester. Also, it changed the academic requirements for running for office from a 2.0 cumulative average to a 2.5 cum.

UMass Students To Starve

At least 38 students from Amherst College and 25 from the University will be participating in a 4-college six day Hunger Strike starting this Sunday, March 6.

According to Frederic Dicker, the UMass coordinator, the direct tone of the strike is to bring attention to the fact that the U.S. government permits the destruction of food in Vietnam through sprays and the use of chemicals.

He said that the participants in the strike will wear black arm bands, a symbol of mourning for all those killed in Vietnam, and also as a symbol to provoke discussion.

During classes they will request professors to set aside a day to discuss the issues of the war on the basis that they are of a more immediate and more relevant nature to all students than the subject matter.

The students plan on going into the dining commons and refusing to eat, hoping to provoke discussion.

"By denying ourselves food we hope to bring to the attention of the students of the University the fact that the people of South Vietnam are not as fortunate as we are in America, in that American action has not given them the freedom to choose whether or not to eat", commented Dicker.

He added that the idea might be silly, but that "at least we have the choice to make. The Vietnamese have no such choice."

Stockbridge Integration

Wells Explains Dorm Changes

Wednesday night at 7:00 p.m. in the basement of Middlesex dorm, Dean Jeffrey, Dean Wells, and Mr. Thomas met with Stockbridge students to explain all changes which may come about because of the impending integration.

Dean Wells stated, "The Housing Office assumes that Stockbridge students favor integration because of the motions by the two Student Senates favoring integration."

At this point an unexpected petition signed by forty-three freshmen from Berkshire Dorm was presented. Dean Wells expressed surprise concerning this and explained the reasons for integration.

"Three to five years ago certain student groups felt that there should not be change. Stockbridge never voiced concern with the integration then, so Stockbridge was left segregated."

"For the past one and a half years, Housing has been working on an overall campus integration plan. Among the proposals was the plan to move Stockbridge as a whole to a new dorm."

"Two polls showed the majority of University and Stockbridge students were in favor of integration. The Hills Area was selected for integration because it was the only one of four living areas available."

"Since Stockbridge's academic courses are different from the University's, the faculty and students make a minority group. In order to maintain the student-faculty relations it is felt that Stockbridge students must live in a centralized residence area."

A list of the ten dorms available for integration of up to 25 per cent Stockbridge students are: Brett, Gorman, Hills North and South, Mills, Wheeler, Baker, Chadbourne, Butterfield, and Greenough.

Dean Jeffrey of Stockbridge expressed his feelings, "The University of North Carolina has a two year agricultural program similar to ours and several years ago they completely integrated and everything worked out perfectly."

A question and answer session followed and some of the issues discussed were:

Q. Will the rights of Stockbridge students to possess cars and not purchase meal tickets be taken away?

A. Complete integration calls for living by the rules of the four year regular program. Those needing cars will have them. If under 21 years old a meal ticket must be purchased.

Q. Why are these privileges being taken away?

A. Because at times we know Stockbridge students have been treated as second rate citizens. The only way to prove this false is to mingle with University students.

Panel to Discuss University Community

"The mark of a true university is whether or not it takes its students seriously."

This statement by author and educator Harold Taylor of Sarah Lawrence College will be the focal point of a panel discussion this Saturday afternoon from 1 to 2:30 in the Student Union Council Chambers.

A group of students, faculty and administrator have banded together to examine the many new problems that the American university faces as a community of fragmented interests.

CONFUSION about the process and goals of education at the University of Massachusetts has prompted these parties to present a critical view of such problems, and to provide an opportunity for translating discussion into channels for change and revisions. WMUA will broadcast the panel live.

Former Collegian editor Pete Hendrickson will moderate the panel whose members are, Dr.

William Venman, Assistant to the Provost; Dr. John Brentlinger of the Philosophy Department; Dr. Jules Chametzky of the English Department, and Kenneth Hardy, an undergraduate student.

The panel will address themselves to a general discussion of the problems outlined in the following statement:

"The decline of the university as a community is reflected in the problems of bureaucracy and professionalism; the problem of power involving the interrelationship of administrators, faculty, and students."

An inquiry into the meaning of education in our time demands a frank discussion of the learning process, hence a critical examination of course curricula, university requirements for liberal arts and other special schools, and finally the classroom situation itself in relation to attendance, examinations and grading systems."

Clayton Named Head Of Aggie Engineering

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees has named Dr. Joe Todd Clayton head of the department of agricultural engineering, it was announced today by Dean Arless A. Spielman of the College of Agriculture.

DR. CLAYTON replaces Dr. Robert W. Kleis, department head since 1957, who resigned to accept the chairmanship of the agricultural engineering department at the University of Nebraska.

The UMass agricultural engineering department is the largest in New England and the only one in the Northeast other than Cornell University to offer a doctoral program. It has a national reputation in the food engineering field.

A native of Etowah, Tenn., Dr. Clayton received a B.S. degree from the University of Tennessee and a M.S. from the University of Illinois. He was an instructor at the University of Illinois, an assistant professor at the University of Connecticut, then returned to Illinois as assistant professor.

HE JOINED the UMass faculty in September, 1957, as an associate professor. He was granted a National Science Foundation faculty fellowship for two years in 1960 and went to Cornell University to work for his Ph.D., which he received in 1962. He was promoted to professor at UMass that same year.

Environmental engineering—particularly ventilation and temperature control in farm buildings—is Dr. Clayton's field of

D. V. P. Applications Open

The Distinguished Visitors Program Committee is accepting applications for its 1966-67 Program, Publicity and Production Committees.

A Student run committee, DVP is supported by a $3 tax from each student which is appropriated by the Student Senate.

The Committee is made up of students from the Sophomore, Junior and Senior classes and representatives appointed by the Student Senate. Members of the faculty and administration act as committee advisors.

Besides its programing duties, the Committee offers short term loans to needy students and contributes to the National Defense Loan Program.

Selections will be held Wednesday, March 9. The completed applications are due Monday, March 7. If you feel you are interested in helping DVP attempt to attract to our campus distinguished and eminent personages and provide enriching educational and cultural experiences and are willing to work for this objective, do not hesitate to apply.

The forms will be available in the RSO Office up until Monday, March 7.

UMich Students Get 2-S Reclassification

The Collegiate Press Service

Two of the 14 students at the Univ. of Michigan who lost student deferments because of a sit-in at the local draft board have had their 2-S status reinstated.

THE STUDENTS were reclassified 1-A after the Michigan Selective Service Director, Col. Arthur Holmes, sent records of their trial and a suggestion that they be reclassified to the local boards of the 14.

They all appealed with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union. Ernest Mazey, director of the Michigan ACLU, said he was encouraged that the appeal of 2 students has been successful but doubts this indicates a pattern for the other 12. "We do not think the total matter will be resolved until it reaches the national appeal level or the courts."

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, the national Selective Service director, has said he would personally handle the appeals if they reach the national level.

HERSHEY supported Col. Holmes' request for the students to be reclassified and has been an outspoken advocate of drafting minor lawbreakers. He disapproves of a Pentagon ruling prohibiting the induction of men convicted of minor crimes like stealing hub caps. "What crimes?" he said last week. "A joy ride in a stolen car? I'd induct them all; it's a lot quicker than prosecution."

At the request of a Michigan congressman, the Dept. of Justice issued an opinion saying the draft could not be used to punish lawbreakers and that reclassification of demonstrators fell in this category. The opinion has no force and has largely been ignored by Selective Service officials.

MEANWHILE, the ACLU has announced plans to do what it can to remove the ruling that a draft registrant can't have counsel when he appears before his local board.

The civil liberties organization issued the statement in conjunction with a comprehensive analysis of the draft situation prepared to help local civil liberties chapters aid students who might have been reclassified because of anti-war activity.

Guild Production Offers Light Comedy

Rehearsals have begun on the Operetta Guild's spring production No, No, Nanette, a playful comedy set in the colorful '20's.

The cast includes Linda Lue Cotney, Pamela Perlick, and Margaret Franson, Karen Connolly, Carole Gordon, John Hutton, Linda DeCost, Richard Eber, John Gilbert, and Laurel Demers.

William Segal, grad student in the Theater Arts Dept. is the director. Paul Bartsch, well known for his past work with Operetta Guild and also as a musician in

Choreographing the fast-paced roaring '20's dancing is Rick Kaplan, a senior speech major.

INTEGRATION ...

dents and complete integration calls for giving up some of the present privileges to better the future.

Q. Why are Stockbridge dorms being moved?

A. Due to the need for more faculty accommodations and the fact that these dorms are not suitable for living in led to the decision that they would be used.

Dean Wells stated that integration will be tried for one year and if it does not work another plan will be drawn up.

The meeting ended with a word from Jim Farrington, Faculty Resident of Middlesex, saying that the only way to become a complete part of the University is to live with the University.

CLAYTON ...

specialization. He has delivered papers on his specialty at national conventions, and has published articles in his field in national farm magazines, technical journals and extension bulletins.

He is a member of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, the National Society of Professional Engineers, the American Society for Engineering Education and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Clayton is a World War II veteran, is married and is the father of two children.

Meeting Tomorrow

Reform Is Coming

Tomorrow, Mar. 5, from 1-5 in the afternoon the University Reform Committee will host a discussion in the Student Union Council chambers concerning academics.

Topics to be included in the panels and discussions are academic honesty, university requirements, core curriculum, flexibility of requirements and evaluation of requirements.

AMONG the questions to be raised at the conference will be: are those who currently set requirements justified in setting them as they are?

The aim of the conference is to determine how student opinion can be utilized and brought to bear on those who do determine departmental policies and curricula.

The possibility of a flexibility in curriculum whereby some compromise may be proposed between the straight lecture system in contrast to the honor colloquia system. There are many interested students who would like to work on special projects but are not qualified for the current honors system, possibly some workable solution can be proposed at the conference.

THE FACULTY representative at the conference will include John Bretlinger of the philosophy Dept. and William Venman from the Provost's office.

The faculty representatives, along with student Ken Hardy will participate in a panel to discuss student involvement in decision making.

Student Senate Pres. Dick Dacey told the Collegian that "what we're trying to determine is whether there is student interest for change...and how the whole area of academics can be improved."

The program is open to all students and its findings will be channeled to the various authorities through the Student Senate.

Students Can Vacation In Mississippi

Rev. Bruce Hilton and Mr. Owen Brooks of the Delta Ministry, in a talk sponsored by the Protestant Christian Council, appealed to University students to come to Mississippi during the spring vacation. Students would participate in voter-registration drives and do community surveys as well as construction work for dispossessed workers.

THEY STATED that even the federal government has failed to act to prevent people dying from starvation and exposure during the last two severe winters.

An emergency meeting of all students interested will be held in the Plymouth Room, SU, at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

Foreign Language Association Organized at UMass

The Massachusetts Chapter of the New England Modern Language Association has voted to become the Massachusetts Foreign Language Association (MFLA), according to Prof. Stowell Goding, University of Massachusetts Prof. of Romance Languages and member of the new group's board of directors.

The new organization has been created to insure foreign language teachers in Massachusetts a voice in establishing policy concerning foreign language education at the state and local levels. Prof. Goding said. Action was brought about by the many changes in the foreign language teaching profession during the past 10 years, the increasing availability of federal funds, and growing pressure for stricter requirements in foreign language teacher accreditation in the Commonwealth. The MFLA will use Prof. Goding's Bay State Foreign Language Bulletin for distribution of information to its members.

Officers voted at the recent organization meeting are Richard A. Clark of Newton high school, president; Prof. Benedetto Fabrizi of Northeastern Univ., vice president; and Miss Elizabeth Mahoney of Stonehill Col., secretary-treasurer. Prof. Goding's colleagues on the board of directors are: Prof. William Bottiglia of M.I.T.; Miss Evelyn Brega of Lexington public schools; Mrs. Genevieve Donaldson of Milton high school; Prof. Theodore Lowe of Holy Cross Col.; and Prof. Carlo Vacca of Massachusetts Bay Community Col.

One of the first activities of the new organization will be an important meeting this spring. The MFLA will sponsor a conference at Wellesley Col. Apr. 30, on the problems of continuity in the teaching of foreign languages. The meeting will be held in cooperation with the Massachusetts Foreign Language Advisory Committee.

STOCKBRIDGE...

Art. 3 to dispose of lax class officers was also proposed. The new ruling provided for dismissal of all officers who fail to maintain their 2.5 cum and/or who miss three consecutive meetings (either STOSO or Senate) without valid excuse.

Both proposals were opened for discussion and after a fifteen minute debate, both were passed. President Ed Sprissler pointed out that both amendments will be enacted this year and will be written into next year's constitution.

Senator Dujek, then presented the Stockbridge Loan and Scholarship Bill which provided for a total of $3,000 from the Senate's Emergency Fund to be used in the next two years.

Of the given amount, $1,000 will be used to set up ten-$100 scholarships, the remaining $2,000 will be used to set up twenty-$100 receprocation loans with a 10% interest payable one year after graduation from any accredited school.

It was pointed out that this plan will operate for only two years. After this period the Senate may do anything it wants with the Senate's excess funds.

Following a lengthy debate, during which it was decided that the Financial Department will handle requirements for the aid, the bill was passed.

The new work was then presented: Senator Larry Underwood asked for $72.00 to pay for football and shirts for a Stockbridge Independent Intramural Football Team. The proposal was accepted.

A question was raised concerning the merger of Shorthorn, the Stockbridge newspaper, and the Collegian. A Collegian representative stated that the Shorthorn is unique tradition of Stockbridge and that it should be kept.

All present favored leaving the Shorthorn in its present state, and making some copies available to University students.

Before the meeting was adjourned, a resolution was passed in favor of Integrating Stockbridge students.

Goldwater Supporters Ejected

The Collegiate Press Service

When Prof. Mary E. Dillon, Queens College, discovered her political science course was overcrowded by 50, she hit upon a method of weeding out the excess.

She asked students who had supported Goldwater and New York major candidate William F. Buckley, Jr., to come to the front of the room. The 20 students who responded were told they were the excess.

Dr. Dillon, in defending her action, said she ejected the students because she "might say things during this class that would offend the Goldwater people."

The 'excess' students feel Dr. Dillon "solved the problem in a very arbitrary and discriminatory manner." One of the students, Allan Zimmerman, said, "Every student and faculty member we have talked to agrees that she is totally wrong."

The results of an investigation by a faculty committee appointed by the college president found the students had indeed been ejected in the manner they claimed.

Shapiro Visits Dutch Forum

At the invitation of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, Dr. Seymour Shapiro, head of the Dept. of botany at the University of Massachusetts, has left for Holland to represent this country at the Dutch Atom Forum, and to lecture at several Dutch universities.

The Dutch Atom Forum, comprising botanists, atomic energy scientists and other plant experts from several countries, will study the effects of radiation upon plant life. Dr. Shapiro is expected to return to UM on Mar. 22.

In addition to participating in the Dutch Atom Forum, the UM botanist will deliver lectures at the Universities of Amsterdam, Groningen, Leyden and Nijmegen in Holland. He will then spend four days in Great Britain consulting with scientists at the Universities of Edinburgh, London and Wales.

It's Up To You

By CHET WEINERMAN

Years in demand. Decades overdue. Months in the planning. Weeks in the writing. Days in the set-up. The result was intended to be a spark that was to ignite the pent-up feelings of all the girls on campus. The actual result was almost unbelievable lethargy and apathy on the part of the entire campus population. The girls read it, liked it, agreed with most of the proposals that were put forth, then put it down and went on to finish the night's French 108 homework.

What is the matter?

Who does the female population on this campus expect to change these rules, to bring about discussion, set up conferences, seminars, teach-ins?

Do they want the Collegian to write letters to itself commenting on the Special, to write to Dean Curtis ourselves, to talk to Dean's and Women's Affairs ourselves?

No, we refuse.

That is not our job. We are here to report news and to bring issues of vital concern to the attention of the community. We have done this.

The work must now be picked up by YOU. The only way you will see change is to work for it yourself. Write letters. Get your thoughts and ideas to the Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate, to the Dean's office, to the Collegian.

Don't wait for me or her to do it. You are the one to do it. Otherwise it will never get done. Whether there is any change in Women's regulations is now in the hands of the student body, and that means you. You can let this thing fade out . . . or you can provide the oil to which this spark will catch resulting in a tremendous blaze.

Hope you signed out tonite.

Comments from Co-eds

A Co-ed's Concern . . .

To the Editor:

It's about time women's regulations have been hit and hit hard. Tuesday's Collegian was but a constructive beginning. Many of the rules are archaic. These rules deny women much freedom and therefore the responsibility that goes along with freedom.

I'd like to quote from an October 27th, 1965 editorial in The Rensselaer Polytechnic, a college newspaper.

"The student who has taken upon himself the responsibility of a college education ought also to be allowed to take up the responsibility of controlling his own living conditions by setting the social, academic, and disciplinary regulations of his own residence . . . Maturity and responsibility are not purchased at the beginning of each term in the Union bookstore. Rather, these intangibles are learned slowly, painfully and continually. A Rensselaer education must include these essential opportunities."

A UMass education must include these too. Let's have some action.

A Concerned Co-ed

. . . The Counselor's Wisdom . . .

To the Editor:

To redefine your allegory in Tuesday's supplement:

In the beginning and the middle there was—not just a Dean Helene but there was "us" who were with the Dean Helene. And all have peopled the Earth and the universities therein . . .

lies in its paranoid attempt to project an ~~enlarged omnipotence~~ onto Dean Helene. ~~The remains, with the support of a crew of victorian-olympians on this campus,~~ merely a symbol. Of outdated Victorianism, you say? Yes, my dear Virginias. But more than this, she is a symbol of our own fear to define, defend, and demand.

"The time has come" and the Collegian has voiced the feelings of many women students on this campus. We would like to add our strength of approval to what has been said. We also stand on our own.

. . . And a Freshman's Words

To the Editor:

I extend my thanks that someone has finally come out and taken a public stand. Most women on this campus have long been dissatisfied with them, but until now, little has been done beyond complaining to each other.

By burdening us with these rules, the University is almost defeating its own purpose, and is relegating women to the status of a helpless creature, incapable of making her own decisions and accepting her own responsibilities. The University has taken on the role of Big Brother, ostensibly the benevolent protector, but ready to pounce at the most minute infraction of the rules. This is not protection. We are merely being treated as overgrown children instead of as young women, and are being denied the opportunity to accept those responsibilities that will be expected, and even demanded of us by society when we leave here.

It has been said too many times already that the youth of today are the leaders of tomorrow; but this has in no way dulled its truth. How can we lead when we are being denied the right to exercise those responsibilities that are an intrinsic part of leadership?

A freshman—Hamlin House

Facts Not Promises:

Well, now there is another Editor-in-Chief of the Massachusetts Collegian

He is surrounded by a highly competent staff and field of editors. And he sees a higher, finer and more responsible standard of journalism for the Collegian.

In the past few weeks the main complaint against the Collegian has been lack of organization and competence. Letters have been written, voices raised, and opinions forwarded.

This has been my prime concern in assuming the editorship and hoping that, with a wonderful staff we now have and have more of, we will be able to turn out a better, more thoroughly organized, and more sparkling paper.

There are a host of innovations and improvements that the UMass campus can look forward to in the ensuing months and years to come for this Collegian. These include:

• THE PERENNIAL PROOF OF ORGANIZATION. As a measure of organization, we will soon have professional experts coming in from the outside world of commercial journalism.

These experts will come in and take a look at the Collegian and stop at the various departments in the paper and offer their individual advice and counsel, similar to what Mr. Alvin Oickle, our present Technical Advisor does now for the news department.

• AN INCREASING GROWTH. The Collegian is growing right now. The campus is growing, right now. And both will be growing together rapidly.

This means that some time in the ensuing year, the Collegian will be published four times a week to meet the burgeoning demands of the campus. We feel that the Collegian has this responsibility to the campus . . . to provide the maximum amount of campus and other news to the entire academic community.

• MORE AND BETTER DAY EDITORS. With all the growth and strengthening involved in the Collegian, we'll have to have more of our staffers moving on to positions as strong, trained Day Editors.

These Day Editors will always have the freedom to experiment within the paper's bounds. If they didn't experiment and learn from the successes and failures, then there would be something wrong with them as journalists.

• STAFF MEMBERS. With new and more numerous editorship positions arising, we will more strongly feel the need of more competent staffers like the present staff of the Collegian. These additional staffers will be needed to help put out the extra pages and issues with the spark and flair which has increasingly become the by-word of the Collegian.

As the size of the Collegian grows, so will its scope. To accommodate this increase, we will be able to incorporate some things that seem only idle pipe dreams right now.

Among these will be an opportunity to make use of an Associated Press or United Press International wire service.

With this wire service, the Collegian will be able to devote regular space to state, national and world coverage.

A second innovation and one that has met with increased interest is the use of more special editions in conjunction with the regular Collegian.

Just to whet your appetites, I'll give you a preview of some of our upcoming special attractions.

We already have scheduled a magazine special on University Growth which will encompass the wide area of expansion involved with UMass.

Farther in the future, we hope to have a special when the Collegian takes a long look at campus student drinking, along with all its implications.

Then the Collegian will invade that bastion of responsible and sometimes maligned student government—the Student Senate.

In keeping with its open-door policy, the Collegian might well do something to show the campus how the Collegian is produced from "pencil to press" and that dedicated handful of 70-odd who put the paper to bed three times a week.

Perhaps giving Caesura and Yahoo a little competition, the Collegian will run a magazine devoted entirely to creative writing. And another devoted to interpretive and creative photography.

Now all these specials won't mean that the Collegian will turn into an apple-pie-in-the-sky Sunday supplement three times a week. Far from it.

The Collegian will still provide you with all the straight news, sports and features the campus has to offer, with a Women's Page, a Photo Page, and a regular column or two.

Chief can see nothing but continued and increased success for the Collegian.

In the future, the Collegian will become a fine, an outstanding newspaper. It will become a newspaper which will be so far above the clarion call of the All-American rating, that the echo will be but humorous nostalgia of those past days when we were "just good".

Walk, Don't Run

By GREGORY D. STRATTNER, Editorial

Every year the same legitimate complaints are registered with the administration, and every year it's the same old story: these things require careful analysis and patient consideration, they can't be rushed into. It's time to quit the doubletalk and face the issues. The University is growing and expanding at a tremendous rate; reform in the social and academic spheres of campus life must accompany renovation and expansion of physical facilities.

The blatant indifference (and questionable existence!) of President Lederle to these many grievances is indeed disconcerting. It places the "raison d'être" of the University in a pretty disgusting light. Why do we students stand for it? Why should we have to stand for it?

Perhaps one of the biggest factors which directly stifles attempts at achieving any reform at all is the University's infamous power structure. Nobody seems to be able to do or authorize anything without "going straight to the top." And who is the "top?" You guessed it . . . Phantom Lederle. I don't ignore the need for some sort of power structure or proportioned delegation of responsibility for a University this size, but I do ignore this as a valid excuse in itself for the "deaf ear" approach to reform.

Merely going through the motions of "listening" to reform proposals is worse than not listening at all. This hypocrisy gets everyone nowhere, particularly the student.

One Big Captive Audience

By ANDY COSTELLO, Editorial Staff

In 1908 the library of the Massachusetts Agricultural College bought a book written by Daniel Coit Gilman, L.L.D., who at that time was the president of John Hopkins University. Since 1908 "University Problems" has been taken out of the Libe five times, the last withdrawal occurring January 3, 1947. Apparently student apathy concerning University problems is not a recent development, but rather a tradition. Perhaps our predecessors should be excused for their seeming lack of concern, as the University of 1908 probably didn't have an abundance of dilemmas anyway. The University of 1966 has no such excuse. Instead we have an expanding institution crying for reform.

Before the reformation can occur the purpose of the University must be examined and compared to existing conditions. President Gilman constructed a vanguard of functions for developing universities to follow. If his set of conditions were adhered to the University would surely flourish. Let us compare Gilman's university to ours.

If You Are Concerned--

To the editor:

Talk accomplishes nothing. Frank discussion on a subject, directed towards a specific goal, is the best means of accomplishment.

Frank discussion of the role of students in the matter of academics: i.e. requirements, curriculum, examinations, will be the subject of a conference to be held on campus, Saturday, March 5.

Academics is the heart of any university. An academic program which is unsuited to the needs of the student fails in what should be the basic goal of the university system.

The function of a university is to provide facilities for the intellectual advancement of the students. How can the university accomplish this without to some degree considering student opin-

The University should cater to the student. This is its basic function and a tremendous responsibility, for in doing so, it literally molds minds, directly and indirectly, competently or incompetently.

When, therefore, is the administration going to take a genuinely serious look at the grossly inadequate 4.0 grading system with its nine point discrepancy for every letter grade? When will there be adequate undergraduate married housing on campus? (Maybe President Lederle wouldn't mind them setting up shop in his garden; at least it would be legal!) When will there be a reasonable curfew for, and mature consideration of the responsibilities of the women on this campus? When will the badly needed reassessment of University course requirements come?

These questions, among others, have been asked and re-asked until relevant discussion has all but been exhausted; yet, no action has been taken. It seems the administration plans only to "wait it out," hoping that we will talk the issues to death. This is a poor impression to convey, and doesn't say much for a responsible institution of learning. It also grossly underestimates the potential explosive nature of many of these issues. In the final analysis, the argument of "walk, don't run" in regard to University reform is defunct; moreover, we challenge such administrative rationalization with the sincere plea to "walk, don't lag."

"The conditions must favor the growth of scholars, investigators, reasoners, orators, poets, discoverers and professionals. There must be an endowment of research. Universities must provide a discovery and development of talent. Finally, among the merits of a University is the cultivation of a spirit of response."

The University of Massachusetts simply doesn't provide time for the student to partake in Dr. Gilman's school. Required courses and required attendance prevent the student from devoting time to the development of individual talent, or engaging in research.

If unlimited cuts were allowed much time would be made available for more worthwhile endeavors. A captive audience, which is forced to learn, is likely to revolt by refusing to pay attention. Required attendance also promotes an atmosphere of immaturity. A father image should not be necessary to punish or reward students, for then they become children rather than scholars, investigators, reasoners and discoverers as called for by Dr. Gilman.

ion? At the present time there is no systematic solicitation of student opinion on matters of academic concern.

The conference on Saturday is an attempt to correct the situation. If it can be demonstrated that enough students are concerned with the problems, then action will be forthcoming.

Results of the discussions at the conference will be forwarded to the Student Senate, who can then take appropriate legislative action.

The groundwork has already been done. The opportunity is there. If you are concerned about how the university should proceed, I urge you to attend the conference and let your opinion be known.

Dick Dacey
Senate President

Freedom Part 3

ROTSTEIN REPLIES

In reply to Miss Runk:

Concerning my article "Freedom and the University," are my definitions arbitrary? Yes, I defined them to suit my own purposes, but I believe that I have not destroyed their meanings. I would suppose that volumes could be written on the definition of democracy. I chose to define it as the power to make the significant decisions in one's own life because, as I understand it, one of the ideals of democratic government is to give the individual as great a control as is feasible over his own life, rather than have important decisions made for him. I should emphasize that I was not speaking of democracy specifically as a system of government; I was using the term in a more personal sense. "Participatory democracy" would have been a better phrase. In any case, I believe that my point still stands: the student has very little control over his academic life.

Perhaps my choice of the word "yield" was an unfortunate one; again, however, my argument stands. The student in fact does not have the decision-making power; the teacher does.

I suppose that I did not explain my concept of alienation adequately. When I said that a person becomes alienated from his work, I meant that he does not experience himself as the active agent in his work, the agent in control of his work. The work is seen as a foreign object to which the individual must submit. The person thus cannot fulfill himself in performing his work (how many students really experience a feeling of gratification and pride in doing their work?); he only makes himself miserable. Part of the reason why it is so difficult to explain what is meant by alienation is that most of us have lived under it all our lives; consequently, we do not recognize it for what it is.

The implication in giving students a say in what will be taught does not necessarily lead to the situation described by Miss Runk. What it does imply is that students would have some institutionalized means in helping to determine what will be taught and how it will be taught. This could be done by having students represented on curriculum committees, by having them confer with teachers to help decide upon the nature of a course, etc. It does not have to result in total anarchy, nor if it is well planned in advance. Again, I ask, is this so unreasonable? Is it really so unjust to ask for a measure of control over your own education?

Miss Runk herself admits that the student is forced to accept the authority of the teacher. But what happens if the teacher is inept? What if he can't communicate with students? What happens when students feel they are being cheated out of an education? Is there to be no recourse? Why should the students have to put up with this? After all, it is they who are supposedly being educated; shouldn't they have some control over their own education?

My Tolstoy-Dostoevsky example was an attempt to show that genuine personal involvement in learning can be disastrous. Suppose that I am excited and inspired by Dostoevsky; I want to study him further, to go into him more deeply. I do so at the risk of flunking the course, for any extra time spent on Dostoevsky means that much less time for Tolstoy, whom I am supposed to read next week. Thus, if I am to survive in this course, I must sever my interest in Dostoevsky and follow the syllabus as required. Here again, I am alienated from my own work. I try to integrate it with my personal life, but I am forced to deal with it superficially.

Miss Runk notes that intellectual self-discipline is not the same as blind acceptance of authority. Of course it isn't. That is exactly my point. But, as she herself admits, students are forced to accept the teacher's authority. Requiring all students to read Crime and Punishment the same week hardly seems to me an example of self-discipline; I would call it acceptance of external authority. Of course, students have the power to decide what they think about that novel; but that is about all the power they have. And that is exactly what I am complaining about.

The Actors Strive for Excellence

by DIANA GEORGANTAS
Feature Staff

The University of Massachusetts Theater is currently presenting The Merchant of Venice, one of Shakespeare's most popular plays, under the able direction of Dr. Walther R. Volbach and Mr. Lawrence Wilker, assistant director.

The Theater Group is "not just a club," according to Mr. Wilker.

"We strive for professional excellence; 'professional' is the watchword. The group is open to those with a combination of enthusiasm, interest and talent, while at the same time it serves as a sort of lab section for drama classes."

Each student is required to put in a certain amount of time in the capacity of make-up, set construction, or acting. Mr. Walker considers the actors to be a deeply dedicated group: "We're out to do a job the best possible way we can."

Because The Merchant of Venice consists of very melodic verse, the actors find it easy to lapse into the poetry without having to worry about the inner logic of meaning and interpretation.

For Philip Mallet, who portrays the jokester Gratiano, one of Antonio's friends, the dialogue "moves easily."

Certainly the reasons for the popularity of the play must be found in the very quality of the poetry, the clarity of characterization, and the romantic elements that transcend the darker aspects of the character of Shylock.

Its universality comes from the themes of love and hate, and love is supreme in the person of Portia, played by Mary Grace Pennis.

Because the comedy is easily adapted to modern audiences, its continuity has been kept pretty much intact. Only two, small, non-relevant scenes have been entirely cut, as well as other scattered lines, thereby shortening the time of production and enhancing enjoyability.

Behind the scenes are two very talented men who contribute to the artistic quality of the production. Dal Almund is a graduate of the Yale School of Drama, and he is responsible for the set design, the costumes, and the make-up.

Bruce McCombie, senior music composition major, has composed the Elizabethan type music heard between the scenes, which serves as a graceful bridging between them.

Music is often used in Shakespearean productions, and it can be difficult to fit in well.

For The Merchant of Venice, consisting of fifteen otherwise jagged scenes, the music is a unifying agent during which costumed ladies shift the set around for the next scene.

There Are Also "Happy Aspects"

by NANCY ABRAMS
Feature Staff

From the first few minutes of The Merchant of Venice, one would think that the University Theatre had a dismal failure on its hands.

Schoolboys bounce across the stage in their doublet and hose, having a contest to see who can speak the fastest with the poorest diction and the least expression.

Then things get better. Mary Grace Pennisi as Portia puts much feeling into her lines and creates a completely believable character with a delightfully impish touch. Pasquale Freni makes two appearances as suitors of Portia.

He plays one suitor as a roaring Amazon and the other as an effeminate sweetie. Both characterizations show excellent showmanship and were well appreciated by the audience.

Next comes the highlight of the evening. Peter Stelzer as Launcelot Gobbo and Tim Sloan as his senile father show how exciting good theater can be with their comic ballet. Slapstick clowning with excellent precision, grace, and timing combines with well-delivered dialogue. After their performances, the remainder of the show seems pretty sick.

Most of the cast, in their tights and capes, obviously think they are Batman. Since when did speaking with expression and showing a little emotion go out of style? Their horrible diction makes it very hard to follow the play.

Even Francois-Regis Klanfer as Shylock garbles his words, although he creates a fine portrayal of the old Jew.

For those who are not familiar with the play and would like to know what is going on as they watch it, Antonio borrows money from Shylock the moneylender so his friend Bassanio can go to the house of Portia and try to win her hand in marriage. To marry Portia, a suitor has to choose correctly from three chests marked gold, silver, and lead.

Bassanio chooses correctly, and then learns that Antonio has not been able to pay his debt to Shylock, who is demanding a pound of flesh from Antonio.

Portia, disguised as a doctor, goes to the courtroom and settles the case: Shylock may take a pound of flesh, but he cannot spill any blood. Then everything ends well in the moonlight.

There are a few happy aspects to the production. The simple set design and the elegant Renaissance costumes make the evening visually pleasant.

The technical aspects are good especially the young ladies in the bellhop costumes who carry the furniture on and off stage. Then there are the moments of good acting previously mentioned.

The majority of the actors, though, make what should have been an excellent production into an evening that is dull, boring, and bad theater.

Out of costume, the leading ladies pose backstage. Mary Grace Pennisi, at right, plays the lead female role as Portia, while Jan Lavin looks on.

Shylock, the greedy moneylender, explains his position in The Merchant of Venice. He is portrayed by Peter Stelzer.

a 6.3 clocking, only 4 off the world record. Medeiros was second with 6.4. In the 600 Bill Thomas and John Anderson finished neck and neck with a 1:15 clocking, while Greg Bowman and Thomas finished 1-2 in the 600.

IN THE MILE and 2-mile St. Clair and Carpenter came through with 1-2 in both events. They clocked a 4:29 in the mile and 10:00 in the 2-mile. In the hurdles John Hall set new school records in both the 60-yd. highs with a 7.9 and the 60-yd. lows with a 7.3. However, he was beaten by Yan-Con champ Core and in both races. Medeiros placed third both times. With the meet wrapped up Coach Footrick didn't enter his best relay team but rather the boys who failed to place in other events.

The next meet for the track squad will be tomorrow at the IC4A's championship in Madison Square Garden in New York.

UNTOUCHABLES . . .

The 137, 147, and 157 pounders are still in their quarterfinal matches while Koslowski (167), Dougherty (177), Lubclzyk (177), Goodfellow (177), Yurkus (177), DeAmicis (187), Kenny (187), Fitzpatrick (187), Yungler (187), and Santucci (unlim.) are in the semifinal rounds. Smith (197) is the only grappler to reach the finals.

15th H. S. Concert Tour Set for March 19-23

The 72-member University of Massachusetts Symphony Band will present its fifteenth annual high school concert tour from March 19 to 23.

The five-day trip will take the group to 11 high schools in eastern and southeastern Massachusetts, where it will present a program of martial, classical and light classical band music.

UNDER THE DIRECTION of John A. Jenkins, the Symphony Band maintains fully symphonic instrumentation, and serves as an important medium for the performance of traditional and recently-composed works.

The extended tour each year is designed to bring the band to localities that otherwise would not have the opportunity of hearing the ensemble.

COMPOSED OF A SELECT group of musicians from all schools and colleges at the University, the Symphony Band will devote a large part of the annual student spring vacation to tour.

Conductor of bands and assistant professor of music at UMass, Mr. Jenkins received bachelor's and master's degrees in music from the University of Michigan. He is a former instructor of instrumental music in the Ann Arbor (Mich.) public school system.

In addition to his teaching and Symphony Band responsibilities, Mr. Jenkins is also conductor of the University Marching Band.

THE MAJOR WORKS on the tour program will be selected from the following: "La Fiesta Mexicana," a Mexican Folk Song symphony by H. Owen Reed; "Trauersinfonie," by Richard Wagner; "Suite for Concert Band," by Vincent Persichetti; and "Folk Song Suite for Military Band," by Ralph Vaughan Williams.

The tour will take the band to the following areas on the days listed: Bourne High School, March 19; Martha's Vineyard Regional High School, and Falmouth High School in Falmouth, March 20; Dighton-Rehoboth Regional High School in North Dighton, Attleboro High School in Attleboro, and Old Rochester Regional High School in Rochester, on March 21; Newton High School in Newtonville, Provincetown High School in Provincetown and Dennis-Yarmouth Regional High School in South Yarmouth on March 22; and Somerset Junior High School in Somerset, and New Bedford High School in New Bedford on March 23.

Folk Group at Newman

The Paulist Folk Singers of Washington, D.C., will return to the University of Massachusetts Newman Center at 8:00 p.m., March 6. Admission is free.

The two-hour performance marks the second concert here by the five seminarians. All preparing for the Catholic priesthood, they study at the Paulist Fathers' seminary in Washington, D.C. In between classes and studies, they barnstorm college campuses and high school auditoriums.

They sing popular folk tunes; songs which encourage audiences to participate in the singing.

Why do they sing? Pat Hughes, a Boston College Business School grad and organizer of the group, hopes to introduce people to a new view of the seminary and the men who live there.

Says Pat, "We simply want to project an authentic image of the type of person who enters the seminary. We find many people are surprised to discover seminarians to be normal human beings, who can tell a joke, laugh, or sing a popular song."

The Paulists, an American Community founded in New York in 1858, have always dedicated themselves to the pressing needs of each particular age.

In 1906, they moved on to the secular campus at Berkeley, California. Today, the Paulists can be found on forty-six college campuses from U.C.L.A. to Boston University, from Louisiana State to Ohio State.

Critique Calling

Let your experience help others! Critique is about to decide what courses will be evaluated for this semester and we want your suggestions.

If you are taking a good course now, why not let others know about it? If you detest a course you can help others avoid it.

For the first time Critique is letting you choose the courses that will be critiqued. This is your chance! Watch the Collegian Monday for more facts and information.

Oldies Chosen for WMUA

In its third week, the oldie goldie countdown most nearly resembled great hits from the late and middle 1950's. The ballots streamed in fast and furiously this week for a new high of 68 "legitimate" ballots.

Neal Whitman of 307 Hills North proved himself to be the real expert as he won this week's free album, courtesy of WMUA. Neal pulled a COUNTDOWN first as his top two selections matched the actual top two on the chart. Considering that over 150 hits were mentioned this rates as an incredible feat.

Be sure to listen to the OLD TUNES SHOW at 7 tonight on WMUA radio, 91 FM. Here is this week's top ten.

Riflemen Take 28th At Academy

by PETER GALLAGHER

Competing against some of the best teams on the eastern seaboard, the three-year old UMass Rifle Team placed 28th among 39 competitors at the U.S. Coast Guard Invitational Match in New London, Sat., Feb. 12.

THE UMASS #1 TEAM placed 28th with a score of 1087 out of a possible 1200. UMass's #2 team took 37th place with a mark of 1035.

Firing for the #1 team were Maurice Case (279), Homer Davis (277), Peter Gallagher (271) and Al Medeiros (260). The second team consisted of Howard Burbank (274), John Berge (276), Mike Skora (250) and Fred Chen (235).

THIS WAS THE fourth match fired by the team this year. In regular New England College Rifle League matches the Redmen defeated the University of New Hampshire (1229-1173) and were beaten by the Univ. of Vermont (1265-1222) and the Univ. of Maine (1270-1250).

The present rifle team was established at UMass in 1963 and adopted by the ROTC department at the University with S/Sgt. Peter P. Margelony as head coach.

UNDER COACH MARGELONY'S supervision the team has managed a first place in the Yankee Conference and third in the N.E. College Rifle League, Central Group. In 1964 the marksmen placed first in their division of the N.E.C.R.L.

COACH MARGELONY attributes the mediocre record to the relative newness of the UM team and the quality of the competition which it has faced. However, he is still hopeful of pulling out a second in the N.E.C.R.L.

Local Support Given To Calif. Grape Strike

Young Independents, in support of striking grape workers in Delano, California, has asked Amherst liquor stores to stop selling products of Delano growers—including Schenley and 84 other brands.

SINCE LAST SUMMER, about 5000 grape workers—predominantly Mexican and Filipino—have been striking against these producers in order to obtain a living wage, better working conditions, and union recognition.

AMHERST LIQUOR store owners were approached yesterday by a delegation of students and presented with a letter saying, in part, "Grape workers in Delano, California are presently on strike, supported by the AFL-CIO.

The Delano grape growers have refused to comply with their requests; however, many liquor dealers throughout the country have ceased to make Schenley products available for purchase in sympathetic support of the grape workers.

STUDENTS FOR a Democratic Society of the University requests that you assist these workers by ceasing the sale of Delano grape products.

If the liquor stores refuse the request and continue to stock Delano brands, Members of Young Independents will distribute leaflets to customers explaining the situation and asking them not to buy these brands.

'Animals' Signed For Greek Week

The Sammy Davis Jr. concert tentatively planned for Greek weekend at the February 9 meeting of the Frosh Exec Council was called off. The Animals have been signed and the Rolling Stones are being considered.

Wednesday night's meeting of the executive council was brought to order by President Gary LeBeau. LeBeau brought up several topics for discussion in his opening remarks.

THE FIRST was the question of a budget committee to discuss and submit a budget for the year of 1967. A committee was formed with Judy Leach, class treasurer, as chairman. Mary Dellapoolera, Bill King, Jane Gaetani, Bill Neigher and Ralph Stoddard, Executive Council members volunteered to serve on the committee.

Next on the agenda Neil Whitman, SUG board representative of the class of '69, talked to the Council about the board and the function it performs.

THE NEXT ORDER of business was the Frosh-Soph picnic. It was suggested that it be held in the first week of May and that the whole university be invited. All refreshments will be catered.

PRESIDENT LeBeau brought up the point that the freshman class was uninformed as a whole as to the decisions and plans made by their Executive Council and proposed that something be done to inform them. Several suggestions were made but Judy Leach's of a newsletter distributed to the individual members of the class seemed the most popular.

Larry Marcus, Senator at Large, suggested that members of the Executive Council apply for positions on the committees of the Senate.

WOMEN'S JUDICIARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Nomination papers may be obtained in the R. S. O. Office between Feb. 25 - Mar. 8 for Women's Judiciary. Any freshman or sophomore woman is eligible. Nomination papers must be signed by 25 woman students (excluding seniors). A woman may sign the nomination paper of any candidate regardless of her class, but may not sign the paper of more than one candidate per class. Screening interviews will be conducted by members of Woman's Judiciary and the Woman's Affairs Committee prior to the primaries.

Untouchables Tip Aces For Campus Crown

by DAVE JARNES

The Grayson Aces gave it a good try but succumbed to the power and depth of the Untouchables, 65-47, in the campus championship game. For the early portions of the game the Aces were able to keep up with the champs but big Franz Von Bradsy (22 points) and Al Garsys (25 points) pulled the Untouchables away from the Aces. Dave Smithers with 15 points and Jack Thomas with 11 paced the Aces.

IN VOLLEYBALL, defending fraternity champion SPE started their season with a 15-0, 15-5 win over KS. ZN, ASP, PMD, and PSK were also victorious. measure of their arch-rivals, the TEP pledges, 12-15, 15-13, and 15-7. The Untouchables remained unbeaten with a 15-10, 15-8 whipping of the Chem Club. Other independent winners were the Cellar Savers, Orgies, Cartwrights, Phantoms, and the Forestry Club. The Butterfield Lemons, defending dorm champs, rolled over the Grants, 15-2, 15-6. The Eagles, Comanches, Colt

.45's and the Maroons were other dorm winners.

TURNING TO BOWLING, the Lemons, Patriots, Hickories, and Comanches all swept 8 points from the Trojans. Bruce Reed's while the Maple took 6 of 8 546 paced the Comanches.

In the only independent matches, the Plywoods and Zeros swept their contests while the Buggers took six from the Hermits.

Sargent (565) and Brazanskas (558) excelled in the Buffaloes' sweep of the Hemlocks. Rounding out the dorm action, the Grants swept their match while the Barracudas and Cherrys took six of eight from the Garfields and Bengals.

Terry Carpenter defeated Gerry Lapierre 14-16, 10-15, 15-12, 15-11, and 15-9 in an exciting squash match to join Doam, Rhoades, and Fraser as semifinalists in the dorm division. Jurret, Gustafson, and Keyes were fraternity semifinalists while Norton reached the finals in the independent class.

Swimmers Sink

by RALPH DWORMANN

The UMass swimming team suffered a heavy beating at the hands of M.I.T. Tuesday night. The mermen lost by a score of 58-37 in the final meet of the four-month season.

Captain Dick Daniels retained his top position on the team by winning both the 200-yard and 500-yard freestyle events. Dick has been a serious threat to all opponents and his place on the team will be very difficult to fill next season.

The only other double winner was junior Dick Lennon, who won the 200-yard individual medley and the 200-yard breaststroke. The latter race was the thriller of the meet. Lennon was in third place until the last 25 yards, when he broke loose and beat his opponents by a sizeable margin.

Ken "Spider" Nowak won the 200-yard backstroke in easy fashion and Fred Anderson took a strong third. Steve Levy and Bob Rappaport placed second and third in the 200-yard butterfly. Chip Wyser swam second in the 100-yard freestyle and Jim Hogan took second in the 50-yard freestyle.

Selected members of the team will journey to Connecticut to compete in the New England Swim Championships, to be held on March 10-12.

Tracksters Win Over UConn

Led by co-captain John Medeiros' 13 points and Steve St. Clair's double victory, the track team scored big in the clutch events to sweep by UConn 63-50. Still smarting from last spring's loss to the Huskies, all the Redmen tracksters came through with excellent performances to win easily a meet that on paper figured to be close.

MEDEIROS STARTED the meet off extending his undefeated string in the long jump to 7 straight. Paul Freedman flipped the shot 42' 8" for third place. Medeiros and John Hall placed 2nd and 3rd in the high jump with 5' 10" and 5' 6" respectively. Bob Murray captured the pole vault with a leap of 13.

In the crucial running events that were figured to decide the meet the home forces excelled. Steve Burrell set a new school record in the 60-yd. dash with

Review Of Redman Basketball

Varsity--A Puzzlement

by GLENN BIGERE

Two faces characterized UMass basketball this season. One face was spirit and hustle, and the other was sloppiness and sluggishness. All of these characteristics combined to give the Redmen a slightly disappointing record of 11-13 and third place in the Yankee Conference.

THE STORY OF the season was inconsistency. Sometimes the team looked like champions, while on other occasions they played unimpressively. Most of the time they performed at one extreme or the other, and seldom did they play mediocre ball. With a few more breaks and a steadier style of play, the record might have been much better.

A good deal of credit belongs to outgoing coach Johnny Orr and assistant coach Jack Leaman. These men were faced at the beginning of the season with a handicap feared by all coaches—lack of size. The tallest men were 6' 5", and the team was also light. This lack of height and weight gave the team's opponents a definite rebounding edge, and in many of their games the Redmen were automatic underdogs. Orr and Leaman did a highly commendable job in light of this handicap, and they deserved a better fate than an 11-13 record.

SPEED WAS THE team's most valuable asset. Without it they were at a great disadvantage, proven by the fact that when they lost their hustle, they also lost the game. When the Redmen worked fast and smoothly, they could make things rough for any team. Leading the team in this respect was Clarence Hill who scored at a 24.1 average despite the fact that he was sometimes on-and-off. When Clarence was moving, it seemed as if the whole team came alive. The 6' 1" senior from Washington, D.C. will leave UMass with an all-time career scoring record of 1369 points and a record of 554 points in one season.

The season also saw the emergence of such stars as junior Jim Babyak (17.7 average), soph center Billy Tindall and soph Gary Gasperack. Another steady performer was Frank Stewart, with Mike Meola and John Lisack also seeing plenty of action.

THE SEASON BEGAN on a note of cautious optimism as the Redmen downed BU, 65-49. The most exciting game of the season followed with a thrilling 61-60 victory over Yankee Conference rival Vermont. UMass absorbed its first loss, however, when the powerful Rhode Island Rams defeated them, 94-67. After a 78-72 win over Northeastern, the Redmen hit one of their peaks in a resounding 92-74 victory over Holy Cross. With thoughts of this win in mind, they traveled to Blacksburg, Va. for the VPI holiday tournament.

Down South the team played some of its best basketball of the year but lost both games. The Redmen put out 100% against tall and talented Virginia Tech, but were nipped 91-88. In the consolation round, they again impressed the crowd with their hustle but lost another heartbreaker, to Alabama 79-73. The long and tiring bus ride back North probably cost them the Rutgers game, which they lost in the second half. Their record fell to 4-5 with a 100-82 defeat to strong Fairfield.

AFTER A 98-81 win over AIC, the highly regarded Friars of Providence invaded the Cage and beat UMass 87-73, but not before they had been given a good battle. Following a win over lowly New Hampshire, the team went into its exam break. The long layoff was not evident however, as they overpowered Colgate, 107-77. But in the next game, they ran into Dave Bing and Syracuse's formidable offensive machine, and were bombed 114-72.

Apparently, this game broke the back of the team. They were expected to make it close against UConn, but they fell apart and lost by 30 points. After another victory over Vermont, the Redmen lost to BC, 101-80; Rhode Island, 88-64; and shockingly enough, to Maine, 70-63. They again demolished UNH but a 91-64 trouncing at the hands of UConn followed. The Redmen waited until the last three games to come alive again. They came close to shocking NIT-bound St. John's, and lost 80-73 in the most exciting home game of the season. The campaign ended with victories over Holy Cross and Maine.

AFTER THE LAST game, coach Johnny Orr handed in his resignation. He was well-liked during his three years at UMass and his teams compiled a mark of 39-33. Despite the 11-13 record Orr did a good job considering the team's height deficiency and a grueling schedule. He will be missed around UMass.

Frosh--Hope for the Future

by TOM FITZGERALD

When a group of freshmen basketball players are teamed up with a first-year coach, the results are unpredictable. For the past three months, an aggregation of former schoolboy standouts pastimed on the hard court for the UMass Frosh. Their coach was soft-spoken Charlie Kingston, who only last year was the Redman cage co-captain and field general. The result of this combination was a fine 11-4 record against some of the roughest competition around.

AFTER AN EVENING of hoop warfare with Holy Cross on Thursday of last week, Coach Kingston offered some comments on the team, as the lights in Worcester Municipal Auditorium began to go out. "I considered it a great experience," he said. "I'm thankful to the University, to Coach Orr and Dean McGuirk for allowing me to handle the team."

The expanding recruiting system of UMass has apparently reaped a banner crop of talent in this year's yearling squad. Kingston remarked that "ability-wise and potentially, this was the best frosh team at UMass in the past five years—including the team I was on, which was 14-1. I feel they certainly were a great bunch of kids to work with."

THE YOUNG COACH was outspoken on the potential of his athletes, commenting that "There are several players on the team who could help the varsity next year." The squad's success incidentally could prophesy one of the fiercest battles ever for berths on next year's varsity, since Clarence Hill was the lone senior on the big team.

"Joe DiSarcina is as good as if not better than any backcourt man in New England," Kingston said. "He plays good defense, he is an excellent dribbler, and he has good backcourt sense." DiSarcina, who is also an outstanding baseball prospect, averaged 11.5 points per game and, as head man in the Little Redmen's fast break, easily led the team in assists.

Completing the backcourt was John Shockro, whom Kingston called "one of the hardest working kids I've seen." The southpaw dead-eye scored 13.6 points a game and gave a big lift to the team with his consistently aggressive defense.

Kingston remarked that pivot man Peter Gayeska "is the big man at 6'9 that UMass has been wanting for years. He was excellent against Holy Cross and Boston College." Noting that Gayeska often took extra practice, the coach said that he was "completely dedicated to the game of basketball. In a year or two people are going to be very surprised and pleased with his play." Pete averaged 9.2 points and amassed a flock of rebounds each game.

ACCORDING TO KINGSTON, Mike Gemei, the top scorer at 16.6, "played, at the end of the season, as good a brand of basketball as anyone on the team. His jumping ability is just terrific, he has tremendous moves around the hoop, and his defense is coming around."

The coach also lavished praise on Ron Nowakowski, Gemei's running mate at forward, calling him "the best all-around player on the team. He handles the ball well, he is a good rebounder and an excellent shooter. The student body of UMass can expect great things from him." Nowakowski was second in the scoring brigade with a 15.9 average. Kingston also had a strong bench to call upon. The top reserve, Eddie Griffith, the coach said, is "one of the scrappiest little players I've ever seen. He will probably see spot action with the varsity before he is through at U Mass. The 5' 10" guard averaged 6.4 points per game."

Three other outstanding subs, Lonnie Lehrer (5.8), Alan Fisher (5.2), and John Dreyer (3.0), were cited by Kingston for their clutch contributions this season.

KINGSTON CALLED this year's schedule "the toughest the Frosh has ever had" and said that "The best team, certainly, was Holy Cross, one of the best in New England in five years." The Little Crusaders, who in all probability had four of next year's varsity starters, handed UMass a pair of setbacks. Leicester Junior College and UConn accounted for the other two. "I think its interesting," Kingston said, "that in the last six days we played the three teams that had beaten us and that we beat two of them."

Of all the promising players the squad faced, the coach considered Tony Koski, the 6'8 center for Leicester, the best.

AS A FINAL THOUGHT, Kingston said, "I'd like to thank the boys, and the student body for the tremendous support it gave the team. I'm sure the boys appreciated it."

TRIBUTE TO JOHNNY ORR

Letter to the Sports Editor:

The resignation of basketball coach Johnny Orr should be greeted with great disappointment on the University campus. In his three years at the University, Coach Orr compiled a winning basketball record. His Yankee Conference teams never finishing lower than third in the final standings. While the Redmen did not win the championship, they provided UMass with great victories, particularly against arch-rivals Connecticut and Rhode Island. His record of thirty-nine victories and thirty-three defeats is noteworthy, when one realizes the secondary position afforded basketball at the University.

BUT BASKETBALL, and the University of Massachusetts in particular, will be losing more than a fine basketball coach. Johnny Orr continually displayed the highest degree of sportsmanship and conduct, both on and off the court, and consistently endeavored to maintain these high attributes in his basketball players. In this age of sport, with its superior emphasis on winning by any means possible, Coach Orr and his Massachusetts teams were a credit to the University, displaying high qualities of conduct, even in the tension of a pressure-packed ball game. Coach Orr demonstrated that sportsmanship is not dead.

A gentleman, who always found time in his vigorous schedule to pause and give advice to those who asked for it, Coach Orr represented the finest qualities of sport, a coach who loved the taste of victory, but not at the expense of conduct held so near by sport itself. As coach, he had numerous opportunities to speak at benefit and testimonials, and succeeded admirably as a roving ambassador of good will for the University. His announced resignation, based on the necessities of business, is greeted with keen disappointment. Basketball, indeed sports, has lost a dedicated friend.

Med School Issue To Be Re-examined

THE RAGING controversy over the location of the University of Massachusetts Medical School will be raised again in the Legislature when a bill to locate the school in Amherst rather than Worcester will be heard before the Joint Committee on Education on Wed. (Mar. 9) at 10:30 p.m. in Room 480 of the State House.

The bill, introduced by Rep. David Bartley (D-Holyoke), would bring the issue on the floor of the House for debate and specifically asks that the Legislature locate the medical school in Amherst.

Although the Legislature passed the enabling legislation in July 1962 establishing a state-supported medical school, the University's Board of Trustees did not act on the actual location of the school until June 11, 1965.

By the narrow vote of 12-10, the Trustees decided to locate the school in Worcester, rather than Amherst.

THE DECISION was contrary to the recommendation by School Dean, Dr. Lamar Soutter; and by Bozz, Allen and all consultants on medical education; by the University's Medi-Hamilton, the management consulting firm that carried out a $30,000 study.

The board's decision precipitated a bitter reaction among faculty, students, and medical profession and citizens' groups throughout the state concerned with obtaining the best possible medical education and medical care at the most economical cost.

The request from the University's faculty senate to the Board of Trustees that the Worcester decision be re-considered was rejected by the Board in August 1965 by the same vote as on June 11.

In November 1965, the Massachusetts Taxpayers' Committee for Quality Medical Education filed suit against the Board of Trustees in the Supreme Judicial Court.

THE TAXPAYERS' committee includes such prominent members as Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist; Dr. David W. Wallwork, former president of the Massachusetts Medical Association; Edward Weeks and Charles Morton, editor and associate editor, respectively, of The Atlantic Monthly magazine.

Supreme Court Justice Arthur O. Whittemore ruled that the case be referred to the full bench of the Supreme Court.

Attorney Raymond R. Cross of Dwyer and Cross, Northampton, legal counsel for Dr. White's taxpayers' group stated today that legal steps are already in progress to present the arguments before the full bench of the Supreme Court.

On Dec. 31, 1965, the House Ways and Means Committee summoned the members of the Board of Trustees to an extraordinary hearing relative to costs of the medical school.

TESTIMONY revealed that the cost of building the school would be more than $40,000,000.

Dr. Lamar Soutter, UMass Medical School Dean, testified that the Worcester location would add at least a half million dollars annually to the

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, MONDAY, MARCH 7, 1966

Draft Boards to Offer Deferment Test in Spring

THE SELECTIVE SERVICE System has announced that tests that might qualify students for a draft deferment will be given on May 14, May 21, and June 3.

High school seniors who will graduate in June and college students who desire to take the test must make an application not later than April 23 to the Science Research Associates of Chicago, the firm under contract with the government to prepare and administer the tests. It was awarded the contract over two other bidders.

The Selective Service office stresses that the test is optional and no student is required to take it. However, beginning in the fall, local draft boards will use a combination of school grades and scores on the test to determine who will be deferred.

Indications are that a student with an exceptionally high standing in his college class would not need to take the test in order to be deferred. A student with a lower rank in his class might substantially improve his chances for a deferment with a good score on the test.

ALTHOUGH THE CRITERIA for deferments have not been announced as yet, it is expected to be similar to those used during the Korean war when a score of 70 (out of 150 questions) was considered deferable for an undergraduate student and an 80 was generally accepted for a graduate student.

The test is designed to test four areas—reading comprehension, verbal relations, arithmetic reasoning, and data interpretation.

A spokesman for the Selective Service office called the test "similar to a general aptitude test" with about 50 per cent of it devoted to verbal and linguistic skills and about 50 per cent to quantitative reasoning.

He said the test had been constructed so as not to give any advantage to any type of college major. There were charges that the test used during the Korean war was weighed in favor of math and science students.

THE FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT of the test will be made by the Selective Service office around April and test information will be posted on college and university campuses, public buildings and local draft boards.

Students considering the tests will be able to get bulletins and forms from their draft boards. The bulletin tells where and when to report for the test. About 12,000 sites throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Canal Zone will be used.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon announced that a sharp upturn in enlistments has enabled it to cut its March draft call by 10,500 to 22,400 men—the lowest figure since the 16,500 called last August.

Originally the Selective Service System was to induct 32,900 men in March but Army enlistments in January totaled more than 19,000—the highest monthly figure in more than a decade. Marine Corps enlistments also jumped to 7,000, an increase of 165 per cent over January of 1965.

With plans finalized for the test and colleges reconstructing recording systems to furnish draft boards with grades and class standings, some college officials have expressed serious misgivings over the tighter rules for student deferments.

A Brandeis University dean says the new policy determining student deferments is "totally absurd" and said seven professors may stop giving grades because of it.

DEAN KERMIT MORRISSE said for a student to lose his deferment because of a low class ranking was "unfair to schools with highly selective admissions policies where everyone is a potentially good student."

Students Fast in War Protest

Fifty-two Amherst students have begun a hunger strike in protest of American intervention in Vietnam.

The strike, which shall last from March 7 to March 14, has been organized in direct protest of the United States' use of chemicals to destroy the rice crop in Vietnam.

The students strongly feel that such tactics are barbarous because they are indiscriminate; they represent an attack on the entire population of the region where the crops are destroyed, combatants and non-combatants alike.

It is the students' strong feeling that by depriving themselves of food for the eight day period, they are making known their extreme disapproval of the destruction of the food of the Vietnamese people.

The students are participating in the hunger strike in the hope that the President will forbid the use of chemical weapons by our armed forces and will oppose their use by the South Vietnamese or any of our allies.

The hunger strike has been coordinated with a similar protest which is taking place at Wesleyan University and parallel demonstrations have been planned at Smith College and UMass.

The fast has been organized by two students, Roy Chaleff and George Sleeth, and remains independent of affiliations with any political group.

UMass ROTC Plays War

A special outdoor running problem from Shutesbury to Dickinson Hall was conducted Friday by 75 UMass and 60 Northeastern University cadets in the ROTC Special Forces.

The main objective of the problem was to move through the woods without being detected. The Cadets' woodsmanship, land navigation, and ability to travel undetected was tested.

During the 24 hour period, the only food provided was one live chicken for every two cadets which they had to prepare enroute. Amherst area residents were asked to report any Special Forces seen. Students traveled in small groups and were dressed in the Army field uniforms with distinctive black berets.

Only six sightings, out of the 130 people involved in the 20 mile running, were reported at different places.

Heymakers Sponsor Dancing Weekend

Wheeling and turning, square dancers at Saturday night's UMass Heymakers sponsored Square Dance follow the calls.

Participating in the weekend-long Folk Dancing and Square Dancing Festival, Saturday night's frolics were only a part of the two-day fest which included:

Folk Dancing from native countries such as the Netherlands, Israel, and Yugoslavia; folk and square dancing groups from UNH, Brooklyn City College, UConn, MIT, Harvard and Northeastern; and dance calling by Al Brundage of Stamford, Conn.

The weekend, organized by Heymaker's president Patricia Andrew, hosted well over 300 dancers, visitors, and just plain 'ol onlookers.

NEWS REVIEW

by PAM METAXAS, News Staff

THE NATION

EIGHTY-FIVE Americans were among those dead after a Boeing 707 crashed on Mt. Fuji in Tokyo Saturday.

According to experts the crash was caused by adverse wind conditions around the volcanic cone of the mountain which caused the jetliner to catch fire and then explode at an altitude of 3,000 ft.

Total killed were estimated at 124. This marks the second crash in Tokyo in the past 24 hours and the third in a month.

PRES. JOHNSON has given the State Department more responsibility in overseas operations. This is part of a reorganization by the President to receive U.S. foreign policy news through State channels.

The Department will have the important say in all future foreign interdepartmental activity except for military operations.

This marks a change from Pres. Kennedy's policy of direct involvement in foreign affairs.

MAYOR John V. Lindsay of New York City announced his plans for a drastic tax program this week to combat what the mayor calls "a financial crisis."

The program will include a business tax, an increase in water rates, an increase in stock transfer tax, and an increase in the real estate tax.

The tax program must first be authorized by the State Legislature and the New York City Council.

U.S. MARINES staged a battle Saturday against 2,000 North Vietnamese in the coastal province of Quangnai. They were joined by South Vietnamese paratroops who together left 739 of the enemy dead and 160 of their weapons lost.

This came at a time when U.S. bombings on North Vietnam reached new heights. Hundreds of tons of bombs were dropped during 61 raids by Air Force and Navy pilots.

Two of the bombing targets included missile sites near Hanoi and railroad bridges en route to Communist China.

CONGRESS voted an extra $4.8-billion for the Vietnam War this week. This is supposed to represent agreement with the President's Vietnam policy, according to Washington sources.

The White House commented on Congress action: "The President welcomes, and our fighting men and our allies will gratefully approve, the Congressional actions."

THE STATE

THE THREAT of a newspaper strike on Boston's five major newspapers still remains after 7-hour talks proved fruitless Saturday night.

Unless three Boston newspaper publishers meet union contract demands, a strike vote will be taken Sunday at 2 p.m. The members of the International Typographical Union (ITU) are asking for a pay increase from the publishers.

The papers affected by the strike are the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald-Traveler and the Boston Record American.

THE HOUSE killed seven sweepstakes bills this week. The bills were for setting up a legalized state lottery similar to the lottery in New Hampshire.

NORTHEAST AIRLINES sought permission from the Civil Aeronautics Board to fly a new South Pacific route.

The route would begin in Boston, go to the West Coast and then continue across the Pacific to Japan and Australia. The new route was also sought by nine other major airlines.

ATTY. C. HENRY GLOVSKY has been urged by Gov. Volpe to run on the Republican ticket for attorney general.

The move came after the governor was convinced that Lt. Gov. Elliott L. Richardson would not run for the new post.

THE CAMPUS

THE COLLEGIAN elected new editors Thursday night after announcing earlier in the week it would retain its present staff structure.

Tom Donovan was elected Editor-in-Chief, defeating Joel Hartstone 24-17. It was the only office contested.

Other heads elected were James Foudy, Managing Editor; Gordon Davidson, News Editor; and Mike Gould, Sports Editor.

The new editor-in-chief commented that, "in the future, the Collegian will become a fine, and outstanding newspaper."

"It will become a newspaper which will be so far above the cation call of the All-American rating, that the echo will be but humorous nostalgia of those past days when we were 'just good.'"

THE COLLEGIAN published an extra supplement this week concerning women's regulations and curfews in keeping with the present campus controversy. The supplement dealt with sign-out sheets, curfews, overnights and late-libe permission.

THE STUDENT Senate Academic Affairs Committee plans to investigate grading systems in the Chemistry, Psychology and Statistics Departments if the bill is approved by the Senate Wed. night.

Another motion will be proposed by which men counsellors will not be allowed to serve on any branch of the judiciary system.

THE CAMPUS Chest Drive began with plans for another successful fund-raising drive.

The funds collected on campus are distributed mainly among campus scholarships and World University Service Projects along with various other charity organizations.

The drive is slated to run from Feb. 28-March 14.

PROF. ROLAND STEELE of the UM Music Dept. has been chosen as one of the ten 'Outstanding Young Men of America' for 1966.

A violinist in the Department of Music, Steele is also founder of the University of Massachusetts Symphony.

THE UNIVERSITY Theatre presented The Merchant of Venice on Mar. 3, 4 and 5 with a matinee on Mar. 5 at 2:15 p.m. The play was directed by Guest Prof.-director Walther R. Volbach.

IN HIS FIFTH annual report on University operations, Pres. John W. Lederle announced that the goal of the University "must be nothing less than the best possible living and learning environment."

He stressed that the students were the most important element of the University and "that the human values we foster in them are the University's very blood and bone."

STARTING Sunday approximately 38 students from Amherst Col. and 25 from UMass begin a 4-college 6-day Hunger Strike.

The UM coordinator of the strike, Frederic Dicker, said the purpose is the publicize the fact that the U.S. government allows the destruction of food in Vietnam through the use of sprays and chemicals.

THREE CAMPUS Ale Men have been chosen. They are E. L. Rushbrook, Steve Babcock and Alan Burke.

Faculty Members Receive Grants To Continue Summer Research

Eighteen members of the University of Massachusetts faculty, including two from UMass-Boston, will receive $1000 grants to continue research this summer in the humanities and the social sciences, it was announced today by Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the Graduate School.

For the third year, University

Vienna Octet To Perform

The Vienna Octet, chamber ensemble, will perform at the University of Massachusetts Thursday, March 10, at 8:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The group is making its fifth North American tour. It was received with critical acclaim and sell-out audiences on each of its previous tours.

The Octet's repertoire runs from Mozart to Hindemith and includes some contemporary pieces especially written for the ensemble.

Founded in 1947, the Vienna Octet has performed throughout Europe and is a regular guest at festivals from Salzburg to Edinburgh. Foreign tours have taken it to South Africa, Japan, Latin America, and most recently to Australia.

Each performer in the highly-regarded group is also a member of the Vienna Philharmonic, the orchestra of the Vienna Opera.

Members of the Vienna Octet are: Anton Fietz and Wilhelm Huebner, violins; Guenther Breitenbach, viola; Ferenc Milhaly, cello; Otto Ruehm, double bass; Alfred Boskovsky, clarinet; Ernst Pamperl, bassoon; Josef Veleba, French horn.

Following a recent Canadian performance, the Montreal Star praised the Octet's "... beautifully balanced tone, their razor-sharp coordination and the individual virtuosity," terming their appearance "music making of the highest order."

Tickets for the performance, sponsored by the UMass Concert Association, will be on sale at the door.

Viet War

Students Should Demand Answers

THE WAR in Viet Nam has generated a good deal of debate on college campuses recently. Why do these people, and others, protest and argue?

Well, says the University of Oregon Daily Emerald, the present generation of college youth was born in the bowels of the greatest world war in history.

Many of them have no living fathers because of that war, and many others have fathers bearing the lifelong scars of battle.

Five years after the war, when most of today's students were between the ages of 3 and 10, another major conflict was at hand, this time in Korea. The youngsters saw their older brothers drafted for battle—many of them just out of college. Some never came home.

TODAY, 12 years after the end of the Korean war and fewer years after Quemoy and Matsui, Berlin, Lebanon, and Cuba, America again faces a major war this time with implications the world has only recently begun to imagine.

Today's college student had little or no contact with developments which led to the present situation in Viet Nam. Precious few voices were raised in question when President Eisenhower first committed American troops in Southeast Asia as early as 1956.

The adults who today criticize the student for inspecting his government's policies paid pitiful little attention to the warnings sounded a decade ago about America fighting a land war in Asia.

Faculty Growth Grants will be research in disciplines for which research funds from other sources are not ordinarily available.

Awards are generally made to junior faculty members, primarily instructors and assistant professors, not doing research leading to a degree.

The grants are designed to enhance the faculty member's value to the University as a teacher, as well as to encourage knowledge in previously unexplored areas of research.

The awards recommended this year by the Graduate Research Council and approved by University President John W. Lederle will finance original research in history, English, languages, art, economics sociology and government.

Recipients of the grants are:

Robert M. Berdahl assistant professor of history at UMass-Boston; Normand Berlin, assistant professor of English; Jurgen awarded to help defray costs of Born, assistant professor of German; Joseph Della Grotte, assistant professor of history; Ida B. DePuy, assistant professor of Romance languages; Richard P. Duval, assistant professor of Romance languages.

Also, Robert A. Hart, assistant professor of history; James P. Hendricks, instructor in art; Vaclav Holesovsky, assistant professor of economics; William Johnston, assistant professor of history; Christopher N. Kressy, instructor in art; Richard C. McCleary, assistant professor of English at UMass-Boston.

Others are Gerald W. McFarland, assistant professor of history; Henri Niedzielski, assistant professor of Romance languages; John F. O'Rourke, assistant professor of German; Howard J. Wiarda, assistant professor of government; and Richard J. Williams, assistant professor of English.

Marijuana

'It's the 'In' Thing To Do'

Probably no college campus in the United States today is free of the drug problem, Dr. R. E. Edwards, associate professor of health education at Glassboro (N.C.) State College, told those attending a seminar on drugs last week.

Sponsored by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, the Philadelphia seminar was officially titled "Marijuana and Drug Abuse on the Campus."

Dr. Edwards said many schools try to ignore the situation because "newspaper headlines, television, and radio horrify college administrators" so much that they attempt to cover up any problems to avoid "tarnishing the image of their institution."

Dr. Edwards was the keynote speaker at the four-speaker seminar. He said colleges must first admit the drug problem exists before they can make any progress in solving it. The best solution, Edwards thinks, is drug education on the campuses.

He noted that some colleges have resorted to questionnaires to explore the extent of drug usage on the campus. Dr. Edwards said that officials at the University of California at Berkeley have even planted illegal tape recorders in the walls of dormitories to collect information.

He termed marijuana the "most popular form of narcotics" on the campus today. "Even 'nice' kids use it," he said, "since it's the 'in' thing to do."

"The student pusher most often is respected and protected by his fellow student," Edwards said, "and he generally is a good student and a sharp dresser."

Dr. Edwards said student familiarity with drugs has reached the point where some Berkeley students sell scuba diving air tanks filled with marijuana smoke and free maps are available on the campus telling where marijuana can be obtained.

SO TODAY'S student watches draft calls rise and wonders who will be next.

Collegian Seeks Talent

The Collegian continues its search for talent on the campus. Qualified students wishing to gain valuable experience in the techniques of journalism may introduce themselves to the staff's old-timers on any publication night—Tuesday, Thursday or Sunday.

At present there is a severe shortage of staffers, particularly in News and Photography.

Past and present staffers comment very favorably on what the Collegian has done for them in improving writing style and providing valuable newspaper experience while offering an opportunity to work in an informal atmosphere with stimulating people.

Future meetings for general staffers and new members will be announced in these pages.

How Much Self Rule For Students?

Tonight in the Student Union there will be a meeting of three subcommittees of the University Reform Committee. The three groups, comprised of students, faculty and administrators, will be divided according to the particular aspect of academics which they will discuss.

One of the groups will discuss the advantages and drawbacks of independent study by undergraduate students. At present, very little independent study is allowed and then only for students of high academic achievement.

Another group will discuss and evaluate the present faculty and the methods of teaching employed at the University.

The third group will look into the possibility of forming student committees who will have a share in determining the curricular policy of the University.

In general, the question that will be posed to these committees is "To what degree will the student be allowed to determine University policy?"

UMass Junior Hospitalized In Auto Crash

A UMass coed was involved in a car accident Saturday night and is now on the danger list at Springfield Union Hospital.

The injured girl is Lynn Yukina, a UMass junior, who was returning with her date and an undetermined number of passengers from a Chi Omega pledge formal when the accident occurred in the vicinity of Vincent's restaurant in West Springfield.

The driver and the other passengers were all treated and released from the hospital.

Dames to Give Fashion Show

The University of Massachusetts Dames Club, an organization for student wives, will be holding a Fashion Show on March 14th at the University's Student Union Ballroom.

This show will be sponsored by ZAYRE'S of Hadley and will feature all the latest fashions, from bathing suits and maternity clothes to sportswear and afternoon dresses.

A special attraction will be the showing of this season's newest ballroom dresses.

Tickets will be on sale at the door of the ballroom, the night of the show.

VIET WAR...

He watches Sen. Wayne Morse's predictions of massive war in Asia slowly become reality, and he rightfully questions Defense Secretary Robert McNamara's three separate and widely-spaced forecasts that American boys would be home by the end of 1965.

Most of all, he wonders about the real reasons for this war 8,000 miles from home, reasons which have yet to be fully explained.

The fact is that many college students should concern themselves with this war—more even than they are now concerned. It may be the most important problem they will ever face. Those who are vigorously debating the issue are asking questions all Americans should be asking, regardless of political belief.

These students are worried. They're not kidding themselves into unthinking acceptance of glib official answers given by diplomats.

Today's student would like a chance to finish school, get a job, and perhaps marry and raise a family, uninterrupted by nuclear inferno.

If his body is to be committed to war of another generation's making, then today's student wants some answers, and his right to demand them is implicit.

UM Publishes on School Building

The first comprehensive instruction book on school building in Massachusetts has been published by the Cooperative School Service Center of the University of Massachusetts.

"Planning a School: A Sequential Program," is by UMass Prof. Clifford V. Jones, executive secretary of the center, and Ronald J. Fitzgerald, Amherst superintendent of schools.

It includes 66 pages of specific ics on educational and financial state approval of programs and other related subjects designed for the guidance of school committees, school building committees, school administrators, architects and local officials.

The book stresses the importance of a sequential program—a series of well-organized steps—for those faced with school building problems.

It opens with chapters on general eral planning, the specific aspects of school building in Massachusetts, and on the importance of an organized pattern of action.

There are chapters on the State School Building Assistance Commission, state aid, the stabilization fund, the State Department of Public Safety, financing and architects services.

A final chapter lists addresses of informational agencies and has a compilation of average building costs in Massachusetts, which have risen from $16.29 per square foot in 1962 to $19.02 in 1964.

The Cooperative School Service training and research organization at the UMass School of Education is composed of 53 dues-paying school systems in Western and Central Massachusetts and in nearby areas of Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Copies of the booklet may be ordered by writing the center, School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

UMass Prof Appointed To Editorial Board

Dr. William E. McEwen, Commonwealth Head of the department of chemistry at the University of Massachusetts, is one of five outstanding chemists appointed to the editorial advisory board of the "Journal of Organic Chemistry."

Dr. McEwen will serve a five year term on the advisory board of the journal, a monthly publication of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. McEwen is author of numerous articles in the field of organic chemistry, and is co-author of three volumes used as standard texts in many colleges and universities.

A former lecturer at Columbia University where he received his doctorate in 1947, Dr. McEwen has also taught at the University of Illinois and the University of Kansas.

Madison Park Possible Site For UMass Boston

An urban renewal area near Madison Park in Roxbury is under consideration as the site of the permanent campus of the new University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Officials of the University confirmed Tuesday that the area was one of several being evaluated, but emphasized that no firm decisions had been reached by the Board of Trustees.

Donald Cadigan, director of planning at UMass, said Tuesday there had been informal discussions among the trustees about a Boston site for the branch now housed in the old Boston Consolidated Gas Co. building on Stuart St.

"But," he said, "we have not had a formal meeting on the subject of a permanent site. I am collecting information on real estate available."

Cadigan said a major factor in any decision would be the availability of land nearby for expansion of the Boston campus in years to come.

Dr. John W. Ryan, chancellor of UMass at Boston, said one site under consideration among others, is "urban renewal land in the area in which Madison Park is situated."

Objectors to Meet

The Tremont Street Methodist Church at 740 Tremont Street in Boston will be the site of the Conference on Conscientious Objection to War, scheduled for Saturday, March 12.

Registration for the Conference will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday morning, followed by the keynote address, to be given by Daniel Seeger.

Seeger, whose Supreme Court case, U.S. vs Seeger, in October, 1964 was decided in his favor, is a member of the American Friends Service Committee.

Four panel discussions will be held in the afternoon:

- Byron Rushing of St. John's Workshop—"Youth and the Vietnam War."
- Robert Lyon of American

Friends Service Committee—"American Wars and Conscientious Objection."

- Tom Cornell of the Catholic Peace Fellowship—"Religious Objection and Christian Morality."
- David Miller of the Catholic Worker—"Non-cooperation With the Draft."

The panel discussions will be followed at 3 p.m. by workshops on the problems of conscientious objection and alternative service.

The conference, which is sponsored by Students for a Democratic Society, Young Christian Students and American Friends Service Committee, will be climaxed by a movie, "Make Love Not War" at 7:00 p.m. at the Caravan Theatre.

Draft Deferment Tests...

Prof. John R. Seely, chairman of the sociology department, in a statement signed by six other sociologists, denounced the method as "an invasion or misuse of our role."

They said their opinion had nothing to do with the draft or the war but threatened to quit giving grades or to give all A's rather than help determine which students would be deferred.

Officials at Harvard and the University of Michigan have assured students they will not send grades to a student's draft board if he asks that they not be sent. They caution, however, that this might mean immediate reclassification as an "obstruction" to the draft system.

DR. BUELL G. GALLAGHER,

president of City College of New York, said, "A 'C' student at institution 'X' may be a better bet for college and university work than an 'A' student from institution 'Z'."

The overriding interest of the nation is better served by encouraging the best talent to continue in higher education as long as possible.

Charles E. Liesenfelt of Minneapolis, an educator and a board member, said the system would be "about as fair as you can possibly get." Liesenfelt, assistant to the recorder at the University of Minnesota, is chairman of his county draft board.

George Watson, dean of students at Roosevelt University in Chicago, protested that the rules would make universities "a part of the Selective Service System."

LT. GEN. LEWIS B. HERSHEY, head of Selective Service, continued offering assurances to students. Hershey said if monthly calls continue between 10,000 and 30,000, probably only an "infinitesimal" number of full-time college students would be drafted to meet the needs of the war.

"It would probably be only a thousand or two a month," he said, "and that's pretty small in comparison with a pool of 1.8 million students."

He added unless draft calls rise sharply, many students will not be drafted even if they fail the qualification tests and don't maintain required class standings. He warned, however, that "it's not a time of complacency among students."

He said any change in the Vietnam situation could send draft calls skyrocketing and cause a major depletion of college campuses.

AT THE SAME TIME, the New York Times revealed in its Saturday edition that U.S. military officials in Saigon were planning for a war lasting from three to seven years. The Times reported that military planners in Vietnam feel U.S. forces can win a military victory but it will take at least three years.

The only question in their minds, the report said, was whether Americans would be willing to pay the costs of an extended war in which American deaths are predicted to be about 500 a month.

UNIVERSITY REFORM

by DON ALIFERIS

"We are interested in you as an individual," "... an opportunity to operate as an individual in a large community."

These are the words of the University. What do they mean? Are they true?

"As an individual"—stock words of public relations men; they are a glib response to the cry of impersonalism. Yet they can be considered in a deeper vein.

When the University is "interested in you as an individual," it is trying to say, "don't feel uncared for, don't feel isolated, don't feel mechanized, for We are one family. We are one gang of friends, We are the Southwest Complex." The significance of the University's attempts begins to become clear when the University is realistically identified.

The University—the "We" — is the administration, the faculty, the dining common personnel, the health services—any of the habitats of those who live for the greater glory of Bureaucratic Ideals. The University which makes decisions on almost all matters is not the University of the Students. The latter has no power, and worse, has no rights unless the students are of an exceptional calibre i.e. the "Berkeley type," they demand freedom. Furthermore, the University of students is never of real concern to the University because students must become numerical expressions if the bureaucratic machine is to run "efficiently." Moreover, the bureaucracy, by its excretive nature, attracts a type of personnel which is oppressive in its lack of intelligence, disgusting in its petty-egoistic motivations, mentally ill in its legalistic fetishes, and dangerous in its Venomous power-drive morality. The persons who operate the machine are like it; they cannot tolerate human beings.

The University violates the possibility of its integrity by propagandizing to the student that he "as an individual" is of concern to "It." There is a simple reality known by most who have been institutionalized here and remained a whole being in spite of it; the individual is of no concern to "It" unless he asks for something and then he is an "exceptional case." He is "uncooperative," "unreasonable," incapable of knowing what is best for himself, a child who must learn the mendicant and ignominious adult role of the organization life.

"To operate as an individual in a large community." These are truly pyrrhic words bound to put any emasculated speaker in the Middleman Hall of Fame. They are significant for their hypocrisy. The University has no regard for individuality. On the contrary, the University wants students who are vacuous — who have no insides. The University does not want students with spirit—who will feel the urge to rebel, to challenge, to seek ideals, to crave honesty. The University's ideal student is like the bureaucracy, he has no tolerance for his own freedom or for that of others. The University wants a tractable, clay cipher to mold in its own image.

Like other animals, the Bureaucracy has self-preserving instincts. And so the University will continue its molding process. There will continue to be a profusion of useless, noxious rules. Parochial academic requirements will continue to be a testament of a narrowminded faculty leadership; they will remain a character reflection of those faculty members who see beyond the provincialism of their bosses but are too concerned about their personal advancement to demand a change. The University will stay manned by rigid administrators too cowardly to be flexible or innovative, and academic chieftains too intellectually inept to see the absurdity in their papacy.

Education Second

by ANDY COSTELLO, Editorial Staff

Today the University of Massachusetts is on the verge of a great leap—forward or backward. I'm not quite sure which way. President Lederle proudly boasts that the student populations will have exploded to an inconceivable 20,000 within five years. The computer, lecture halls, and administrative power will also have to double if the University is to absorb the student thousands.

What will UMass 1971 offer the student? Nothing. If you feel that you are a nothing now wait a few years... you'll be a nothing. Students will be manipulated by computers solely controlled by the administration. Education will become secondary to organization. The frightening thought of administrative totalitarianism should not be a novel one to you as it already exists. The future will only personify the situation unless you promote a change today.

Several students and faculty are advocating change through a reform committee. The committee started battle with a panel discussion Saturday afternoon, which was attended by about 100 interested faculty and students. Where were the other 11,000? Surely they could not be satisfied with the existing conditions!

The meeting was successful in uncovering the underlying cause of student unrest and discontent: students want a say in their own education. The student rather than the administration must be able to determine his own future. This general thesis is subordinated by the problems of required subjects, unlimited cuts, selection of professors, etc. You and I are responsible for this deplorable situation of administrative domination. As Dr. Brentlinger emphasized, "the administration has its power by default." Students have relinquished control through apathy; only student interest can restore it.

It is not idealistic to believe that students could be placed on administrative boards; that requirements could become outdated and cuts unlimited. It is not idealistic to believe that students could determine their own education. If these situations are to evolve, discussion must be supplemented by the action of not 50 or 100 but 11,000!

Equal Time

by GREG STRATTNER

President Lederle has once again delivered his state of the University message, and once again he has concerned himself with only one aspect of the growth, and consequent "state", of the University. He remains preoccupied with the physical expansion of UMass, and oblivious to the growing need for expansion in the form of REFORM in the social and academic spheres, or at least he gives this impression. He seems to consider the need for expansion of facilities exclusive of the need to "expand" socially and academically at the same time.

The understandable pride which Mr. Lederle and other members of the administration take in the progress that has been made in appropriating money and beginning actual construction of badly needed facilities, should not obscure the fact that the University remains stagnant in the equally important realms of campus social and academic life. Empty buildings don't make a University. Ignoring the desire and need for reform in these all-important spheres does nothing but

The Undying Issue

To the Editor:

It appears that one of the greatest political performances ever staged by a government has been met with worldwide suspicion and doubts. I am, of course, referring to that magnificent attempt to halt the war in Vietnam, our president's Peace Offensive. A goodly number of nations have fooled themselves into believing that President Johnson's desire for peace was merely a deception—a means to justify bombing North Vietnam—even an excuse to intensify the entire war effort. They claim we refuse to deal with the National Liberation Front, who we are in reality fighting. They also maintain that Mr. Johnson's terms are, in effect, ultimatums for a surrender of the National Liberation Front, and that our government knows very well the Front could never accept them.

How absurd all these worldwide accusations and suspicions seem, when, in fact, we Americans, situated right where the whole Peace Offensive was hatched, are convinced of the sincerity of our president and his policy makers. Indeed, President Johnson has made astonishing efforts in convincing the American public of his desire for seeing peace occupy Vietnam. Now, with such a recalcitrant Hanoi, there is obviously only one remaining alternative—resumption of the bombing. And believe me, our president will not shirk his obligations to the free world. And woe to China (or anyone else for that matter) if she pokes her aggressive, red toes into Vietnam.

In conjunction with all the international misgivings and criticism, there has been an increasing amount of "home-front" attacks from some of our own congressmen. These senators and representatives have been speaking out against the present line of U.S. policy in Vietnam (they doubt that our policy is leading towards peace!). One congressman dared suggest that several presidential powers be "suspended", especially those concerning certain military decisions. For example, can we imagine the president not being able to bomb Vietnam whenever he so desires?? Another senator has suggested we offer the National Liberation Front a role in the government of their country!! There are even many Americans who consider social change in South Vietnam a must for peace; they wish an about-face from the present privileged-class society! Can this be a way to stability, such as Diem achieved? We must all think twice when attempting to justify our position on these questions.

There is still another group within American society critical of certain U.S. policies. They label President Johnson and Co. misdirected Philistines. They assume our government has strayed off the path of rationality; they scream chauvinism and protest against America's obsession to see all peoples safely away from the Red Death—an obsession which blinds her so that she blunders about terribly and overcarries her inherent burden. They actually consider American foreign policy to be erring in its basic attempts to bring freedom to every about-to-be-enslaved people, and that it must be placed back on the "correct" path from which it somehow strayed.

Who are these new critics—these suddenly-emerging, seemingly apolitical individuals who blast out, sporadically, against injustices? They are usually referred to, in contrast to the Old, as the New Left.

How can this new group — this New Left—think for a second that American foreign policy is blundering one iota off its intended course (or for that matter separate policy abroad from, e.g., civil rights at home)? Can they possibly believe that President Johnson, Secretaries McNamara and Rusk, et al., are incapable of comprehending exactly what they are doing and the reasons for it? Would President Johnson intrude into Dominican affairs for such an obviously manufactured excuse if he did not have strong reason to believe that if he failed to do so, the consequences of such might very well be far greater for the American system, in the long run, than would censure and disapproval?

If that's to be their firm conviction, then there is surely no future in store for the New Left. For if they cannot realize that our elected leaders are not only capable policy makers, but shrewd and very intelligent men, knowing precisely where they stand and what they must do in order to preserve that system which they represent, then even a bit of lasting unity is not possible. And without unity, there will be no end to the parochial thinking and to the secretarianism so prevalent among some of them today. And without unity and discipline, what hope for even a start towards an alternative and better society?

To the Editor:

The Collegian special supplement on Women's Regulations seems to have fulfilled several functions: It united a few small groups and individuals working on the same issue, it put ideas on the same topic together instead of spreading them around as is usually the case, it raised issues many are afraid to raise, and above all, it laid out the suggestions of many students in a manner that did not only protest but, more important, told how people generally feel. This special issue of a Collegian campaign was, as it was hoped to be, a sort of general indication of campus sentiment.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

An Open Letter From

Helene Curtis, Dean of Women

Please let me suggest that Journalists who want their paper to be known as a "free and responsible press" check on facts before publication.

The March 1 issue showed a lack of knowledge of the facts—what the women students' regulations are and the reasons for them, and a lack of knowledge of the established procedure through student government of appealing for redress of a grievance and for bringing about change in regulations.

The women's residence regulations which exist have been developed out of experience by students and administration together and are annually reviewed each spring, revised, or revoked for the next year by the Committee on Women's Affairs and approved by the Dean of Women for the University. Compromise and consensus have been the pattern of these meetings which have been held in an atmosphere of mutual respect. If a recommendation should not be approved by the Dean of Women the student committee can appeal to the University President via the Dean of Students.

Existing regulations, printed in the handbook and distributed to all undergraduate resident women, are designed to promote consideration for the rights of others, safety, and an orderly process necessary when large numbers share living facilities under one roof. They are designed to promote residence hall life which supports and supplements the academic efforts of the university.

A precious characteristic of American government—and of American student government—is that there are established procedures for righting wrongs if an injustice has been done and there are established procedures for bringing about change. There is no need to resort to the techniques of protest unless the procedures of government have been duly tried and found wanting.

To date all recommendations of the Women's Affairs Committee have been approved except the matter of housing for Senior women which is being considered as housing plans for next year are being developed.

The Women's Affairs Committee and I have just completed a survey of the "first preferences" of 523 Junior women who made the following responses:

If given the opportunity,

53 would like to live in apartments off campus

169 would like to live in a self-governing "Senior Dorm" (Brooks House is being considered, as previously announced)

126 prefer to live in regular University residence halls—

33 in single rooms

93 sharing doubles

82 would like to serve as House Counselors

93 wish to live in their sorority houses

Throughout the university there is a need—especially in this period of rapid growth—for free discussion of the goals of the university and the best methods of achieving them. I sincerely hope that in an atmosphere of mutual respect students, administrators and faculty can share constructive suggestions.

Comment from Women's Affairs

To the Editor:

As a member of three years standing and present co-Chairman of the Student Senate Committee on Women's Affairs, I feel compelled to speak out against the poor taste and thoughtlessness shown by our Collegian editors in last Tuesday's special edition.

First I will attempt to set the record straight by stating that the rules are not made by the Dean of Women, by the President, or by the trustees, but are formulated by the Women's Affairs Committee using suggestions for revisions submitted by members of residence halls, house counselors, and Heads of Residence. The handbook does indeed state that, . . . the final responsibility for the welfare of the college community must always rest with the administration. None of us, I feel, has the time, the desire, nor the administrative "know how" to assume this responsibility. The rules are, therefore, subject to the approval of the Dean of Women. If the committee can justify a revision as being in the best interests of the campus community, approval has been, and, I feel, will continue to be forthcoming. As examples I call your attention to the extension of last year's curfew restrictions, the resolution of the "blue card controversy", and the granting of permission to senior women and those over 21 to live off campus. I ask anyone with concrete criticisms of the regulations or suggestions for revisions which would be operable in a campus population of 10,000 to refer them to me or to members of the Committee on Woman's Affairs at the Senate Office. It is only with your help that we can formulate an effective set of Women's regulations.

create empty students in an empty academic and social atmosphere.

The "social" reform which at this time is most pressing, is the extension of women's curfew and the abolishment (or complete revamping) of current women's restrictions. The "academic" reform at the top of the list is the replacement of the 4.0 grading system by a system which is more accurate and consequently fairer to the individual student. If President Lederle's real goal is "nothing less than the best possible," then he had better start giving equal time to issues just as important as building dormitories, if not much more basic.

Your cooperation will be appreciated.

FRESHMAN CO-ED "SPARC-ED"

To the Editor:

I read your special edition of the Collegian with interest and admiration. You did a marvelous job of presenting the case.

My three pet peeves are the following: 1) late libe rules. 2) lack of parietais. 3) no overnight guest during the week.

1) There has obviously been enough said about the ridiculous late libe rules. It is enough to say that I agree.

2) As far as the lack of parietais is concerned, I can't see any reason for it. If it were in our own homes I'd be allowed to have boys in our rooms. Obviously there would have to be strictly enforced times for these parietais but at least once a week. There would be many advantages to having parietais. Among other things the rooms would be kept cleaner. We could see each others rooms and how they are decorated. It's a lot easier to bring a boy to your record player than to bring the phonograph and all your records player than to bring the phonograph and all your records down to him. (In Southwest D we don't have a phonograph in the lounge.)

3) I think having guests during the week should be left to the discretion of the housemother. Many of us, especially freshmen, have friends who are seniors in high school who would like to come out and look over the campus and attend a few lectures just to get the "feel" of the school. This is now impossible. There are other reasons why it should be better to have a mid-week guest.

Students may come to watch or play, but they come in numbers to the Student Union's poolroom. Even girls are beginning to enjoy the game; at least those brave enough to venture into this den of males.

Woman's Viewpoint

Coed Gives Cues On Poolroom

by SUE KOSTO,

Feature Staff

Some UMass students don't play pool often; seemingly they average only every weekend and each weekday.

The Student Union's campus cue room evades description. It's a dingy room—sort of a greasy greyish green color—packed with "hustlers."

Although there are only eight tables, an average of three dozen boys and a few girls can be found playing at almost any hour.

Girls are beginning to play the game more and more; it's no longer considered improper.

Often, no tables are available. On weekdays the normal wait for one is a half hour; on weekends it's at least an hour.

It's deadly to play during the rush hours; evenings from five to eight and afternoons from eleven to two, it's impossible to get a table. The poolroom is also mobbed around exam time.

The first table is for billiards. There's a difference, girls, between billiards and pool; pool is pocket billiards.

Much information is racked up by amateurs who are surprised at the many different types of pool. There is call or no call, scratch or no scratch, points, nine ball rotation, fifteen ball rotation, Kelly Chicago, pocket-a-piece, and straight pool—that's really behind the eight-ball.

There isn't a typical pool player, but the crowd within any semester remains about the same. From one semester to the next, however, the clientele differs considerably.

Have you ever wondered why people play pool? They have a variety of reasons. It's anxiety-reducing; it takes your mind off eating or studying; it's habit-forming; it's enjoyable.

Luv Lace Lads Hit Campus

Please tell me, just what is a Luv Lace Lad? Is it some type of new continental playboy, or a part of a folk singing group?

Upon a little investigation trip to the Rathskeller in Kenmore Square, I found that Boston is rocking to the sound of a new group, and this sound is The Luv Lace Lads.

Recently, this group has found its way to the UMass campus. On a promotional tour, they have played at a few local fraternities to build up the name of the group.

STRANGE isn't the word for this group, and it's questionable whether there is a word.

More important is their sound. In a word—fantastic!

The Lads combine their voices, guitars, and harps to come across with one of the best "polished sounds" heard from a non-recording group on campus.

They even plan to change their non-recording status by cutting a record in New York soon. Only hearing is believing...

Lecture on Buddhism

Dr. O. H. de A. Wijesekera, professor of Sanskrit and Indian Philosophy at the University of Ceylon and Visiting Lecturer at Smith College, will speak on "Buddhist Meditation" in the Browning Room of Neilson Library on Tuesday, March 8 at 4:30 p.m.

A native of Ceylon, Dr. Wijesekera holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of London, as well as the Diploma in Indian Philosophy. He has held the Waidyasekera Pali Prize, and a Ceylon Government Research Scholarship.

At the University of Ceylon, Dr. Wijesekera is head of the department of Sanskrit, Dean of the Faculty of Oriental Studies, and Dean of the Faculty of Arts.

Science Fiction Club Represented at Hub

The UMass Science - Fiction Club will be represented at the second annual Boston regional science-fiction convention "Boskone '66," by its president, Joseph Ross '67.

The convention will have as its guest of honor Frederik Pohl, a noted science-fiction author and editor of Galaxy, Worlds of Tomorrow, and IF science-fiction magazines.

Other speakers at Boskone will include various research scientists from the Boston area, who will speak on such things as dolphins, high-speed transportation, and artificial intelligence.

Ben Bova, a research scientist who occasionally writes science-fiction, will also speak at the convention.

Other events planned will include a party on Saturday night, a session of Flash Gordon films, and a meeting for aspiring writers.

HIGHLIGHT of the convention will be the presentation of the first annual Doc Smith Award for Imaginative Fiction. The award will be given for outstanding contributions to the field of imaginative fiction.

The Doc Smith Award is named in memory of Edward E. Smith, Ph.D. "Doc" Smith, who began writing science-fiction in the 1920's, died suddenly of a heart attack last August at the age of 75.

Smith wrote the first stories of travel outside the solar system. In his novels of galactic intrigue he described fantastic weapons, criminal scientists, and other features which became overdone clichés when they were copied to excess by other writers.

Another function of this year's Boskone will be to map strategy for getting the annual World Science Fiction Convention to choose Boston as the site for the 1967 convention.

Boskone will be held the weekend of Mar. 11, 12, and 13 at the Statler-Hilton under the sponsorship of the Boston Science Fiction Society (BoSFS).

Closely related to BoSFS is the MIT Science Fiction Society (MITSFS), with which the University's Science - Fiction Club has a working relationship.

MITSFS has been in existence for about 15 years, and has a 9,000 volume library in MIT's new Student Union.

Upon his return from Boskone, Pres. Ross will report on the convention to the Science - Fiction Club on Mon. Mar. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in Worcester "A".

Membership in Boskone is $2, covering admission to all convention events.

Persons interested in attending should contact Joe Ross in 206 Brett or leave their name, address, and phone number in RSO Box 352.

Attention!

"Breathless" to be Shown By French Corridors

The UMass French Corridors will present "Breathless", a French film with English subtitles on Monday night, at 8:00 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium. Tickets will be sold at the door.

For the film sophisticate, here is the most novel of the "New wave" movies, and surely the most widely discussed on many levels, and the most controversial, verdicts range from "A masterpiece" to "Bilge."

"I was out to attract attention," said young director Jean-Luc Godard. Significantly, he has attracted the most attention from the French critics, who gave him their Prix Jean Vigo, and from other directors.

Leopoldo Torre Nilsson, the distinguished Argentinian director, wrote from the Berlin Festival, "A bout de souffle introduced in Jean-Luc Godard a talent as positive and vigorous in its own way as that of Truogaut or Resnais."

The first surprises in "Breathless" are experiments in improvisation (its cutting technique, its almost cubistic footages, its jumps from sequence to sequence) and its content.

The story appears to be a Humphrey Bogart thriller about a young French gangster (played by Jean-Paul Belmondo, currently the hottest box-office sensation in France) who takes what he wants when he wants it.

He kills a cop and holes up in the apartment of his American girlfriend (Jean Seberg) who betrays him in a momentary fit of pique.

"Breathless" appears to be this: but it plays both sides of the street. The dedication ("To Monogram Pictures") is not the only side of parody; the inside jokes suggest that this is Nouvelle Vague Hip.

At the same time, the film is the most disquieting if taken "straight"; it has existentialist overtones. (Time: "The hero and his story can be seen as an extemporization on the existentialist tenet that life is just one damn thing after another, and death is the thing after that.")

Definitely, to be seen and to be talked about.

Seminars on THE FREE SOCIETY

1. EDUCATION FOR WHAT?: A discussion dealing with the nature of the University in the 20th century, its purposes, its perversions, and its possibilities. Middlesex (Student Union)
2. SEX and CONTEMPORARY VALUES: A discussion of sexual practice and the styles of life emerging from the "sexual revolution" with particular emphasis upon the college student and the university environment. Nantucket (Student Union)
3. THE PSYCHOLOGICAL IDIOM and THE MAN OF FAITH: A discussion which will attempt to test the integrity of religious experience in the light of psychological criteria, and to ask whether the psychological idiom can do justice to religious experience in all its depth and range. Norfolk (Student Union)

THE PURPOSE OF THESE SEMINARS is to provide the participants with the context for free and lively discussion of issues vital to life in our time; to introduce material which might produce the guidelines for unique responses to societal trends; and to open up the possibility of relating university "course work" to the whole civilizing enterprise.

THE THREE SEMINARS WILL MEET on Mondays at 3:30 for seven weeks beginning March 7. Coffee will be served before the seminars in order that participants may converse informally with those in the other seminars.

THOSE INTERESTED IN THE SEMINARS should sign up in 12 Old Chapel or be in attendance at the seminar of their choice.

Swingshift Frosh

by SUE STAFRAN,
 Feature Staff

With the sounding of the class bells on February 1, two hundred new faces descended on the UMass campus. These were the faces of the swingshift freshmen, class of '69. They had been absent from the campus during the fall semester after having completed a long summer of intensive study.

Returning to the UMass classroom, two swing-shift girls found apparent differences in class procedures and atmosphere.

The first difference was the shorter class period. Previously, there had been one hour and twenty minute periods—now the students have to face only fifty minutes of class.

During the summer, the average schedule included two courses. Now, there are five courses to handle.

Both girls were concerned about mastering five exams at a time. They found the necessity for budgeting their time. During the summer, courses were over faster, with only two exams to tackle. Now they find a welcome change in the variety of courses and more study hours.

One girl was convinced that academic life would be easier. The other girl was more apprehensive. She was inclined to take a "wait and see" attitude.

Both girls felt more tension, less relaxation and a faster pace developing. They had not had enough time to judge accurately whether they would enjoy their courses and do well.

On the question of differences in social life between now and the summer, a few very interesting opinions came to light. It is usually contended that summer students develop friendlier, more closely knit relationships to fellow students.

However, one of the girls did not agree with this view at all. She believed that friendliness was "just a front!" She thought the need for friends developed from a "struggle for survival." The smaller the campus, the more people depended on each other. Thus, she did not see many true friendships arising.

Both girls did see the development of "cliques." However, they made it very apparent that they, themselves, wanted to be individuals and not stereotyped "a swingshift."

They view dorm life, now, as an array of many different age groups of girls with greatly diversified interests. In such an atmosphere, they, too, want to develop their own identity.

Greenfield Bus

The State Department of Public Utilities on March 4 granted to Peter Pan Bus Lines, Inc., of Springfield, Mass., a certificate of public convenience and necessity to operate buses over a new route between the towns of Amherst and Greenfield, serving also the intermediate towns of Sunderland and Deerfield.

At present the company operates bus service between Boston and Springfield, Northampton and Amherst, providing direct service to the grounds of the University of Massachusetts and Amherst College.

Students from the Greenfield area who attend UMass or Amherst College must use private autos or hitchhike the 17 miles between the two points, or take a bus to Northampton and then transfer to another bus for Amherst.

This represents a total distance of 27 miles, 10 miles greater than the more direct line from Greenfield to Amherst.

A representative of Peter Pan Bus Lines stated that it is the intention of the carrier to provide modern deluxe coaches with reclining seats on the new line.

The American Hero

"The Ballad of the Green Berets" is the title of a new, hit record which salutes the men of the Special Forces units in Vietnam. The sentimental lyrics characterize these modern techniques of the Pentagon's "counter-insurgency" operations as heroes endowed with powers of Homeric dimensions.

The ballad emphasizes the sacrificial role of these heroes who must give their lives for their country. Frances Ferguson's critique of such sacrificial Priest-King figures in "The Idea of a Theater" points out that the concept of absolutism is implied in the heroic role: They take upon themselves the burden of our own guilt and raise that guilt to the level of the heroic.

The Average American knows himself to be something other than a hero. John Clayton, who teaches at the University of North Carolina, has observed that most Americans realize that they are not independent agents in history, but are instead "members of an incredibly complex termite colony, carrying out their slice of the corporate task, morally bound to the commitments made by others, morally plagued with individual guilt for their actions."

It is not unusual, then, that the Average American's modern hero is a James Bond or a Man of the Green Beret.

John Clayton points out that the modern hero "has a wry, puckish sense of humor about the madness of the tasks he is assigned although he never questions the necessity of those tasks nor the desirability of accomplishing them."

Both James Bond and the Man of the Green Beret wear clothes which distinguish them from the other men of their occupation. The occupation of both men is killing. Both men are furnished with the unique tools of their trade which are designed by serious young technicians in government research labs. The policy which determines both men's actions has already been decided by a controlling Father Figure and so the men merely do their professional job which is to win.

The average American who avidly reads about such heroes does, of course, share a few of the same characteristics. He too is a professional. He also has little or no control over the decision-making process which affects so much of his life (and his death).

But the modern hero is different because he does raise our guilt to heroic levels and so our own dreamy identification with him frees us of the shabbiness of much of contemporary reality.

John Clayton asserts that this fanciful identification heightens our situation: "We are not pawns, we are heroes; we are not amoral, we are gay; we are not uniformed nonentities, we are agents whose every action is momentous; we are not guilty, we are successful; we are not drab, we are technicolored swingers; we are not materialistic, we have sophisticated taste."

One contemporary American hero of the Special Forces "Green Beret Boys" is Master Sergeant Donald Duncan who recently left the U.S. Army's service after 10 years of military duty. For six years of that service he wore a green beret and the last 18 months of his Special Forces duty was in Vietnam.

After being decorated four times, he was offered a field commission as a captain. But he refused the commission and returned to civilian life to report his Vietnam experiences in the February issue of Ramparts magazine. The reader who expects this hero's story to be a modern epic will be shocked because the disillusioned Sergeant Duncan concludes that "the whole thing was a lie."

The Rise of Worthal, LMOC

The editor of the Oklahoma Daily once wrote that the easiest way to assure himself of letters-to-the-editor would be to withhold the cartoon, "Little Man on Campus," from the editorial page.

So it is with many of the 350 student newspapers that each year subscribe to Dick Bibler's creation. In the last 12 years, some 800 campuses have witnessed the antics of Worthal and Prof. Snarf.

It all started almost 20 years ago to the day—in 1946—when Bib was prowling the campus at the University of Kansas. "Worthal," better known as "The Little Man on Campus," slipped out of his agile pen.

Worthal Preplanned

The birthing resulted from malice aforethought, since Bib intended to commercialize his cartoon character. After having served in the armed forces during WW II on a desolate island completely devoid of female companionship, Worthal seemed a good idea.

After Worthal has come a succession of characters—exam-happy Prof. Snarf; shapely Louise, the peripatetic coed; and Dean Bellows, the blow-hard Administrator.

Dick Bibler started cartooning at age 12 in Elkhart, Kans., where he earned himself quite a reputation by running the wrong way in his first football game.

Bib's A Girl-Watcher

"I liked the cheerleaders. One liked me—before that fateful day of my wrong-way run. But, as it turned out, I was equally good at other sports."

At Stanford, one of his favorite sports was "to sip coffee slowly and eye the coeds. Most Stanford girls are beautiful—so why not?"

And, Bibler adds, "In spite of what some of my friends around Stanford may say, I did study drawing and painting."

To preserve the realism of campus life he reflects in his cartoons, Bib says that "I believe sex is here to stay, and that it should be included in a moderate way so as not to offend anyone."

On the question of censorship, he adds "My mother is one of my best censors—and my wife censors almost anything."

Ideas Blossom

His uncensored ideas, Bib says, come from reading phone books and catalogues and listening to what people on campus are saying . . . and doing.

"Sitting around the library sometimes gives me ideas—like watching people go back among the stacks together. I don't know how the stacks are anyplace else, but we patrol ours!"

The man who draws LMOC could be no more completely opposite from his creation. Sandy-haired, (thinning on the apex), Bibler is unassuming and mild-seems to react to his environment and excitedly, too.

Buck-toothed, rumple-haired and down-trodden, he is flunking Biology, continually late for classes, and appears to be headed for graduation by way of Osmosis.

No one could look more desperate than Worthal, as he flips his coin during the true and false examination or get himself ground into the sidewalk during the 12 o'clock rush by the campus BMOCs. But he continually bobs up again, each time with a wicked leer as he ogles the girls, pokes fun at ancient Latin professors, college administrators and college athletics.

And back in the book stacks, he may be found smooching his girl in the library archives between "Robinson Crusoe" and "Patterns of Culture."

Nothing Sacred

According to one reviewer, "No one on campus is immune to Bibler's pen. From his drawing board he wields a two-edged blade, cutting at both college students and faculty with Worthal, and his sadistic nemesis, Prof. Snarf."

"There is something heroic about their undaunted struggle; something touching about Snarf's willingness in order to make others suffer."

A tribute to the realism of his creation appeared on a northwestern college campus, recently, during a campus election.

The campaign posters shouted, "Worthal for President!"

And he almost was, too. Excepting that he withdrew three-quarters of the way through the counting of the ballots. He was afraid he really might win.

In spite of his popularity, everyone (the news report said), even those who had voted for him knew that this was the only thing for him to do.

"This buck-toothed, rumplehaired collegian would have been impossible as student body president."

Bib Sees Himself

Reminiscing on his college student days, Bib identified himself as a "Little man on campus." He labels most of his campus life as "quite teeny-teeny. I knew, however that I had been 'made' when sorority girls started speaking to me (an independent) even before I was asked to 'pledge'."

Peeking through his concern for the LMOC is Bib's identification with faculty, as well.

At Monterey Peninsula College, where he heads the art department, Bib says his students see him as Prof. Snarf whereas his own teachers at Kansas University, Stanford, Colorado State and Kansas City Art Institute saw him as Worthal.

Between the classes he teaches in painting and design, Bib produces 100 cartoons a year. They are distributed to some 350 colleges in everyone of the United States, including Hawaii and Canada.

Service A Sideline

The feature service (he markets his own) is only a sideline with Bib. Although about 350 colleges use the feature, fewer than 50 are more than once-a-week issues and some schools buy as few as five a year. Thus, half the output each year just a little more than pays for itself.

"I wish it were possible to do 300 mats a year," he explains "But for the few (less than 10) who could use that many, it wouldn't be economically sound."

Cartooning has earned him "a 1963 Pontiac and a four-room house with three kids and a new car-port laundry room" in Monterey, California.

Bib describes that car as still having "a malted milk stain on the floor . . . coming through Reno, last year, I got so excited at seeing the car hop I tipped the tray into the dash! Boy, was my wife mad!"

Of his house, he quips: "I'm thinking of moving my work to the laundry room. It's easier to work there and my wife says it might be an incentive to 'clean up some of my cartoons.'"

You Better Watch Out!

The Men's Judiciary Board consists of seven four-year undergraduate students selected by the Committee on Men's Affairs of the Senate of the Joint Student Government. The members of the Board are selected by means of extensive interviews conducted by members of the current board for all who apply for membership in a following year. The Board elects its Chief Justice and its clerk.

Cases of a general nature occurring on the campus but not either Area I or Area II (residence hall areas) are referred to the Men's Judiciary Board by the staff of the Office of the Dean of Men.

By common consent, penalties range all the way from a warning to a recommendation of expulsion from the University.

plies: "Until the college kids have had their fill."

Which should be a long lifetime, if the timelessness of the cartoons proves out. College sophomores who saw their first LMOC at Dad's knee can attest to that.

There'll always be a Worthal and a Snarf . . . and a Bibler? It's either that, or more letters to the editor!

Recommendations are reviewed and acted upon by the Dean of Men.

More specifically, the recommendations include all of the following:

Warning
The judiciary board takes this action directly.

Censure
Probation Without Restrictions (Recommended)

Probation With any of a variety of Restrictions (Recommended)

Suspension for either a stated or indefinite period of time (Recommended)

Most of the above penalties are matters of recommendation. In other words, the Judiciary Board recommends to the appropriate staff member in the Office of the Dean of Men that a specific kind of action be taken against a student for his misdemeanor.

If it be probation, suspension, or expulsion, it is up to that staff member to effect the recommendation if he approves of it.

In practically all instances, the recommendation of the Board is followed and in no case is the penalty recommended by the Board increased by a member of the staff.

Fayetteville Strike Works

A student strike at Fayetteville State Teachers College was termed "98 per cent effective" by student body president George Langford.

The strike from classes, held to support more student participation in policy formation, was held Feb. 23 and 24. Students returned to classes on Feb. 25.

Langford said that out of a student body of about 1,200 only two students went to class. "These were a case of off-campus students who did not know of the strike."

A student committee then met with the college president, Dr. Rudolph Jones, and members of the administration. At that time, Langford said, "Many social privileges were reviewed and the administration proved ready to involve us in policy making." Future meetings will be bi-weekly.

Some of the student gains include:

A rule regarding the compulsory attendance at Vespers and religious convocations was dropped.

The library is to be opened on Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. No quality points are to be deducted for overcuts.

The extra responsibilities of the coaching staff (which include coaching three sports, membership in a dorm council and teaching) will be lessened.

A percentage of profits from vending machines will be used for an athletic scholarship. This is expected to amount to $1,500-$2,000.

The grounds of the college will be properly cleaned and cared for.

Langford said that Dr. Jones was sympathetic to the strike and definitely did not resent it. He "hated to have it happen, but he felt the results would be laudable."

The strike came about from student dissatisfaction with the campus situation. There had been previous faculty-student-administration meetings, resulting only in "promises and compromises," Langford noted.

Along with a role in policy formation, Langford said the students wanted respect and more responsibility from the total faculty and administration.

Some of the faculty were reported hostile to the strike but "most expressed willingness and a new awareness after it was over," Langford noted.

Administrators had expressed the opinion that the strike was "unnecessary."

Langford was primarily responsible for organizing and staging the strike. He said he thought he would have trouble communicating with the students but it never occurred and the "students were all ready to participate."

UMass Grads Help In U.S. Dialect Study

In the Midwest they drink pop, in the East soda and in Boston tonic—the same beverage in each case but with a different regional name.

Five-Year Study

Two University of Massachusetts graduates have a key part in a five-year project to record and index regional language differences like these for the Dictionary of Regional English of the American Dialect Society.

The students are Mrs. Ruth Porter and Reino Maki, both of whom began their studies in Regional American English under a UMass authority in the field Prof. Audrey R. Duckert.

The project got a big boost recently when the U.S. Office of Education awarded it a $490,000 grant to gather and record as fully as possible all words and expressions that are used locally rather than nationwide by native-born Americans speaking English as their mother tongue.

Mrs. Porter and Maki plan to roam all over the U.S. in "word wagons" camper-type vans fitted with tape recorders and living accommodations. Mrs. Porter is now in Florida, talking to local speakers and taping their conversations. Maki is doing the same thing in Oklahoma. Mrs. Porter is the former Ruth Schell of North Dartmouth and Maki is a native of Fitchburg.

Wants 1000 Tapes

Prof. Frederic G. Cassidy, University of Wisconsin language specialist who heads the project, hopes to keep five "word wagons" roaming the U.S. for the full five years of the grant. "We want to make at least 1000 tapes of American speech from all over the country," he said.

Common household words, names of plants or animals, weather terms, everyday expressions—as many as possible will be assembled.

The name for the lint that collects under beds, for example, can have a dozen different names in a dozen different parts of the country, according to Dr. Cassidy. Dufflewuzz, collywobbles, housemoss, rats, mice, fuzz, fuzzy-zuzzies, wollies or dust kittens are some common ones.

The final step in the five-year dictionary project will be reading and collating material. A staff of 100 volunteer readers from the American Dialect Society will help and a computer will be used for data processing.

DROP IN SUGGESTION BOX AT THE STUDENT UNION"Critique" Seeking Student Comments

Critique is starting a new policy of selecting the courses that it will evaluate each semester from suggestions submitted by students.

This means that the particular courses that will be critiqued this semester depends on you!

If you've taken some really good courses this semester, why not let others know about it? Or perhaps, unfortunately, you've been stuck in a course that you wouldn't have taken if you had known about it beforehand.

Either way, why not let others benefit from your experiences?

All you have to do is simply drop a slip of paper with the name and number of the course plus the name of the professor teaching it, into the suggestion box which will be in the S.U. all this week.

Above is a form you can cut out and use; or you can use the ones that will be provided with the suggestion box which is located just opposite the S.U. lobby counter.

UMass Receives Grant

The Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, for the third year in a row, has given a $1,000 grant to the University of Massachusetts for research on problems of ornamental nursery crop production.

The research will be done by the UMass department of plant and soil science under Dr. John R. Havis. Assisting will be William Bennet of West Springfield, Robert D. Fitzgerald of Hathorne and Oscar Johnson of Barnstable, all regional extension specialists.

Past grants by the state group have aided research in winter injury reduction and weed control in nurseries. In addition the funds have made it possible to initiate a project for the study of environmental conditions required for successful winter storage of evergreen nursery plants.

Columbia Prof Seeks Changes

New York (CPS)—Major reforms to halt the erosion of the liberal arts college were proposed in a report after a year-long study made public this week by Columbia University.

"The report calls for increased emphasis on the humanities and proposed new senior-year courses to counter the pressures toward overspecialization.

The study, by Columbia sociologist Daniel Bell, was financed by a $26,000 grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. Dean David B. Truman of Columbia College called Bell's report the "broadest analysis yet of what leading liberal arts colleges should be teaching today."

The proposals in the 320-page report should "generate interest and discussion across the nation," the dean said. Some compared the Bell report to the 1945 Harvard study titled "General Education in a Free Society," which led to wide reform in American colleges.

With vastly increased numbers of students going to graduate school (nearly 90 per cent at Columbia), Bell argued in the report that the college was now looked upon as a way station rather than the capstone of education as it once was.

He compared it to a tunnel connecting high school with graduate school, with the object being to speed through the tunnel as quickly as possible.

"The hue and cry to shorten the college years," he wrote, "to speed the boy into sophomore standing and then spin them into graduate school in his senior year—these are not only destructive of the college; they are more sadly destructive of the student himself." Bell stressed the need for a rich undergraduate curriculum in the sciences and the humanities.

He said the current pressures to speed up college work so that students can enter Ph.D. programs earlier ignore the experience of medical schools.

Several decades ago medical schools accepted students with only two or three years of undergraduate training, he noted. But today they generally insist that students come to them better prepared, having a broad foundation in the liberal arts.

His specific recommendation included:

To require that all students take a year of mathematics plus a year of physics or biology. At present, students at Columbia and most other liberal arts colleges must take two years of math and science but have considerable freedom of choice.

To introduce double majors, cutting across disciplinary lines, and to be more specific in requiring courses that relate to the major.

To begin new senior courses would give each senior the opportunity to learn how his major can be specifically applied to a problem. For example, all majors in the social sciences would take such a course on the development of new states and their problems.

Bell's report will be debated by the Columbia faculty which will have the final say on its adoption there.

Med School...

operating costs alone.

Other medical educators believe that the cost of duplicating in Worcester facilities which already exist on the Amherst campus, such as departments of microbiology, zoology, clinical psychology, public health and a school of nursing, will add many millions to the cost of building and operating the med school.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee in January introduced a budgetary appropriation of $1,750,000 for land-taking and planning for the med school. In an unprecedented move, the Committee inserted the words "in Worcester" into a budgetary item.

GEORGE J. O'BRIEN of Northampton, a spokesman for the Taxpayers' Committee, said today: "Every citizen in Massachusetts should be as concerned as we are with the ill-advised decision to build a med school away from the parent campus at an unnecessarily high cost.

"At a time when Massachusetts citizens have just been burdened with additional taxes, the Legislature owes it to all of us to deliberate carefully and at length on the costly implications of the Worcester decision.

"We can ill afford the dubious luxury of building a high cost educational facility on a site that was never seriously considered by the expert consultants and was rated fourth by Booz, Allen and Hamilton in their $30,000 study.

"And every legislator also owes us and all taxpayers at least the opportunity to have our documented case heard before the Supreme Court."

Rusk Will Speak At B.U. Banquet

Boston University will celebrate the golden anniversary of the founding of its School of Journalism with awards to distinguished alumni, a speech by the president of United Press International and a major address by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Rusk will speak at the 50th anniversary banquet 7 p.m., March 14 at the Sheraton Boston.

Citations For Ten

Distinguished achievement citations will be presented at the banquet to ten outstanding graduates of the School, now called the School of Public Communications.

Being honored with citations are John Day, Vice-President and director of news and public affairs, WHDH - TV; Boston Traveler sports columnist Albert Hirschberg; former Herald reporter Noah Gordan, author of The Rabbi and editor of Psychiatric Opinion; and former Boston Traveler reporter Gail Kredenser Mack, editor of the school supplements of the New York Herald Tribune.

Other recipients of the citations will be George H. Beebe, managing editor of the Miami Herald; Sam Bornstein, managing editor of the Boston Sunday Advertiser; John R. Herbert, editor of the Quincy Patriot Ledger; William Plante, Jr., editor and general manager of the Newburyport News; Robert Barham, associate professor of journalism at the School of Public Communications; and novelist Edward Hymoff.

2-Day Celebration

At 11 a.m., Monday at Hayden Hall, Frank H. Bartholomew, chairman of the board of United Press International will speak on "The Communications Explosion."

The two-day anniversary celebration will also include a live telecast of "Starring the Editors" at 5 p.m., Sunday. The program will be telecast live from B.U.'s Sherman Union.

Panelists on the program include David Farrell, managing editor of the Boston Herald and C. Edward Holland, managing editor of the Record-American. Robert Bergenheim will replace Erwin Cahham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, as a panel member for his special program; and David Brinkman, editor and publisher of the Malden Evening News and Medford Mercury, normally a panelist, will serve as moderator for the day.

Chess Club Offers Lessons

The chess club has decided to sponsor a series of chess lessons beginning Wed., March 9. The meetings start at 7:00, and the lessons will start then and last for about 20 minutes to a half hour.

They will start with the fundamentals of the game, and a special invitation is given to beginners in the game.

People who are interested in improving their play are also welcome, and those that are familiar with the fundamentals should wait until the second meeting.

After the lessons, those interested can stay and watch the tournament games which will be in progress, or can stay and play their own games.

The lessons will be informal, as much a discussion as a lecture. They will be held in the Hampden Room of the Student Union.

Several of the better players of the school have agreed to work with interested students.

Gulf Oil Co. Aids Amherst

Amherst College has received a grant of $1,000 from the Gulf Oil Corporation.

The company's gift was presented to Stanley F. Teele, Treasurer of the College, by Richard M. Denison, District Manager of Gulf.

The Gulf award, the ninth made to Amherst by the Oil Company since 1959, is unrestricted as to use, and will be applied to the cost of planning and construction of the College's proposed science center.

Gulf's grants to Amherst under its Aid-to-Education Program, both restricted and unrestricted, now total $18,761.

This recent gift is one of 221 such awards, totalling $221,000 which Gulf will distribute this year for unrestricted purposes to many universities and colleges.

Other phases of Gulf's comprehensive educational assistance program include capital grants; Gulf merit scholarships to children of employees and annuitants; employee gift-matching to colleges; departmental assistance grants; graduate fellowships, and grants for special purposes such as research and faculty support.

Scholarship Grant Awarded to UMass

The University of Massachusetts has received a $300 scholarship grant from the John R. Thompson Co. of Chicago, Ill., to aid students in the restaurant and hotel management curriculum, it was announced today by Dr. Donald E. Lundberg, professor of Restaurant and Hotel Management.

A spokesman for the company said the award is being made to "assist in enhancing continued interest in the food service industry in the Northeast."

Mr. Larry Wilkas, personnel director of the company, praised graduates of the UMass restaurant and hotel management program who have been employed for several years by the Thompson Co.

The firm operates several restaurants, cafeterias, coffee houses and motels.

According to Wilkas, the Thompson Co. is "... most appreciative of the fine work" the University is doing, and cited the program's "dedication to the food service field."

There is the fact, too, that divorces are fewer among husbands and wives who were both college graduates. A girl has to consider her college education, then, as good preparation for making her a more interesting companion and a better mother to her children.

Other factors also make it important for a girl to further her education.

In most young marriages, the wife must work in order to make financial ends meet or to have something to do with her time and energies until after children arrive on the scene. If she is college trained, she will be able to take a job that she enjoys rather than just any one that comes along.

A married couple faces the possibility, too, of serious illness in the family bringing on high hospital bills that require extra income in order to be paid.

Or a woman's husband may die, leaving her with the responsibility of supporting the children, a circumstance in which her college education will serve her well.

Contrary to popular opinion, many college girls are just as anxious to graduate and try their chosen career as the males are.

They consider their on-campus dating not only fun, but a good basis for determining the characteristics of a man that are important to them when they feel they are ready to get married.

And college gals know that they aren't the only ones who think a lot about their futures in terms of the opposite sex. The guys do, too.

But no one accuses them of going to college just to find a wife.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

by DAVE JARNES

PSD and PMD, two surprising winners in their respective divisions, will play off for the fraternity title this Tuesday, March 8 at 6:30. At the same time TEP, last year's campus champion, will battle AEP for third place. Both matches promise to be wing-ding affairs. PMD sports a glossy 65-7 record while PSD's 60-12 mark is almost as good. Any TEP-AEP match is a good one and this bowling contest pits two well-matched teams. TEP, somewhat of a disappointment at 52-20 and 8 points behind PSD, took 6 of 8 from PSD last week while AEP has been moving along at a consistent 50-22 clip.

The independents highlighted volleyball action on Thursday. The Cartwrights took the KS Pledges 15-13, 15-3; the AEP Pledges easily beat Thrush 15-3, 15-5; the Chow Hounds edged out the Forestry Club 15-1, 15-5; 16-14; Ma's Boys whalloped the Orgies 15-2, 15-2; the La. Jrs. beat the Hot Rod Raiders 15-5, 15-11; and the Eagles were defeated by the Limes 15-3, 15-4 in a makeup dorm match.

The intramural swim meet will take place the first week of April and practice times will be available the week of March 28. A total of 12 medals will be awarded in the 25 yard freestyle, 50 yard freestyle, 100 yard freestyle, 50 yard breaststroke, 50 yard backstroke, 100 yard medley and 200 yard freestyle relay.

For the first time soccer will be featured on the intramural spring agenda. There will be six man teams and the games will be played in the afternoon.

LCA Wins Own Tourney

In the finals of the second annual Northeastern Lambda Chi Alpha Basketball Tournament held at UMass this past weekend, Lambda Chi of UMass beat out M.I.T. for the championship, 74-71.

With M.I.T. leading, 71-70, Steve Shea, the tournament's top scorer, sank a 53-foot jump shot with only 15 seconds remaining to put the UMass club ahead to stay. In other action, M.I.T. defeated Worcester Tech, 52-47, and UMass beat Tech, 72-65.

Entries were submitted from Drexel Institute of Technology, UConn, Clark, Worcester Tech, Rensselaer M.I.T., and UMass.

Lack of Track Appalling

Ballfield Fenceless

by MIKE GOULD, Sports Editor

With the basketball season into its home stretch and the national collegiate tournaments slighting our Redmen quintet, campus interest and spirit naturally shifts from basketball to the major spring sports.

Spring seems to have a special kind of magic which instills a touch of vitality into the hearts of the most beleaguered of students, while sparsely populated classrooms cause the lonesome and bewildered University professor to wonder about his ability to give an interesting lecture.

UM SPORTS FOLLOWERS are eagerly awaiting their opportunity to sit under the warm sun and watch an exciting varsity lacrosse contest, tennis match or baseball game.

BUT PITY THE POOR TRACK ENTHUSIAST.

As in the past, this poor soul will be unable to watch his heroes, the excellent UMass Spring Track team, in action this season. Believe it or not, this ever growing University does not possess facilities for a home track meet!

Yes, a university of over 10,000 students, boasting a million-dollar football palace does not have a track. "Absurd! Impossible! Embarrassing! Humiliating!" you may say. I'm with you 100%.

MINUTE PERCENTAGE

Could not our illustrious athletic executives have spent just a minute percentage of the stadium fee for a modest track and field setup? The trackmen do not plead for electronic timing devices or diamond tipped fiberglass poles for the vaulters; just an inexpensive arena in which they can perform in front of their deserving home fans.

Would it be conceivable for our football team to play all away games? "Nonsense!" says the rich alumnus. "Ridiculous!"

snarls the monetary-minded administrator.

LET'S FACE IT, tracksters and fans, money talks. Start raking in the greenery and you will soon be competing at home under the splendor of a retractable dome and a big bunch of four year scholarships.

For heaven's sakes guys, be realistic. The administration is having experiments conducted at this moment to prove their hypothesis that a long ride on a bus does wonders for the arms and legs. And don't give them that malarkey about competing in front of an alien audience during one's performance, or that it is difficult to get the feel for a new track at every meet. The boys upstairs won't go for that either. After all, hellas, these points have not been scientifically proven.

RECOGNITION LACKING

Should the students of UMass be deprived of witnessing the great skims of John Medeiros, Jerry Carpenter and the Redmen track stars? Should these athletes be lacking in the recognition they deserve so much because of a lack of facilities? The situation is appalling!

There are several high schools in the Boston area which equip their teams with beautiful track-baseball complexes. Surely the state university must not lag behind the high schools of Massachusetts in the area of sports facilities.

While we are on the subject of spring sports, would someone please inform me where the varsity baseball team will play its home games this spring?

THE ADMINISTRATION was nice enough to tear down the old varsity field last summer. For those who never had the experience of watching a ballgame at the old field, let me briefly describe the place. It was not unlike an open sandlot in scope, with one exception—there was grass. Granted, the field was enclosed. The fence in leftfield was a mere 500 feet away from home plate, extending to about 600 feet in left center. The fence in right field made the place a left handed hitter's paradise, by comparison. The distance from home plate to the rightfield foul-pole measured only 377 feet. Opposing teams came into Alumni Field stocked with left-handed batters to take advantage of this "short porch." Right-handed sluggers were continually frustrated as outfielders roamed the depths of left and center field to catch up with their home run bids at a distance of about a 5-iron shot from home plate.

sports

MIKE GOULD, EDITOR

OUTFIELD ERRORS HURT

Outfield errors were disastrous at the old field, as one can well imagine. Ground ball singles to left or centerfield which happened to elude a charging outfielder often rolled to the doorsteps of Bartlett Hall. During its days at old Alumni Field, the home team would practice several hours a day on the relay play from deep center field, anticipating such an outfield error from time to time. Everyone would take part in this drill which involved no less than seven long relay throws until the ball reached the catcher at home plate. The UMass coach, not risking an injury to his pitcher's arm, would have him back up the plate on this maneuver. Unfortunately, this defensive play never proved successful in actual competition, for the batter, in most cases, had crossed the plate before the fourth relay throw had been made.

ANOTHER FEATURE of old Alumni Field was its bushes in right field. These were beautiful bushes, but they tended to get in the way of the rightfielder who happened to be searching for a baseball. As a camouflage for batted balls, these bushes proved to be a devastating offensive weapon.

The most likely spot for this year's varsity baseball field is the remote area past the intramural fields, adjacent to the UMass Animal Farm. If you can ever find the place, bring along nose plugs.

This field, which has been the home field of UM frosh baseball teams of the past, is but a slight improvement over old Alumni Field. I take that back—it is worse.

OUTFIELDERS BEWARE OF COWS

Not only is the field all but unbounded in the outfield, but there exists a slight decline in deep rightfield which helps the ball to roll even a greater distance after it skips by the rightfielder. Eventually the ball is stopped by a cyclone fence. If the ball somehow gets through or over the befallen fence, it is fair game for the livestock.

Otherwise, the field is passable. It is fully equipped with a pitcher's mound, a backstop, and beautiful green grass, always freshly mowed.

It is time for the athletic administration to equalize its expenditures among the various varsity sports which it sponsors. Everyone loves football, and we all realize its importance to the University. Some of us, however, also love baseball, track, hockey (no rink!) and other sports which are treated disdainfully by the administration. I, for one, am terribly dismayed at this absolutely preposterous state of affairs. It is time that something was done about it. It is damned high overtime.

URI Trips UConn for NCAA Shot

by GLENN BRIERE

Rhode Island earned the right to represent the Yankee Conference in the NCAA tournament by downing Connecticut, 67-62, at the UConn Field House in Storrs, Conn. Friday night. The Rams had to come from behind to win the hard-fought playoff game between the conference co-champs.

THE GAME was not particularly well played, but it was pressure-packed all the way. To add to Rhody's problems, their star center Art Stephenson did not play the second half after he was thrown out of the game as a result of an altercation with a UC player. In fact, the Rams dropped as many as 8 points behind with 12½ minutes left. But the Huskies fell into serious foul trouble late in the game and URI won it from the charity line.

Sloppy but hard-fought play characterized the first half. Led by Henry Carey and Jim Cymbala, URI's fast break broke up the UC zone and they jumped out to a 23-15 lead with six minutes to go in the half. The Huskies stormed back, however, and led at halftime, 29-25. With a minute and a half to go, tempers flared as Art Stephenson and U C's Tom Penders exchanged punches. The referee tossed Stephenson out, dimming Rhody's hopes considerably.

CONNECTICUT tried to break it open early in the second half. URI grew very cold from the floor, and was able to stay in the game only because of the Huskie's fouling. Rhody finally found the range and stormed back. UConn countered with another streak and led by 8 with about 12 minutes left. But the spunky Rams refused to quit, and they tied the score at 50-all with 8 minutes to go.

DOUBLE-TEAMING big Bill Corley, URI kept up with UC, and with 5:19 to go the game was tied up for the last time. Taking advantage of numerous free throw opportunities, the Rams pulled away and began to slow down play. With 3:18 to go UC broke up the freeze but couldn't capitalize, and the score was 63-57 with 2:14 showing on the clock. In fact, the Huskies got the ball several times and missed. But it was not yet over with 30 seconds left, as Wes Bialosuknia hit on two free throws to make the score 65-62. Finally, Larry Johnson wrapped it up for URI with a big bucket with 30 seconds remaining.

HENRY CAREY exhibited an amazing variety of moves for URI as he scored 21 points. Steve Chubin was 8 for 8 from the foul line and scored 18 points. Bill Corley led the UC scoring with 17 points. There is no doubt that the Rams won the game on free throws, as they outscored the losers 21-12 in that department.

Rhode Island will meet Davidson in the first round of the NCAA tournament tonight. In the first game of that double-header at Blacksburg, Va., Providence will meet St. Joseph's.

In a scene from last week's dorm-fraternity all-star game, Skip Hall of the fraternities is defended by Bob Higgenbotham while Brian Lajoie (24) blocks out Chuck Webster (33).

Committee to Study Student-Faculty Communication

The joint ad hoc Study Committee, a joint committee of the Faculty and Student Senates, has been asked to consider questions concerning student-faculty communication and student participation in policy formation.

The Joint Study Committee has voted to hold open meetings so that it may receive advice and views on its tentative proposals from interested members of the University community.

Notice of open meeting of the Joint Study Committee, Tue., Mar. 15, 2:15-3:45 p.m. Colonial Lounge, Student Union.

PROPOSAL 1: To substitute the following for By-law #5, section 8 (Faculty Senate By-laws):

8. There shall be a Student Affairs Committee.

(a) Its composition shall be eight members of the Faculty, nine undergraduates, and the Dean of Students ex officio.

(b) Duties of the Committee. It shall review and make recommendations on all non-academic rules and regulations. It shall consider and recommend policies and procedures pertaining to non-academic discipline, student rights, dormitory life, and all other matters of common concern to the Faculty and students which are not within the scope of responsibility of some other regular or special committee of the Senate.

It shall advise the Dean of Students and recommend policies for the operation of student personnel services.

It shall promote and protect the academic freedoms and civil liberties of students and shall hear complaints alleging the suppression, abridgement, or abuse of such freedoms and liberties.

It shall not consider matters pertaining to the actions, policies, operation, organization, administration, and fiscal operation and practices of the Student Senate or other recognized student organizations (including the Recognized Student Organizations Committee itself) unless a two-thirds majority of the entire membership of the Committee shall vote that a particular policy, action, organizational structure, etc., raises or involves a substantive issue which falls within the scope of responsibility of the Student Affairs Committee as set forth above.

(c) There shall be a Discipline Board of the Student Affairs Committee.

PROPOSAL 2: The Discipline Board (summary of proposal (s)). COMPOSITION: four members of the faculty, four undergraduates who do not hold positions in undergraduate judicial organizations.

DUTIES: To hear appeals in disciplinary and academic honesty cases on matters concerning evidence, procedure, and interpretation of rules and regulations.

THE FULL BOARD is to decide whether an appeal is to be heard; appeal will be automatic in cases involving the penalties of suspension or dismissal.

PROCEDURAL SAFEGUARDS: All evidence is to be heard in the presence of the appellant. The appellant is entitled to be assisted in his defense by an advisor of his choice. The burden of proof is to rest upon those bringing charges, or upon their representatives.

THE APPELLANT shall be given an opportunity to testify and to present evidence, witnesses, and argument. He shall have an opportunity to hear and question adverse witnesses.

In no case shall the Board consider statements against him unless he has been advised of their content and of the name of those who made them, and unless he has been given an opportunity to rebut unfavorable inferences which might be drawn from such statements.

THE BOARD shall deliberate privately on the evidence and argument presented before it which relates to questions of fact, procedural complaints, and interpretation of rules and regulations.

In deciding matters pertaining to procedural complaints and interpretation of rules and regulations, it shall prepare written statements of its reasoning.

Each appellant shall be informed, in writing, of the reason for the proposed hearing with sufficient particularity, and in sufficient time, to ensure opportunity to prepare for the hearing.

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

VOL. XCIV, NO. 58

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1966

President Lederle Expresses Approval of Student-Run Paper

by PAM METAXAS,
News Reporter

"I would fight to the death for a student's right to make mistakes," commented President John W. Lederle in a Collegian interview concerning freedom of the college press.

The President believes the right to criticize is one of the purposes of a college newspaper. Since the student newspaper reflects the student point of view which he thinks is very important, he also remarked, "I'm always interested in improving the institution." No institute of higher learning works "perfectly" and the president is anxious to learn from the students. One of the ways he learns is through the remarks in the college newspaper.

HOWEVER, he pointed out that the college newspaper places a great deal of responsibility on both the university and the student staffers. He brought up the example of a president of Michigan State who was compelled to ban the school's summer newspaper when the paper called a Boys' State meeting a "patriotic orgy." In situations such as this the University is responsible. In other words, "the student newspaper becomes a legal liability of the University."

But he was quick to emphasize that student reporters shouldn't worry about such situations but should be careful to print the facts coupled with standards of good taste. He said he is glad to see a point of view published in the Collegian that runs counter to the university. It is a "good and healthy thing" for both the student body and the administration. "I can't see any circumstances where you should rule out the tasteful presentation of a point of view even if it is not shared by the Presi-

Such points of view also "keep the administration, the faculty and the dean's office on its toes," he added.

In short, Pres. Lederle considers a responsible and well-organized college paper to have a reciprocal purpose. It "gives students assurance and the feeling of complete freedom" and informs the administration and faculty of controversy on vital issues that directly affect the campus community.

He regards the Collegian as having been a responsible publication in the past.

Concluding, the President said that the "level of journalism reflects on the institution" since material published in the newspaper is read both on and off campus. It affects a large group and the students are responsible to them all.

Edward Logue to Speak on Urban Renewal Programs

EDWARD LOGUE, controversial dynamo of Boston Urban Renewal, will be speaking in Mahar Auditorium at 8 p.m., Monday, Mar. 14.

Realizing the impact of the re-development revolution in major American cities, the DISTINGUISHED VISITORS PROGRAM of the University of Massachusetts is sponsoring the former Yale trained labor-lawyer, who has been described by LIFE MAGAZINE as "the most successful redevelopment boss in the country—and in almost all ways the most controversial."

With a formal interest in politics and cities, Logue brings to Boston redevelopment, in a matter of 5 years, a new fearlessness in planning, mixed with brass-knuckled politics. From his power base, he has raised Boston from 25th place to 4th in getting Federal renewal money.

DESPITE the accent on action, Logue forswears the bulldozer approach. "Our approach is to renew the neighborhoods for the people who live in them," he says. But not everyone is convinced. "Logue doesn't know Boston," says one matron. "He doesn't like Boston. He's pulling it apart."

Because people regard their home as part of themselves, the loss of a house is something much like an amputation. Where once the "embattled farmers stood," keyed-up homeowners defy bulldozers and wrestle with police and demolition workers while clinging to their homes amid the rubble of their neighbors.

LOGUE, unaffected by pickets with signs shrieking "Leave our homes alone" or "To hell with Urban Renewal", brings to tradition-steeped Boston a new revolution; he truly has the gusto to fire that shot heard 'round the world!

University Fraternal Park Site Zoned for Campus Residence

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

Fraternity Park was given a vote of approval Monday night by Amherst Town Meeting members at the annual Town Meeting.

Members voted to amend the official zoning map to change a neighborhood residence district to a campus residence district. The site is located off East Pleasant St. slightly to the south and east of Eastman Lane. The strip of land goes back as far as the Central Vermont Railroad tracks.

Robert Gailey, chairman of the fraternity-sorority park steering committee, sent a letter to all town meeting members expressing their desire to remain in Amherst.

The letter made the following points:

- land now available in the residence areas does not provide adequate room for expansion and other land nearby is shackled by inflated prices.

- the land under option on East Pleasant St. provides for new construction without invading a private residential area.

- the park will eventually result in $6 million of taxable property. This figure could be expanded to $10 million in the next 10 years.

- the eventual sale of the North Pleasant St. properties would be to those investors who would construct facilities that would enhance the appearance of the area.

The park has been selected from four possible sights and test borings have been run on the area under the direction of Prof. Karl Hendrickson of Civil Engineering.

DEFEATED BY the Town Meeting was a petition to rezone a tract of land at the north end of Eastman Lane about 300 yards from the fraternity park site.

Builder Donald S. Grant proposed a dormitory park for 2000 UMass grad students on the 20 acres. Grant said the University had planned to take it by eminent domain but had delayed action. He said it would be a $5 million investment plus land and development costs.

Grant pointed out that it would provide $186,000 in taxes with little expense to the town as he would not allow children in the dormitory-like structure. Residents would eat in town or in campus dining halls as cooking would be forbidden in the rooms.

Students Sought for Work With Boston's Underprivileged

In the Boston Area exists a special family of people who are together only ten weekends of the year, yet are bound by a spirit of work and friendship. This family is composed of persons, college age or older, who are concerned with the conditions in which many members of our society are forced to live, and who are interested in working in the community, person to person, family to family. The members of the family are the participants in the workcamp program of the Young Friends' Fellowship under the joint sponsorship of the Friends' Meeting at Cambridge and the American Friends' Service Committee.

IN WEEKEND WORKCAMPS college students and others work along with families and community groups, cleaning, painting, and repairing—both to improve living conditions and to strike a responsive chord of friendliness and hope for future.

Workcampers' experience vary. Some discover the fellowship of a group with varied backgrounds yet similar life. For most there is the real pleasure of hard work for a good purpose. You are invited to become a member of the workcamp family, to join in a weekend of working and learning in the community.

This year the focus of concern is the Roxbury-Washington Park area. Workers will be staying at St. John's Episcopal Church, 12-52 Tremont St., Roxbury.

Directors for the Spring Series will be Andy and Susan Rodine. The Spring Schedule for 1966 is as follows: March 18-20; April 1-3; April 22-24; and May 13-15.

Workers should bring work clothes, clothes for church, towel, sheets or sleeping bag (if desired air mattresses will be supplied). Also bring $3.00 to cover the cost of food. All are welcome who cannot afford the full amount, as well as those who can afford more to help balance the books.

If you are interested, contact the Friends' Center, TR 6-6883, 5 Longfellow Park, Cambridge, Massachusetts, 02139. If you can please contact the Friends' Center. QUESTIONS? Contact the Friends' Center.

Tippo to Address Spring Meeting Of UM's Co-op School Service

The Cooperative School Service Center at the University of Massachusetts, entering its second year of operation as a study council composed of fifty-three school systems in Western Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, and Vermont, will hold its Spring Meeting at the Lord Jeffrey Inn on Mar. 11, at Amherst, Massachusetts.

DR. OSWALD TIPPO, Provost of UMass, will be the luncheon speaker. Dr. Tippo received his Ph.D. in Botany from Harvard University in 1937. Upon receipt of his degree, he joined the faculty at the University of Illinois where he later became Chairman of the Division of Biological Sciences in 1949, and be featured as Beatie's father, Mr. Bryant.

The production is directed by Denton Snyder and the settings are designed by William Hatch, both members of the Smith faculty. Mrs. Stephen Randall is in charge of costumes.

Interested persons should contact one of the following persons before Sunday: Tim Harmon—Phi Sigma Kappa, Karen Sullivan—Kappa Kappa Gamma, Adrian Byer—Eugene Field House, or Karen Shulda—Southwest A.

"Roots" Scheduled By Smith Theater

On March 9, 10, 11 and 12, the Smith College Department of Theatre and Speech will present its second major production of the season, "Roots," by Arnold Wesker. The performance will be given at 8 p.m. in the Smith College Theatre.

"Roots," hailed by such critics as Kenneth Tynan as a thoughtful and timely play, tells the story of an English country girl, Beatie Bryant, who returns to her Norfolk home after having lived and worked in a big city. She has been influenced by the progressive ideas of her boy friend, Ronnie, but in the course of the play she discovers that she actually has ideas of her own—made real for the first time by her own background and her roots in the land.

Arnold Wesker is a member of England's generation of "angry young men." In "Roots," the second play of a trilogy centering on an English Jewish family, Wesker dramatizes the necessity for being awake to the joy of life.

In this production, Andrea Rosnick '69 will be seen as Beatie, and Carol Morrison '66 and Nancy Schuster '67 will play her sister and sister-in-law, Jenny and

Pearl. Mrs. Bryant, Beatie's mother, will be played by Stephanie Braxton '66. Jenny's husband Jimmy will be portrayed by graduate assistant Ray Bernier, and Ray Howard, acting assistant, will be seen as Stan Mann, an old man who has not lost his zest for living. Acting Assistant Spalding Gray will play Beatie's brother Frankie. Mario Gilardino, of Northampton, will mor.1 Community Col.; Mr. Thomas K. O'Connell, Berkshire Community Col.; Dr. Lewis O. Turner, Greenfield Community Col.; and Dr. George A. Frost, Holyoke Community College.

The meeting will be attended by upwards of 100 superintendents and their guests, representing school systems in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont.

In explaining the selection of the theme for the meeting, Dr. Jones said, "This program has been built around the growing interest of the Cooperative School Service Center and its member school systems in the new things which are going on in the area community colleges and in the rapid growth and development of the University of Massachusetts."

The members of the Colonel's Cadre have planned a great deal of activities since their commencement last year. This group is affiliated with the Scabbard and Blade, a ROTC honor society.

ROTC Adds Feminine Touch to Activities

You may have seen the girls in blue blazers and herring bone skirts on campus before. They are members of the Colonel's Cadre and this year their activities are in full motion, with many events planned for the future.

Started last year by the seven charter members the Cadre was recognized this Sept. '65 by RSO, along with the initiation of twelve new members. Now membership numbers nineteen. These nineteen are involved in a variety of activities on campus, many of which are associated with the ROTC programs here. Serving in some capacity, as ushers or hostesses for example, at ROTC events is the primary purpose of the Cadre.

However, the service of the Cadre is not limited to the campus, as they correspond with the troops in Vietnam in an attempt to keep the news of home available for them. More specifically Colonel's Cadre has helped out as usherettes at the Army Band Concert held here earlier in the Fall. And on other occasions they have hosted at the ROTC Commissioning Ceremonies.

Affiliated with the Scabbard and Blade, a ROTC honor society, the Cadre has added the feminine touch to activities. The decorations at the Military Ball this year were the result of many hours of work on the part of Cadre members, each girl being responsible for some part of the overall scheme.

This semester promises to be a busy one for the Colonel's Cadre. A tour of Fort Devons is planned for the latter part of the semester. Then the girls will sponsor a party for the retarded children at the Cushing School. This was a program successfully initiated last year, of entertaining the children one afternoon with refreshments and presents. Besides these planned activities the Cadre is always on call to help in ROTC events, and work with the Scabbard and Blade.

Hunger Strike In Third Day

by JANE ROLAND
The 4-college Hunger Strike which started this weekend is now in its third day.

The strike, according to participants, marked by black arm-bands, is to bring to the attention of students the fact that the government is using chemical warfare against the Vietnamese. There are still fifty strikers at Amherst College, as well as many at the University. Some who did not know about the strike in the beginning have since started fasting.

FREDERIC DICKER, the U-Mass coordinator of the strike, and a graduate student in history, said, "I think it's a tragedy that more than twenty years ago America fought to keep the world from Nazi tyranny and is today taking over where the Nazis left off.

"It is not too much of an understatement to say that America is one of the most hated nations in the world today. In light of our democratic history this is a tragedy I want to see corrected."

Spectacular Fire Destroys Historic Sugarloaf House

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

The only building higher than the 22-story dorms was razed by a fire of unknown origin Wednesday night while firemen watched, unable to check the blaze.

The century-old Summit House atop Mt. Sugarloaf in South Deerfield became a Pioneer Valley beacon about 11 when flames began to race through the tinder-dry resort.

THE NARROW, mile-long road was relatively clear of snow up to the hairpin turn but three and four foot drifts halted fire equipment. Only a bulldozer could make it to the 300 foot summit after the house had become embers.

A Rotary Club shelter was saved by firefighters who went on foot up the old road equipped with extinguishers. The fight to save the Summit House was conceded at midnight.

A new Summit House will be built on the old site with $1150,000 appropriated by the legislature. County Commissioner Frank Reid said that the money would have originally been used to renovate the old structure.

One of the three firefighters who stayed with the smoldering remains all night said he saw two sets of tracks leading up the mountain before the firemen made it to the top. He said they went back down and led off the road.

No cause has been assigned to the blaze but Commissioner Reid said he thought the power had been turned off after the Christmas display.

European Travel Guide Published by Students

Ten Harvard and Radcliffe students recently published Let's Go, the Student Guide to Europe, a 260-page paperback which they have on sale all over the world.

The students traveled through Europe this summer, revising and expanding the smaller edition they had compiled the year before. Their book lists 1200 hotels, restaurants and night spots, plus sights, introductory material, maps and features on hitchhiking, camping, art collecting, and wine tasting.

THE GUIDE ranges over twenty countries (55 cities) from Dublin to East Berlin, to Zagreb, to Tel Aviv. Its listings range from dirt cheap to moderately expensive, and the information is given with an eye toward student travel.

the planning board, said the population density would be "much too heavy" and that long term policy should be discussed with the University.

DEAN OF STUDENTS William Field said the University hopes to meet the single students housing shortage on campus. "It will be tougher to solve the married student housing problem. The lack of dining facilities in the proposed dorms is unrealistic," he said.

An attorney for land owner Paul Winkler said Grant had no detailed plans for the project. "He spoke for three minutes on a five million dollar thing," he said, referring to a Planning Board public hearing. He gave the opinion that the option was not legal as it had twice changed hands.

A ZONING change for Hampshire College was approved at the meeting after a most favorable report from the planning board.

The Price of Politics

Requiem for a Med School

By GORDON A. DAVIDSON, News Editor

One of the darkest hours in the history of the University of Massachusetts, and one of the worst examples of what political maneuvering and influence can do to higher education is brought to mind again with the recent committee hearing on a bill to locate the medical school in Amherst rather than Worcester.

Although the med school is considered a "dead issue" by legislators and the Boston papers, if nothing else, it has proved the sheer irrationality of hoping to develop quality higher education in a politically permeated atmosphere.

WHEN THE TRUSTEES of the university ignored the $100,000 advice of Booz, Allen and Hamilton to locate the med school in Amherst, and the recommendations of over twenty-five medical education experts, they committed a gross injustice to the students of the university, to the administration and to the taxpayers.

The operating costs for a med school located in Worcester have been estimated by Dean Soutter to be $1½ million dollars more than for the Amherst site. But the most stupendous cost comes in the construction of the supporting Medical and Public Health facilities which has been estimated by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Associated to be at least $20 million dollars of wasteful, ignorant duplication.

THE STUPENDOUS LOSS to the taxpayers is infinitesimal, however, compared to the loss suffered by the university and its students. Not only has the university lost its best chance to become one of the highly ranked universities in the nation, but the students will be deprived of the facilities which would have been made available to them through the med school.

But the loss does not end there. At least $20 million will be needed to begin the med school in Worcester. Last year the total capital outlay from the legislature was only $60 million, $10 million of which went to UMass. There will have to be some belt-tightening somewhere to provide the necessary funds, and the University is going to take it on the chin.

OVER $50 MILLION DOLLARS IS required to complete the present plans for university expansion. Will we be able to get these funds when these fantastic sums of money are being poured into Worcester?

UMass Boston will require large sums of money to get off the ground, but it is the most likely target for budget-cutting legislators. The university is definitely going to suffer.

But where does the fault for this debacle lie? Admitted, there were political pressures put on the trustees. So much so that, no apparent reason, they met in executive session during all of the important voting. But the problem goes much deeper than this. The basic flaw is in the system of trustees.

GOVERNOR VOLPE appoints the trustees, and the political implications of this fact are obvious. Most of the trustees are from Boston, have their loyalties there, and many of them never come to western Massachusetts, let alone Amherst, until they are appointed to the board. How can men who are politically appointed, who have little or no connection with the university, who live in Boston and feel Amherst to be "out in the sticks", determine the fate of the University of Massachusetts?

The future of the university is in the hands of the trustees and the hands of the legislature. Their decision on the med school should have proved that we have a long way to go before our future can be decided without the interests of legislators, pressure groups, and private industries coming before the good of the university.

(The 'Collegian' would appreciate any comments and views concerning these articles.)

How Much is Too Much

By KAREN ROSE, Senate Editor

"The President of the Student Senate shall be the chief executive of the Student Government and shall be responsible for the proper functioning of the Student Government." (SGA Constitution) To whom is he responsible and what is the proper functioning of the student government?

In light of some of Senate President Dacey's recent actions it appears that he is unclear as to how to institute and carry through with the proper functioning.

The students cannot allow or afford personality clashes to clog the wheels of student government. Political alliances are inevitable in any legislative body, however, the president of the Senate should not use the power vested in him as the highest elected student officer at the University to become entangled with his personal feelings.

Specifically, Dacey's actions regarding appointments at last Wednesday's Senate meeting, i.e. his opposition to the appointment of former Senator Richard Wimberly to the Men's Affairs Committee and the withdrawal of Senator Jerry Benezra's name from the list of Collegian Publishing Board Members, were shown to be without justification or consideration as was made manifest by the 39-2 and 40-1 opposition votes at the Senate meeting.

While the Senate Exec Committee was made aware of the possible fate in store for Wimberly at a meeting prior to the Senate meeting, the Senators were not notified of the move to oust Senator Benezra until it was announced from the chair.

President Dacey asserted that Benezra was not fulfilling his obligations as a senator and thus should be removed. Failure to carry out any job is definitely grounds to remove a person from his job but the Publishing Board has no complaints with Senator Benezra or the job he is doing; thus who is President Dacey to arbitrarily remove him?

In fact, the Student Senate President is by virtue of office a member of this same board and has found time to attend only two or three Pub Board meetings and thus his judgment of another Board member would have to be extremely limited to say the least.

Although this particular case involves the members of our elected board of student governors it is applicable to many officers in many organizations . . . too many officers in too many organizations.

An Important Letter

Good Entertainment

To the Editor:

Yes, the time has come. Some of us are finally realizing that we, as young adults, should have the responsibility to regulate our own lives and lift the restrictions imposed upon us by the administration. But how can we demand this privilege, when we are now abusing a privilege—no, an obligation—which we already possess: the responsibility of selecting our entertainment.

A university should be more than a center of learning; hopefully, it should give us the opportunity to broaden our horizons. We have the opportunity to attend various cultural events offered through the University—for example, lectures, concerts, both classical and other, plays and movies. Whether or not we take advantage of them is another question.

Yet how have we contributed to our cultural expansion—with Bo Diddley, and Hank Ballard and his "Inimitable" Midnight Raiders! Our attempts these past two years for "entertainment" have not been commendable. Among our recent cultural highlights, have been The Shirelles, Little Anthony and the Imperials, Mary Wells and not to be omitted, our most recent attraction—The Rovin' Kind and The Four Seasons. Now we are to be blessed with the Animals. What does the future hold for us?

Don't get us wrong. We are not saying that there has been a complete dearth of good entertainment in these past two years. What we object to is the monotony of one rock-and-roll group after another. Speaking for ourselves, and we are sure many others, we have just about had it with rock and roll. It is not our distaste for this type of music as such, but rather the emphasis on it at the University that has infuriated us.

The opportunity to return to really good entertainment was presented in the proposal to use the football stadium to see Sammy Davis, Jr. perform. Unfortunately, he was not available for that time. Instead of looking for a comparable performer, the students once again resorted to a mediocre rock and roll group, the Animals. The second choice to Sammy Davis, was the "Rolling Stones"—famous, but nonetheless, a rock and roll group.

Why has the entertainment been so one-sided in recent years? In the past students were fortunate to have performers on our campus, ranging from Peter, Paul, and Mary and the Kinkston Trio, to The Smothers Brothers, Dave Brubeck, and TW3 (who with Judy Collins and Josh White, certainly did provide us with the diverse and good entertainment we are looking for). It seems incongruous that with the rapid expansion of the University the quality of performance has regressed. With more people in the University, one is more likely to find the support for a wide variety of entertainment. Not only do we have the people to support varied cultural diversions, but due to the growth of the school, we are also able to finance them. There is no excuse for this lack of variety of entertainment on our campus.

UNLESS WE, THE STUDENTS, FOR WHOM THE ENTERTAINMENT IS GEARED, VOICE OUR DISAPPROVAL, WE WILL ALWAYS BE SUBJECT TO THE MEDIOCRE ENTERTAINMENT THAT WE PRESENTLY HAVE.

uled to be held on Friday, March 11, at 8:00 p.m. in the Farley Club House (behind Machmer Hall.)

Invitations have been extended by the club to Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst, Springfield College and Westfield College.

"This is the first," said Alladin Hashim, president of the International Club, "in a series of 'International Mixers' to be organized at UMass every month."

The main purpose of this mixer, he said, is not simply to let everyone have a good time and get away from the books, although this would, inevitably, be one result. In fact, he views the mixer as a "dual-purpose project."

The main purpose of the program is to bring together interested students from various international organizations of the Connecticut Valley area "under one roof."

"This social intercourse and communication would contribute alot towards more friendship and better understanding among the foreign students and their American counterparts," he commented.

When asked how the heads of the other international clubs responded to his idea of the "International Mixer" at a recent two-hour meeting in Springfield, he said that all of them fully endorsed his views and assured

Let's Have a 'Bit of Blarney'

The Sophomore Banquet will be held on Tuesday, March 15 at 6:15 in the Student Union Ballroom. This year the banquet has been titled "The Blarney Stone." The menu will feature a roast-beef dinner.

Favors will be distributed at the door. They will complement "The Blarney Stone" flavor of the evening. The ballroom will be set in a nightclub atmosphere with candlelight illuminating the tables.

The entertainment will consist of a Broadway Review featuring The Four Women Only and comedian Dave Astor.

The Four Women Only have recently played at Monticello's in Framingham and at Palumbo's in Philadelphia. Last week they finished a twelve day engagement at Blnstrub's in Boston, with Wayne Newton.

Presently, The Four Women Only are entertaining in Las Vegas.

"From any angle, one thing is apparent—these four beautiful girls come equipped with charm, infectious arrangements plus a special brand of vocalizing . . . The Four Women Only sing top hits with effortless impact. You'll love them," was Variety magazine's comment on the group.

Dave Astor has appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show, the Johnnie Carson Show, the Mike Douglas show, and the Tonight show. He is a personal friend of Jack Paar and has made a dozen appearances on the network with Paar.

He has recorded three albums with Columbia Records. The most recent is "Will the Real Dave Astor Please Stand Up?"

"Dave Astor is one of the

An added attraction at the banquet will be "Massachusetts Fats," Mike Haley, who is a graduate of the University. He will deliver a spoof on our 'humorous' university life.

Tickets priced at $1.50 will be on sale in the Student Union lobby from 9-5, Monday through Wednesday.

Sophomore class president Bob Keough emphasizes that "The Blarney Stone" is open to all classes. He urges all to take advantage of this unique event.

Live in French Atmosphere

The UMass men's and women's French Corridors have announced that there are openings for new residents on both for next semester.

The French Corridors are run for the enjoyment and benefit of any students interested in improving their ability to speak the language and in gaining background in French culture.

Activities sponsored by the French Corridors during the year include the French Film Series, which brings to campus internationally award-winning films; and many guest speakers, whose topics for discussion are timely and informative.

Anyone interested in living in this culturally stimulating atmosphere should speak to Mrs. deKerpely, housemother of Eugene Field House, by Thurs., March 10, to secure applications and arrange for an interview.

Caution: there is one very important prerequisite. You must be willing to join and benefit from the activities sponsored during the year and you must have the desire to "parler" only "français!"

Senate Elections

Nomination papers are available in the R.S.O. office for Student Senators representing Butterfield, Grayson, and Commuters.

The papers must be returned to the R.S.O. office before 5:00 p.m. on March 10th.

Elections will be held the following Thursday, March 17th, for the commuters from 8:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. in the Student Union Lobby, and from 6:00 p.m.-9:00 p.m. in the respective dorms.

All candidates for senators must sign the sheet provided, signifying that they have read the election rules and will abide by them.

"Youth For Furcolo"

A Letter to Students

Editor's note: The following is an explanatory letter written by David Furcolo on his current organization of Youth For Furcolo. He is forming the group with two goals in mind: to help elect his father, Foster Furcolo; and to interest youth in politics.

To the Students:

My name is David Furcolo and I am a 22 year old graduate student in English at UMass. I am now engaged in an effort to help support my father's candidacy for Attorney General in Massachusetts. He is a former congressman, treasurer and governor; a man generally well-known to the public.

My organization is entitled Youth For Furcolo and it has a dual purpose: to help elect my father, Foster Furcolo, and to interest young people in politics (via the media of a campaign). Most young people weren't even of voting age when my father was last running for office (1960-1961) and most young people have never been in a campaign. My enthusiasm for both my father and campaigning is based upon long experience. I have worked with my father in over six campaigns, and, at the tender age of 13 headed a statewide organization entitled Kids For Furcolo. My older and younger brothers are in school a good distance from this area (one at Yale and another at Penn. Law), so I am actually working on this project with only a few close friends.

Although Youth For Furcolo is a Recognized Student Organization, its constitution and purposes are by no means limited or restricted to this campus. I would hope to interest all young people in my father's capabilities and a campaign's activities. I would like to make the organization a statewide movement capable of moving into full swing in the summer of this year.

Our opening meeting is Thursday, March 10th, at 6:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the Student Union. There will be no solicitations or dues either now or later; the group is to be run upon an entirely volunteer basis. We will provide coffee and cake after I talk to the prospective members, hoping to interest them in either my father or a campaign. I think that either purpose is sufficient stimulus (the former initiated the NDEA fellowships in Congress, established the Community College System and expanded the UMass facilities in the Governor's office and the latter has multitudinous work for people of all bents and talents).

Sincerely,

David Furcolo

Pres. of Youth for Furcolo

Neither Snow Nor Rain Nor...

Sun shown on the "Showboat" Tuesday for awhile. It was completed Tuesday morning and was to be judged that day.

The men from Phi Sigma Kappa, in fine fraternity fashion, came through in the clutch to win the postponed Winter Carnival snow sculpture contest with this entry entitled "Showboat."

When the entry cards were sent around on Saturday, Feb. 26, the fratmen lost no time getting started. The figure was designed by Norman Tighe, chairman of the house's Snow Sculpture Committee, with help from Ronnie Murphy, Gene Pratillo and Larry Liptak, the other members of the committee.

Work was begun on Saturday, and continued through until Monday afternoon, as judging had been originally scheduled for Tuesday. This was later changed to Wednesday, however, giving the boys a chance to put on the finishing touches.

The first problem facing the project was the lack of good snow. They solved this problem, however, by taking the remnants of the snow piled alongside the walks around the SBA and wetting it so they could pack it.

The unfinished "Showboat" was drenched in rain Monday night.

By Monday, the basic structure had taken form. Despite rain and warm weather, the smokestacks (made from drain pipes packed with snow) and windows were shaped and the lights were strung on and through.

Working with these lights in the rain proved to be an electrifying experience, as several cases of unexpected shock were reported.

SUG Rules On Selling

On March 3, 1966, The Student Union Board of Governors adopted a ruling on the selling and sampling policy for the Student Union. The ruling which will go into effect two weeks after the publication date of the notice reads as follows:

"NO SELLING or sampling will be permitted within the Student Union without requesting permission in writing from the Student Union Board of Governors at least thirty days in advance."

Permission will be granted with consideration of the general and special interests of the student body.

Expert To Speak on Sculpture

by SALLY DOLGIN,
Feature Staff

Modern sculpture will be the highlight of a talk given by Professor John Townsend, an enthusiastic and inspiring UMass art teacher.

Along with his lecture, Professor Townsend will show slides of his own reliefs in Emily Dickinson's main lounge Wednesday, March ninth, at 8:00 P.M.

Born in LaCrosse, Wisconsin, Professor Townsend graduated with a B.S. degree from Carroll College. After spending four years in the United States Air Force, he studied art at the Minneapolis School of Art and at the University of Minnesota, where he received an MFA degree in sculpture and painting.

He has taught at the University of Minnesota, Eastern New Mexico University, and Mount Holyoke College. For the past years, he has been a member of the University of Massachusetts faculty.

In 1966, his reliefs have been displayed at group shows in the Eleanor Rieghaupt Gallery of Boston and the Byron Gallery of New York. During the month of February, he also had a one-man exhibition at the Byron Gallery.

Prof. Townsend's Art for U.S. Embassies exhibit, presently being shown at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston, will soon travel to the State Department in Washington.

Modern art fans will be truly privileged to hear Professor Townsend discuss his reliefs which have been exhibited in art galleries throughout the country.

Skiers Place Second; End Impressive Season

In the Northeastern University two run slalom in weather appropriate for water skis, UMass won a silver bowl for second place. Tom Pittendreich won a gold medal for first place individually and was strongly supported by Fred Foster, John Hurd and co-captain Don Piezza to round out the UMass quartet for second place standing. Collin Garstang was first on the mountain with a brilliant 34.8 first run. He "crashed and burned" in his second run, but climbed to ski the "wiped out" gates to finish the run in 51.2 seconds.

New England College won the meet, Amherst was third and BU fourth. Other colleges in competition were Northeastern, Brown, AIC, BC and Tufts. Princeton and Keene State did not show, perhaps because they did not have enough water skiers in their squads.

For the entire season NEC was first, UMass second, BU third, Northeastern fourth, and Amherst was fifth. UMass was first in the league before the disastrous two run slalom at Pat's Peak last week when the Redmen finished second but dropped 58 seconds to NEC. With ten returning veterans for UMass next year, NEC and everyone else in the league better look out. With a record of 77 wins and 13 losses in nine meets, the Redmen had their best ski season in the history of the sport here.

The UMass team did well in individual standings for the year. Collin Garstang was fourth in the league and won four first place gold medals. Fred Foster was sixth, Pittendreich was tenth, and co-captains Pete Plastring and Don Piezza were 13th and 15th respectively.

Garstang and Pittendreich were elected co-captains of what promises to be a very strong team next year.

The women's ski team placed third in a two run slalom sponsored by Keene State at Mt. Ascutney, Sunday, March 6. Keene took first and Radcliffe second in the thirteen school meet. Scoring for the team were Judy Beers, Sally Gerry and co-captain Jeanne Brown.

Steve Levy (top) and Norm Lovitch have consistently swum well for the UMass mermen, and will compete at UConn.

Leaman Named Coach Of Varsity Hoop Team

Sports Information Release

The appointment of John A. "Jack" Leaman as head basketball coach at the University of Massachusetts was announced today by Director of Athletics Warren P. McGuirk. Leaman, who has served as assistant varsity basketball coach for the past five years, succeeds Johnny Orr, who resigned recently for a position in the insurance business.

In commenting on the appointment McGuirk said, "Jack Leaman has done an outstanding job with our basketball teams for the past five years. I feel he is very well qualified for his new responsibilities and I'm confident that he will do an outstanding job."

A native of Boston, the 33 year old Leaman attended Cambridge High and Latin School and graduated from Boston University in 1959. He was a baseball and basketball stand-out while in high school and played three years of varsity basketball for the Terriers, captaining the 1959 team which went to the Eastern finals of the NCAA tournament before bowing to West Virginia 86-82.

JACK LEAMAN

He served in the U.S. Army from February 1953 to February 1955 and while in the European Theatre he was player coach on the 25th Infantry team at Hamberg, Germany, who were runners-up in the European all-army tournament and ended with a 44 win and 7 loss record.

He received his bachelor and masters degrees from BU and served as assistant varsity and freshman basketball coach at his alma mater while studying for the latter degree.

In 1960 he was head basketball and baseball coach as well as a teacher of history and physical education at Millis High School (Mass.). His quintet ended up with a 12-9 record and completed the first winning record at the school in 12 years.

The following year he was appointed assistant varsity basketball coach and freshman soccer coach at UMass. His Redmen frosh quintets have compiled 43 wins against 14 losses against New England's best opposition.

While serving as varsity assistant for the past five years, Jack has served as head scout and also worked extensively in the recruiting program. He is a member of the New England Basketball Coaches Association as well as the National Basketball Coaches Association.

He is married to the former Rita Vanelli of Quincy and the father of a three year old daughter, Laura.

Friars, Rhody Bow In NCAA Tourney

by GLENN BRIERE

It was a rough night for New England teams Monday as St. Joseph's of Philadelphia toppled Providence, 65-48, and Rhode Island was ousted by Davidson, 95-65, in the first round of the Eastern Regional NCAA tournament.

A tight defensive battle was broken wide open midway through the second half by St. Joseph's. With 10:38 left in the game the Hawks led by a point, 4-42. The Friars then fell into a long streak of cold shooting, and St. Joseph's was able to coast. Providence managed only two field goals for the rest of the game. With seven minutes remaining, the Hawks pulled away for good to post their second victory over Providence in a week.

St. Joseph's was led by Tom Duff with 19 points and Bill Oakes with 18 points. Jim Walker was the lone bright spot for the Friars, scoring 19 points. St. Joe's will move on to face Duke in the Eastern semifinals at Raleigh, N. C. Friday night.

The representative of the Yankee Conference, Rhode Island, was completely thrashed by the champs of the Southern Conference. Davidson was paced by Rodney Knowles who collected 39 points. The Wildcats held a tremendous height advantage over the Rams, whose biggest starter was Art Stephenson at 6'4. Rhody could do little against 6'10 Tom Youngdale and the 6'9 Knowles.

Davidson's second-team All-America, Dick Snyder, missed a good portion of the game as a result of fouls. But the Wildcats did not need him as they really ran it up on URI in the second half. The first half had been fairly close, and Davidson had held a nine-point halftime lead. But they used their height in the early stages of the second half to run Rhody off the court. Knowles scored most of his points unmolested, utilizing his size. The Wildcats also controlled the boards.

In addition to his 39 points, Knowles pulled down 20 rebounds. Bobby Lane chipped in with 16 points. The Rams were led by Steve Chubin with 23 points and Jim Cymbala with 19. Davidson will play Syracuse Friday night in the semis.

In other NCAA first round action Monday night, Western Kentucky surprised fourth-ranked Loyola of Chicago with a 105-86 victory in the Midwest Regionals at Kent, Ohio. Dayton, led by Henry Finkel, advanced to the semifinals by downing Miami of Ohio, 58-51. Western Kentucky will meet Michigan in the semifinals Friday night at Iowa City, and Dayton will take on top-ranked Kentucky. In the Midwest Regionals, Houston beat Colorado State, 82-76.

Mermen Ready For N. E. Meet

Six of the top UMass swimmers are preparing three hours a day for the New England Swimming Championships. Leading the team for his third and final year will be captain Dick Daniels. Dick is one of the strongest competitors in the New England Conference. He will be fighting to win a place in the finals of his events.

Dick Lennon and Ted Severn, the team's breaststrokers, are pushing each other hard in training. Little Steve Levy has his work lined up for him. His competitors are many, but Steve is a tough swimmer and could surprise quite a few people, including himself.

Chip Wyser and Ken Nowak, both powerful point-getters for the team, will attempt to display their skills at the UConn pool. They have done excellently during the season, and Coach Rogers has high hopes for some wins from them.

In addition to the swimmers, assistant coach Joe Yeskewicz will travel to aid in final plans for the meet, which will last three days.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 1966

T-6, the furthest high rise dorm in the picture, will have seven of its floor given over to graduate student housing next fall. The seven floors will provide housing for 192 students.

High-Rise Living Approved for Grads

UMass has set aside seven floors in one of the new 22-story residences for a Graduate House, it was announced today by Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the Graduate School and coordinator of research.

The graduate residence will accommodate 192 students and will be available in September, 1966, when all five of the 22-story residences in the Southwest area are scheduled for completion.

GRADUATES will be housed in the first seven floors of Building T-6. Their residence area will include a lounge or general purpose floor and six residential floors, each housing 32 students—28 in 14 double rooms and four in four singles.

Graduate students desiring to live in the new facility are urged to make immediate application to the University Housing Office or the Graduate Office. Early applicants will receive precedence.

SPACE in the building will be assigned on a full semester basis only, to single graduate students, men and women. Assignments will be made for a period of one year with an option to maintain occupancy during the summer at a fee to be arranged.

If a sufficient number of foreign graduate students elect to live in the facility, an effort will be made to develop an international house program, according to Dean Moore.

Premature Adieu

Dacey Cites Senate Problems

by ROMA McSWEENEY,
Senate Reporter

Wednesday night Senate President Dacey surprised the Senate by delivering his Farewell Address. His purpose in delivering his address now instead of April 13—when election for officers are held—was in the hope that some present problems could be ironed out before the new president takes office.

PRESIDENT Dacey expressed his desire for the senators to work with him during the next four weeks in order to resolve some of the problems that existed for the past two years. He feels that the Senate has failed in its primary function—that of soliciting and representing student opinion.

Dacey believes that the blame rests on the individual senators and the officers. The senators do not accept the responsibility of their elected office. They come and leave early.

Also, the rising number of resignations and lack of prior preparation add to the ineffectiveness of the organization.

Dacey admits that it is his responsibility to see to it that the Senate runs smoothly and efficiently.

THIS YEAR'S achievements of the Senate, including the changes in Women's Rules, the dosiers and the future review board and grievance board show that they have accomplished a great deal and could do much more if they forgot personal feelings and cooperate with one another.

In addition, Dacey feels that the lack of communication between the Senate and the individual classes has helped to hinder progress. If the class officers were more interested in student government and less involved in the social aspects of the class much needed legislation could be passed, and student opinion could be more easily expressed.

The Senate passed budgets for Caesura and Forensic League. The next order of business was Senator Mike Garjian's policy statement concerning student loans.

THE POLICY would allow a student to borrow $25 for the purchase of books. This enables students who do not have enough money at the start of a semester to obtain a loan and buy their books on credit. The loan is due within 30 days but extensions will be granted if circumstances warrant it.

Also, in a case where a student may need more than $25 he may apply for two loans.

After debating for three hours and forty-five minutes the Senate passed the statement and it will be in effect at the start of the fall semester.

THE PROCEDURE for obtaining a loan is as follows. The student may apply for the loan within nine week days after registration day. He must explain why he needs the loan and submit an itemized list of the books he intends to purchase (including their purchase price). When the loan is approved he will receive a credit slip which will be honored in both the Commonwealth Room and the Student Union Store.

In other business the Senate passed a bill to loan Spectrum money for operating expenditures and approved the constitutions for the Flying Redmen and the Equestrian Club.

President Dacey made the announcement that President Lederle is producing and directing a film about the University and would like to film a section of next week's Senate meeting.

Med School Site Debated; Fiscal Autonomy Defended

Proposals to repeal fiscal autonomy laws for the University of Massachusetts and other state institutions of higher education, and to locate the state medical school in Amherst instead of Worcester drew heavy opposition at hearings before the joint committee on Education.

The session on the medical school bill boiled down to a debate between legislators from western Massachusetts against their colleagues from the Worcester area, over merits of the decision by the UMass trustees to locate the school in the city of Worcester.

Rep. David M. Bartley (D-Holyoke) termed "the agonizing one-vote decision of the trustees in favor of Worcester" a political decision. He pointed out it was contrary to recommendations of a consultant firm, which was paid $30,000 for its survey, and of medical school deans across the country, all of whom favored the theory of an on-campus site.

Sen. Vite J. Pigaga (D-Worcester) countered with the argument that the consultant firm was hired to make recommendations, not the actual site selection for the school. It also was argued that the firm stated that a good medical school could be developed at any one of the five proposed sites, including both Amherst and Worcester.

The bill to repeal fiscal autonomy was proposed by Rep. Arthur L. Desrocher (R-Nantucket) and John F. Melia (D-Boston). Rep. Desrocher claimed fiscal autonomy has resulted in loss of administrative control over these institutions on the part of the state.

But the two House members were opposed by their leader, Speaker John F. X. Davoren of Milford, Sen. Pres. Maurice A. Donahue of Holyoke and UM Pres. John W. Lederle, all of whom argued that fiscal autonomy was the reason why "great" progress has been made in the field of education in Massachusetts.

Students and faculty from the Stockbridge School of Agriculture attended the annual Stockbridge Banquet last Tuesday in the ballroom. Guest speakers included President Lederle and Deans of the school of agriculture. See story and pictures page 6.

3 Seniors Awarded Fellowships

President John W. Lederle of the University of Massachusetts congratulates three seniors who have been awarded Woodrow Wilson Fellowships for graduate training as college teachers. Left to right, David A. Johns, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Johns of Dalton; President Lederle; Carol H. Woodcock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woodcock of Marion; Roberta M.

Bernstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Bernstein of Sharon. The three are among 1403 from the U.S. and Canada to receive the 1966 fellowships from the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation. The awards pay tuition and fees for one academic year of graduate education, plus a $2000 stipend and allowances for dependent children.

Russians Called 'Hopeful People' At 3rd Great Decisions Program

by FRANK LIRO,
Staff Reporter

"They (the Russians) are the most hopeful people in the world," Dr. Thomas P. Dilkes of the UMass history dept. said Tuesday night at Great Decisions 1966 held as an open session in the Webster Lounge.

Dilkes had just returned from a semester of research at Moscow State University. He was chosen from a list of selected applicants by the Cultural Exchange Division of the government. His field of study was 19th century intellectual history.

HIS LECTURE consisted for the most part of general observations of the Russian way of life; its people, its students and its attitudes.

"One big impression was the drabness of life; not just the absence of facilities," he said, "but things are tough in daily life. It is time consuming to do just anything."

DILKES SAID that one could get a good idea of what Russian society was like by thinking of Great Britain in the days of 1940-1945. "Long lines. Slogans. Endless shortage. Clear military priorities." But he said that the people have "a deep-rooted seriousness of purpose" and really believe that by their system they will attain a better life.

The people themselves have learned to reply to it with "good humor and patience," he said. "The welfare of everyone is improving and the people are hard working people who are loyal to their society."

DILKES COMMENTED, "Everybody is his brother's keeper—in a very peculiar way." He went on to say that this meant that the people have a genuine concern for each other.

"It was nothing to have someone ask you why didn't you have your rubbers on," he said. He added that this concern also goes to the other extreme and that people watch you to see that you don't cheat.

HE SENSED that "the Soviets have a greater sense of socialization and collectiveness than the average American. You would never have," he said, "something comparable to the Kitty Genevise case in the Soviet Union."

"Soviet society is a society of priorities established by the leaders as the needs of the society," he noted. "They have good military equipment but the silverware in the student dining room breaks."

LIVING IN the student dormitory he felt that he got to know a great deal about the Russian students and youth. "The students are mildly critical. They are interested in getting ahead," Dilkes said. "They have no antagonisms on principles," he added, "but are willing to complain on specifics: food, clothing and the like."

"They like Americans as people because they are similar in their outgoingness and outwardness. There is a great admiration for the West but for the wrong things. One student had pin-ups of Fords. They were amazed by Super Balls."

RUSSIANS' LEISURE time is spent "having a lot of fun." Prof. Dilkes, talking about coed relationships, said that "they don't have a 'market place morality' as is my impression of the U.S." They tend to be very warm and affectionate to each other. Yet there is definitely a double standard. At the door to the coed dormitory there is a list of dos and don'ts. He added that it was not uncommon to have coeds waiting on the boys balcony until the bed check was completed.

For the person who follows the code there is "a kind of Christian Monogamy without Christianity."

Dilkes said that he enjoyed his stay in Moscow very much: "For one thing, the girls are beginning to acquire a certain amount of chic—a fact I noticed. The people, especially the children, were well dressed," he said. "The city was clean. A flat city with lots of beautiful parks that reflect the Byzantine influence." He described furnishings as being heavy; a kind of "Stalin Gothic."

WHEN ASKED what the people thought about their past and present leaders Prof. Dilkes replied that the people thought that Khrushchev was pretty good but that he had made several mistakes domestically, especially in corn growing.

"The poor man never recovered from Iowa," he commented. Brezhnev and Kosygin are considered as better than Khrushchev because they are more for the people. He himself thought that they were all right. "I waved to them and they waved back."

DILKES AND a few other American students waved to the leaders during the May Day parade in which they participated as marchers.

"The parade is not just a military display," he said. "Everybody has a contingent. More as a joke, we joined in with an electrical plant contingent. I carried a flag that said something like 'we will produce more than our quota this month'. We marched into Red Square and then kept right on marching until we came to a big carnival type of party where everybody was singing and having a good time."

This is all very characteristic of the spirit of the people. As was once confided to him by "a very well mannered person."

"We won't know what the world's social system will be like in 100 years," but he feels that the people are hoping for the best.

The Draft Is 'In' On Capitol Hill

The Collegiate Press Service

The draft system has become a controversial topic on Capitol Hill as well as college campuses.

FIRST there was general disagreement with Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, head of the Selective Service System, when he supported Michigan Selective Service officials in reclassifying students who had demonstrated at the Ann Arbor office as I-A, or ready for immediate induction.

Then there was talk about a "universal draft" as opposed to the present "selective service system" and still more talk about student deferments and who should get them.

Now a group of 30 Republican Representatives have called for an "immediate" Congressional investigation of the draft.

SPOKESMEN for the group said the call was not a political one. No Democrats were listed simply because the announcement was made before the matter had been discussed with Democratic Representatives.

The Republican group, led by Rep. Robert F. Ellsworth of Kansas, said there was mounting evidence of "gross inefficiency in the National Selective Service System and the Department of Defense administration of the draft."

There was no immediate comment on the proposed investigation by Selective Service officials but Gen. Hershey did refer to it indirectly at a luncheon appearance.

"I have always understood one of the functions of the Congress is to look into how well the laws they pass are carried out," he said.

HERSHEY was explicit, however, when asked if he thought the Selective Service System ought to be reorganized.

"No," he declared. "That's the plain and unadulterated answer. You shouldn't do anything to something that is working."

The general conceded that some inequities existed but said "absolute equity has never been attained."

He said the system has an "unmatched record" of efficiency and in the past five months over 170,000 men had been provided for conscription.

HE WOULD make no comment on charges by the Republican group that the upcoming deferment test will favor science students.

Meanwhile, elsewhere on Capitol Hill, the education subcommittee of the House was also talking about the draft. Earlier the committee had charged Gen. Hershey was "acting as a judge and jury in upholding local boards" when they reclassified student demonstrators as I-A.

HERSHEY, however, claimed it was "clear Congressional intent" to have persons violating the Selective Service Act go into the armed forces rather than face prosecution for violations. In the case of the Ann Arbor demonstrators, the general said they violated the draft laws as well as civil statutes when they sat-in and thus "disrupted the workings of the draft law."

Two of the reclassified students have filed suit against the Selective Service and Gen. Hershey in federal court in New York.

THE QUESTION of reclassification came up after the general briefed the education subcommittee on his plans to furnish local draft boards with new guidelines on the deferment of college students. Hershey was closely questioned on the reclassifications by Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.) and Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Cal.). After the hearing, subcommittee chairman Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) issued the charge that the general had acted as "judge and jury."

The furor over reclassification has made the general almost as controversial as the system he runs. In New York, a leading candidate for the Reform designation for Congress in the 19th district, demanded that Hershey resign because he was "stifling free dissent" by using the draft as a "punitive weapon." R. Peter Straus said "his (Hershey's) administration has reflected an attitude injurious to the American tradition of free dissent."

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

—Gen. Hershey said in an interview a plan for drafting women has been drawn up. He predicted it would never be used but said "as a planner I have to be prepared for every eventuality." He did cite the little-known fact that the U.S. almost resorted to drafting women as nurses during the last days of World War II. The 1944 bill was introduced in Congress but was never acted upon. If women are ever drafted, it would almost certainly be as nurses, the general said.

—STORIES began circulating around Washington about Local Board 100, the board to which registrants outside the U.S. are assigned. With probably what is the lowest draft percentage of any in the nation, its registrants are primarily the children of foreign service families stationed overseas.

—Men in this category must be living overseas when they become 18 and register for the draft. They become eligible for induction as soon as they return to U. S. soil.

Smiles Succeed In Punjab For UMass Exchange Student

"A smile and a song" goes a long way toward overcoming the language barrier in India for 4-H exchange program visitor Nancy Hiersche of Ludlow, according to her latest letter.

Miss Hiersche is an International Farm Youth Exchange visitor to India under a program sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Massachusetts, the National 4-H Foundation and the state 4-H Foundation.

THE LUDLOW GIRL, one of seven daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Hiersche, went to India last September. She writes that she has learned to wear a sari, carry water on her head, harvest hay and rice by hand, and speak, read and write a letter of the Hindi language.

NOW SHE IS IN PUNJAB, where Punjabi is spoken instead of Hindi, doing her best to overcome the language barrier.

She writes: "The villagers I met tried all methods to help me, mainly by sign language or else showing me exactly by taking my hand and leading me to where or to what they wanted me to do and see. They all try to help me learn their language and I really appreciate this."

HER LATEST LETTER concludes: "My most effective tools as an IFYE, especially where the villagers are concerned, are a smile and a song. They seem to understand these."

Miss Hiersche is studying home economics education at Framingham State College and will return there next September for her senior year.

During her India trip, she has visited villages, centers, women's clubs and Gram Sevika training centers set up by the national government to train village extension workers. Her visit will end April 9.

IFYE IS A TWO-WAY exchange between 4-H Clubs in the U.S. and rural people in other countries that brought 108 young people to the U.S. and sent 104 Americans abroad in 1965. Miss Hiersche is one of 16 visiting India.

Maj. Gen. Tours Campus; Briefed On R.O.T.C.

The Military Science Department at UMass was host Wed., Feb. 23, as Maj. Gen. Charles S. O'Malley, Jr., Commanding General of the XIII US Army Corps at Fort Devens visited the UM Campus. Gen. O'Malley visited UMass as the representative of the Commanding General, First US Army.

THE GENERAL was greeted by an Honor Guard composed of UMass ROTC Cadets of the "Bay State Special Forces" and the "Grenadier" Drill Team. Cadet Col. Courtney K. Turner and Cadet Lt. Col. George F. Banks accompanied the General on his review of the Honor Guard.

Moving inside ROTC headquarters, the General was introduced to the active Army personnel who comprise the military science department. Col. Joseph A. Bohnak, the Prof. of Military Science is assisted by four officers and five enlisted men, who make up the department.

The General was then given a briefing on the University's ROTC program by Maj. Roy Fowler, after which he moved to South College for a meeting with UM President, John W. Lederle.

RETURNING TO the ROTC building, Gen. O'Malley attended an informal coffee where he was introduced to outstanding cadet personalities and Miss Suzanne Wanczyk, Commanding Officer of the "Precisionettes" girls' drill team sponsored by the ROTC; Margo Marsten, the reigning Military Ball Queen, and honorary Colonel; and Carol Higgins, Commanding Officer of the "The Colonel's Cadre", a social group sponsored by the ROTC.

A TOUR of the ROTC facilities followed, during which Gen. O'Malley was briefed on some of the extra curricular ROTC activities available on the campus. Among these was the "Bay State Special Forces", a group made up of 35 specially selected cadets who undergo extensive training to learn the skills of the regular Special Forces.

These highly motivated volunteers take part in a tactical problem one weekend per month and train two hours per week mastering special skills. They also participate in training exercises with reserve units, usually acting as aggressor forces. Reserve Special Forces instructors also present some training courses to the cadets.

THE SPECIAL FORCES group is currently in its fourth year of existence at the University. Typical of the training given the cadets is a four-day survival test which took place during the recent February semester break.

During this test the cadets were dispatched to an area near Mt. Toby State Forest with only a poncho and a knife to aid in securing food and shelter for the four-day period. Due to the limited size of the military science department, much of the group's training is done by more advanced cadets. Capt. Richard G. Parker is the group's advisor.

Participation in the ROTC program at UMass is voluntary, and at present 450 cadets are enrolled. The department graduates approximately 50 officers per year into the active Army.

IN ADDITION to the Special Forces Group, male and female Drill Teams, and the "Colonel's Cadre", the ROTC has active rifle and pistol teams which compete throughout Massachusetts and other states.

Gen. O'Malley's visit terminated with a tour of the UMass campus, after which he returned to Ft. Devens.

A Step Forward

Dean of Students William F. Field announces the following response to the student concerns and questions recently expressed in the Collegian and student government. Effective this date the Coordinator of Student Activities, Dr. Mark Noffsinger, will assume the chairmanship of a committee which will include Dean Barnard and Mr. Burke of the Dean of Men's Office, and Deans Curtis and Gonon of the Dean of Women's Office.

The committee charge to respond meaningfully and positively to the fundamental needs which have already been expressed will require the co-operative participation and support of both students and other staff members.

THE IDEA OF THE MULTIVERSITY

By ROBERT ROTSTEIN

In an earlier essay in the Collegian, "Freedom and the University," I discussed bureaucratic paternalism as the major obstacle to student freedom. I will now consider bureaucracy as it affects the university itself. In this article I will discuss a new concept of the university.

TODAY, THE UNIVERSITY IS BECOMING A "MULTIVERSITY"—a complex organization inextricably linked up with the society in which it exists. "Multiversity" is a term popularized by Clark Kerr, president of the University of California, and it is on his writings that I base this article. All quotations come from Kerr's book The Uses of the University.

KERR'S CENTRAL THESIS is that the American university is currently going through its second great transformation. "The first occurred during roughly the last quarter of the nineteenth century, when the land grant movement and German intellectualism were together bringing extraordinary change. The current transformation will cover roughly the quarter century after World War II. The university is being called upon to educate previously unimaginable numbers of students; to merge its activities with industry as never before; to adapt to and rechannel new intellectual currents . . . The university has become a prime instrument of national purpose. This is new. This is the essence of the transformation now engulfing our universities." (Emphasis added).

Kerr continues: "Basic to this transformation is the growth of the 'knowledge industry,' which is coming to permeate government and business and to draw into it more and more people raised to higher levels of skill. . . . Knowledge has certainly never in history been so central to the conduct of an entire society. What the railroads did for the second half of the last century and the automobile for the first half of this century may be done for the second half of this century by the knowledge industry; that is, to serve as the focal point for national growth. And the university is at the center of the knowledge process."

Thus, the crucial point to remember is that the university, far from being a secluded ivory tower, is now an integral part of the national purpose. As its role in society becomes more complex, the university is more and more becoming a partner of business and government. Some statistics will demonstrate this point.

IN THE FISCAL YEAR 1962-63, the federal government alone invested about $1.2 billion in American colleges and universities, 40% of which came from the Department of Defense. Most government funds go into only a few schools. Thus, in 1960, 68% of the money went into only 25 schools. M.I.T. led the way with appropriations of $80 million a year from the Defense Department, while its regular budget is about one quarter that amount. Kerr himself estimates that the production, distribution, and consumption of "knowledge" in all forms accounts for 29% of the gross national product. "The university and segments of industry are becoming more alike. As the university becomes tied to the world of work, the professor—at least in the natural and some of the social science—takes on the characteristics of an entrepreneur. . . . The two worlds are merging physically and psychologically."

What does all this mean? "The federal agencies will exercise increasingly specific controls and the universities dependent on this new standard of living will accept these controls. The universities themselves will have to exercise more stringent controls by centralizing authority, particularly through the audit process. In a few situations, self-restraint has not been enough; as one result, greater external restraint will be imposed in most situations."

SPEAKING OF THE ROLE OF THE UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT, Kerr refers to him as the "Captain of the Bureaucracy." He becomes "a many-faced character, in the sense that he must face in many directions at once while contriving to turn his back on no important group." In this context, the president becomes a mediator whose first task it is to secure peace among the many elements and influences to which the university-turned-multi-versity is subjected. The president is not an innovator or leader in the conventional sense; he is now a mediator between conflicting interests, a mediator who "wins few clear-cut victories; he must aim more at avoiding the worst than seizing the best. He must find satisfaction in being equally distasteful to each of his constituencies."

AS THE MULTIVERSITY MATURES, the teacher's role also changes. Teaching students becomes less central; research is now more important. As a professor is promoted and gets more prestige, the more separated he becomes from his students. There are now three kinds of faculty: those who teach, those who do research, and those who do both. Some teachers become administrators. Others become "professional men" with a home base on campus but with clients scattered across the country. Some faculty, however, choose to teach as they have in the past.

In light of these developments, the students become restless. They find themselves everywhere confronted by impersonalization and mechanization of learning. The multiversity is seen as a gigantic factory, and they are the raw materials to be processed. Angered at being molded for a society "out there," the students become increasingly sickened with "the system." A revolutionary mood develops among them. Feeling themselves more and more subjugated and depersonalized, the students look at the multiversity as an alien institution.

TO SUM UP, Kerr's main points are these: the university today is undergoing a major transformation under which it becomes an instrument of the national purpose. Its major functions are to engage in research and to train students so they are suited for work in an increasingly complex and technical society. As the multiversity grows, it will become more subject to external control. The schools themselves will have to centralize power and authority.

In this context, the president becomes a mediator who attempts to pacify the multitude of interests to which the multiversity is subjected, the faculty become more preoccupied with research than with teaching, and the students become dissatisfied and alienated with the growth of mechanization and bureaucracy.

— Letters to the Editor —

Are We to Be Conceived of As Idiots?

To the Editor:

Are we to be conceived of as idiots? Are we to be taken for complete dolts, incapable of judging speeches and actions for what they mean? Our president emits words which do not always represent reality.

The Words: "The U.S. seeks no military bases in Southeast Asia."

The Reality: (Senator Wayne Morse, Feb. 25) "Do not tell the American people again that the U.S. seeks no military bases in South Vietnam . . . We are building large, powerful military installations in Southeast Asia and Thailand and all the world knows we are not going to walk out on them. The provision in this bill (the $4.8 billion appropriation bill to finance part of the Vietnam war) for the building of those installations is the proof of the inconsistency between the statements of our President and what we are doing."

For those who feel that Senator Morse stands alone, fear not lack of numbers—one needs merely (!) to read the papers to observe the growing apall among our Congressmen as U.S. policies expose themselves for what they are.

The Words: "The U.S. will withdraw from Vietnam after Vietnamese aggression ceases."

The Reality: (Senator Stephen Young) "I saw an officer's club being erected at Camranh Bay. It seems to me that the club now being constructed would last in perpetuity. We are building permanent bases at Camranh Bay and elsewhere in Vietnam and others in Thailand. It appears that we intend to be there for a long time."

Again, are we such dull-witted individuals that we can be told one thing, observe another taking place, and still be expected to believe that which was told to us? Does the president honestly (!) consider it possible; are his words so mesmerizing?

The Words: "We welcome elections in South Vietnam."

The Reality: (Senator Morse) "We say we welcome elections, but of course we mean elections held after the country and the people have been pacified. And by pacification, we mean that American troops go through the countryside and wipe out whatever Vietcong resistance can be found and the local South Vietnamese troops occupy the cleared area and establish a half-military, half-civilian authority in our wake. When we have established that condition throughout all of South Vietnam, then presumably we will be ready for an election."

Let us stop with the words already and bring only the reality into view. In order to avoid using harsh language, I will simply say that the truth has been masked a bit. These masks are not new. We have recently seen one whiskered over the Dominican Republic episode (see Senator Fulbright's September 15 unmasking of the "words," or the more recent and meticulous one by Theodore Draper in the December issue of Commentary). We have seen them cover over "happenings" in Guatemala, in Cuba, in fact over most of the Cold War situations; and now more and more they appear to hide the truth about the war in Vietnam (unfortunately, we must recall Sergeant Duncan's unpleasant expose quoted, in part, by the Collegian from last month's Ramparts).

What are the masks for? Are they to protect National Security (as we are told)? Do the American people wish to be handed fabrications in the "best interests" of National Security (whatever these interests might be)? In fact, do Americans dare accept the myths handed them without constant, critical questioning in view of the immense horrors at hand? Either the mythmakers are skilled at their business or else the American public is willing to allow this fact-falsification in defense of what we are told is the "threat to American interests."

First, it was Russian expansion which needed containment. When this expansion proved, in fact, to be more like a withdrawal from many countries she occupied at the end of World War II, as in China, Finland, Korea, etc. substituted in its place was Chinese aggression. But China does not occupy a foot of any other country's territory nor does she have a single military man upon foreign soil.

Yet the U. S. Government which has thousands of bases on other people's soil, which maintains 443 anti-guerrilla teams in 49 countries (as of 1964, according to President Johnson), which has overthrown numerous foreign governments (e.g. Iran, Guatemala), sponsored invasions and made interventions (Cuba and the Dominican Republic to mention only two), charges the Soviet Union and China with aggression and plans for world domination!

There's the rub. What is it they say, always claim?

The Word: "Containment."

The Reality: "Vietnam . . . ?"

Marc Greenberg '67

Was He Kidding?

To the Editor:

When I first finished Mr. Greenberg's letter on Vietnam (March 7), I thought maybe the guy was kidding or, at worst, engaging in a little political satire. However, upon re-reading this diatribe against dissension, I do believe that it was intended to be serious.

If that be the case, then let me say the following:

Mr. Greenberg's views show about as much flexibility, insight, and imagination as something one would expect to find in the "Letters to the Editor" section of Pravda or Izvestia.

Furthermore, if Congressmen were as vertebraless as his remarks infer they should be, they would probably soon find themselves in an analogous position to members of the "legislative" organs in the nation where those papers originate.

Don't Touch That Dial

Hi Folks; I'm Phil Dip and this is your eleventh hour fun show. Your earlobes are glued to DIP radio, WLOSE, 065 on your radio dial, where there are more games, jokes and talk than on any other station in the Pioneer Valley. Before we hear the big new pidkity clickidy number one song for this week, let's take time out to hear a message from the LOSE Public Service line.

"Hello. This is Oswald 'Radio Code' Tippo. I Hope that you support the station that supports the code."

Thank you Oswald for another one of your inspiring but brief messages. And speaking of brief, it's time for some news briefs, brought to you by B.V.D. Around the corner, over the river, and through the woods, in the LOSE headlines yesterday: Mayor Ryan authorized the city council to authorize authorizations on city authority; Mrs. Ima Yoind, of 69 Beret Road, Springfield, was splashed with slush on her way to work yesterday. Mrs. Yoind works at a simple bench assembly job; Herb Broombaker reports that Ozzie Oppit was stabbed in the back yesterday — when Cartwright's Jenny Station clandestinely lowered its prices one cent below those of the Esso-B Station down the street; and finally, Red China exploded a nuclear bomb on New York City. Details on these and other big LOSER stories will follow on our regularly scheduled newscast next Sunday. Remember, LOSE is there, whether the story breaks now or yesterday. Speaking of whether, reporting from the LOSE weather cock, he promises today to be partly sunny, partly cloudy, with a chance of rain or snow early in the afternoon, tapering off in the near future. Possible clearing later on, with a slight wind, varying from 0-55 inland; becoming dark this evening, with a probability of morning tomorrow, the sun rising from the east.

HO HO HO, that's the news from LOSE, and speaking of east, it's time for another clue in the LOSE Easter egg-hunt contest. Yes folks, it pays to listen to the Impotent LOSE. As you know, the LOSE Easter egg was laid by the wife of our LOSE weather cock, and is hidden somewhere in the greater New England area. Now listen closely to this LOSE chlinin' and rhyming clue:

To find the egg, you oughta
Look for a hunk of cheese
Near a body of clear water
That is covered 'round by trees.

If you don't find it there
Look for a patch of grass
The egg could be anywhere
It might even be up your chimney.

For anyone who can guess the whereabouts of the egg, we have a slew of wonderful prizes: a guided tour of the UMass Undergrad Married Housing Rubble; 2 free tickets to the video tape replay of the UMass-UConn "game"; your choice of a free trip to one of two wild circuses: Barnum and Bailey or Bombardier and Dacey. And, if you find the egg before now, you will also win a kit including: a package of stained-steel blades; 5 "Down with Down" buttons; a pair of boots made for walking; and a portable table that automatically propels itself to the back of the hatch. How great is that, LOSER listeners? I'll bet all you out there are hoping to guess the secret hiding place of the LOSE Easter egg.

And speaking of secrets, it's time for the LOSE secret name of the day. Today's secret name is Oswald Tippo. If your name is Oswald Tippo, and you have the guts to admit it, we have a shiny new quarter waiting for you at the LOSE studies.

And now let's hear the number one song. But before we listen to that LOSER Big One, let's hear the LOSE good time. The LOSE good time is 11:32. And speaking of time, isn't it time you trusted your money to the shyllocks at the Valley Forge Bank. Valley Forge now pays 2 1/4% interest compounded annually. Remember Valley Forge's Motto: "Valley Forge will treat you fair and square; they will never give you a phony deal."

And speaking of phonies, it's time to give you LOSER listeners another clue in the LOSE Bat-phone contest. The rules are simple, but for those of you who still don't know them, I'll repeat them again. All you have to do is guess the seven numbers that will ring the LOSE Bat-phone. The odds against it are 19,487,170 to 1, but we'll be pulling for you anyway. Isn't that right, Batman and Robin?

"Holy Mary Batman, today's clue is that if you can't conceive today's number, than you need someone to save ya."

Thank you Robin; you're really sounding chipper today. And speaking of chipper, let's hear a word from the potato chip man himself, Mr. Shuler, who will tell you how to win $10 (Would you believe six soggy potato frills and a good-guys sweat-shirt??) Take it away, Mr. Shuler.

"Hi folks. This is Mr. Shuler knock-knock-knocking on your door-door-doors. I'm a 39 year-old grown man who has nothing better to do all day than knock on people's doors, stut-stut-stuttering and offering them $10 to spell my name correctly."

How much money have you given away in the last three months, Mr. Shuler?

"Only $20, Phil. I guess people just don't know how to spell nowadays."

Just how do you spell your name, Mr. Shuler?

"It's easy, Phil: S-C-H-Y-O-O-

U-L-I-E-R-R-E! (It's that last "E" that always trips 'em up, Phil.)

Holy Mackerel, Mr. Schyooli-erre, you're really sounding great today. And speaking of Mackerel, it's time to hear the melodious voice of Ed Mackerel, America's #1 Chevrolay commercial man. And speaking of #1, I'll be playing that #1 song right after we hear a few words from Ed that will make you want to jump right up and buy a Chevrolay, isn't that right, Ed?

"Hi folks! Jump right up and buy a new Chevrolay from Ed Mackerel Chevrolay in Part-white. You name the payments, I'll have a good laugh, then I'll name the payments and we'll make a deal. Ten minutes can save you an extra ten minutes. Thanks folks."

And thank you Ed; the ending on your commercial was superb, as usual. And speaking of ending, our time has run out and our show must end. Tune in again tomorrow night on my five hour special show when I will once again play the top song in Greater Springfield. Good night from LOSER radio.

LAURELS TO HENDRICKSON

Being in a state of euphoric excitement last Thursday night when I wrote my inaugural editorial, I failed to mention perhaps the most important factor in the growth and future success of the Collegian.

This factor is Peter Hendrickson, our last Editor-in-Chief, who was unanimously elected Editor Emeritus at last week's elections.

For the past year, Peter has provided leadership and an unquenchable spirit of adventure for the staff and editors of the Collegian. Under Pete, we first tried the idea of an Experiment Week for the Collegian; then we came out with our first magazine in December; shortly after second semester began, Peter again was the initiating force behind a new editorship on the Collegian, that of Special Projects Editor.

There have been many, daily, little things which we could reiterate about Pete and his excellent job as Editor-in-Chief. Suffice it to say that Pete will be Editor Emeritus long after many have come and gone.

Tom Donovan and staff.

A Memorandum from Dean Curtis

As we all know, Tuesday's Collegian (March 1) included gross inaccuracies and a "contrived" false impression of the way women's regulations are formulated. Nonetheless, it has pointed up the need for uniformity in all 17 residences in interpreting and enforcing the regulations which have been agreed upon by the (student) Women's Affairs Committee, approved by the Dean of Women for the University, and printed in the blue book of regulations, all according to our long-established procedure.

Two reported instances show that some confusion exists on "late library privilege".

The expectation is that a Freshman or Sophomore will return at her 11:00 closing hour unless she needs to study late at Goodell or Morrill library and has honestly signed out to use the privilege to study there, returning to her dorm at 11:45 to 12:00.

If she completes her studies earlier, however, she need not wait until that time to return. A house "closes" to men callers at 11:00 but is open for Seniors, Juniors and late library students to return at any time until midnight. Paid office duty 11-12:00 was allocated to each dorm to be sure of this coverage.

Skip Spiro to Sing

The explosive sound of Skip Spiro and his orchestra will be heard at the Cape Cod Lounge, S.U. this Sunday, March 13.

UM Students To Give Aid In Dixie

Fifteen University students have signed to join a four-college Spring vacation work project in Mississippi. Working with the Mississippi Delta Ministry, they will take part in political education and voter registration efforts among Delta Region Negroes.

Since the passage of Civil Rights legislation last year, voter registration has disappeared from the national headlines. With the heat of national publicity off, reactionary forces have succeeded in slowing registration by forced evictions of Negro tenants, according to Bruce Hillton of the Delta staff.

A political voice is essential now, at a time in which Delta Negroes are being forced to leave the area, unprepared with any technical skills to secure jobs elsewhere.

The University group meets Friday at 4:00 P.M. in the Nantucket Room of the Student Union. Still needed are volunteers with cars and further financial aid. Local contact is Chaplain Scott's office in the Student Union.

The core of Skip Spiro's jazz conception is the production of a modern or "hip" sound through a biting, precise brass section, driving saxes, and a powerful, hardworking drummer.

Spiro, leader of a similar type band when in New York, is now launching a new mood as he launches a new season—a contemporary sound for dancing.

His favorite package is a formal dance with a "sit on the floor" intermission jazz concert. The band already has bookings

STOSO Gives Progress Banquet

The Student Union Ballroom was the scene Tuesday evening of the 12th Annual Progress Banquet of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

Following an excellent roast beef dinner with all the trimmings, there was a very brief address by President Lederle.

Lederle said that Stockbridge might be called the "phantom school of the University." He mentioned some instances in which people had thought Stockbridge was a branch of the University in Stockbridge, Mass.

"I have observed Stockbridge for five years," Lederle said. "I realize that you have had problems. You have not had the best housing. I have not been happy about this."

Lederle expressed his happiness with the move to integrated housing and suggested it might be part of the answer to the problem of Stockbridge's isolation.

In closing, the president noted the "feeling of appreciation and of high motivation" that has marked Stockbridge students. "Stockbridge School is one of the most important things we are doing at the University."

Dean Jeffrey addressed the students and read the names of students who have achieved Lear—an organization for Stockbridge students who have maintained a cumulative average of 3.4 or higher for three semesters. Jeffrey then read the Dean's List of students with averages between 3.0 and 3.4.

The reading was followed by presentation of awards for outstanding Stockbridge students. These included:

Outstanding STOSO member: Joseph Roseberry.

$100 STOSO Scholarships: Peter Gray '66, Merrill Welcker '66, Richard Hawk '67, Francis Mickulis '67.

$200 N.Y. Farmer's Scholarship: Donald Yonka '66.

$33 N.Y. Farmer's Scholarship: Jarl Anderson '67, Edward Horton '67, Karen Simpter '67.

Floriculture Scholarship: Francis Larrivee '67.

Outstanding Senator award: Peter Parkhurst.

Professor Dennison was presented the Outstanding Professor Award.

Outstanding player award for soccer went to Russell Millind, while in basketball the outstanding player award was given to Paul Gielley. Awards were also made to noteworthy members of the rifle team.

Dedication of the Stockbridge yearbook was made to Miss Lotta Crabtree in gratitude for the sizeable contributions she has made for agricultural education.

Laugh Foundation

Humor Good for Health

The National Laugh Foundation says girls giggle more than men—and thus are more stable mentally, emotionally and politically, The Associate Press reports.

"Women enjoy themselves more," says the foundation's director, George V. Lewis. "They're closer to life."

"Men are under compulsive pressure to feed a family, hold a job, and make a living. When they're funny, they do wacky things. But for overall humor, the girls win."

Ideally, says Mr. Lewis, the wife should be the smiling, laughing, happy cord of the marriage. She should be the stimulant to relaxation and pleasure, he says.

"Women would be better politicians than men," Mr. Lewis says. "We're grooming a girl to run for President. Her secret weapon is wearing a smile."

"Men take life and politics too seriously. Each politician puts upon himself the weight of the world. Politics are dull."

Mr. Lewis and his colleagues are proposing to President Johnson that Secretary of State Dean Rusk take a comedian—Jimmy Durante, Bob Hope or Phyllis Diller—to the Geneva disarmament conference as an aide.

"Other countries should do likewise," he says. "DeGaulle could send Marcel Marceau, England could sponsor Peter Sellers and Italy, Toto the clown."

"Mao Tse-tung could bring a Chinese laundry man."

Late Curfew

Women's Inter-Residence Hall Council announces plans for an extended curfew until 1 a.m. on Fri., Mar. 11 in U.M. women's residences.

Women may come in up to one half hour after regular closing so long as they pay 2¢ per extra minute, but they must pay, or they will be considered late. Proceeds will go to Campus Chest.

through May. Skip has booked the big band for the Amherst College Prom and has a few more offers on the way.

This Sunday the group will be playing arrangements from the books of some of the great names in big band music: Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Count Basie, Maynard Ferguson.

Amherst, Mass.

A wide range of contemporary art is shown on exhibit at Amherst's new art gallery, arts intempo. The most striking thing about the gallery is that it shows only posters, and is the first to exhibit solely through this medium.

Poster Art Exhibited

Amherst's new gallery, arts intempo, is hanging American posters during its March exhibition. This marks the first time an American gallery has devoted an entire show exclusively to contemporary originals in this medium.

Commissioned by List Art Posters through the American Federation of Arts, this medium's revival challenges our most versatile artists to bring today's images to the widest possible audience.

The importance of this has been recognized during the past year by many public institutions, museums, libraries and universities, who have been acquiring complete sets of List Posters for their graphics collections.

As a neighbor of Amherst College, Smith, Holyoke and the University of Massachusetts, arts intempo has conceived its first function to be educational. This responsibility has permitted arts intempo to exhibit a wider variety of contemporary styles and media than most metropolitan galleries find possible.

Indeed, arts intempo has been delighted to find that risk is the safest principle by which to run a gallery in a college town.

With its poster exhibition, arts intempo is again breaking new ground. Too long the poster has hung in the shadow of commercial design, a means rather than an aesthetic end. At best, the poster has usually been associated with travel spoils, bull-fights and airline exhorta.

In these lights much of the best work in this medium, such as that of Toulouse-Lautrec and Matisse, can too often be ignored. Moreover, for many people the poster also has childish and even embarrassing associations—in kindergarten, huddled over your jars of tempera, you made posters and your play-mates said, "That's nice—what is it?"

These are some of the impressions that arts intempo seeks to correct in its current exhibition of such contemporaries as Albers, Anuszkiewicz, Baskin, Cararella, Frascini, Jensen, Lindner, Ortman, Stamos and others.

Sex and the Single Robot

By JOHN LANNON,
Science Editor

Picture a computer programmed to turn on two other computers and those two turning on four more and so on, just like cell replication in living creatures.

This is what Dr. Walter Stahl is doing in Oregon, only on a far more complicated basis as he attempts to develop computer programs to simulate the automatic self-replicating systems of life.

His report to the Biphysical Society discloses, for the first time that he and his coworkers at the Regional Primate Center at Beavertown, Ore. have simulated the life cycles of cells which depend on some 60 different molecular processes before they metabolize, mature and replicate, or reproduce, themselves.

And like living cells, the computer programs have a built-in stop light, one that halts growth once the number of cells reaches eight. This, in effect, creates small colonies of simulated cells, colonies far simpler but quite akin to the organization of primitive life forms.

THOUGH THE experiments are limited, both in the number of reactions taking place and in the size of the colonies, the computer simulation is a justification for the theories of the famous mathematician Von Neumann. He predicted that rules governing operations of automata, or robots, would be applicable to self-replicating biological systems.

In an interview at the society's 10th annual meeting, the Harvard and MIT-trained physician-biophysicist reported his computer techniques "are certainly no breakthrough. But they are interesting and totally new techniques for studying life."

Dr. Stahl noted "this is something which Von Neumann started but which can now be applied in the light of new biological knowledge."

The procedure of programming which develops an algorithm, or computer method, is based on human genetic theory. One gene or controller of heredity to produce one enzyme. An enzyme is the chemical mediator which turns the processes on or off; speeds them up or slows them down, initiates a sexual reproduction, or mitosis, or simply halts them for all time.

DR. STAHL is using an SDS-920 computer for his project. In effect, what it does is go through all the motions of a living system, even accounting for the burning of energy in a form analogous to the cell's use of ATP, adenosine-triphosphate.

It is capable, at the end of its machinations, of producing a tape which will bring exactly the same reactions if fed to another computer.

It takes account of postulated relationships with other cells and with the transport of fuel and waste, through the cell wall.

For instance, the outer coat of the cell wall which is made of large molecules of protein is thought to control the passage of nutrients and electrolytes in and out of the surrounding jacket.

Dr. Stahl's model also accounts for things like the presence of polysaccharides, sugar chains which are thought to make cells stick together in clumps, and for proteins.

THE PROJECT is but one of a number of new approaches to biology, things which have brought about a revolution in what was once a stodgy field of science.

Another is the booming field of bionics, a branch of molecular biology which has to do with self-organizing systems like chromosomes. A third is electron-microscopy.

All involve the application of mathematical or physical principles to life, particularly on a molecular level.

Like many another mathematical concepts which were once thought to be totally inapplicable to biology, algorithmic programming and the theory of automata are totally new tools, said Dr. Stahl.

Carried to their logical conclusion, he said, they might someday be applied to create a breed of robots which might carry out man's functions in space, on the moon for instance.

"YOU WOULD SEND them to the moon, say, and you would design them so that they would carry out certain functions. And you would build into them a capability for carrying out these tasks even if the robot next to them failed, even make them self-perpetuating up to a point.

"Cells are very good this way. That's one of the things we're trying to learn more about. If you destroy up to about 80 per cent of them, they will still replicate normally... as long as you don't hurt the genes, the algorithm."

Five ideal dates. Three dollars($3)

Join in the most adventurous experiment of our time. Operation Match. Let the IBM 7090 Computer (the world's most perfect matchmaker) stamp out blind dates for you.

Two Harvard juniors started it. 100,000 students have done it. Now you and 3,400,000 college students in 1500 colleges in 50 cities can sign up and join in!

Just send us the coupon. We'll send you the Operation Match Quantitative Personality Projection Test pronto!

Then return the questionnaire with $3.00. What you're like and what you like will be translated into our 7090's memory file. It will scan the qualifications of every member of the opposite sex from this geographic area. Then it will select the five or more matches best for you.

You'll receive your names, addresses and telephone numbers within three weeks. You'll be what your date is looking for. Your date will be what you are looking for. In other words: the matches will be mutual.

Dear IBM 7090,
I am 17 or over (and 27 or under) and I want to help stamp out blind dates. So mail me my questionnaire. Quick!

Editor and Paper Canned

The Collegiate Press Service
The Hunter College Meridian was suspended from publication and its editor and copy editor suspended from classes last week in a climax of a series of clashes between the student newspaper and the Dean of Students.

On Mar. 2, Meridian editor Roberta Kantor was denied an exemption to run for a second term as editor by a student-administered board which judges grade qualifications for major student positions. The editorship of the campus newspaper requires a grade point average of 2.5; Miss Kantor had a 2.44. The two students on the board split on whether to allow the exemption in her case, and Dean of Students Glen Nygreen cast the deciding vote against her.

PUBLICATION of the newspaper was suspended the next day when it came out with signed editorials by the editor and editorial board promising to continue publication under the present leadership. The editor and copy editor were suspended from classes for one week pending a hearing when the Dean charged them with breaking into the Meridian office, on which he had installed a new lock.

The Meridian has charged that Dean Nygreen is conducting a "personal vendetta" against Miss Kantor and the newspaper. In the editorial defying the exemptions ruling, the editorial board pointed out that when Miss Kantor's grade average was only 2.25 last semester, "before any Meridians had been published under (her) editorship," she was granted an exemption.

"Since she has been editor, Miss Kantor's grades have risen to 2.44. Evidently, the Dean's estimation of the Meridian has not risen in proportion to Miss Kantor's index," the editorial said.

THE CONFLICT between the paper and the Dean of Students erupted toward the end of last semester. Dean Nygreen brought the paper before the student-faculty-administration Judicial Board on charges of having liquor in the office during a Christmas party.

In suspending the newspaper, Nygreen at the same time asked the Student Council to begin forming a new student newspaper structure for the campus.

SDS Presents Felix Finger

Reminiscent of the Saladin: 4-College Students for a Democratic Society is presenting the Asparagus Valley Folk Festival this Sunday evening at 7:30 at Mahar Auditorium.

Performers have been invited from all over New England; several artists from Harvard and MIT will make their first appearance in Western Massachusetts.

Many top performers from the Four-College area will also entertain, with music ranging from Bluegrass to Rhythm and Blues. Banjo pickers and original songwriters will take turns on stage. Performing will be a group known as Felix Finger and the Four Thumbs.

(For those who wonder where the Asparagus Valley is, this school is situated in the middle of it. A ride from Northampton to Amherst along Route 9 will pass by a large sign reading "Welcome to the Asparagus Valley.")

The biggest thing since the Broken Egg—the Folk Festival will show diverse types of entertainment at a minimum cost.

12th Night Tickets On Sale

On Sat., Apr. 2, 1966, the Student Union Program Council will sponsor a trip to Stratford, Conn. to view a matinee performance of Twelfth Night at the American Shakespeare Festival and Academy.

A chartered bus will leave the S.U. at 10 a.m. on Apr. 2 and will return at approximately 5 p.m. Tickets including bus and theater fees, are now on sale at the S.U. Box Office for $2.50. There is a very limited number of tickets to be sold, thus immediate purchase is advised.

Persons making the trip are being asked to bring their own lunches. Picnic facilities and beverages are available on the theatre grounds.

WAKE ME WHEN IT'S OVER

The trouble with early morning classes is that you're too sleepy. At late morning classes you're too hungry. At early afternoon classes you're too logy. At late afternoon classes you're too hungry again. The fact is—and we might as well face it—there is no good time of day to take a class.

What shall we do then? Abandon our colleges to the ivy? I say no! I say America did not become the hope of mankind and the world's largest producer of butterfats and tallows by running away from a fight!

If you're always too hungry or too sleepy for class, then let's hold classes when you're not too hungry or sleepy; namely, while you're eating or sleeping.

Classes while eating are a simple matter. Just have a lecturer lecture while the eaters eat. But watch out for noisy foods. I mean who can hear a lecturer lecture when everybody is crunching celery or matzo or like that? Serve quiet stuff—like anchovy paste on a doughnut, or steaming bowls of lamb fat.

Now let us turn to the problem of learning while sleeping. First, can it be done?

Yes, it can. Psychologists have proved that the brain is definitely able to assimilate information during sleep. Take, for instance, a recent experiment conducted by a leading Eastern university (Stanford). A small tape recorder was placed under the pillow of the subject, a freshman named Wrobert Wright. When Wrobert was fast asleep, the recorder was turned on. Softly, all through the night, it repeated three statements in Wrobert's slumbering ear:

1. Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109 and is called "The Founder of English Eclectic Philosophy."
2. The banana plant is not a tree but a large perennial herb.

3. The Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated in 1914 at Sarajevo by a young nationalist named Mijlas Cvetnik, who has been called "The Trigger of World War I."

When Wrobert awoke in the morning, the psychologists said to him, "Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109. What is he called?"

Wrobert promptly answered, "Perennial Herb."

Next they asked him, "What has Mijlas Cvetnik been called?"

Wrobert replied, "Perennial Serb."

Finally they said, "Is the banana plant a tree?"

"To be honest," said Wrobert, "I don't know too much about bananas. But if you gents want any information about razor blades, I'm your man."

"Well," said the psychologists, "can you tell us a blade that shaves closely and cleanly without nicking, pricking, scratching, scraping, scoring, gouging, grinding, flaying or flensing?"

"Yes, I can," said Wrobert. "Personna's Stainless Steel Blades. Not only does Personna give you a true luxury shave, but it gives you heaps and gobs and bushels and barrels of true luxury shaves—each one nearly as truly luxurious as the first."

"Land's sake!" said the psychologists.

"Moreover," said Wrobert, "Personna is available not only in the Double Edge style blade, but also in the Injector style blade."

"Great balls of fire!" said the psychologists.

"So why don't you rush to your dealer and get some Personnas at once?" said Wrobert.

"We will," said the psychologists, twinkling, "but there is something we have to do first."

Whereupon they awarded Wrobert an honorary L.L.B. (Lover of Luxury Blades) degree, and then, linking arms, they sang and danced and bobbed for apples till the campfire had turned to embers.

Researchers Roam Country Recording Local Expressions

In the Midwest they drink pop, in the East soda and in Boston tonic — the same beverage in each case but with a different regional name.

Two UMass graduate have a key part in a five-year project to record and index regional language differences like these for the Dictionary of Regional English of the American Dialect Society.

THE STUDENTS are Mrs. Ruth Porter and Reino Maki, both of whom began their studies in regional American English under a UMass authority in the field, Prof. Audrey Duckert.

The American Dialect Society, founded at Harvard University in 1889, has been gathering material for its regional English dictionary for nearly three-quarters of a century.

THE PROJECT got a big boost recently when the U.S. Office of Education awarded it a $490,000 grant to gather and record as fully as possible, before they are forever lost, all words and expressions that are used locally rather than nationwide by native-born Americans speaking English as their mother tongue.

Headquarters of the five-year project is the University of Wisconsin: field researchers like Mrs. Porter and Maki plan to roam all over the U.S. in "word wagons" camper-type vans fitted with tape recorders and living accommodations.

Mrs. Porter is now in Florida, talking to local speakers and taping their conversations. Maki is doing the same thing in Oklahoma.

Each of the UMass grads will work north as spring advances.

Later this year they will be joined by other researchers.

Prof. Frederic G. Cassidy, University of Wisconsin language specialist who heads the project, hopes to keep five "word wagons" roaming the U.S. for the full five years of the grant. "We want to make at least 1000 tapes of American speech from all over the country," he said.

THE RESEARCHERS will cover the 50 states, go into cities as well as rural areas, and examine written as well as spoken language. They will collect regional fiction of all kinds, autobiographies, diaries, travel accounts and newspapers.

Common household words, names of plants or animals, weather terms, everyday expressions—as many as possible will be assembled.

SOCIOLOGY CLUB

Members will meet in the Hampden Rm., SU, on Friday, March 11 at 7:00 P.M. to discuss and plan a project.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS

There will be a bus on Sat., Mar. 12 leaving North Dining Commons for Belchertown State School at 1:15. All those wishing to spend an afternoon working with the mentally retarded (teaching, playing games, going for walks, etc.) are urged to attend. Orientation and a tour of the school will be held for those who haven't been before.

FINANCIAL AID

Applications for all types of financial aid for the academic year 1966-67 and summer school 1966 are now avail-collects under beds, for example, can have a dozen different names in a dozen different parts of the country, according to Dr. Cassidy. Dufflewuzz, collywobles, housemoss, rats, mice, fuzz, fuzzywuzzies, wollies or dust kittens are some common ones.

The final step in the five-year dictionary project will be reading and collating material. A staff of 100 volunteer readers from the American Dialect Society will help and a computer will be used for data processing.

able in placement and financial aid. Machmer Hall. The deadline for returning the completed application is April 15. Late applications will be considered after the needs have been met of those who applied on time.

FORESTRY CLUB

Dr. Walter Lyford will give a talk on "Changes in the Forest in New England since Glaciation." Refreshments will be served. The meeting will be in Holdsworth Hall on Mar. 14 at 7:30 P.M.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA

There will be a party to make stuffed animals for Shriner's Hospital at Farley Lodge on Sun., Mar. 13 from 2:00-5:00 P.M.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT

The Department of Music will present a Student Recital on Wed., Mar. 16 at 8:00 P.M. in Bartlett Aud. This is the sixth in the series of Student Recitals and is open to the public, free of charge.

ARMCHAIR GENERALS

War games aficionados, students of military history, and all other interested students are welcome. See details on posters in the lobby of the SU, or in either North or South Dining Commons. The meeting will take place in the Plymouth Rm. on Mar. 13 at 2:00 P.M.

NORTHERN EDUCATIONAL SERVICE

NES now has a bulletin board. It is located in the SU, across from the ride board, between the Outing Club and Scuba Club boards.

FOUR COLLEGE MISSISSIPPI PROJECT

All interested in the Mississippi Delta project, taking place during Spring vacation should come the Plymouth Rm., SU, Friday, Mar. 11 at 4:00 P.M. All interested especially those with cars, should attend.

CRITIQUE

DEADLINE FOR CRITIQUE PUBLICATION is fast approaching. There are still some summaries left to be written up. Anyone who's interested in writing, please contact Art Gillum in Franklin Rm., SU or Greenough Dorm.

SPEECH EXAMINATION

Students who have been granted an exemption from the basic course in speech (Speech 101) will have an opportunity to earn two credits toward graduation by successful completion of a written examination administered by the Department of Speech.

This examination is scheduled for Thurs., April 25 at 6:00 P.M. in Bartlett Aud. Students intending to take this examination must register in the Speech Office (330 Bartlett Hall) by April 25. Instructions for preparing for the examinations will be given to each student when he registers for the examination.

AMHERST RAILWAY SOCIETY

Mr. Frank Welcome will present "Hauling Around 50 States," with colored film and slides of steam and diesel. He is the only member who has photographed all kinds of railroading in all the states. You won't want to miss this fascinating meeting. See you there on Tues., Mar. 15 at 7:45 P.M. in Goessmann Hall, Rm. 152.

STUDENT RELIGIOUS LIBERALS

SRL is sponsoring Rev. Mason Olds speaking on the "Death of God Theologies and Theologians," on Sunday, Mar. 13 at 7:00 P.M. in Farley Lodge. This will be preceded by a cost supper. All welcome.

SCIENCE-FICTION CLUB

Science-Fiction Convention in Boston Mar. 11, 12, and 13 at the Statler-Hilton. Guest of honor: Frederick Pohl. Other speakers include Ben Bova, Hal Clement, and Lester del Rey. A report on the convention will be given and tapes will be played of major speakers. This meeting will be held in the Worcester "A" on Mon., Mar. 14, at 5:30-10:30 P.M. Members of the Room Committee please come! Important! Everyone invited.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Any senior majoring or minoring in education who has a 2.6 cumulative average and is interested in Kappa Delta Pi, National Education Honor Society, will please leave name and average with Dr. Fiorino, Ed. Bldg. Rm. 206 by March 18.

HISTORY CLUB DINNER

Mr. Pope at the history department will be guest of honor. The dinner will cost $1.50. Please sign up in the history office by Mar. 15. The dinner will be in the Berkshire Rm., SU., on Wed., Mar. 16 at 6:00 P.M.

REVELERS

Classes of 1969, 1964, 1967: Reveler applications must be turned in to RSO by 5:00 P.M. on Wed., Mar. 16.

GRADUATE HOUR COFFEE

Authentic graduate hour coffee on Friday, Mar. 11 at 8:00-10:00 P.M. in the Student Union.

PINNINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

PINNINGS: Suzanne Snyder, Van Meter South, '68 to John Rybak, Phi Sigma Delta, '68.

ENGAGEMENTS: Patricia Costello, Emily Dickinson, '68 to Philip Vecchierilli, Phi Sigma Delta, '64.

Fly-in for half the price.

Braniff International's new fare, for anyone twelve through twenty-one, virtually cuts the cost of flying in half.

At these prices, the fly-in may soon become as popular as all the other in things that are going on today. (We will permit guitar-strumming and folk-singing on route, but no noisy political debates, please.)

Eligibility requirements are simple. Just send us a $3.00 registration fee, and we'll issue an identification card which, when validated, will entitle you to buy tickets at approximately half fare on our flights in the United States.

Of course, this will be subject to availability of space at departure time, and does not apply during certain holiday periods.

Soon, the same card will qualify you for discounts on hotels and other services.

Make your application in person at any Braniff office.

Night School Considered

UMass was recorded in favor of a bill calling for a study of the advisability of establishing an evening school at the institution at a hearing before the committee on Education.

Sponsored by Rep. Walter T. Konstanski (R-Montague), the study would be conducted by two members of the Senate, three members of the House, commissioner of Education, President of UMass, and chairman of the university's board of trustees. There was no opposition.

House Mother Replies

Regs Defended — Order Needed

by Lynda BLANCHARD, Feature Staff
In a recent interview, Mr. de Theresa de Keipely, housemother of Eugene Field House, stated her views on Women's Regulations.

MRS. DEKERPELY bases her opinions on the concept of dorm life as communal living. Such a university community must have some semblance of order.

Even out on her own, a girl must conform to certain rules and regulations—for example, her job. There is a constant give and take in community—or dormitory—living. The girl feels a sense of belonging, she finds friends there who have genuine concern for her. But she must also accept responsibility as a part of that society.

QUESTIONED on the subject of curfews, Mrs. deKerpely stated that she would like to see no curfews for seniors. But because of the special problems involved, she sees a "senior dorm" as the only practicable way of doing this.

However, she feels that the question of implementation is entirely up to the administration.

SHE BELIEVES that the 8:00 curfew for freshmen is valuable. The freshman girl needs this time to get her bearings, to be able to organize her own time, needs and capabilities.

This 8:00 curfew is also a social bulwark, preventing the unaccustomed girl from being engulfed in a disastrous social whirl.

Other than these few weeks, Mrs. deKerpely favors a uniform 12:00 curfew for all.

WITHIN THE "community" context, Mrs. deKerpely believes that sign-out sheets are necessary. First, if someone should want to reach a girl, he would know where to find her. Mrs. deKerpely realizes that this aspect has already become "voluntarily" as more and more "campus" destinations appear on the sheet.

Secondly, and more important, without sign-out sheets there would be no way of knowing whether a girl had not returned for curfew.

UNDER THE PRESENT system, when a girl is late either a counselor or the housemother will wait up to let her in. But if it weren't known that she was late, the girl might have difficulty in getting someone to let her in.

Thirdly, if it is known that a girl hasn't returned for curfew and hasn't called in, action is taken to locate her. This is both for the safety of the girl and for the peace of mind of her parents.

Mrs. deKerpely believes that enforceable rules are a necessary part of the give and take of the community. While these rules, mainly curfews, are punishable, they are also flexible.

MILD PUNISHMENTS, a Friday night or a weekend, should be fairly meted in a house council. Valid excuses and honest mistakes should not be punished according to the letter of the law. These rules help incur a sense of responsibility in a community.

All in all, Mrs. deKerpely stressed the fact that in a dormitory one must live with people. These people care about the girl, for her welfare and well-being. Their concern deserves in turn the student's responsibility to this ordering framework of the community.

THE COMMUNITY, above all, provides security for the woman student. More vulnerable physically than a man, the woman should have some sort of concrete guidance which would be available to her when she needs it.

Applications Available For McIntire Award

Applications are now being accepted for the Ruth McIntire Award, an annual cash gift to encourage individuals or groups in the development of recreational leadership. The University of Massachusetts has announced.

THE GIFT is made each year from a privately endowed fund established in 1961 to honor Miss Ruth McIntire, for 34 years a Cooperative Extension Service Recreation specialist serving young people and adults throughout Massachusetts.

Funds may be used to provide financial aid to encourage any individual or group showing marked interest, promise or achievement in the recreational leadership field.

THIS FINANCIAL aid, for example, may be used for conference, camp, course or workshop attendance, to provide speakers or program assistance, or to finance special project. Recipients must make a written report to the trustees on how the award has been used.

Priority will be given to Massachusetts groups or residents active in the music, drama, arts or crafts aspect of recreational leadership, such as extension workers, students majoring in recreation, and volunteer or other recreation leaders.

LAST YEAR'S award winner was Miss R. Elaine Noble, a student in the theatre division of the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts.

THEY PERFORMED seven original scripts as they toured playgrounds and street corners. The puppets "helped the children verbalize their problems," Miss Noble reported. "By making up stories about their community they became more aware of their place in it."

Approximately $50 is available each year on July 1. Application must be made by April 1, on forms available from the Cooperative Extension Service, Skinner Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass., 01002.

GRADUATE COFFEE HOUR
Authentic graduate coffee hour on Friday, March 11 at 8:00-10:00 p.m. in the Student Union. and is open to the public, free of the convention will be given and tapes Marilyn Jordan, Alpha Chi Omega, '66 to 1/Lt. Gabriel Salvetti, Manhattan College.
Daryl A. Taylor, Hamilton House, '67 to Richard M. Lema, Wheeler House.

Newport Adds Opera Festival

Festival City, USA . . . will be host to three major music festivals this July. Now in its 13th year the Newport Jazz Festival will be held on its traditional weekend, the 1st through the 4th of July.

New York's famed Metropolitan Opera will join the Newport Festivals in presenting America's first major summer Opera Festival. The Opera Festival will present four major operas in concert form in the five day span of July 12th through July 16th with the full orchestra, and chorus and stars of the New York Company.

The programs to be announced shortly will include a unique series of musical and technical afternoon workshops, which will give intimate insights into the multi-faceted aspects of producing the Metropolitan Opera.

The Newport Folk Foundation will once again present its Newport Folk Festival, July 21st thru July 24th. An additional day of folk music on July 20th will feature a program designed for children introducing to them the sounds of folk music.

George Wein, producer of the Newport Festivals, announced a new ticket policy for all three festivals. A 20% discount will be given on all tickets for all festivals purchased by mail prior to May 15th. The list price tickets for Jazz and Folk will be $3.50, $4.50 and $5.50; for Opera $3.50, $5.50 and $7.50. For further information write the Newport Jazz, Opera, or Folk Festival, R.I.

UM Band to Perform

The University of Massachusetts Symphony Band, under the direction of John A. Jenkins, will present a concert on Sunday, March 13 at 7:00 P.M. in Bowker Auditorium. The concert, with no admission charge, is open to the public.

The program reflects in both its parts folk music, both English and Mexican. Folk Song Suite is based on three English folk songs in settings by Ralph Vaughan Williams, English composer who did more to popularize folk songs in his country than any other composer.

La Fiesta Mexicana by H. Owen Reed was written while the composer was studying in Mexico on a Guggenheim Fellowship.

There he became interested in Mexican folk music about ten years before this interest for folk songs was popularized in American music.

Reed in La Fiesta Mexicana unknowingly created music that would later become part of every college campus. The piece represents the interaction between serious composers and popular music which has also been shown in symphonic writing where jazz appears.

Also included in the program will be Trauersynfonie by Richard Wagner, funeral music for wind band on themes from Euripides by C. M. Von Webers; Psalm for Band by Vincent Persichetti; and marches by Bilik and Osterling.

Fortier 266 Leads PSD To Frat Bowling Title

by DAVE JARNES

PSD captured the fraternity bowling title with an 8-0 rout over a PMD team which performed far below expectations. "Fernie" Fortier's 603 series, highlighted by a spectacular 236 game, paced the victors. TEP, which finished second to PSD in the regular season, clobbered AEP 8-0 for 3rd place in the IFC. Koppel's 572 and Lieder's 546 enabled TEP to salvage some glory from a disappointing season.

ON MONDAY at 7:00 p.m. the James Comanches, the Grayson Flaming A's, and the Baker Buffaloes will bowl to determine the dorm champion. The team with the highest pinfall will enter the campus finals against PSD and the independent champ on Wednesday at 8:00 in a total pinfall match. The Flaming A's, the defending dorm champs, are heavy favorites to repeat and it will take a super effort by the undefeated Buffaloes or the Comanches to upset Grayson.

Joe Misky of the Silver Foxes bowled a superb 189, 211, 214-614 series to lead his team to an 8-0 sweep of the Zeroes. Bowling of this caliber is top-notch in any league.

VOLLEYBALL PLAYOFFS begin this Monday. BKP and TEP will meet for the right to meet defending champion SPE. The LA Jr-s, the AEP Pledges, the Phantoms, and the Untouchables will battle it out for the independent title. The dormitory picture is still unsettled. The defending champion Lemons, the Maples, the Trojans, and the Colts have all clinched their league crowns while the Aces and Redwoods must play off for first. Hopefully the dorm championship will be determined by Tuesday and the campus title will be decided on Wednesday.

In squash Keys copped the fraternity title for ASP by beating Johnson 13-15, 15-9, 15-3, 15-8. Rhoades and Fraser are the finalists in the dormitory division while Garber and Norton head the field of independents.

Tracksters in Vt. for YanCon Championship

by TERRY CARPENTER

The varsity track team will leave for the University of Vermont this afternoon to compete in the annual Yankee Conference Championships being held there over the weekend. Being counted upon heavily in this meet as all season will be senior co-captain John Medeiros. John is undefeated in the long jump in New England and is defending YanCon outdoor champ. The jumping Jack leaped 22'9" at the IC4A's last weekend to take 5th place against the best competition on the East Coast.

OTHERS WHO HAVE done well this season and are being counted on for the Redmen include dashman Steve Burrell, who has clocked a 5.6 50 yd. dash and a 6.3 60 yd. dash this year for school records; John Andersen in the 600, who ran a 1:14 last weekend to tie the school standard; Bill Thoms and Greg Bowman, timed in 2:16 and 2:18 in the 1000; Steve St. Clair and Terry Carpenter in the mile (4:29 each), and 2-mile (10 flat and 10:03). The pole vault is wielded by Bob Murray, who has conquered 13'6". John Hall will compete in the high and low hurdles and the high jump. Beside Medeiros and Hall, the high jump will also feature John Lisack and Billy Tindall, both just off a rough basketball season.

Al Cohen, Steve Brown Reach Finals in Eastern Gymnastics

A pair of weekend tournaments supplied the action for both the men's and women's gymnastics teams last Saturday, a day good luck seemed to deny UMass.

The varsity competed in the Eastern League championships at Pitt and placed two men in the finals, no mean feat considering the domination by Penn State and Springfield. Al Cohen finished fifth in the long horse vaulting and sophomore Steve Brown tied for sixth on the parallel bars. Both are eligible to compete in the NCAA regionals at Navy on the 19th.

THE BULK OF the action was Friday when competitors were reduced to the top eight in each event. The all-around winner was Steve Cohen of Penn State, who won four events when the Nittany Lions competed at UMass in January. He was tightly pressed for the honor by Mark Cohn of Temple and teammate Ed Isabelle.

Cohen also won the floor exercise and rings and tied with Springfield's Tom Auchterlonie for the side horse medal. Cohn won the high bar and Dave Shideman of Pitt won the long horse vaulting. When UMass faced Pitt in the dual meet, Al Cohen finished second by only .05 to Shideman. The parallel bars were won by Ron Peek of Springfield.

THE UMass GIRLS team traveled to Wheaton College for the Northeastern Intercollegiate Invitational, an event held at UMass the past two seasons, and they were jinx struck as soon as they got there. First Charlyn Webster fell off the balance beam in warmups, injuring an arm that had her out of action for the afternoon. Then Marianne Davis, the ace of the team, as first competitor in the entire meet dislocated her knee in the vaulting contest that will put her out for the rest of the season.

Against the strong teams from Springfield and West Chester and the improved Southern Connecticut squad, the UMass girls didn't fare too well the rest of the day. The standings were divided into four divisions according to competitive experience, but UMass still managed only two firsts.

MARGE SMITH won the floor exercise in division III and Sue Clancy took the division I balance beam honors. Overall in the floor exercise Marge finished in a fifth place tie. Kathy Corrigan and Andrea Hyland, both in division IV, for competitors with national experience, took the top two places. Barbara McArdle of UMass finished in the top ten with a performance greatly improved over showings early in the season.

Sue Clancy tied for fifth on the beam and placed first in class I, no experience at any level prior to this season. Ellen Babushka of West Chester beat Kathy Corrigan on the beam with Sandy Gunnarsson of SCSC a full point behind in third. The top two places were reversed on the uneven parallel bars when the Springfield College Olympian beat out the Pennsylvanian. The unevens are Miss Clancy's specialty, but, as would be expected under the circumstances, her performance lacked the fire and sparkle that thrilled UMass crowds at several meets this year with scores into the eights. As it was, she finished seventh out of 25 with a 7.35.

A BRIGHT SPOT for the UMass team was the work of two girls on the trampoline, an event not in regular competitive meets. Freshman Lynda Stevens came in second to the Maroons' Judy Pyle and Marie Ruwet of UMass was third.

The all-around title when to Miss Corrigan with 34.30 points with Ellen Babuska second at 32.45. Nine girls competed for the title, four from the Southern Connecticut team which UMass faces Friday afternoon at New Haven.

UMass Hoop Coach Sees Bright Future

by GLENN BRIERE

"A tremendous opportunity" is how newly-appointed UMass basketball coach Jack Leaman described his new job. Succeeding recently resigned coach Johnny Orr, Leaman is looking forward to piloting the Redmen next year. The challenge of "as good a schedule in New England" does not faze the 33-year-old coach, whose primary aim is to beat UConn next year.

"BEING A Massachusetts boy," says Leaman, "I'm happy to be the coach at the state school. It's the type of thing that I have dreamed of." He expressed the hope that he can get the best student-athletes in the state to come to UMass and help develop the basketball program. The schedule next year is tougher than ever, with eleven teams on it competing in this year's national tournaments. With this type of competition, Leaman said that we will need the best athletes from the state.

The young coach with the crew cut also expressed the fervent hope that the fans will support the team enthusiastically next year. Giving UConn as an example, he said that "The fans there are enthusiastic, they make noise and they all come to the games. This spirit and tradition spurs on the team, and they win many games that they might not have won." Leaman hopes that the same can be true at UMass, since enthusiasm is the greatest asset that a team can have behind it. He liked the idea of a pep band like the one that played at the St. John's game, since it leads the crowd in enthusiasm as well as entertaining it. He hopes that this will be continued next year.

COMMENTING ON this season, Leaman said that UMass had a good year. "We were small and weak physically. In almost every game, we had to give away height and weight, and this hurt us in rebounding. It hurt us especially at the end of the season when we got tired." He believed that it was a tribute to the players that they could still go out there and play well, such as in the St. John's game. He was impressed with their attitude and desire, and he looks forward to a spirited ball club next year.

When asked to comment about next year's prospects, Leaman said, "Basically I'm an optimist. We're going to have pretty good talent next year. Everybody will be back except Clarence Hill, and an outstanding freshman team is coming up." Big Mike Bernard, "who we hope will be eligible next year," should be a valuable asset to the team.

AN IMPORTANT factor in the team's prospects next year, according to Leaman, will be the development of big Peter Gayeska. The 6' 9" freshman pivotman is the biggest man ever to play for UMass. The coach said that Peter is by far the most improved player on the frosh team, and that the varsity is depending on him next year for a flock of rebounds and blocked shots. The only thing that Gayeska lacks is confidence, and if that can be cured "there is no telling what he can do." For example, the two best players that Gayeska faced this season were Ron Teixeira of Holy Cross and Tony Koski of Leicester. In the last two games against those teams, Peter was not at all confident at the beginning. But as the games went along and he found that he could do the job, he performed admirably, especially in the second half. Leaman said that Gayeska will be working out this summer, and that all he wants from the big guy is to use his height in blocking shots and pulling down rebounds. Peter's first test will be a tough one—Willie Wolters of Boston College.

Leaman expects a lot from the rest of the team. Veterans like Jim Babyak, Frank Stewart, Billy Tindall, John Lisack and Gary Gasperack form a solid nucleus. Gasperack, in the eyes of Leaman, was the most improved player on the varsity. Babyak and Tindall are excellent shooters. Some of the freshmen will help, too. Such boys as Ron Nowakowski, Joe DiSarcina, Johnny Shockro and Mike Gemei should add to the team's prospects.

OFFENSIVELY, the team will be well-balanced. Leaman said, "You can't lose a player like Clarence Hill and not feel it. We'll have to work as more of a team." Believing that defense is 50% of the game, the coach plans to devote half the time to improving the team's defensive play. He believes that if Gayeska can block shots and control the defensive boards, then the defense will be much improved. The schedule next year is one of the toughest ever. The Redmen will be playing in two holiday tournaments, one of them in Boston Garden. In that tournament, they will face Manhattan with BC meeting Syracuse. The other tournament is one of the best in the country, the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City with such teams as DePaul, Arizona State, Oklahoma City, Texas, Temple, and Stanford. The rest of the schedule is the same, with the addition of Army. The team opens at home on December 1st against Boston College.

OF COURSE, the primary aim of Leaman is to beat UConn and win the Yankee Conference title. UConn will be loaded next year, win the Yankee Conference title. Hesford. Thus Leaman will have to concentrate on getting the Redmen up for these games. He will have to destroy the mental bloc that has been built up when UMass plays the Huskies. And most of all, Leaman said that he will have to convince the team that they can win at the UConn Field House in Storrs. If they can do that, then they should be able to go on to the NCAA tournament. But they cannot go down there with a defeatist attitude.

Brogan, Kelley In Nationals

UMass' dynamic duo, wrestlers Jesse Brogan and Dave Kelley, left yesterday for the NCAA finals at Mankato State College, Mankato, Minnesota.

Both were undefeated during the regular season. Brogan successfully defended his 137-pound championship in the recent New England Tournament at M.I.T. He was also voted the Tournament's outstanding wrestler. Kelley bowed in the finals 6-4, to Cerra of Springfield, who is fourth-ranked nationally.

Snakebeaters Optimistic; 56 Men Report for Drill

Nineteen returnees and a great desire to make amends for last year's bad season are the big things going for the 1966 University of Massachusetts lacrosse team which began its third week of workouts Monday.

COACH DICK GARBER greeted a squad of 56 men on February 21st when the team began practice, and he hopes they will be able to get on the winning side after last year's 4-9 record, the first losing season for UMass in 11 years.

The weather has been a problem to the team in dictating where and what the team can practice. The squad has spent most of its recent time getting into condition by running around campus while working on fundamental stick handling wherever dry areas have been available.

THE REDMEN PLAY in the tough New England League, where they were loop champions in 1963 and near the top the following year, and in the Roy Taylor division of the United States League which includes all New England teams except the Yale, Harvard, Brown, and Dartmouth Ivy League squads.

Garber still has five weeks before his team begins regular season competition. Conditioning and fundamentals will be stressed for the next several days, but the team will have a full schedule of practice games during the week of the University's spring vacation starting March 21st. The squad faces CCNY in New York City on that day and then will stay at Rutgers for three days with practice contests against Rutgers, Princeton, and Virginia. They also are scheduled to face Army in closing out the week.

THE 19 MEN BACK from last year and the 15 up from the freshman team will provide the nucleus of the team. Of the few seniors lost from last year only Dick Brown, a 24-point scorer and participant in the North-South All Star game on Garber's North team, was a key man on the squad. The rest of the 1966 contingent are out for first time.

The leading candidates for the attack positions are Kevin O'Brien, leading goal scorer with 15, and Howie Goffman with 14. Also at attack will be Jim O'Donnell and Peter Aiken and sophomores, Billy Sinclair and Marty Kalikow.

THE MIDFIELD CANDIDATES are led by captain Dave Jarret, Tony Arner, the fifth leading scorer last year, Charles Avakian, Dick Kent, Dick Pulsiver, Rick Molander, Bob Murphy, and Dick Howe. Sophs expected to help at midfield are Greg Norton, Dick Mahoney, Gary Palardi, and Phil Bozenhard. Leading defense candidates are Brad Stokes, Fred Foley, and footballers Dave Kelley and Don Rana. Leading soph is Frank Guidara.

Goalie contenders are Bob Lawson and John Cook from last year. An outstanding prospect from the freshman team was lost when he enlisted in the Special Forces.

TRACKSTERS . . .

If all the tracksters come through with good performances, the team should be in the thick of a four way fight for the crown with defender U.R.I., U.N.H., and Maine, the outdoor winner last year.

Community Colleges Discussed; Tippo Notes UMass Problems

"New Trends and Plans in Area Community Colleges," was the major theme presented by a panel of area community college Presidents at the morning session of the Spring Meeting of the Cooperative School Service Center on March 11, 1966 at the Lord Jeffrey Inn in Amherst.

Approximately 75 superintendents and their guests representing school systems from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont were in attendance.

The session was moderated by Clifford V. Jones, Executive Secretary of the Cooperative School Service Center and Professor of Education at the University of Massachusetts.

The panel participants were: Dr. William G. Dwyer, President of the Massachusetts Board of Regional Community Colleges; Dr. Arthur F. Haley, Mount Wachusett Community College; Mr. Paul G. Preus, Quinsigamond Community College; Mr. Thomas E. O'Connell, Berkshire Community College; Dr. Lewis O. Turner, Greenfield Community College; and Dr. George E. Frost, Holyoke Community College.

Major emphasis given by the panel was in defining the correct function and purpose of community colleges. It was pointed out that the two year institution began at the turn of the 20th century, having its greatest growth after World War II.

It was felt that the community college would enable more students to receive an advanced education while at the same time being able to learn specialized skills needed for our increasing industrial society.

Today out of every four freshmen entering college, one enters a community college. Presently there are one million students in community colleges throughout the country.

The panel believed that the community college's popularity emanated from its ability to offer advanced education at a low cost, commuting distance, variety in curriculum, and liberal admissions policy.

The afternoon session of the program featured Provost Oswald Tippo of the University.

Provost Tippo opened his remarks by revealing the great increase in applications to the university. Unfortunately, according to Tippo, the university has had to reject many qualified students due to lack of room.

In 1965, for instance, 14,000 applications were received but only 3700 acceptances could be

Academic Affairs Views Class Cuts

Academic Affairs, one of the nine Student Senate standing committees, concerns itself with examination of and action on various problems dealing with the academic functioning of the University.

Chaired by Tim Cunningham (Gorman), the committee receives student opinion and questions and attempts to determine the facts of the situation and then propose a solution, if warranted.

Specific student complaints, such as a grade change, can be considered by the committee.

Academic Affairs can also deal with larger, more general areas of students' academic interests such as the academic calendar or the University's policy on unexcused class absences.

Recently, the committee assisted students in their drive to make Hebrew an accredited language at UMass.

The Student Senate has since endorsed this proposal, and chances are good that this language will become part of the curriculum.

One all-campus problem the committee is now studying concerns class cuts. Honors Colloquia and the University Reform Committee are also interested in this area.

The work of the three groups is currently being coordinated in hope that enough support can be massed to bring definite action by the University.

The only present policy on this is that there isn't one: no specific rule about the number of cuts has ever been worked out by UMass. The committee hopes to clarify the issue and then proceed to act for the students' benefit.

The Academic Affairs committee is oriented toward service to the student and the University at large. It is designed to represent the students in any area involving academics at the University.

WBA PICKS NEW CHAMP

In a late bulletin to the Collegian from WMUA it was reported that the World Boxing Association has removed Cassius Clay from its ranks of heavyweight contenders.

It was reported that the association's executive committee dropped Clay because of the circumstances surrounding the proposed Clay-Terrell fight that was scheduled for March 29.

Replacing "The Lip" as top contender will be Zora Folley. Taking the place of Ernie Terrell after his refusal to accept the contract terms for the bout will be George Chuvalo.

Study Committee Proposes Changes

The Joint ad hoc Study Committee, a joint committee of the Faculty and Student Senates, has been asked to consider questions concerning student-faculty communication and student participation in policy formation.

The Committee has voted to hold open meetings so that it may receive advice and views on its tentative proposals from interested members of the University community.

On Tue., Mar. 15, 2:15-3:45 p.m., Colonial Lounge, Student Union, there will be a meeting open to the campus.

Proposal 1: To substitute the following for By-law #5, section 8 (Faculty Senate By-laws):

8. There shall be a Student Affairs Committee.

Its composition shall be eight members of the Faculty, nine undergraduates, and the Dean of Students ex officio.

Duties of the Committee:

- It shall review and make recommendations on all non-academic rules and regulations.

- It shall consider and recommend policies and procedures pertaining to non-academic discipline, student rights, dormitory life, and all other matters of common concern to the Faculty and students which are not within the scope of responsibility of some other regular or special committee of the Senate.

- It shall advise the Dean of Students and recommend policies for the operation of student personnel services.

- It shall promote and protect the academic freedoms and civil liberties of students and shall hear complaints alleging the suppressing, abridgment, or abuse of such freedoms and liberties.
- It shall not consider matters pertaining to the actions, policies, operation, organization, administration, and fiscal operation and practices of the Student Senate or other recognized student organizations unless a two-thirds majority of the entire membership of the Committee shall vote that a particular policy, action, organizational structure, etc., raises or involves a substantive issue which falls within the scope of responsibility of the Student Affairs Committee as set forth above.

(c) There shall be a Discipline Board of the Student Affairs Committee.

Proposal 2: The Discipline Board (summary of proposals). Composition: four members of the Faculty, four undergraduates who do not hold positions in undergraduate judicial organizations.

Duties:

- To hear appeals in disciplinary and academic honesty cases on matters concerning evidence, procedure, and interpretation of rules and regulations

- The full Board is to decide whether an appeal is to be heard;

Collegian Attends Press Conference

The Massachusetts Collegian sent representatives to the New England Collegiate Press Association Conference, on March 11-12 at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Boston.

Representing the Collegian were Tom Donovan, editor-in-chief, and Cliff Snickers, Day Editor.

The conference was conducted by Prof. Robert Baram of Boston University, executive director of the NECPA.

Opening Friday morning at 9:30, the conference consisted of a number of discussions and seminars covering all aspects of college newspaper and yearbook production.

Among the topics discussed were: training the newspaper staff; special problems of the small college newspaper; evaluating the newspapers quality; the relationship of faculty advisors; editorial responsibility; and photography.

The most significant aspect of the conference was the opportunity for staffers of various college papers to comment on and criticize various aspects of collegiate publishing.

Other newspapers represented at the conference included those of such schools as Northeastern University, Boston College, University of Connecticut, Boston University, Clark University (Worcester), and Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

DVP Welcomes Logue

"When you plan with people it's a two-way street. You must be reasonable, by which I don't mean being agreeable." Such is the creed of Edward Logue, who, as Head of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, mixes academic planning with brass-knuckles politics.

As a guest of the Distinguished Visitors' Program, Mr. Logue will speak tonight at 8:00 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium on "Boston: Eve of Reconstruction."

Evidence of B.R.A.'s power is all over the city, with Logue constantly having to explain and defend his works.

His plan to "build the place of his dreams," with such additions as the high-rise towers which he proposes for Commonwealth Avenue, is drawing mixed reactions and puzzled protests from citizens who fear his "bulldozer approach."

Logue is most controversial because he has the authority to meddle with more people's houses than any of his counterparts in other cities—and he works in a town famously welded to its past.

Senate Electing

Election for senators from Butterfield, Grayson, and Commuters will be held Thursday, March 17.

For Commuters, voting will be held in the Student Union Lobby from 8:30 to 5:30 p.m., and from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m. in the respective dorms, for resident students.

NEWS REVIEW

THE NATION

A MILITARY coup took over power from Pres. Sukarno of Indonesia last week. The coup headed by Lt. Gen. Suharto was regarded by political observers as strongly anti-Communist.

It is expected that the new powers will change the pro-Communist policies of Indonesia followed by Pres. Sukarno since 1945.

As soon as the General took power and members of his staff banned the Communist party, he explained he took control of the government "for the sake of the integrity of the nation."

THE ECONOMY of the nation is entering a period of serious inflation it was announced last week. This was shown by the fact that an "up-to-date" survey contained estimates that were too low.

These estimates of only two months ago were more than $1-billion too low.

The Administration claims this rising inflation has been caused by the rising investment level by business in new plants and equipment and also by a huge drop in unemployment.

IN BITTER clashes with Robert Moses, chairman of the Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Auth., New York Mayor Lindsay opposed Moses' plan for a cross-Manhattan expressway.

The Mayor is presently in the process of reorganizing the NYC transportation system and has already submitted a plan to the State Legislature.

According to Mayor Lindsay's closest associate, Dep. Mayor Robert Price, who was commenting on Robert Moses' plan, "the city is for people, not for cars"...

THE KILLERS of Malcolm X, Black Nationalist leader, were convicted of first degree murder last week.

Talmadge Hayer, 24; Norman Butler, 27; and Thomas 15X Johnson, 30; face mandatory life sentences of at least 26 years and eight months.

Malcolm X was slain last Feb. 21, 1965 during a Black Nationalist rally in Manhattan.

THE STATE

MAJOR PAPERS in Boston, the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald-Traveler and the Boston Record American, entered their second week of a crippling strike.

The strike began last Monday after talks between the International Typographical Union (ITU) and the publishers proved fruitless.

The union is asking for a pay increase from the publishers.

AFTER A DAY long White House conference, Gov. John A. Volpe along with most of the nation's governors endorsed Pres. Johnson's war policies in Vietnam.

The declaration of the governors read: "It is the unanimous opinion of the governors here assembled that the policies being followed by the President in pursuit of our national objectives in Vietnam are sound and the only rational policies to be followed under the circumstances."

A 33-CAR train wreck in Charlemon, Mass. last Wednesday was the cause of a mass evacuation of more than 4,000 residents of nearby Shelburne and Buckland.

One of the cars was filled with liquid chlorine that officials feared was seeping out.

Residents were allowed to return to their homes when the danger was eliminated.

According to railroad officials, plans are being made to remove the tanker containing 55 tons of liquid chlorine this week.

THE CAMPUS

A SUIT has been filed against the Board of Trustees by the Massachusetts Taxpayers' Committee for Quality Medical Education.

Such prominent persons as Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist, have become part of the ever-growing opposition to the location of the UM Medical School at Worcester.

The case has been referred to the full bench of the Supreme Court after a ruling by Supreme Court Justice Arthur O. Whittemore.

THE SELECTIVE SERVICE has announced deferment tests will be given on May 14, 21 and June 3. These tests might qualify students for a draft deferment.

Although the grading system has not been announced yet, it is expected to be similar to the time of the Korean War when 70 right out of 150 was considered deferable for an undergraduate.

A graduate student had to choose 80 right.

TODAY ends the hunger strike for 52 Amherst students and several others at Smith and UMass.

The week-long strike was carried out in protest of the use of chemicals by the U.S. to destroy the rice crop in Vietnam.

The students hope Pres. Johnson will forbid chemical weapons by our Armed Forces and oppose their use by our allies in the Vietnam war.

MADISON PARK in Roxbury is being evaluated as a possible site for UMass-Boston, it was announced last week.

Director of planning at UM, Donald Cadigan, said the major consideration in any decision will be the availability of nearby land for future University expansion.

THE JOINT STUDY Committee, a joint committee of the Faculty and Student Senates has announced it will hold open meetings beginning Tues., Mar. 15, 2:15-3:45 p.m. (Colonial Lounge).

The Committee will consider questions about student-faculty communication and student participation in policy formation.

SEN. PRES. Dacey delivered his Farewell Address a month early last week.

He said he hoped this would help in solving some Senate problems before the new president takes office.

MAJ. GEN. Charles S. O'Malley, Jr., Commanding General of the XIII US Army Corps at Ft. Devens toured the campus last week.

As a representative of the CG, First US Army, he was briefed on R.O.T.C., given a tour of the facilities, introduced to cadet personalities and also was met by Pres. Lederle.

WOODROW WILSON Fellowships have been awarded to three UM seniors—David A. Johns, Carol H. Woodcock and Roberta M. Bernstein.

They are among 1,403 from the U.S. and Canada to receive the 1966 fellowships which provide for graduate training as college teachers.

PETER HENDRICKSON DID IT SAM SPARC DID IT YOU CAN, TOO!

Peter Hendrickson started out two years ago on the news desk of the Collegian. Today he writes for the Associated Press and several Western Massachusetts newspapers. Next year, Peter Hendrickson has his choice of working on any of several national newspapers that have offered him permanent employment.

Sam Sparc started out in November on the Collegian Editorial Staff. Today, the entire UMass Campus is laughing at or with Sam while "Sam Sparc Speaks Out".

Booze Conspiracy Charges Appealed at Maryland

College Park, Md. (CPS) — A FINAL APPEAL will be made to the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Welfare in the case of two University of Maryland student leaders placed on probation as a result of a situation involving liquor in the dormitory.

Robert Martz, former Men's League president, and Mike Pearman, former Garrett Hall president, saw two boys, each with a six pack of beer, entering the dormitory last Dec. 4 in violation of the no-drinking rule in the dormitories.

Martz told the boys to get in their rooms. When one of the boys staggered out half an hour later he told them to get the beer out of the dormitory.

Martz was called out after finding the boy's door locked and the lights out. When Martz returned to his room, Pearman said that he had talked with the faculty resident and the resident assistant about the incident.

AT A MANDATORY dorm meeting the Tuesday after the incident, Martz reported that the faculty resident quoted Dean Salvatore Esposito, head of the Judiciary Office, as considering Pearman and Martz equally guilty with the other boys.

Martz and Pearman found they had been "written up," recommended to have disciplinary action taken against them.

Esposito, Martz, Pearman, and others met the next day. After the meeting, Martz found he was on disciplinary probation which automatically removed him from his position as Men's League president. Pearman was placed on conduct probation, which carries a less severe penalty.

Martz and Pearman eventually appealed to the Student Discipline Committee where Esposito is an ex-officio member.

Ad Hoc Study Committee . . .

appeal will be automatic in cases involving the penalties of suspension or dismissal.

- The burden of proof is to rest upon those bringing charges, or upon their representatives.
- The appellant shall be given an opportunity to testify and to present evidence, witnesses, and argument. He shall have an opportunity to hear the questions adverse witnesses.
- In no case shall the Board

Martz' penalty was upheld, but Pearman was placed on disciplinary probation.

MARTZ CLAIMS he has never been told the specific charges against him, although it falls in the broad category of the seldom used "conspiracy" law at Maryland.

The law states that "every student . . . will be held strictly responsible and accountable for all violations, or conspiracy to violate, the above regulation (prohibiting alcoholic beverages on campus or at any campus function), and any student who knowingly participates in any function of any student organization where alcoholic beverages are used, even though such student does not . . . possess or use such beverages shall be guilty of violating the regulation."

Martz says he does not know if he was convicted because of the delay in ordering the students out of the dorm or because of the delay in notifying school authorities.

Greek Week Queen Semi-Finalists Chosen

by KEN BERK-SAM and PAUL PONTE-LCA

The Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils announced the ten semi-finalists for Greek Week Queen.

The ten are: Maureen Gilchrist '68 of KAT nominated by TKE; Sandy Holm '69 of Chi O by ARCON and ASP; Kathy Kane '68 of Chi O by KS; Jane Ludlow '69 by SPE; Margo Marsten '68 of IGU by IGU; Sue Platt '68 of IGU by SAM; Pricilla Ponte '67 of IGU by LCA; Robina Sanders '69 of KAT by KAT; Marilyn Snider '69 of SDT by SDT and TEP; and Kathy Zarlengo '68 of Chi O by BKP and PMD.

More than 500 members of fraternities and sororities turned out to vote for the Queen candidates.

Judging of the ten semi-finalists will be early this week. The Queen will be crowned during the Greek Ball.

Greek Week activities will start Mon., May 8 with the annual Fraternity Sing competition, and will climax with a concert on May 15. The Ball will be on May 13.

Summer Jobs

Openings Announced

The International Student Information Service announced today that it still has openings for 500 students and faculty in Europe this summer. Already 800 students and faculty signed up for this summer.

These openings, ranging from construction to baby sitting, are guaranteed to accept participants.

Nineteen different countries are represented as far away as Japan and North Africa. ISIS arranges for everything, transportation on special charter flights, first night hotel room, orientation, insurance while in Europe and much more.

However, participants must pay their own transportation costs. Wages range from $50 to $200 a month and are enough to cover living expenses.

INSTEAD OF PAYING to watch it all go by in a bus, these workers will live with and learn about the culture of new exciting people.

How do past participants like it? More than fifty from last year are going back this year.

Joan Knowles, UMass, '61, took a job as a maid in a Neuchatel, Sitz, hotel. Miss Knowles reaction? "I loved it . . . Truly if I could I would get on a soap box in every town, college, university and high school and urge the students to 'open your doors' to the gateway to understanding. Young people should know the world through living it."

Campus representative Tom Jewett has scheduled a meeting for Thursday, March 17 in Skinner 217 for 8:00 p.m. Any interested students or faculty are invited to come and find out more about guaranteed jobs in Europe this summer.

Commentary

Great Viet Debate Hit by "Commonweal"

Editor's note: Commentary is a new weekly feature of the Collegian. It will present editorial comment from commercial newspapers on current topics of significance. Today's comment is from Commonweal.

The Senate debate on Vietnam began pleasantly enough with Sen. Russell B. Long, the Democratic whip, impugning the loyalty of Administration critics. The Senator cited "very high sources" in the government as authority for his accusation that "Every time a Senator makes another speech in fear that Red China might come in, he helps the Communist cause." The full text of Sen. Long's remarks makes incredible reading, and it is hard to believe the discussion can go anywhere but upward from here. Until that happy time, however, we are left with the disturbing suggestion that Sen. Long may indeed reflect the Administration's main line of attack against its critics, and even against the principle of open debate.

Less crudely, a similar note was struck the next day by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor during his testimony before the Fulbright committee. The General, drawing a comparison between criticism of the Indochina War in France in 1954 and criticism in Washington today, stated it was his personal feeling Hanoi hopes "that the same kind of situation will arise here." It was, of course, the French people who, in electing Mendes-France, chose to end French involvement in the war. By Gen. Taylor's argument it was therefore the French people who were disloyal. But this is merely playing games with words. What is important about the whole tack Administration spokesmen have taken thus far is their seeming willingness to poison the political atmosphere for the purpose of distracting attention away from questions of policy. We are not so far removed from the poisoned well of the fifties to view it lightly.

Frosh Adjustment Studied

The frosh orientation committee met to continue the reorganization of the present Freshmen Orientation program last Sunday. The purpose of a new program is to help ease the transition from high school to college, introduce the freshmen to the organizations on campus, to help them become an integral part of the University.

THE PROPOSED program would begin during the summer months with a new type of "big brother-sister" program. This program would consist of student advisors who would contact the 3100 incoming freshmen during the summer vacation. This personal contact would help the freshmen feel welcome and also enable them to ask any individual questions that they may have.

The students will be distributed to the advisors on a geographical basis so that they can talk and meet throughout the summer. In this way the personal contact will be further emphasized.

DVP - Boston . . .

He has torn down old Scollay Square to put up a 12-building government center; rehabilitated one of the worst Negro slums in town—Washington Park; won approval for a massive harbor rebuilding and a $40 million improvement of Charlestown.

All in all, he has started on projects that could ultimately involve a quarter of Boston's area and half of its population.

In Boston nearly everybody knows Logue—and has a strong opinion about him.

Critics of Logue chiefly attack his strong-arm methods. But, most agree that he is getting needed things done.

As an architect put it, introducing Logue to a gathering, "He may be the hardest of all big-time administrators to get along with, but he's also the hardest to get along without."

THE STUDENT advisors must be people who have an interest in both the University and in the freshmen. Unless these advisors have a feeling for the university it will be impossible to help the new students. In the near future there will be forms available for any interested students who wish to participate as advisors.

Tippo Discusses . . .

awarded. This situation continues to become more serious.

Presently, there are 12,000 students at the university including 2,500 graduate students. For next year 10,000 applications have already been received for 1,000 places in the graduate school. Projected estimates visualize 19,000 students by 1970 and 25,000 students by 1975.

A second problem commented on by Provost Tippo is the comparatively low salaries given to the faculty at the University of Massachusetts. The university is ranked 105th among colleges in this category. This makes recruiting extremely difficult.

Dr. Tippo also cited the present inadequate library facilities at the university. Lack of adequate funds has restricted growth in number of volumes needed for a growing university. Dr. Tippo indicated that this situation will be remedied by the building of a new twenty-eight story library and with the securing of additional funds for new books.

Presently, plans are being drawn up for a Fine Arts building, a Continuing Education building, and a Residential complex. Plans are also being prepared for a possible new academic curriculum in which a series of residential halls will make up a separate university college with its own faculty, curriculum, and administration.

Democracy's Voice

by JAMES HORVITZ

We are living in a country that is synonymous with freedom and democracy. In order to protect our own principles and play the part as protector of freedom around the world, the United States has vowed to contain Communist aggression wherever it may occur.

Among the freedoms we now enjoy in America are the rights to free speech and assembly. Both are explicitly incorporated into the Bill of Rights and subject to protection by our national government, in the best interests of us, the people.

As a result of our vow to prevent Communism from abridging the rights of other nations to maintain their own governments, we are now involved in a dirty and costly ground war in Southeast Asia. It is not a declared war and many phases of its legality and aims are indeed in doubt.

In lieu of the freedoms granted us, it is entirely within our rights not only to question our nation's policies, but to oppose them, so long as we do not jeopardize them. Thus, there spring up sit-ins and demonstrations, which so long as they are peaceful, should be recognized by the government as manifestation of our guaranteed freedoms.

Yet, the government is doing all it can to stop these sit-ins. In Ann Arbor, Michigan a group of local board sit-in participants have been reclassified as 1-A as punishment for exercising their rights. By using the draft as punishment, the government is suppressing opinion and freedom of expression. This undemocratic policy has now been enthusiastically endorsed by Lewis Hershey, National Selective Service Director. Just as the Soviet Union throws dissenting citizens in Siberian labor camps, the United States is now casting its objectors into malaria-infested rice paddies.

The United States is out to block Communist spread and all the manifestations that go with it. Yet, as a means to this end, this nation is actually adopting methods which are an integral part of Communism itself! And, at the same time, this country is sacrificing its own democratic principles. Before going out to play protector for the whole globe, why doesn't this glorified nation protect its own citizens first?

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

(The following was written by TSgt. Peter G. Gianutsos, editor of The Advisor, the newspaper of the Air Force's Second Air Division at Tan Son Nhut Air Field in Vietnam.)

TIME WAS when a boy went to college to study law, medicine, engineering or one of the arts. And, girls went to get their Mrs. degree. But for too many, it is not that way any more. Today's crop of college cut-ups are no longer content to swallow gold fish, crowd themselves into telephone booths or small foreign cars. They—and we refer to the minority that makes the majority of the voice—now insist on dictating government policies, and are ready to parade, demonstrate and sit-in at the drop of a cause.

The latest gimmick among those intellectual midgets is a campaign to urge all members of the armed forces to desert their posts, rather than serve in Vietnam.

As a member of the race that started this democracy kick, (Quick, Socrates, the hemlock) I have no quarrel with the right of the individual to voice his opinion. However, the hysterical babbling of these bourgeois bores borders on sedition, if not treason. I leave that to the legal eagles in the Justice Department. It is a sad day in deed when the words honor, duty and country have come to mean so little. As a member of the military family, I have spent the better part of my adult life in the Saigons of the world. It never occurred to me to disobey an order, or to question the right of my government to send me anywhere to protect and preserve its interests.

LIKE A LOT of us here in Vietnam, I have had occasion to be at the base theater during one of the daily memorial services, and I have seen the slow walking and heard somber music and soft prayers for those to whom rotation dates are no longer important. I muttered my own prayer, as well as giving silent thanks that it was not me inside that metal box.

As I stood there, I remembered preachings of these mentally retarded adults, and my compassion for a dead man turned to shame, and then anger that they dared to ask me to prostitute my profession, ask me to bring dishonor to myself, to my service and to my country.

It is difficult enough to understand when the supposed learned citizenry take the rostrum to rant and rave against our government, and thereby feed the propaganda mills to the north, but to be subjected to the meaningless chatter of these imbecilic sloths, whose idea of bravery is to lead a panty raid on a girls' barracks, is more than human dignity can bear.

It has been suggested that they all be drafted into the service and brought to Vietnam. I can not agree less. To put these morons in a uniform is to insult the memory of those who never came back from Guadalcanal or Pork Chop Hill, or those who did not survive the bombing of the Brinks Hotel or the American Embassy here.

LET THEM talk about war mongering to the widow of a Vietnamese army private, who earns her fish and rice as a prostitute, or with the village woman, who lost a hand, one finger at a time and finally the wrist, to, to these kind, misunderstood Viet Cong because she dared to stand up for what she believed was right.

Draft them into the military? Never! Ours is a proud organization, made up of men and women who have ideals and principles, and what's even more important, men and women who have the courage and the will to live up to those beliefs.

They take great pride in themselves, in their uniforms, and in their nation, qualities that the campus "cuties" have yet to acquire. Until they do, they will never "belong." Their voice will be that of the semi-educated, the fool who will leave behind only a legacy of shame, dishonor and ignorance.

SAM SPARC SPEAKS OUT

The Yellow Beret

Fighting soldiers on the beam;
Fearless men who leap and scream;
As I leapt, I drank my keg;
While coming down, I broke my leg.

Silver wings stuck in their chests.
Crazy men with punctured breasts;
One hundred men will die today;
But not me; I ran away.

With no voice I had it knocked.
To the boss, I went and talked.
I was trained to sing off key;
A millionaire he said I'd be.

So I cut a lousy song;
I stole it from the Viet Cong.
On the charts it became first;
And my song is America's worst.

Back at home, my wife does sit;
Let her wait—I give a care.
I left her there, par for the course;
Now that I'm rich, time for divorce.

Our fighting boys all wish me ill;
If they saw me, they'd shoot to kill.
Why do they think that I'm a bit—?
'Cause they'll be dead—and I'll be rich!

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

FROM THE SENATE

A Mellow Rumble

Open letter to the Student Body:

In the past few weeks you have been reading numerous negative accounts of the activities of the Student Senate. As a member of the Senate, I am annoyed that this communication, perhaps, unfortunately, your only contact with student government, has been so one-sided.

The Senate is a body of 56 undergraduates interested in the students of the University. Those elected representatives who see fit to spend 5-7 hours at Wednesday night meetings, plus many more working on committees, talking to administrators, or listening to the views of their constituents are doing so because they care about the student body at the University. They care how the Student Activities Tax which every one of you pay on your semester bill is spent; they care about the activities of your clubs and communications media; they care about your academic requirements, your dormitory regulations, your individual needs.

During my short term in the Student Senate, this body has seen a fine arts council established, a liberalization of women's rules, a raise of student wages in the dining commons, a loan fund for the purchase of books, protected student rights in judicial hearings, a democratic system for administration of dormitory life, an alteration of housing proposals, an academic calendar with the students' needs in mind, just to name a few pieces of student welfare legislation. In addition to this area, the resources for all student organizations are being allocated from SAT funds (your tax money) which is regulated by the Senate. Efforts are also being made to strengthen the Student Government Association by improving relations between the classes and the Senate.

Certainly there is much more to be done, but it cannot be accomplished without the interest and support of the student body. Individuals or groups with grievances or suggestions should definitely seek the aid of the Student Senate. All Senate committees will certainly welcome the help of non-Senate members. Much can be done, but first a positive attitude is imperative.

Debby Harvey '67
Emerson House

To the Editor:

It has been conjectured in the Collegian, in one form or another, that the Student Senate is introverted, that it is solely concerned with personal power plays and antagonisms. It has, in short, failed in its function of representing student interests. I do not agree.

Personalities invariably influence the internal workings of any organization. The Senate is no exception. But we must not stop here in evaluating its performance.

Are you exuberantly happy with the required courses you must take? Are you satisfied with women's regulations, with student-faculty relations, the subordinate role of the student, with life on campus? The Senate is neither happy nor satisfied with the above, and is currently engaged in investigating and developing workable solutions to these problems.

But the problems are many, and the senators too few. Non-senate members are needed to swell the ranks of those interested in making the university "a more perfect union" of students, faculty, and administration. It can be done; it has already begun. To reach completion, it needs you.

One man can make a difference, and every man should try. If you'd like to try, the Senate office is on the second floor of the Student Union. The door is always open.

Roslyn Diamond,
Student Senator

LIQUOR IN THE ROOMS?

To the Editor:

The "official policy" of the University in regard to alcoholic beverages is that "Undergraduate students, regardless of age, are not permitted the use of alcoholic beverages on University property or on the premises of any housing which accommodates students in residence." This is not the actual policy of the University, there is in fact no real policy regarding alcohol. There is only an "it's all right if you don't get caught" philosophy pervading students and administrators alike.

The Student Handbook says "Fraternal men are expected to comply with the University regulations pertaining to the use of alcoholic beverages." UMass fraternities and sororities are not known for their tranquility and sobriety. Yet how many Friday and Saturday evenings do Dean Hopkins and Dean Curtis spend trying to "dry up" the fraternities and sororities and how many successful raids has the I.F.C. made recently?

Dormitory counselors are supposed to enforce the rules of the University regarding drinking. Many counselors, if not most, permit their students to have liquor in their rooms as long as they keep it out of sight and drink it quietly. Some counselors, moreover, drink with the students in their section. Few counselors will go so far as to ask a student to open his trunk or suitcase, in order to search for liquor.

The rare student who does get caught for "possession of alcoholic beverages in the residence hall" is sent to the appropriate Area Judiciary Board for a "trial." Or at least they say that it is a trial, although almost always students appearing before the Judiciary will receive "upon the recommendation of the Area II Judiciary Board you are hereby placed on disciplinary probation without restrictions because of your misconduct on or about . . ."

This, however, does not act as a deterrent to student drinking. The prospect of receiving disciplinary probation for being caught with liquor challenges the student to see if he can "get away with something." If drinking were legal on campus, I believe that the University would have far fewer problems regarding alcohol. In my opinion the University should not have to act as if it were a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, protecting students against the "evils of drinking." The University should permit students to keep liquor in their rooms as long as they do not create a disturbance or pose a threat to themselves or others.

The University continues to stumble along blindly without any real policy regarding alcoholic beverages. They are afraid to act—to sit down with students and formulate a reasonable policy regarding drinking.

Is This Learning?

To the Editor:

I am upset about the teaching methods employed by many members of the faculty on this campus. The presentation of knowledge from teacher to student is being destroyed by the teacher's perversion of goals concerning teaching.

Teaching is a process by which a certain person with knowledge of a specific subject is supposed to communicate his knowledge to another person.

Is it communication when one transmits information from prepared notes to a student's blank notebook? What is being communicated in this specific situation?

I maintain nothing is, beyond the motor activity involved in the writing of notes.

What is lacking in this specific situation is the interaction between two minds. All that example involved was the interaction of two note books.

When two minds interact in such a way that the thought desire to be expressed is expressed, so that understanding is achieved, then communication has taken place.

I don't mean, by my attack on notetaking that all note taking should cease. I mean that the goal of teachers should be directed toward the end of student understanding; notes should serve as cues by which the student remembers what he has already understood.

Thus the goal in teaching should be to achieve learning through understanding. A teacher has perverted this goal when he transmits words from his notes to words in the student's notebook; for he has set for his goal of teaching the transference of facts without any regard to understanding.

Student Union Needs More 'Active Planners'

Do you feel like an I.B.M. number — a member of the masses? Would you like to do something that is both worthwhile and fun? The Student Union belongs to you students, and it can be an opportunity for any competent student to be more than just a number and become an active planner of what goes on in your Union.

Did you like the events in the Union this past year? As a member of one of the seven standing committees you can plan next year's events and improve whatever programs you did not enjoy. There are openings available in all committees.

Harvard Prof to Talk at SBA

The potential impact of computer technology on management will be the topic March 15 at the second of three spring colloquia by the University of Massachusetts School of Business Administration.

JOHN DEARDEN, professor of business administration at Harvard University, will be the speaker. The public is invited to the meeting, to be held at 4 p.m. in Room 120, School of Business Administration.

The first part of the talk will center on changes in equipment and techniques; the second will be concerned with the differences in the management job that will be caused by these changes.

Prof Dearden is an American International College graduate with a M.B.A. degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He is a Pennsylvania CPA, taught accounting at Pennsylvania, and managed the Ford Motor Co. financial systems department before going to Harvard in 1959.

HE TEACHES management information systems and is doing research on the effect of the computer on management decision making.

The series brings outstanding authorities to campus to discuss current business topics. The final speaker, on April 26, will be Clarence C. Walton, Dean of the School of General Studies, Columbia University, on "Values in Administrative Decisions."

Local Groups to Show Movie On Education in Harlem

On Wed., March 16, at 8 p.m. the Human Relations Council and the League of Women Voters of Amherst will sponsor a movie, to be shown at the Marks Meadow School Auditorium, entitled "Marked for Failure."

The film, dealing principally with education in Harlem, will show the effects of de facto segregation on school children. Following the movie, a panel of experts will discuss the problems of the educationally disadvantaged in the Pioneer Valley, how the University is preparing teachers to cope with these problems, and what the individual can do to help.

Acting as moderator will be Mrs. Jerome B. Wiesner, who has served the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts in various capacities. At present she is on the Executive Board of METCO, the planning agency for bussing Boston students to the suburbs. Other participants on the panel will be:

James White, Instructor in Secondary Education at the University of Massachusetts, past president of the Springfield NAACP, current member of the Executive Board of the Springfield Urban League. Previously acted as assistant director of the Springfield Action Commission.

David Angus, Assistant Professor in Education at the University of Massachusetts. Planning a summer institute at the University to prepare elementary school teachers for an initial experience in racially heterogeneous classrooms.

Michael Behnke, Amherst College student (1966); spent last year as Director of the Northern Educational Service, coordinating a tutorial program in Springfield and developing teaching materials, under a grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Mrs. Klaus Kroner of the Human Relations Council is in charge of the committee planning refreshments to be served after the meeting.

What's Happenin', Baby?

You could be what's happening, baby, if you have a talented rock'n'roll group who wants a chance to be heard, win a record contract and play an engagement at "Murray the K's World," opening at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, on April 1.

Murray the K, pop music's swinging spokesman, is on a mad talent hunt for the most exciting new rock'n'roll group in town. Preliminary auditions will narrow the field down to ten groups, who will appear at Murray's Easter Show at the Brooklyn Fox on Tuesday night, April 12. The audience will help Murray and the celebrity judges pick the lucky winner.

Anyone who wishes to enter the contest should send the name of the group, the reader's name, phone number and address to Murray the K's World, Box 938, New York, N.Y. 10023. Applications will not be accepted after Friday, March 25.

"Murray the K's World," will introduce the winning rock'n'roll group in a totally new entertainment concept, combining live and recorded music, motion pictures, closed circuit television, slide screen projections, op and pop art and elaborate electronic control systems.

WMUA "d. j." Traces Rise of Radio Station

Do you need silence when you study? Or do you prefer the "Sounds of Silence"? If you are one of the many University students who enjoy the music of WMUA with their studies, chances are you've heard the music and enjoyed the voice of Mike Duggan, WMUA's program director, who does much of the station's broadcast time.

Mike, a UMass junior and agricultural economics major, has been with the station since his freshman year.

"The station was good then, (in 1963)," he says, "but not nearly as good as it is now."

The station has, in fact, been around for quite a while, according to Mike—"It was founded shortly after World War II, in '47 or '48 I think. The station started out as WFDR, at Fort Devens in Ayer, Massachusetts.

A part of the college was moved out to Devens to accommodate veterans returning from the war. It was at Devens that UMass got its real start as a full-fledged university."

Most of the veterans who went to school at Devens on the G.I. Bill were engineering students, Mike explained. And it was these engineers who constructed the studio and did the broadcasts.

They had no license in those days, and operated for quite a few years illegally. Ironically, the maverick AM station had as its headquarters the Fort Devens guard house.

"What makes that even funnier," says Mike, "is that to accommodate the original equipment, the present station was designed after the floor plan of the Fort Devens guard house." When the station moved out here in 1950 or '51 they switched to FM, and changed the name to WMUA.

"And," Mike notes, "they got a license to operate."

HISTORY OF A.D.J.

Mike's interest in radio began in grade school in Northampton.

"I started hanging around WHMP in the seventh and eighth grade. After a while they let me do odd jobs around the station. And in my sophomore year of high school I went on the payroll."

With the experience he gained at WHMP, it was easy for Mike to start in with WMUA as a regular d.j. Listening to the mellow tone of his voice in conversation reveals a large part of his success.

"A disc jockey's voice is important," Mike admits. "He has to project an image of friendliness and vitality. A radio is all listening, so you have to keep drawing the listener's attention while he may be distracted visually by a million other things."

Mike's first duty with the station was doing a jazz show on Tuesday nights from ten to eleven. From there he went to a folk and Broadway music show two nights a week from midnight 'til two.

"The last half of my sophomore year," Mike recalls, "I did a Saturday morning show from 7 a.m. to one p.m. The show was called 'Coffee and Campus,' and that six hour shift is the longest one in the history of the station."

RAPID RISE

In the first semester of his sophomore year Mike had been appointed educational director. In this position he supervised the hour-long educational shows the station ran Monday through Thursday evenings—prime listening time.

Shows consisted of taped lectures prepared for broadcast by professors of English 25 and 26 and History 5. The program received a very favorable listener response and ran for a full semester.

With this success behind him Mike was elected program director, replacing Don Weaver '68, who is now editor of Critique.

"Being director has its high spots," says Mike, "but more than that it offers some great experience because it entails organizing the day-to-day operation of selecting format for shows and selecting people to do them." And to this the job of training and supervising new people and you have your hands full.

Mike admits to spending more than a little time on this "extracurricular activity," to the tune of thirty-five to forty hours a week.

He feels very justified, even though the experience he has gained cannot be measured in cumulative quality points.

VIET TEACH-IN "HIGH SPOT"

One of the "high spots" Mike mentioned that he recalls most vividly came last spring during a Vietnam teach-in held in Mahar Auditorium. The teach-in, which involved the University, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, and Smith, was to run from eight p.m. until seven a.m. the following morning.

WMUA started setting up to carry the teach-in about three o'clock the afternoon. They began broadcasting at eight and followed the teach-in straight through to the finish, providing live broadcast for the Pioneer Valley System.

"That was the biggest venture ever undertaken by the station," says Mike. "We used twelve microphones.

We even had roving reporters furnished by the Collegian in various parts of the auditorium soliciting comments from the audience and grabbing interviews with the speakers."

"The funniest part came at about two a.m. when they started showing silent movies. How do you broadcast a silent movie over radio? We had people rushing around writing script and bringing it to us. And we had to read it in the dark by flashlight and cigarette lighters.

A lot of the script caught fire, causing a small commotion. But the broadcast was a great success. And when it was over we all slept for several days."

WHO MAKES IT GO?

Many people who have the radio bug work long hours for the station. "Yet where else but in college," says Mike, "can a person who is interested find such ready access to so much professional equipment and practical knowledge?"

WMUA has about fifty members. As in any organization, Mike explains, some do nothing and are members in name only. About twenty are really active members, and they perform a wide range of duties.

There are, of course, the disc jockeys. But behind these there are secretaries, record librarians and a large body of engineers who keep the station and its equipment in condition.

"We are always making changes and improvements in our setup," says Mike. "That's the way commercial stations operate—constantly changing in response to a constantly changing audience."

Three years ago, in the spring of 1963, WMUA made an enormous change—they replaced everything they had with twelve thousand dollars worth of new equipment, including a ten watt transformer.

Coupled with the antenna on the roof of the Engineering Building, where the station is located, the transformer has an output of about seventeen watts. Wattage determines broadcast range, and WMUA's range is from Greenfield in the north to Springfield in the south.

To aid the disc jockey at his end of the microphone, the station also installed three sixteen-inch turntables.

"Having three makes broadcasting smoother and more efficient, and leaves the d.j. time to say what he wants to say between records," Mike explains.

17,000 RECORDS

The lifeblood of any radio station is its record library. And at the UMass station there can be little doubt that care has been taken to provide an adequate library. Popular albums number 5,000 and classical albums about 2,000. These collections are supplemented by an additional 10,000 45's.

And how does the future look? Most would agree it looks promising for both Mike Duggan and WMUA. Mike will soon begin working for WFCR, the four college station.

He is now in his third year of the Air Force ROTC program, hopes to ## Stockbridge has come a long way...

by ROBERT GORMAN, Feature Staff
The General Court of Massachusetts, on May 14, 1918, passed the resolution that established two-year courses in practical agriculture for which certificates of graduation would be granted.

The requirements for entry into this course were: minimum age of seventeen years and fulfillment of the educational qualifications necessary for admission into any public high school in the state.

Miss Margaret Hamlin was appointed agricultural counselor for two-year students on Jan. 1, 1918. This position was created to help provide jobs for the required six month on-the-job training.

In 1938, this service was extended to four-year students and formed the present Placement Office.

The two-year course was named Stockbridge School of Agriculture in 1928 after Levi Stockbridge, first Prof. of agriculture at the college and early Pres. of the then Massachusetts State Col.

Stockbridge at this time was regarded by many as "...more than a name for a two-year course in vocational agriculture at our University...it represents a radical thought in the philosophy of education..."

The first of its kind in the country, Stockbridge School was originally set up for country boys who wanted to work on home farms and lacked the grades to enter the four-year program.

Today, however, 75% of the students come from larger cities and towns, not from farms.

Presently, Stockbridge is considered to be one of the best, if not the best, program of its type in the nation. More than 4,500 students have graduated from the school.

The present dean of Stockbridge is Dean Jeffrey, who was appointed to this position in 1960. Prior to this appointment, he was head of the University Committee on Scholarships. The courses are taught by University faculty.

Back in 1918, the only courses offered were "agriculture and horticulture." There are now ten courses offered, and while all of them deal with agriculture, only two are concerned with farm work.

This does not mean, however, that Stockbridge is not training farmers. Charles Thayer, who has been professor at the school for 35 years, has said, "Now when one meets an outstanding farmer in Massachusetts, it is better than a 50% chance that he is a Stockbridge man."

During the past 40 years, Stockbridge has improved its academic standing many times over. Former Pres. Conant of Harvard Univ. expressed the value of Stockbridge when he complimented the University on its "successful development of a two-year terminal college...that focuses on the practical educational needs of its community."

In 1962, through the efforts of Dean Jeffrey, and Pres. Lederle, the school is now awarding the Associate degree to graduates.

Study (?) at the Libe

by SALLY DOLGIN, Feature Staff

Suede "desert" boots finishing off his tightly tapered wheat jeans, the collar of his navy blue "CPO" jacket propped up against his neck, and his fashionably long hair topped by a corduroy jockey cap, the VIP of "I ate A Pie" fraternity casually swaggered into the hushed study room.

Blankly scanning the interior, his eyes lit upon pretty Miss Una Mass. He noisily stomped over to her table and pulled out a chair into which he ungracefully plopped with a minimum of decorum.

After whispering a few compliments to her, he opened his textbook and began to read industriously.

At the end of a half hour of relatively concentrated study, his eyes became tired. He darted a quick look at the clock, winked at pretty Miss UM and slung his legs over a nearby chair.

Another half hour of a little less concentrated study slipped by. The silence became unbearable.

The history of the South gained a new perspective as its margins became filled with new slang words and old jokes. Pulling out a purple "hi-lighter," he carefully underlined the first sentence in each paragraph.

After creating a new Civil War with the marker weapon, he folded over the last page of Chapter One and slammed the war closed.

The history of the South was replaced by Voix du Siecle and a piece of gum. Camus' description of a starving, plague-ridden town reminded him that he was hungry, so he decided to take a five minute study break at the "Hatch."

Three quarters of an hour later, he returned with two girls and a stomach full of chocolate frappe. Finding his seat taken, he wisely chose a separate desk in an obscure corner of the study room.

As soon as he became comfortably slouched, he remembered that his pencil needed sharpening to prepare for its bout with math. The sword was prepared and the numbers were on guard.

It was a losing battle for the future math major, for he could not break through the number line of resistance.

Figuring that the problems might make more sense if they were firmly imprinted upon the wooden desk, he engraved a complicated number scale for the benefit of future students.

Soon one leg fell asleep, so he crossed it over the other. When the second limb grew tired, he reversed the procedure. Unable to find an easy position, he kicked off his shoes and tried to adjust his upper limbs. First he leaned his chin on his hands, and then he ran his hand through his long locks.

Finally, overcome by trying to understand the Cartesian coordinate system, he gently rested his head on the table and dreamt of the Una Mass number scale 36-24-36.

Dames' Doings

The UMass Dames Club is proud to announce that on Thursday, March 17th, Dr. Edward Manwell, chief-of-surgery at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, will be our guest speaker.

Dr. Manwell has recently returned from a 6-week trip aboard the Good Ship Hope, which was docked in Guinea, Africa.

Dr. Manwell will talk of this trip, and show color slides. He is a distinguished, eloquent gentleman and the evening will be a memorable one.

The public is invited to attend: at the Farley 4-H Club on campus. Talk begins at 8:30 p.m.. admission is free.

The regular monthly meeting will precede the guest speaker. Any questions, please call Nicole de la Roche, 256-8054.

Newman Gives Novena

From March sixth to the fourteenth, a Novena in honor of St. Francis Xavier will be conducted at the Newman Center Chapel. One of the founding fathers of the Society of Jesus (the Jesuits) Francis Xavier was, during his life, famed as a missionary to India, Japan and other countries of the East.

The nine days of prayer, which make up the Novena, will include Benediction, hymns, a short discourse and prayers.

Teachers*Study Here in Summer

On the University of Massachusetts campus this summer will be a NDEA Institute for Advanced Study in English sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education.

Forty-five experienced high school teachers of English will be selected to pursue a six weeks' course of study, June 23-August 3. They will receive tuition free, stipends of $75 per week, and an allowance of $15 per week per dependent.

Although preference will be given applicants from Massachusetts, applications are invited from teachers in any of the New England states who have had at least three years' experience teaching English in Grades 9-12.

The Institute aims to increase each participant's knowledge of specific pieces of English literature, to provide him with a variety of critical approaches of these works, and to increase his skill in teaching composition.

One course will be given in poetry, one in critical approaches to drama and fiction, and another in composition and language.

Inquiries should be made to the Director of the Institute, Prof. Richard O. Ulin, School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts 01002.

UM Profs Protest Soviet Sentences

A strong protest over the recent sentences given Soviet writers Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuri Daniel has been made by the president of the Association of Literary Magazines of America, Prof. Jules Chametzky of the University of Massachusetts.

THE ASSOCIATION represents editors of leading literary magazines of the U.S. Speaking for this group, Prof. Chametzky, editor of the Massachusetts Review, said in a letter to the cultural attache of the Soviet embassy:

"We protest and deplore the harsh punishment of Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuri Daniel and urge you to do all you can to see that they be released from prison and be allowed to practice their profession as writers.

The association, Prof. Chametzky stated, is "deeply committed to the idea that the health of literature and culture requires the utmost freedom for writers to practice their craft and to be published without fear of censorship or government interference."

He concluded: "It is not the greatness of the Soviet Union which is at issue, but its reputation as a civilized and secure power."

U.S. Policy Lecture Topic

John S. Badeau, director of the Middle East Institute at Columbia University, will speak at Smith College on Tuesday, March 15.

The lecture, entitled "United States Foreign Policy Toward the Arab World—Outlook and Problems," is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Wright Hall.

Living first in Mosul and then in Baghdad, he served as a builder for the Mission, having been trained as a Civil and Sanitary Engineer.

During the war, Mr. Badeau served with the United States Office of War Information as Chief Regional Specialist for the Middle East. After the war, he returned to Cairo as the President of the American University.

In 1961 President Kennedy appointed Mr. Badeau as United States Ambassador to the United Arab Republic, a post he held until 1964 when he resigned to join the faculty at Columbia.

Mr. Badeau is the author of numerous articles on the Middle East for professional periodicals, and has had published three books: "East and West of Suez" (1942); "The Emergence of Modern Egypt" (1953); and "The Lands Between" (1958).

The lecture, presented under the auspices of the Four-College Asian African Studies Program, is open to the public.

Join in the most adventurous experiment of our time. Operation Match. Let the IBM 7090 Computer (the world's most perfect matchmaker) stamp out blind dates for you.

Two Harvard juniors started it. 100,000 students have done it. Now you and 3,400,000 college students in 1500 colleges in 50 cities can sign up and join in!

Just send us the coupon. We'll send you the Operation Match Quantitative Personality Projection Test pronto!

Then return the questionnaire with $3.00. What you're like and what you like will be translated into our 7090's memory file. It will scan the qualifications of every member of the opposite sex from this geographic area. Then it will select the five or more matches best for you.

You'll receive your names, addresses and telephone numbers within three weeks. You'll be what your date is looking for. Your date will be what you are looking for. In other words: the matches will be mutual.

Dear IBM 7090,

I am 17 or over (and 27 or under) and I want to help stamp out blind dates. So mail me my questionnaire. Quick!

Sabbatical

Gregory W. Webb, associate professor of geology at the University of Massachusetts now on sabbatical leave, has begun a geological research and study tour of the British Isles.

He will concentrate on the geology of several well-known strike-slip faults and will compare these with similar ones he has previously studied in Eastern Canada. He will evaluate the possibility that both may be part of a single crustal fracture system.

Another member of the department, Dr. Peter Robinson, assistant professor, will lecture two days each next week at the University of Maine and at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, sponsored by the American Geological Institute.

He will lecture on recent Massachusetts geological research and lead seminars on the history of the earth's crust in Western New England and on problems of geologic mapping.

All interested persons may sign up for the meals at the Hillel Office, Student Union. For further information, call the Hillel Office, ext. 2526.

Legislature Started Late

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES, after eight and one-half weeks of the 1966 session, have completed 18.8 per cent of their work, by reporting on 751 of the total 3978 matters referred to them, according to the latest tabulation of progress.

In 1965, for the same period of time in actual deliberations—four and one-half weeks—committees had reported 619 matters or 14.5 per cent. Committees got off to a late start this year, because the Legislature recessed to allow the Clerks of the House and Senate to catch up on their paper work after the historic year-round session in 1965.

During the past week, 281 matters were reported by legislative committees, and 72 new matters were referred. At this date, 2153 matters have been heard by committees, representing 53 per cent of the total bills referred to them.

New Courses Offered For Food Industry

Five courses for food service people, with credits that can be applied toward an associate degree, will be offered by the University of Massachusetts this summer.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the new program was made jointly today by Dr. William B. Esselen, head of the department of food science and technology, and Dr. Donald E. Lundberg, professor in charge of the restaurant and hotel management program.

The courses are being offered in response to requests from food industry leaders. The program has been designed to provide knowledge needed to improve food service operation efficiency in restaurant, hotel and motel, hospital, school lunch and other food management operations.

THE FIRST SESSION, June 15 to July 22, includes two three-credit courses. Personnel Management will be taught by Dr. Lundberg, and Food Science and Technology: Fundamentals of Food Preparation will be taught by Dr. F. Miles Sawyer.

Advanced Foods and Food Service Management, will both be taught by Albert L. Wrisley; Food Science and Technology: Dairy and Poultry Products will be taught by Dr. Frank L. Potter and John N. Denison.

FURTHER information, including applications for courses, may be obtained from Director, Summer Session, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01003.

Please don't zlupf Sprite.
It makes plenty of noise
all by itself.

Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.
Flip its lid and it really flips.
Bubbling, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.
An almost excessively lively drink.
Hence, to zlupf is to err.
What is zlupping?

Zlupping is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprite from the bottle with a straw.

Zzzzzzlupf!
It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But, if zlupping Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment; if a good healthy zlupf is your idea of heaven, well...all right.

But have a heart. With a drink as noisy as Sprite, a little zlupf goes a long, long way.

SPRITE. SO TART AND TINGLING, WE JUST COULDN'T KEEP IT QUIET.

On Friday, the women's downhill event will open the three day competition at 11 a.m. The men's downhill will follow at 12 noon. The course will be run on the nose dive trail. The men's start will be above the toll road trail, just under Mt. Mansfield's "nose." The women's start will be at the "corridor" of the nose dive, just below the toll road trail.

The giant slalom on Saturday will be video taped for broadcast on Sunday by CBS television. The giant slalom course is on the lift line and national trails for the men and on the national trail for the women. The women's event is scheduled for 10 a.m. and the men's running at 11 a.m.

Rounding out the three way competition on Sunday, is the slalom for women at 10 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. The men's slalom will begin at 1:00 p.m. and the second run will be televised "live" at 3:15 p.m.

While in Stowe, the American team will stay at the Town & Country Motor Lodge. The Center Motor Lodge will host the Canadian team while the Austrian, Swiss and French teams will be guests of the Mt. Mansfield Company at the Toll House Motor Inn.

The Oldsmobile Division of the General Motors Corporation will donate the use of six new Toronado automobiles to the coaches and teams during their stay in Stowe to travel to and from Mt. Mansfield.

POLCHLOPEK AND SKOWYRA LEAD HARD-LUCK PUCKSTERS

A pair of hard-skating juniors, Ed Polchlopek (Chicopee Falls) and Bill Skowyra (Palmer), led the University of Massachusetts varsity hockey team in scoring this winter.

Polchlopek notched 21 goals and 14 assists for 35 points while Skowyra had 12 goals and 18 assists for 30 points. Junior Dave Eaton (Winchester) had five goals and 12 assists for 17 points. Other leaders were sophomore Greg Stone (Needham) six goals and five assists for 11 points and junior Fred Molander (Dedham) three goals and eight assists for 11 points. Sophomore Bob Cadi-gan (Milton) scored four goals and five assists in the first three games but suffered a shoulder injury in the opening period of the fourth game that sidelined him for the season.

Coach Steve Kosakowski's hard-luck Redmen finished with a 3-16 record but lost five overtime games. The overtime losses were to Connecticut (twice), Amherst, Hamilton and New Hampshire. The New Hampshire game was the team's finest all-around performance. The Redmen led by margins of 3-0 and 5-3 before bowing to the powerful Blue Wildcats.

Polchlopek and Skowyra moved themselves into high places in the Massachusetts hockey record book. Polchlopek's 35 points are the third highest in one season (record is 41 by Jim Ellingwood in 1962). His 21 goals are the third highest (record is 41 by Jim Ellingwood in 1962), his 21 goals are the third highest (record is 24 by Charlie Glew in 1962), and his 14 assists rank fourth for a season. Skowyra's 30 points are the fifth highest and his 18 assists rank second to Ellingwood's 25 in 1962. Career-wise, Polchlopek ranks fifth in total points with 54 (record is 80 by Russ Kidd '56), fourth in goals with 33 (record is 50 by Kidd), and tied for fifth with 21 assists (record is 38 by Ellingwood and Ron Lundgren '57). Skowyra ranked ninth in total points with 41, and third in assists with 25.

The crew, under Coach Dave Clark, has been practicing five days a week since March 4. The dedicated rowers are showing rapid improvement and are striving for recognition as an official UMass athletic team.

MERMAIDS TRIUMPH

The UMass women's swimming team beat Cushing Academy, 42-34, in their only home meet of the season. Members of the team were Sandy Whitehead, Kay Aldrich, Annette Robichaud, Ellen Megill, Debby Mangin, "Hank" Coupee, Franny Clines, and new to the UMass teams, Joan Stever and diver Sue Griffith.

Firsts were taken in 50 yd. freestyle by Whitehead, time 30.8; 50 backstroke: Robichaud, 34.4; and Megill, 100 individual medley, 1:15.8. Tables turned in favor of UMass midway in the meet when Stevers showed high ability in 50 free, time 29.5; and diver Griffith took 52.05 points to Cushing's 25.8. The final 200 yd. relay of Robichaud, Megill, Whitehead and Stevers decided the meet.

SPORTS SHORTS

by DAVE JARNES

BOSTON COLLEGE salvaged some prestige for New England basketball with a pulsating 96-93 win in triple overtime against Missouri Valley Conference power Louisville. Ed Hockenberry's basket with one second left in regulation time enabled the Eagles to tie up the game at 74-74 and sophomore Steve Adelman, who scored 32 points, led BC in the overtime sessions.

UMASS WILL OPEN its basketball schedule next year with a game against BC at the Cage in December. The ambitious Redmen will be playing in two tournaments next year, the first at the Boston Garden with Manhattan, BC, and Syracuse and second at Oklahoma City with Oklahoma City, Stanford, DePaul, Temple, Arizona State, and Texas.

THE PHILADELPHIA 76ER'S moved another step closer to dethroning the Boston Celtics by edging the New York Knicks 115-113 at New York. The 76er's trailed 94-84 at the outset of the fourth quarter but then put on a furious rally in the last 3 minutes to nip the always dangerous Knicks. Although the Celtics have won impressively in their last two outings, they will finish second unless someone upsets Philadelphia in their last three games.

IN THEIR first three exhibition games the Red Sox have looked as bad as they were last year. Poor fielding and mental lapses on the basepaths (somehow the Sox can't remember how many outs there are) have led to three defeats. The pitching has been surprisingly good as Dave Morehead and 265 lb. Dick Radatz have been quite impressive. Dennis Bennett's arm is apparently healthy and this is encouraging.

Intramurals Face Decisive Week

by DAVE JARNES

The last week before vacation is an active one as championships in wrestling, volleyball, squash, and wrestling will all be resolved.

COACH GLADCHUK has lined up a colorful program for the wrestling finals at the auxiliary gym this Tuesday at 7:00. Sig Ep and the Butterfield Lemons are aiming to repeat as champions in the volleyball playoffs. In bowling, the Grayson Flaming A's are favored to win the campus championship. Last year the A's accomplished the almost unheard of feat of going through the season with an undefeated record before bowing to TEP in the campus playoffs.

Grayson lost only four points this year while TEP failed to qualify for the championship, finishing second to PSD. Before they meet PSD and the independent champ the Flaming A's must get by the Baker Buffaloes, who were undefeated title-ists in a weaker league. Consistency rather than spectacular performances is the mark of the Grayson team as all four of their bowlers usually average between 165 and 175.

SOFTBALL AND SOCCER will highlight the spring agenda. From this corner the Greenough Grants appear to be the best among the dorms while AEP should cop the IFC title after battling KS and LCA. The Grants feature a superb battery of fastballer Kay Sanford on the mound and Pete Gavrilien behind the plate while AEP will field the same team that barely lost the fraternity title a year ago.

ROSTERS FOR SOFTBALL AND SOCCER are due by April 1. The games will start on April 11 and April 12, respectively. Officials for both sports are needed. Softball games are played at night while the soccer games start at 4:50 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

International Ski Stars At Stowe, Vt.

The arrival of some of the world's best Alpine skiers at Burlington, Vermont airport on March 15th has been confirmed by Mt. Mansfield Ski Club officials in Stowe, Vermont. The teams from Austria, France and Switzerland will land at Kennedy International Airport in New York at 2:15 p.m. next Tuesday. Bill Kidd, Jim Huega, Bill Marolt, Coaches Bob Beattie, Chuck Ferries and Gordon Eaton will accompany the foreign teams consisting of 12 Swiss, 12 Austrian and nine French ski stars to Burlington, Vermont on Tuesday afternoon. The jet flight of the Mohawk Airlines will arrive at 5:51 p.m.

The U.S. Ski Association has invited the all star ski teams and their coaches from the leading Alpine nations of the world to participate in the U.S. Alpine and international championships in Stowe on March 18-19-20, the Werner Cup at Sun Valley, Idaho, and the High Sierra Cup at Heavenly Valley, California, later this month. Originally, five men and four women were invited to the United States races, but both Switzerland and Austria are sending additional entries to the Stowe race. Among the additional Austrian girls is Greta Gabl, daughter of Stowe instructor and international ski coach, Pepi Gabl, who has recently won the Austrian junior championship title.

A later flight will bring the 35 top skiers of the United States to Stowe. In total, the eight divisions of the U.S. Ski Association will enter 31 men and 16 women to compete in the International and U.S. Title race, that will be a preview of the FIS World Championship Ski Games in Chile, scheduled for August 1966.

Training for the downhill, giant slalom and slalom event will begin on Wednesday. On Thursday, competitors will be given the opportunity to run the downhill course "non-stop." The non stop run is to simulate the actual running of the downhill event so that competitors can familiarize themselves with the course. The downhill is the fastest and most challenging of all the events. The slalom and giant slalom courses are not pre-run but must be memorized by competitors on the day of the

Pistol Clinic

The Varsity Pistol Team will hold spring clinics during March and April. The first meeting will be held today at 8:00 P.M. in Dickinson Hall. Persons interested in pistol shooting should contact the University Varsity Pistol Coach, Sp5 Norman H. Twait, at Dickinson Hall, Room 106, Tel.: 545-2321/2322 or attend one of the spring clinics planned.

by TERRY CARPENTER
Winning three events and showing superb depth, the track team raced to an upset victory in the Yankee Conference meet Saturday at Burlington, Vt. It was the first such victory in the history of the school, and is all the more amazing in that the team lacks track facilities both indoors and out.

THINGS WERE GOING right for the Redmen from the very start. Tony Divver picked an unexpected point in the 35-lb. weight throw when he captured fifth place with a 46'8" toss. John Medeiros, the busiest man of the day, lived up to his advanced billing in the long jump by winning the event with 22'6 1/4", setting a new meet and cage record. Rhode Island, favored to win the meet, began a little rally of its own in this event by taking second, third, and fifth.

Bob Murray quickly got the advantage back, however, by scoring a tremendous upset victory over R.I.'s Sculco in the pole vault. Sculco, defending champ in the pole vault and YanCon record holder, cleared the same height as Murray (13'6") but had more misses.

IN BETWEEN FIELD events, trials for the dash and hurdles had been taking place. Medeiros and Steve Burrell had both qualified for the finals in the dash and John Hall made the grade in the high hurdles. Medeiros, who ran trials, semi-finals, and a run off in both the high and low hurdles was shut clearing 6' even for fourth place. Going into the 600, the Redmen were in the lead, closely followed by Rhode Island and UConn.

In the 600, Pace of R.I. was the favorite and John Anderson, who recently tied a school record in the event, was supposed to fight it out for second. Pace, however, had all he could do to keep Andy out of first. In the end, John finished a tenth of a second behind, but established a new school mark with 1:13.6.

In the high hurdles, John finished fourth, and R.I. captured a third. The smallest state was making a bid. Terry Carpenter and Steve St. Clair turned the Rams back as they took third and fifth in the 2-mile in 9:50 and 9:51, while R.I. was shut out.

In the 1000, the Redmen were hurt by another seeding miscue. Billy Thoms was in the supposedly fast section of the race with defending champ Kirkland of Maine. Billy finished a tenth of a second behind and everyone thought he had second in the total race. In one of the "unseeded" sections, however, two runners beat Kirkland's time and pushed Billy back to fourth. Thoms clocked 2:16, and Bowman, who was in the same heat and was pushed back to sixth, clocked 2:17.

The Redmen, who hoped to clinch the meet in the 1000, now had to wait out the low hurdles in which R.I. had a runner but UMass didn't. The Ram hurdler finished last, however, and the meet was clinched. Amid the out in both.

With the morning field events and trials over and the Redmen in contention, the afternoon running events were looked forward to with eagerness. The first event was the mile, and much to everyone's surprise neither of the UMass milers was seeded or placed in the first row. Steve St. Clair, leading distance man for the team all year, was boxed in from the first step, and Terry Carpenter, just rounding into shape, was forced to run on the outside for the first few laps.

DESPITE THE DISADVANTAGES, Carpenter and St. Clair came through with second and third with times of 4:24 and 4:25. Burrell and Medeiros then pulled the biggest coup of the meet with a one-two in the 50-yd. dash. Burrell's winning time of 5.5 set a meet mark. The high jump was just finishing up after the dash.

Billy Tindall cleared 6'2", the same as the winner, but was forced to third place because of more misses. John Medeiros celebration and confusion the team almost forgot it still had the relay to run before the meet was over. Burrell, Anderson, Thoms, and Bob Morony ran the relay as victory cries filled the locker room.

Upon conclusion of the relay, in which the Redmen finished third, Coach Footrick was thrown into the shower and emerged soaking wet to receive the plaque awarded to the winning team. With only the UConn relays to go, the track team has had its most successful season ever. It finished with a 3-1 dual meet record, finishing fourth in the AAU New England, and first in the Yankee Conference.

Medeiros, co-captain and high scorer, went undefeated in the long jump and won the New England title. Coach Footrick, who didn't say anything about the victory, (but anyone could tell how he felt by seeing the big smile on his face) looks forward to the trackless outdoor season with enthusiasm.

The University announced today that it is developing plans to build a new independent residential college in Amherst for the projected 5,000 students who will constitute the next phase of the University's expected enrollment of 25,000 students by 1975.

The Board of Trustees gave preliminary approval this week to the concept and asked the Faculty Planning Committee to develop a more complete program in conjunction with the architect.

The plan calls for the development of the newest UMass residence complex as an independent college with its own faculty and curriculum. It has been tentatively named University College.

THE PHYSICAL planning of the complex is already under way by New York architect I. M. Pei, designer of the Kennedy Memorial Library. Scheduled completion for the first building is in 1969.

The University College plan calls for five co-educational residential groups of 1000 students, each headed by its own master or dean. Each group would have five resident faculty fellows, 33 graduate student counselors, 62 non-resident faculty members and a professional manager. Physical facilities for each group would include faculty residences and offices, classrooms and seminar rooms and a small library in the same buildings with student residences and dining halls.

This grouping of study and living facilities is designed to merge academic and residence life and to bring a close day-to-day contact between students and faculty. The concept began at UMass with the residential college at Orchard Hill and is being continued in the Southwest Residence area.

ACCORDING to the planning committee, "University College will permit a new alignment of subject matter—courses in the biological sciences, physical sciences, behavioral sciences and humanities—all of a broad nature in contrast with the fragmented courses of many present curricula."

The central emphasis for faculty will be on teaching and for students on independent study. "As students progress toward the upper division, fewer formal courses will be offered, with more reliance on independent reading and research. There will be more seminar courses, more stress on discussion courses, fewer formal class meetings, greater emphasis on writing papers and generally more stress on concepts and ideas and less concern for details," the committee noted.

"The present concept of University College provides the many advantages of the small college with its intimate contact between students and faculty, while at the same time offering the great resources of a university," the planning committee said.

PROVISION will be made for students to take courses or majors in the University as a whole; University College faculty members may occasionally offer graduate level courses or have graduate students in the orthodox departments of the University.

It is expected that University College will operate under the same general guidelines with respect to student-faculty ratio and financial restraints as the rest of the University.

The University College academic planning group is headed by David M. Clay, assistant professor of philosophy. A separate committee headed by Provost Oswald Tippo has charge of physical plans.

Boston City Planner Hits Johnson Progress

by PHIL GOEPP,
Feature Staff

"President Johnson called the problem of the American city 'the most important domestic crisis in the U.S.' I regret to say that he has yet to treat that problem financially in any way that meets such eloquence."

THIS WAS the opening statement of Edward Logue, Head of the Boston Redevelopment authority, who described some of the many problems facing his redevelopment program. Logue spoke last Monday as a guest of the Distinguished Visitors Program.

FOR BACKGROUND, Logue reviewed the general growth of urban areas throughout the world, pointing out that this growth has resulted in the slackening of opportunities in rural areas and the increase of jobs in city areas.

The main problem area in the American city, he said, is the central city, the business and downtown residential section. He referred to the fact that families who have the money tend to move out of the central city as "votes of no-confidence" in the city's future.

AS THE PEOPLE with money move out, the central city suffers from a lack of investment and development, and a general deterioration of urban services and activities results.

Since the war, for example, the population of downtown Boston has dropped from about 815,000 to about 615,000.

Logue then listed the various remedies that have been attempted. The first is city planning, which assumes that there is a good plan for what a city should be like, which will be self-activating. This plan has generally failed because the people of a city don't just move wherever the plan says they should.

The next plan was the institution of zoning laws, but this idea was destroyed because of the frequent circumventing of the laws through political channels.

THE NEXT IDEA he discussed was the clearance of slums by building large low-rent apartment complexes and moving families from slum areas into them. These have not, he said, been very successful because of poor quality of construction and the lack of near-by commercial facilities.

The plan which is now in use, according to Logue, is one which calls for the renovating of already existing buildings and neighborhoods through a combination of physical and social rehabilitation.

Regarding federal funds, Logue said that Boston has, in the last five years, received about $175 million for their renewal projects.

HE MENTIONED that congress will probably have to look carefully at the alternatives to cutting back on the "Great Society" program in favor of the war in Vietnam, the moon race, foreign aid, etc.

"I WOULD HATE to think that the only way these problems can be resolved is by being called to our attention and to the attention of Congress in the dramatic way that it was done in Watts."

Fiction Fantasies

"Escape to Reality"

Dr. Isaac Asimov, famed science, and science fiction writer, will speak on Tuesday, March 29, in the S.U. Ballroom, at 8:00 p.m., as the guest of Distinguished Visitor's Program and Science Fiction Club. He will speak on "Escape to Reality," emphasizing the importance of science-fiction.

Over the past twenty years the name Isaac Asimov has become increasingly familiar to both scientists and science fiction readers. A highly skilled and prolific writer, he has an impressive record of more than fifty successful fiction and nonfiction books.

AMONG THE FICTION, there are science fiction novels, collections of science fiction short stories, and anthologies, and even a murder mystery.

Among his nonfiction are textbooks for medical students and for student nurses, books on science for the general adult public, and even some books about the BIBLE and a work in progress on Greek History.

BORN IN RUSSIA, Dr. Asimov was educated at Columbia University (Ph.D. in 1948), and he became Assistant Professor of Biochemistry at Boston University School of Medicine. In 1958 he left this position to devote his full time to writing. He lives in West Newton, Mass.

DR. ISAAC ASIMOV

When PLAYBOY published an article about old-time science fiction, called "Girls for the Slime God," AMAZING MAGAZINE quickly retaliated by commissioning Dr. Asimov to create a story especially for the "Inimitable Playboy" and to prove to them that science fiction has not forgotten that S-X is the most important thing in the Universe.

Asimov's "Playboy and the Slime God" is a witty and skillfully written spoof on "RECREATIONLAD." Not only is there the usual bevy of beautiful girls, but the slime gods—green, bug-eyed, dripping with mucous—live up to expectations, as they did nap two earth creatures.

MIXING GENE POOLS with twisted definitions, these mucous monsters create hilarious situations and comic antics which are in true Asimov form. Dr. Asimov brings to science fiction not only a scientific background, but a warm, charming sense of humor, and just plain good writing.

More Federal $$$ Available For Student Loans in '66

Conversion of the government's student loan program from federal to private financing as proposed in the President's budget message will make about 90% of the nation's college and university students eligible for assistance, an Office of Education official said.

During the fiscal year which ended last June 30, the number of borrowers under the National Defense Education Act was about 319,000. In his message, Pres. Johnson predicted that the number of borrowers would rise to 775,000 in the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Peter M. Muirhead, associate commissioner of education, predicted that the total would "rise dramatically" in the years ahead under the impetus of the new student loan program.

He explained that loans would no longer be restricted to students from the poorest families but would become available to those from families with incomes as high as $15,000 a year.

Aids Middle-Income

"This takes in a good proportion of the middle-income families in the country," Muirhead said. "Approximately 90% of the students in institutions of higher learning today come from families with incomes of $15,000 a year or less."

The total enrollment in higher education institutions in the current year is about 5.5 million.

Pres. Johnson has proposed new legislation that would abolish direct federal loans to college students and establish instead a system of government guarantees to banks and other private institutions that make such education loans.

In addition, the government would pay a subsidy to the lenders in order to maintain a 3% interest rate for the student borrowers. Normal bank interest rates on such loans at the current time range from 6-8%.

Loans Run Ten Years

The loans would run as much as ten years, with repayment deferred until the student had completed his studies. Part of the principal would not have to be repaid by those who become teachers.

An insured student loan program was made a feature of the Higher Education Act of 1965 which cleared Congress late last fall, but officials said few loans have been made under that program so far.

What the President now proposes is a change in the Defense Education Act of 1958 under which virtually all of the outstanding student loans have been made.

He also proposes changing the definition of eligibility from proven hardship, which officials said amounted in practice to a "means test" to a stated level of family income—$15,000 a year.

Lent To Colleges

Sixty per cent of the Defense Education Act loans issued since 1958, the Office of Education said, have gone to students from families whose income is below $6,000 a year.

The government has invested $609 million in such loans in the seven years the program has been law, and 833,000 students have borrowed.

The money actually is lent to colleges and universities in a lump sum and they, in turn, lend it to individual students. Repaid loans go into the institution's revolving fund from which new loans are made.

Delinquency Rate High

The delinquency rate on the loans has been high, according to normal loan standards, Office of Education officials say. On any given date last year, officials said that 16% were overdue or in default.

However, banking circles are ready to cooperate "enthusiastically with the new program," an Office of Education spokesman said.

Rep. Edith Green (D., Ore.), who is chairman of the House subcommittee on education, said she was reserving judgment on the program. "I'm not necessarily opposed to the insured loan idea," she said, "but I think we should see how well it works before we abandon the other plan."

WFCR to D.V.P. Committee Study China Names New Members

Life on mainland China today is the subject of three special programs to be heard on Four College Radio — WFCR (88.5 mc) Thursdays at 3 p.m. starting March 24.

Recorded at the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts' 44th School of International Relations held recently at M.I.T., the programs provide a detailed analysis of Chinese life and thought.

On the opening program (March 24) John K. Fairbank, of Harvard's East Asian Research Center, begins by discussing the "Individual in Chinese Society." He will be followed by a study of "The Impact of Chinese Organization on the People" with Ezra Vogel a research associate

The Distinguished Visitors Program held its selections for membership to next year's committee on Tuesday, March 8 and Wednesday, March 9. The committee has announced the names of the following people who will serve on next year's D.V.P. committee:

at the Harvard East Asian Research Center. The final speaker on the program is Harold Isaacs, Professor of Political Science at M.I.T.

The series concludes April 7 with an address by Roger Hillsman, a former member of the U. S. State Department who presently teaches at Columbia University.

Class of '67 — Janet Bailey, Eileen White, Linda Ferreira; Class of '68 — Susan Halsey, Karen Rose, Allen Davis; Class of '69 — Paul Connors, Anne Swanson, Elizabeth Rogers.

In addition six students were selected to serve as representatives at large. They are: Steve Gordon, Sted Howard, Ralph Ritchie, Summer Davis, Betsy Singer, Barbara Sanford.

Senate Forms A Homecoming Comm.

by EILEEN GILL
Senate Reporter

As a result of action taken at last night's Senate meeting, the HOMECOMING WEEKEND COMMITTEE, composed of 25-50 undergraduate students shall be formed to organize and coordinate the weekend's activities. This committee shall be an R.S.O. organization with a minimum of 1/5 of the total membership selected from each of the three upper classes.

A motion forming a Ways and Means Committee whose purpose shall be to examine the manner in which R.S.O. organizations discharge their financial responsibilities with regard to S.A.T. funds was also passed at the meeting.

Budgets were passed for Freshman Directory and the Flying Redmen's trip to Washington, and the budget of the Political Science Association was referred to the Finance Committee.

Included among announcements was the resignation of Sen. Locke (fraternities), the combining of Men's and Women's Interform forums, and a report of the ad hoc committee on Stockbridge integration.

Men's Judiciary Selections

Two sophomores and one freshman will be chosen for Men's Judiciary for 1966-67. Applications are available from heads of residence and R.S.O. office. They must be returned by 5:00 p.m. March 9th.

Selections will be held March 12, at 1:00 p.m. for sophomore; March 13, at 1:00 p.m. for freshmen, in the Council Chambers, SU.

Religious Convocation To Be Held at S. U.

Three leading religious leaders of Western Massachusetts will be honorary chairmen of a PEACE ON EARTH Convocation April 18 and 19 at the Student Union of the University of Massachusetts.

They are the Very Rev. Robert M. Hatch, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Western Massachusetts, Rabbi Herman Snyder of Temple Sinai, Springfield and the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Springfield.

This will be one of a nationwide series of 100 convocations launched by the Fellowship of Reconciliation, with national headquarters in Nyack, New York.

Planned for persons of church, synagogue and community the convocations are dedicated to the theme: PEACE ON EARTH: Moral and Technological Implications.

They are planned in cooperation with the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions of Santa Barbara, California.

The idea for this program was inspired by two profound documents: Pacem in Terris, an Encyclical of Pope John 23rd and The Triple Revolution by a committee of outstanding American scholars.

Also to be discussed will be weaponry, or a world society that is war-oriented and dominated by weapons which have the power to destroy civilization.

Two principle speakers for the April 18-19 conference will be Dr. W. H. Ferry, Vice President of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, and the Rev. Myron Bloy, Episcopal Chaplain at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A $5.00 registration fee will be charged for persons attending, with additional expenses to be met by the Fellowship of Reconciliation. Each person registering will receive a packet of important material, including a copy of Pope John's Encyclical, Pacem in Terris.

The Four Women Only sparked both figuratively and literally last Tuesday evening at the Sophomore Banquet. Dressed in sequin-topped outfits, the four women hopped, jumped, shimmied, and jerked through one of their songs. However, they also displayed their finesse in other areas such as "Bye Bye Blackbird." Comic, Dave Astor, who has appeared on the Tonight Show, Jack Parr Show, and others, provided a brief moment of exuberance for the crowd of 200.

Humor and Song Highlight Show

by FRED PILON

Roast Beef and soft candle light highlighted the Sophomore Banquet Tuesday evening. The more than 200 ravenous beings were also entertained by Ted Benard's soft dinner music which ranged from Dixieland Jazz to a crawling version of The Girl from Ipanema.

Every person received a delightful favor, a genuine clay pipe, complete with a green ribbon that informed everyone that they were attending the Sophomore Banquet, held on Tue., Mar. 15, 1966. A few brave souls even filled their pipes and attempted to smoke them.

With the featured comic missing, the Sophomore Class brought forth the "next best thing" who ridiculed and parodied the campus police,

Pres. Lederle, and the "typical" UMass student. Dave Astor, a comic, was well received by the audience. Combining poetry reading with mooching cigarettes he ran through his act and commented, "I didn't know you were such a cultured group."

The Four Women Only added spark and beauty to the program. Among the songs they sang were More, Bye Bye Blackbird, and two presentations of the same untitled song, one a version from the Big Band Era, the other a modern hip presentation.

After a touching, sentimental introduction of his parents, Bob Keough presented a speech on class officers and the future role of classes. The speech was well received by fellow class officers.

New Students' Party On Campus

A new organization, the Students' Party of the University of Massachusetts has appeared on the campus. The aim of this party will be to provide a powerful organization for the effective expression of student interests.

ACCORDING to Stephen Smith, one of the originators, the student body in the past has been criticized for apathy in defense of its rights.

The founders of this party believe that apathy results from the realization that individuals and small groups, no matter how well their views are expressed, have little or no effect upon policy decreed by the administration.

They intend to provide the strong but flexible organization which will allow for collective expression of student opinion and its forceful presentation to the administration.

WITH SUFFICIENT support the Students' Party can demand the reform of archaic and inequitable regulations with far greater effect than individuals and small groups.

THE STUDENTS' PARTY has two functions:

- It will seek to discern and define student interest through wide membership and careful organization.

- It will support candidates for all elective student offices whom it feels best express and support the interests of the student body as a whole.

All student officers, senators and judiciary members can then present a more unified and infinitely more effective program of reform to the administration than can otherwise be possible.

"Four Bags Full" To Be Presented

On Monday night, March 28, the French corridors will present the French movie "Four Bags Full," starring Jean Gabin and Bourvil, with Louis de Funes, and Jeannette Batti. The dialogue is in French, with English subtitles.

"Four Bags Full" is based on Marcel Aymé's satirical fable of two men who lug a contraband pig from one end of Paris to the other during the Nazi occupation. In the hands of its brilliant interpreters, it becomes a morceau ragoutant, a tidbit of special flavor. Its qualities of irony, suspense, uproarious farce, and very searching revelation of character under wartime stress recommend it to those who prize the choicest cinematic morsels.

Bourvil, the star of the film, plays the lead in this serio-comic movie. His portrait of a cab-driver turned black marketeer, which is wildly funny as well as poignantly touching, earns him a place in the roster which now includes the names of Raimu, Fernandel, Michel Simon and Rellys.

International Mixer A 'Roaring Success'

by AARIF GHAYYUR

If the "International Mixes," held by the UMass International Club last Friday, were to be judged by the number and the variety of the people who attended, it would definitely rate as a "roaring success."

The wide variety of students present was revealed as they were welcomed by club president, Alladin Hashim. There were students there from Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Springfield Col., Worcester Col. and the host students from UMass.

There was music to suit all tastes ranging from Russian folk songs, African limbos, and Latin American rhythm to the more conventional "slow dance" music played by Al Caiola, Billy Vaughn and others. In charge of the music was "disc-jockey" and M.C. Robert Darling.

Those who attended the mixer unanimously remarked that they "never had it so good." All are now looking forward to a second "International Mixer" scheduled for next April.

Scientist to Speak on Faith

An outstanding contemporary scientist, Ulric Jelinek, will be speaking at the College Life meeting on Wednesday, March 20, at 7:30 p.m. in SBA 120. The program will be sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ.

The Campus Crusade for Christ is a non-denominational Christian student movement which began at UCLA in the early fifties.

Active at UMass for the first time this year, the purpose of the group is to promote an honest investigation of the key issues in Christianity.

The group sponsors a Wednesday night meeting, College Life, and discussions in Greek houses and dorms.

the International Club, held last Wednesday, Mrs. Evelyn H. Russell, the University's Foreign Student Advisor, was the guest of honor. Mrs. Russell gave a talk, with color slides, on Kenya, the East African nation which she visited during the 1964 Christmas vacation.

During her two-week business-pleasure tour of the country she spent most of her time in Nairobi, the capital city, with former UM student from Kenya, Solomon W. Watatua. Her tour was arranged by Aid. Institute of International Education, and the Kenya Ministry of Education.

SYRUP TRIP

If enough members are interested, the club proposes to make an out-door trip to observe and participate in maple syrup tapping and production this coming Sun., Mar. 20. Maple syrup production is recognized as one of the oldest American industries and it is one of the few crops whose production is solely American.

The trip will be open to anyone, both members and non-members.

Mr. Jelinek, this Wednesday's speaker, has been with the United States Guided Missile Program, as head of the Materials Research Division.

For fifteen years he was chief metallurgist for the Westinghouse Meter Division, and at present is the president of the Severna Manufacturing Corporation. His company manufactures parts from unusual materials for the aircraft and electronics industry.

Mr. Jelinek is an active Christian layman and speaks frequently of his faith in Christ and its relevance to twentieth century science. This Wednesday he will be discussing the relationship of scientific facts to statements in the Old Testament Scriptures. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Scholarship Pageant Planned

Plans are now being made for the first annual "Miss University Scholarship Pageant," the first campus pageant ever held in Massachusetts. It will be held on May 6 in Bowker Auditorium.

THE PAGEANT, sponsored by the Amherst Jaycees and the Revelers, is open to all women between the ages of 18 and 28 in the Central Pioneer Valley. This includes women from the University, Smith College, Mount Holyoke College, and the surrounding communities.

Any young woman is eligible regardless of her hometown or her home state. Judging will be in the swimsuit, evening gown and talent divisions.

THE WINNER and the first and second runner-up will receive awards in the form of scholarships. The winner automatically will be a contestant in the Miss Massachusetts Scholarship Pageant which awards several thousand dollars worth of prizes and scholarships to its winners. Then on to the glamor of the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

All information concerning applications and other essential details will be available during the week of March 28.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

The Scholastic Inquisition

By KENNETH HARDY

Dean Field's announcement in Friday's Collegian regarding the formation of a committee of administrators and deans to "meaningfully and positively" respond to "fundamental needs" expressed by the students through the Collegian and the student senate (no mention was made of the University Reform Committee's conference on academic affairs) would be amusing if it were so tragic. Why were no students asked to be on the committee? More important: Why were the students not consulted by the administration to find out if another committee would be a "meaningful" way of answering the questions being raised?

The title of the announcement, "A Step Forward", beautifully illustrates a remark made by Mario Savio in his "An End to History": "As a bureaucrat, an administrator believes nothing new happens . . . They see (significant) events as something to be handled by normal university procedures . . . The conception that bureaucrats have is that history has come to an end. Nothing in American society can change or needs to be changed substantially. We proceed by standard procedures, as we are."

So it is in this case that the administrative University Reform

tion takes a "step forward" by standing still—by doing nothing it has not done in the past when the natives got restless (i.e. establish another committee).

In establishing this committee not only did Dean Field fail to define clearly its powers and functions (What is a meaningful, "positive" response anyway?), but he and others have entirely missed the central point the Collegian, the student senate and the University Reform Committee conference have been making. Students do not want another committee composed of administrators (well intentioned as they may be) who after several meaningful and positive meetings hand down a meaningful and positive decision viewed as binding on the students, lives. The demand of the students is for full and equal participation in the decision making processes that effect their academic and non-academic life. They are demanding that the educational and social ordering of the university be legitimately arrived at only by "consent of the governed" — to use an outdated phrase. What must the students do to make it clear that another committee will not and cannot be a substitute for full and equal participation in the decision making processes that effect their lives at this university?

A Step Forward?

By PROF. JOSEPH A. DELLA GROTTA

The recently held 'Symposium' on academic problems, organized by the University Reform Committee, succeeded in raising fundamental questions about the meaning of education at the University of Mass. The uselessness and absurdity of certain academic requirements, the failure of an integrated approach to knowledge, the proliferation of disciplines each with its own special and uncritical behavioral or mechanico-positivistic methodology, the mechanization and bureaucratization of the entire educational process—each of these problems reveal the lack of a critical approach to the meaning of education. It is hoped that the Symposium will serve as a starting point for further investigation into the system called a 'university' whose function and composition is none too clear. Some have described it as a doomsday machine which dulls consciousness and perpetuates a process that yields no real human rewards. The academic problem is not self-contained. It is a reflection of a system which, through social control, militates against the student, against his creative involvement — a system which condemns him to place a moratorium on real and serious human experience, which protects him from suffering and pain, from decision making, from experiencing the full weight of the human encounter, from making mistakes, from suffering, and consequently, from loving and experiencing the fullness of human joy.

On April 2, the U.R.C. will hold a second Symposium addressed to the problem of University control and management of student life, behavior, and activities. The subtle devices of control will be subjected

PROGRESS

By JACK DEAN, Day Editor

It seems like only a month ago that the campus was thrilled with the announcement of plans for a 28 story library to be constructed in front of South College in 1967-68. Students read with pride and incredulity about the projected construction plans which call for a 13 story Graduate Research Center, an underground student center, a new Fine Arts Building, and a general overhaul of the campus landscape.

Actually, it was only three weeks ago.

And today the board of trustees has again amazed us with the announcement of plans calling for more construction—this time for a residence complex which will be an independent college with its own faculty and curriculum. Hopefully, this "University College" will help to retard the depersonalization which develops when a university grows at a rate such as ours.

Basically this is the same plan as that which resulted in the construction of the Orchard Hill and Southwest complexes: closer contact between students and teachers. This latest plan, however, appears to offer much more to the student. Not only will the complex serve many more students, but classrooms and faculty offices will be an integral part of the complex, and the stress will be on informality and independent study.

The concept is marvelous. The "University College" should succeed. It seems to have been planned with the shortcomings of present "residence colleges" in mind; and hopefully it will succeed in the areas in which the residence colleges have failed.

to critical review: regulations, curfews, compulsory dormitory indwelling, administrative counsellors — advisers, housemothers, etc. — as parent surrogates. The issues raised and the new views put forth to effect change will touch most students on this and neighboring campuses: student self-government, the abolition of curfews imposed by the administration, the abolition of the vicious system of private files kept on students.

The success of this Symposium depends largely on the response, on the consciousness of the students themselves regarding the implications of these form of control. Are students willing to accept being manipulated by other interests into a world not of their own choosing without in turn demanding a choice in the conditions of their existence?

Seven Disciplines Involved in Atlantic Studies

Sprechen Sie Deutsch?

If you can answer "Jawohl!" then you might be able to spend next year studying in Freiburg, Germany.

The University of Massachusetts is establishing a small honors center dedicated to the study of the Atlantic Community. The Atlantic Studies Center is a unique experiment in education abroad.

The University will send 25-35 graduate and undergraduate students to the University of Freiburg next year. These students will be the first group to study in what will become a permanent extension of the University of Massachusetts.

This program is initiated in the belief that a degree of interdependence already exists between the nations of Western Europe and the United States and will continue to exist in the future. The Atlantic Community is a familiar reality in certain areas and under certain circumstances, especially during times of crisis and tension. At present an Atlantic policy or point of view is obviously supported by a solid majority of Americans and by many Europeans. It deserves more consideration than it is receiving.

The people of the West, American and European, must make a more serious effort to comprehend where the Atlantic idea or system comes from, the role it plays in the world today, and what its future course or evolution is likely to be.

Freiburg Conference

Following these basic beliefs, a conference to explore the possibility of establishing an Atlantic Studies Program was held in Freiburg, Germany, between February 23 and 28, 1964. The participants were six representatives of the University of Massachusetts and fifteen people from the University of Freiburg.

Emerging from the conference was a strong belief on the part of the representatives that an honors center of the University of Massachusetts, devoted to the theme of the Atlantic Community and its relations to other regions, would offer a new and exciting approach to the study of some of the central issues of our times.

The Committee at the University of Massachusetts is headed by H. Duncan Rollason, Jr., assistant dean, of the College of Arts and Sciences.

A group of at least 25 students, graduates and undergraduates will constitute the initial student body. All students are expected to have high academic records, both overall and in their major, and to possess an adequate knowledge of German, both written and oral. Character and personality are also to be evaluated.

Each student is expected to organize his academic program for the ten-month period, pursuing his major subject, emphasizing the culture, literary, economic, historical, sociological, linguistic and other aspects of the "Atlantic Culture." Through this process it is hoped that the student will develop a more sophisticated and penetrating knowledge of his special field of interest.

The cost for the year will be approximately $1,800-$2,000. Students will live in rented rooms in private homes, thus acquainting them with a full richness of German culture and custom.

The University of Freiburg is one of Germany's most famous institutions of high learning. It presently has a student body of 13,000. The city of Freiburg with a population of approximately 150,000 is located between the Black Forest and the upper Rhine Valley. It is only fifteen miles from the French border and only 25 miles from the pin-cushion Alps of Switzerland.

Two members of the UMass faculty will be in residence teaching at the Atlantic Studies Center in Freiburg during the year 1966-1967. They are Dr. John S. Harris, of the Government department, and Dr. Frederick Ellert, one of the German department. Their duties during the first year will be teaching and counseling of the UMass students.

Once the program is firmly founded, the University of Massachusetts will send different professors each year. It is expected that future faculty members will conduct research focusing on the Atlantic Community.

The program differs from the typical junior year abroad programs in that approximately two-thirds of the students will be graduate students; most of the undergraduates will be seniors, although some juniors and sophomores may qualify; the Atlantic theme will exist, an emphasis on a program organized around a central comparative theme is eight disciplines; the faculty will be in residence, thus assuring a close association with students; student will take approximately two-thirds of their work in regular Freiburg University courses, the rest with the two U.M. professors; Freiburg University students will enroll in courses taught by the University of Massachusetts professors; and the Center will serve as a base for faculty research activities.

One of the chief purposes of the program is to train men and women for a variety of positions that demand an increasing knowledge of the interdependence of the Atlantic nations. Such positions exist in education, business, and governmental agencies at the present time and will be more important in years to come. The program will operate at both the undergraduate and graduate levels and will involve students and faculty from the departments of German, English, Government, History, Romance Languages, Sociology, Economics, Art and perhaps others.

Orientation Course

To insure that all participating students will be fully prepared the Atlantic Studies Committee is conducting an orientation course on the Atlantic relationship. This course is non-credit and meets once a week.

In conjunction with the orientation course, the German Department is offering a special advanced course, German 386, Freiburg Preparatory. This course is intensive and meets six hours per week. Further orientation and language training will be held for a six week period after the students arrive in Freiburg.

While some students have already been accepted, there are still many openings for qualified students. If you are interested please contact either Dr. John Harris, of the Government Department, or Dr. Frederick Ellert, of the German Department, for more information.

PROGRAM TO EXPAND

Possible future programs might include:

A Two Year M.A. Program

Focusing primarily on the social sciences, which would prepare students for careers in international administration, either in government or business.

Faculty Research Awards

These could be given to faculty in the participating departments, taking one of two forms. The University, out of its own funds, could send a small number of professors to Freiburg, each of whom would teach one course and spend the remaining portion of his time conducting personal research relating to his discipline, focusing on some aspect of European culture. Or, funds could be obtained from a foundation to send professors to Freiburg to engage in research only.

Comparative Literature Program

Graduate students participating in the new comparative literature program (a co-operative enterprise involving the German, Romance Language, and English Departments) might wish to reside at Freiburg for a year, as a way of enriching their educational experience, taking course work or doing research.

Graduate Study in Journalism

As the University's program in Journalism continues to expand, graduate students may wish to become acquainted at first hand with some of the interesting developments taking place there in areas of international communications and communications research.

Visiting Professorships

Using foundation funds, the University could set up a Distinguished Visiting Professorship Program at Freiburg. Former statesmen and top government officials in Germany, France and other European countries could be invited to lecture in government for the fall semester as Visiting Professors and then be brought to Amherst to lecture for the spring semester. A distinguished professorship program of this nature is currently in operation at the University.

German Corridors Call For Support

Monday night the German Department held a meeting for German Majors and others interested in next year's German Corridors. Over sixty invitations were sent out, but only fifteen people attended.

Last year, in response to student requests, the German Department established the German Corridors. This year, unless there is sufficient support immediately, they will be disbanded.

The difficulties of last year, namely that many students did not know enough German to speak it all the time and that there was only half a corridor, have been eliminated.

The corridors will be open only to those with the equivalent of German 107. There will also be an entire German Corridor. This will require approximately twenty men and women on each.

Any student interested in seeing the German Corridors continued, please sign up in the German office by Monday.

FOR QUICK RESULTS,
TRY THE 'COLLEGIAN'

March 28. There will be a notice posted on Tuesday, March 29, as to whether or not the corridors will exist. Time is short due to the deadline for room choosing.

This is an open invitation to any student, male or female, major or not, who has had the equivalent of German 107. Any student who is interested but has not had 107 may sign up for the following semester.

This is an excellent opportunity to improve your German. Why not take advantage of it?

Modern Dance

The UMass Modern Dance Club will present the Annual Spring dance concert this Thursday and Friday evenings, Mar 17-18, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

All dance compositions are the original works of students with the dance themes taken from Carl Sandburg's The People. Yes, Music is by Aaron Copland.

Student choreographers are: Anne Drew, Wilma Davis, Norma Hench, Denise Carroll, Maureen Maloney, Louise Smith, Joyce Juskalian, Lorna Ross, Betty Costa, Elizabeth Ward and Cynthia Tucker.

Marksmen Take 2nd in YanCon

The UMass Varsity Rifle Team clinched second place in the Yankee Conference and the New England College Rifle League, Central Group last Saturday with a victory over the marksmen from URI. (1252-1233) The win gave the Redmen a 3-2 record for league matches this season.

The home team was paced by Pete Gallagher with a score of 259, who was followed closely by Senior Homer Davis with a 258. This marked the first time all season that Davis, the team captain, has not taken first place for UMass.

Other Redmen to figure in match scoring were Howie Burbank (246), Maurice Case (245), and Al Medeiros (244). John Georges of URI posted the high score for the match (261), followed by John Pelosi (250), Dick Galli (249), Frank Tryon (240), and Bill Rafferty (233) to complete the scoring for the Rams.

This match was crucial for UMass in that defeat would have meant less than fourth in the YanCon.

After dropping the first two matches to Vermont and Maine, the Redmen kept themselves in contention for high honors by first defeating a weak UNH team and then scoring a decisive victory over UConn at Storrs. The match in Connecticut saw Davis, Case, Gallagher, Gallerani, and Berge combining for a score of 1238 to UConn's 1213.

The Redmen will travel to Hanscom Field in Lexington, Mass. to fire in the finals for the N.E.C.R.L. championship this Saturday.

UM Prof. Publishes Study of Dickinson

A new critical study of the poetry of Emily Dickinson by Dr. David T. Porter of the University of Massachusetts has been published today by the Harvard University Press.

"The Art of Emily Dickinson's Early Poetry," according to the publisher, "defines for the first time the developmental stage of Emily Dickinson's career and identifies the stylistic habits already established prior to the outpouring of mature poetry in the years following 1861."

Dr. Porter has focused on a perceptive reading of the poetry itself rather than on biographical speculation to discern the unique voice of the poet and the theme which dominates her early work.

In his examination of her artistic techniques—in metrics and rhyme, imagery and diction, speaker and language usage—Dr. Porter indicates that to a large extent Emily Dickinson's fullest creative and artistic powers were realized in the early poems.

Dr. Porter is an assistant professor of English who joined the UMass faculty in 1962. Before this he had been chairman of the Lycee English Department at Robert College in Istanbul, Turkey, and a member of the teaching staff at the University of Rochester.

Union Sponsors Op Art

"Emphasis Optics," first major show in this area devoted exclusively to op art, will open at the University of Massachusetts Student Union, March 13.

Op art gets its name from its preoccupation with optics—the use of bold color, geometric design and optical phenomena to produce a purely visual or optical response in the viewer.

Twenty-two works by leading op painters have been assembled for the show, which will open with a reception Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m. and end April 1.

Artists represented include Josef Albers, a precursor of the op movement, John Townsend, a UMass faculty member, Paul Reed, Marcel Barbeau, Sybil Wilson, Paul Margin, Lenore Laine and others.

The show is co-sponsored by the UMass art department and the Student Union Art and Music Committee. It is open to the public without charge.

SOPHOMORE MEN:

Want to be a leader and double your chances for success in life? You can, by earning both a degree and an Army officer's commission at the same time... even though you may not have taken ROTC training in your first two years!

Through a new program, you can be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant after taking two years of Army ROTC training while you complete your studies for a college degree. You can qualify for this program by attending a special six-week summer training camp after your sophomore year and then completing the ROTC Advanced Course in your junior and senior years of college.

Here's what ROTC training and an officer's commission will do for you:

- It will qualify you to fulfill your military obligation as an officer.
- You will learn to organize, motivate, and lead others.
- You will develop leadership qualities that many college men miss—self-discipline, physical stamina, poise, bearing, the acceptance of responsibility and other qualities that contribute to success in either a civilian or military career.
- You will receive $40 per month during your junior and senior years, plus pay and mileage for summer training.

The training and experience you will receive through Army ROTC will pay off for the rest of your life. A decision to take advantage of this new program could be one of the most important you will ever make.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this new important opportunity.

For complete information on the new Two-Year Army ROTC Program see the Professor of Military Science on campus.

UM Theatre Casts for Next Play

"Many are called, but few are chosen." This is not the call of the Bible, or even of the wild. It's the call of the Theatre! The first University of Massachusetts Readers Theatre production has been cast and is well on its way to performance under the capable direction of Vincent C. Brann, director of Six Times Four.

AS ALWAYS, tryouts were open to all students of the University, and many came to read, not just from speech and theatre, but from a wide segment of the student body. Everyone read well and so the competition was tough. According to Director Brann, "The cast of eleven represents a true cross section of students, some with a good deal of speech/theatre experience, and some with none. We range from freshmen to graduate students."

HE WENT on to say that, "They all have one thing in common. They all like to read and I think they read well. They are all enthusiastic about Six Times Four which has been very flattering and encouraging to me."

The eleven cast members include grad students Richard Tirrell and Philip Mallet. Richard is a graduate of Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and has taught Theatre in Glens Falls, N.Y. for the past one and one half years. Philip is a graduate of UM, and most recently appeared in The Merchant of Venice as Gratiano.

AMONG the male undergraduate members of the cast are Ted Buswick '67, James Luipold '66, Brian McMahon '66 and Bill Sibley '69. Ted has appeared in UT's productions of Romulus, and The Streets of New York. He was featured with Bill in The Martyred. Brian and Jim are newcomers to the University Theatre.

Heading up the female members of the cast is Regina Cantor, a grad student in Speech. Besides theatre and her studies, Regina seems to find time to run a household and bring up two children!

ELAINE CHERESKI is another newcomer to UT, but her fellow cast member, Betty Cornea, is long familiar to UT audiences for her portrayals of Mrs. Fairweather in The Streets of New York and Aunt Mildred in One Way Pendulum.

These are the eleven that heeded the "call" and were finally "chosen". A group of talented and enthusiastic readers who can be seen Mar. 31, Apr. 1-2 in Bowker Aud. at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are on sale in the Student Union Box office.

Aid to Underprivileged Put on Regular Basis

AUK stands for Aid to Underprivileged Kids. It is a new group being formed by Alpha Phi Omega, the National Service Fraternity to work with the less fortunate kids in the Springfield area. The key word in this program is regular.

PLENTY of volunteer groups work with these kids on an occasional, one-shot, throw-a-party basis; but there is no volunteer group which makes regularly scheduled visits to Community Centers, Welfare Homes, and slum areas.

THE AUK BUS will travel to Springfield every other Saturday afternoon, dropping the same volunteers at the same place to work with the same kids. This will create good, lasting, working (often one-to-one) relationships between the volunteers and the children. Army Klayman, the chairman of the project stated, "The idea is to develop a friendship; to show these kids that people 'on the outside' really do care what happens to them, and want to hear about their problems, and about their pleasures too."

AUK WORKERS will set up and supervise games, sporting events, field trips, occasional parties, and bull sessions with kids between the ages of five and fifteen.

Hopefully, as many as five Homes or Centers will be able to be served. Mr. Klayman explained, "We could concentrate entirely on the Riverview section of Springfield. There are 1,600 kids crammed into this housing project who are completely forgotten or ignored by just about all but the Salvation Army."

BUT there are others, living in Welfare Homes or Shelters who have no families and lack even the 'luxury' of the Riverview apartments. We're going to help them too."

This project can begin in earnest just as soon as enough people sign up who are willing to work on a regular basis with these needy and forgotten kids. If you are interested, please "enlist" at the AUK booth in the Student Union lobby all this week; or else contact: Army Klayman, 320 Wheeler, A P O Representative or Anna Dalton, B3 Van Meter South, Project Coordinator.

UMass Receives Grant; Largest in Its History

The University of Massachusetts has announced the receipt of the largest single private gift in its history—a scholarship fund of approximately $400,000 bequeathed by the late George M. Codding of Darien, Conn., a 1909 UMass graduate.

Income from the fund is for private high school and public school graduates from the city of Taunton and from Martha's Vineyard; and for students studying landscape architecture, food science and technology, entomology and plant pathology, restaurant and hotel management, plant and soil sciences or any other course in the College of Agriculture or Stockbridge School.

WAC Officer To Visit UM

A representative of the Women's Army Corps for Western Massachusetts and Connecticut, will visit the University of Massachusetts, Tue., Mar. 15 to discuss the College Junior Orientation Summer Program and the WAC Commissioning Program.

The College Junior Program was established to afford College Juniors the opportunity to gain insight into the training, duties, responsibilities and social advantages of an officer in the Women's Army Corps.

She will explain how College Juniors, throughout the country are offered the opportunity, without further military obligation, to spend one summer month at the U.S. WAC Center, Ft. McClellan, Ala., where as paid Cadets they are able to get a firsthand view of life as a WAC Officer.

The representative will define the advantages a career as a WAC Officer may yield and the qualifications a graduate student must have in order to receive a direct commission as either a 2nd or 1st Lieutenant.

This individual will meet with students on the campus from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Interested students may arrange for private interviews at this time.

University Treasurer Kenneth W. Johnson said that the income from the fund would be made available immediately to qualified students in the form of all-expense resident scholarships covering the cost of tuition, fees, books and room and board. The scholarships have been set at $1,200 for one year and $600 for a half-year or summer session. They will increase if costs increase.

The bequest specifies that income from the fund is to be available to any Taunton or Vineyard student "worthy of assistance" in the opinion of the College of Agriculture and adds that whenever possible, the funds be divided equally between the two areas.

Mr. Codding, 77 when he died in Darien on Sept. 23, 1964, had just retired as executive vice-

Grayson, Butterfield, SPE, KS Capture Championships

by DAVE JARNES

Art Lipman's clutch tenth frame strike out enabled the Grayson Flaming A's to fight off stiff challenges from the Baker Buffaloes and the James Comanchees to retain their dorm bowling title.

AFTER THE FIRST game, the Buffaloes led Grayson by six pins but the Flaming A's bounced back in the middle game to take the lead by 19 pins over the Buffaloes and 43 over the Comanchees. However, it was the Comanchees who threw the biggest scare into the Flaming A's behind Bob Reed's 226 game before Art Lipman provided the heroics with a 213 game and an overall team margin of just 7 pins. The Flaming A's totaled 2000 pins, the Comanchees 1993, and the Buffaloes 1838 while Bob Reed was high man with a 537 series. Grayson now moves into the campus finals against PSD and the Silver Foxes.

In overall competition, Elsdon of the Silver Foxes had the high average of 178 while Elsdon and Sears of the Maroons tied for the high single at 227. Misky of the Silver Foxes had the high series of 614.

THE DORMITORY all-star team will bowl against the fraternity all-stars on Monday, Mar. 28, at 7 p.m. Barry Emery, Ed Rojewski, and Art Lipman of the champion Flaming A's lead the dorms. Other members are Pete Brazauskas (Buffaloes) Rich MacDonald (Comanchees), Dave Sears (Maroons), Ted Mc-Namara (Patriots), Bob Reed (Comanchees), John Bridges (Trojans), Rich D'Andrea (Grants), Bill Rechter (Lemons) and Kim Sargent (Buffaloes).

PSD is well represented on the fraternity team with Jack Earle, Ron Fortier, Steve Whitkin, and Mike Parker. Other members are Jeff Larson (LCA), Ron Merrill (TKE), Larry Liederman (TEP), Ted Monette (PMD), Joe DiDonato (ASP), and Bruce Gale (PMD).

THE BUTTERFIELD Lemons and SPE repeated their volleyball championships, while the Untouchables won out among the independents. BKP beat TEP, 15-7, 15-13, but SPE beat BKP, 15-5, 15-13, 15-7, for the

But the Trojans then lost a tough one to the Lemons, 15-12, 7-15, 15-10. The Untouchables took the measure of the AEP Pledges 15-6, 15-13, to cop the independent crown. Earlier the Untouchables defeated Ma's Boys, 15-13, 15-7, and AEP Pledges edged the LA Jrs., 15-13, 9-15, 15-13.

Turning to Squash, Don Keyes of ASP beat John Rhoades of Grayson by the surprisingly easy scores of 15-6, 15-3, and 15-5 for the undergraduate championship. Norton surprised defending champion Dick Garber for the faculty title 13-15, 13-15, 15-12, 15-7. After a slow start Norton eventually wore down UMass' Lacrosse coach.

Hoopmen Honored At Final Banquet

by TIM MURPHY

Basketball was again in the limelight Saturday night as the UMass hoop team was feted to a season-ending banquet at the Hadleigh House in Holyoke. Several team members were honored for their individual efforts during the past season. Clarence Hill, the able field-general of the hardcourtiers, garnered the most valuable player award, while other citations went to Jim Mabyak, free throw percentage, and to Gary Gasperack, most improved player.

FINAL UNIVERSITY statistics show that Hill set seven new records and tied one, while the team established a new field goal shooting percentage for the fifth straight year, as well as a new free throw percentage mark.

Hill, the lone senior on the squad, scored 554 points for a 24.1 average and was named to the UPI All-New England second team. He also led the Redmen in field goals (232), field goals attempted (527), free throws (90), and assists (124). Clarence recorded new season marks for points and field goals, new career marks for points, average, and field goals made and attempted, and a new game high for field goals.

IN ADDITION, Hill tied his own record for most points in one half (24) against Holy Cross. His final career total of 1369 points put him 112 ahead of Doug Grutchfield's 1257. The Washington, D.C. whiz's three-year field goal percentage of .440 places him third behind Roger Twitchell (.483) and Kirk Leslie (.454). He also amassed the second highest game, season, and career assist totals with 13, 124, and 227 respectively.

UM Baseballers Depart for South

The University of Massachusetts varsity baseball team leaves on its vacation-week Southern trip Saturday. Redmen Head Coach Earl Lorden hopes to find good weather in North Carolina that will allow him to get a thorough look at his 1966 squad.

Massachusetts will spend most of the week at Camp Lejeune, N. C. The Redmen will play Rutgers March 21 at 10 a.m. and then play the Marines on Tuesday and Wednesday. Thursday the Redmen will tangle with East Carolina at Greenville, N.C. in a double-header and play the Pirates again on Friday. The trip will conclude with a game against Virginia Tech Saturday at Chapel Hill, N. C.

archives were made by sophomore Billy Tindall and Junior Jim Mabyak. Tindall's 358 points are the second best recorded by a UMass soph and his .509 field goal percentage ranks second only to Tim Edwards' .518, set last year. He also led the team in free throw attempts with 127, in rebounds with 264, and in rebound average with an even 11.

Lacrosse Coach Garber Owns Enviably Record

by TOM FITZGERALD

Each year, the Game Committee of the U.S. Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association honors two outstanding lacrosse mentors by selecting them to coach the two All-Star squads in the North-South game. Selected to serve in last year's contest at Syracuse University was Mr. Lacrosse of UMass, Coach Dick Garber.

GARBER'S NORTH TEAM, which included Redman Dick Brown, an Honorable Mention All-American, posted a 15-10 victory, the first for the North in the last seven years. The coach, incidentally, is arranging to have a film of this colorful event shown in the Student Union in the near future.

Lacrosse has been at the University for 14 years, and Garber has been the boss for 11 of them. His overall record stands at 70-46-2 and his teams have earned two U.S. divisional championships and one New England title.

HIS RECORD is a highly commendable one when it is considered that UMass does not recruit in the sport. "Up until last year," Garber notes, "we had only four boys in 12 years who had played lacrosse before coming here." And the only member of this year's team to have had prior experience in lacrosse, the coach says, is attackman Howie Goffman.

Noting that many of the Redmen's rivals draw most of their material from high school and prep school lacrosse teams, Garber says "I think this is a real challenge to the kids." The coach pulls much of his talent out of gym classes. Standouts such as Brown and this year's captain, Dave Jarrett, originally were members of Garber's trampoline class.

GARBER, WHO GREW up in Delaware, graduated in 1950 freestyle relay, the talented merman recorded the best 100 yds. of his varsity career in 51.9 seconds as he teamed up with Ken Nowak, Dick Lennon, and Chip Wyser.

In the 400-yd. medley relay, Nowak, Lennon, and Wyser again coordinated their efforts, this time with Steve swimming the fourth leg.

Individual performances included Lennon in the 200-yd. breaststroke, Levy in the 100-yd. butterfly, Ted Severn in the 100-yd. breaststroke, and Wyser in the 50 yd. freestyle.

LACROSSE COACH DICK GARBER

from Springfield College, where he won seven letters in football, basketball, and lacrosse. He earned All-New England recognition in lacrosse in 1949 and 1950 and captained the team in his last year. He received his Master's degree from Penn State in 1951. Garber spent the next two-and-a-half years with the Air Force in England and then coached for a few years in Wilmington, Delaware, before arriving at UMass.

The Redmen mentor has been the President of the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association for the past three years and is presently a member of both the Advisory All-American Committee and the Development Committee of the U.S.I.L.A.

GARBER CALLS THE 1963 team his best at UMass and says that his biggest coaching thrill was that team's 6-5 victory over New Hampshire, to win the New England title. In that one, the Redmen were down, 5-1, in the last quarter. Another big game that season was an 8-7 conquest of previously unbeaten Amherst before 3500 fans. That year, the coach remarked, "We didn't think we would have that good a team."

Garber has produced a large amount of individual talent; he has had seven players in the All-American or Honorable Mention category and has had a player in the North-South game eight times. The best of the best in all-around ability, he feels, was Dick Hoss, who starred for UMass five years ago. But Garber is quick to cite others whom he considers the best he has had at their positions, such as attackmen Billy Maxwell, Steve Harrington, and Joe Moroni, midfielder Frank Infusino, defensemen Jack Noble, Paul Majeski, and Walter Glinksi, and goalies Dick Glorioso and Dick Baird.

DURING THE SPRING vacation, the lacrosse team will travel to play C.C.N.Y., Rutgers Lafayette, Army, and the Connecticut Valley Lacrosse Club. The squad is looking toward a season of revenge for last year's 4-9 mark and certainly has one major asset—an All-Star coach.

Raid Spurs Review of "Dry" Campus

by JOE ZALKIND

On Friday evening March 18, the Amherst Police, along with representatives from the University Administration, entered QTV fraternity on North Pleasant St. and uncovered evidence that alcoholic beverages had been served at the fraternity.

The raid resulted when police apprehended two drunken University students uptown and inquired as to where they had bought the liquor. The students, one of whom was definitely not in a fraternity, answered QTV.

THE RAID has had profound effects on the University. The official University policy on drinking is that no undergraduate drinking whatsoever is allowed on campus, even if a student is over 21. Last Monday night Dean Barnard met with the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of all the fraternities, and asked for a reaffirmation of the University policy on drinking.

THE UNIVERSITY policy states that there be no bars or physical structures in any fraternity for the purpose of serving liquor since this is illegal according to law, and that there be no actual dispensing operation to sell alcoholic drinks within any fraternity house.

DEAN BARNARD requested written statements from the fraternities, indicating methods of internal enforcement through the IFC and the individual houses, and, also, they're feelings about external enforcement.

In addition, Dean Barnard will keep a constant dialogue going between his office and the fraternities, in order to solve this problem of campus drinking.

THE HOPE is that if the fraternities show responsibility and maturity in this matter, the possibility will arise of changing the University policy to a more realistic, workable solution.

The problem of alcohol is just one phase of fraternities, and in a sense it follows a logical sequence, which includes such aspects as the fraternity park and social life.

DEAN BARNARD emphasized, therefore, that this will be part of a long range community effort, including the Administration working in coordination with the students and fraternities to find a proper concept and organization for fraternities.

At present, action is pending as to the fate of QTV. The other fraternities will not be penalized.

Mass. Taxpayers Question Lederle on Med. School

Reprinted from
Daily Hampshire Gazette

THE MASSACHUSETTS TAXPAYERS COMMITTEE FOR QUALITY MEDICAL EDUCATION has requested the Joint Committee on Education to ask DR. JOHN W. LEDERLE, UMass president, to explain why he no longer favors Amherst as the site for the state medical school.

PRESIDENT LEDERLE was one of the 10 trustees who voted for Amherst rather than Worcester on June 11, 1965. The trustees' secret ballot vote was 12-10.

RAYMOND R. CROSS, Northampton, legal counsel for the Massachusetts Taxpayers group which has filed suit against the UMass trustees in the Supreme Judicial Court, said recently, "The UMass president's testimony on Wednesday before the Joint Committee on Education was surprising, to say the least. Newspapers quote him as stating 'the trustees are now 100 per cent behind the Worcester decision' and that 'the faculty and deans are now behind the school.' To our knowledge, the UMass have not re-voted to support the Worcester decision unanimously. The official vote is still 12-10, just as it was on June 11, 1965.

"WE HAVE seen," Cross continued, "no public statements that the UMass faculty senate and deans have retracted the very strong criticisms they leveled at the trustees last June and July for ignoring all the professional and educational Amherst as the most desirable and most economical location for a state medical school.

"Dr. LEDERLE owes all of us a clarification of his statements which indicate apparently some unannounced development on the part of trustees, faculty senate and deans regarding this controversial issue."

IN ITS LETTER to all members of the Joint Committee on Education, the Taxpayers Committee reiterated some of the documentation favoring the Amherst site:

- 1.) Amherst was recommended unanimously by all medical and professional consultants, by the firm of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, which conducted a $30,000 study for the board of trustees, and by the dean of the UMass Medical School, Dr. LAMAR SOUTTER.

- 2.) By locating the school at Amherst rather than Worcester, the Legislature can save the taxpayers many millions of dollars by avoiding the duplication of facilities and personnel already existing on the Amherst campus — such facilities as a public health center, a school of nursing and departments of microbiology, animal science, zoology, chemistry, clinical psychology, mathematics and computer science.

- 3.) Statistical data revealing that the Worcester region has a smaller population and lower growth potential than the Springfield-Amherst region.

The Taxpayers Committee letter also urged the members of the Joint Committee on Education to seek the assistance

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1966

Joint Study Committee to Hold Open Meeting on Student-Faculty Relations

The joint ad hoc Study Committee, a joint committee of the Faculty and Student Senates, has been asked to consider questions concerning faculty-student communication and student participation in policy formation. The Committee has voted to hold open meetings so that it may receive advice and views on its tentative proposals from interested members of the University community, Thursday, March 31, 2:15-3:45 p.m., Colonial Lounge, Student Union.

The Committee has been asked to consider the matter of establishing a student communications board. At this meeting the Committee hopes to receive written and oral expressions of opinion on a proposed constitution (which the Committee has drafted) for such a board.

The Committee urges the chief officers and faculty advisers of all student communications organizations to study and discuss the draft constitution within their organizations before the open meeting.

SUMMARY OF PROPOSALS

PURPOSE. The Board shall consider, review, and advise on matters pertaining to the organization, operation, budgets, and standards of quality and performance of student communications organizations.

REPORTING. The Board shall report to the President of the University through the Dean of Students, but the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate shall review policies and procedures of the Board which are related to freedom of the press.

COMPOSITION. The composition of the Board shall be nine appointed members (two students appointed by the Student Senate, six members of the Faculty appointed by the Faculty Senate, one member appointed by the President) and nine voting ex officio members (the chief officers of the Collegian, Index, Caesura, Spectrum, Critique, Engineering Journal, WMUA-FM, Yaloo and the Coordinator of Student Communications Media). The appointments of the appointed members of the Board are subject to the approval of the President of the University.

DUTIES. (a) To advise the Committee on Recognized Student Organizations on approval or disapproval of the constitutions of student communications organizations and on any proposed changes thereto.

(b) TO ADVISE on the policies and operations of student communications organizations.

(c) TO ADVISE on the preliminary drafts of annual budget requests which each student-tax-supported communications organization shall submit to it and to transmit the final budget requests to the Student Senate with the Board's own recommendations and comments attached.

(d) TO ADVISE non-student-tax-supported member organizations on their annual budgets and to refer them to the RSO Business Office.

(e) TO RECEIVE complaints pertaining to the performance of student communications organizations, mediating those when possible and referring them to the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate when mediation fails.

(f) TO ADVISE the Committee on Recognized Student Organizations on applications for proposed communications organizations.

(g) TO RECEIVE the nominations for the positions of chief officer, business manager, and faculty adviser from each member organization, submitting comments on the nominations to the respective organizations after full discussion of the qualifications of the nominees.

(h) TO RECEIVE applications for the positions of chief officer and business manager of communications organizations from the student body at large, and to refer these applications to the appropriate organization together with the comments of the Board.

POLICIES. (a) The Board shall promote and defend freedom of the press and shall have the duty to lodge complaints with the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate whenever freedom of the press is abridged.

(b) EACH member organization shall have its own constitution and by-laws setting forth its basic organization and policies, which must conform with the provisions of this Constitution.

(c) EACH member organization has the obligation to achieve high standards of accuracy, honesty, fairness, creativity, and service.

(d) EACH member organization shall prepare a statement of the duties and responsibilities of its faculty adviser and shall take it to the Board for its consideration. If, after deliberation, the Board and the governing body of the member organization disagree on the acceptability of this statement, the matter shall be referred to the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate.

ADOPTION. The Constitution is adopted when approved by the Faculty Senate, the Student Senate, and the Board of Trustees.

AMENDMENT. Amendments must be approved by both the Faculty Senate and the Student Senate. (A provision is made for resolving deadlocks, should these occur.) Amendments may be initiated by the Board only.

UM to Host Music Conference

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS chapter of the Music Educators National Conference will sponsor an evening of choral music, Saturday, April 2, 1966, 8:00 p.m., in the Student Union Ballroom at the University of Massachusetts.

The program will feature the Washington Concert Choir, a select group of students from Washington Sr. High School, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, numbering about seventy. This is their ninth year of organization and they have performed in many major cities such as New York, Chicago, Dallas and St. Louis.

They are now directed by John Quinn, and were formerly directed by Dr. Richard DuBois, now with the Music Department at the University.

Their program includes many fine choral works such as Here Yet Awhile (Double Chorus from "St. Matthew Passion") by J.S. Bach; Choose Something Like A Star by Randall Thompson; and the spiritual Elijah Rock.

The M.E.N.C. is sponsoring this concert in order to promote the performance and enjoyment of fine music. Further projects of the Chapter include a Choral Workshop for the area Music Educators, and a composition competition.

Prof. Burned In Home Fire

Prof. Kenneth D. Cashin, 43, of the University of Massachusetts, received burns on his forehead and hands Monday at 9:18 p.m. while saving a rotary lawnmower when fire destroyed his garage at 47 Fairview Way, police reported.

UMass policemen took him to the office of a local physician.

A Fire Department spokesman said the fire started from an incinerator at the rear of the one-car, wood structure garage and storage building about 30 feet from Prof. Cashin's home.

The building was valued at $200 by firemen. The value of the contents was unknown. Recall for firemen was at 10:15.

at approximately 5:00 p.m.

The ticket price is $5.50, including bus and theatre fees. Persons making the trip are asked to bring their own lunches.

Beverages and picnic facilities are available on the theatre grounds. The trip is sponsored by the Student Union Program Council.

Teen Group Hosts Speaker To Discuss Troubled Youth

As of January 1, 1965, the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics reported 55,899 "active narcotic addicts" in the United States, an increase of more than 7,000 from the previous year. Of these, by far the greatest percentage come from our big cities. In the slums and ghettos, loneliness and boredom among youths too often lead to organizing of street gangs, gang "warfare," vandalism, theft or even murder.

In search of excitement, in answer to a dare, or in hope of an escape, many people have taken drugs such as heroin and found themselves desperately enslaved in addiction.

TEEN CHALLENGE, a non-profit organization, was founded in Brooklyn by the Reverend David Wilkerson, whose story is told in his book, "The Cross and the Switchblade." Centers for rehabilitation, providing both inpatient and out-patient services, are now operating not only in New York City, but also in San Francisco, Chicago, Boston, Toronto and six other major cities.

Believing that the roots of delinquency and addiction are moral and spiritual, Teen Challenge presents a Christian answer to the problem, offering help and new hope to delinquents, narcotics addicts, and other troubled youths.

On Friday evening, April 1, Sammy Poole from Teen Challenge—Boston will be on campus to speak about work among street gangs and narcotics addicts. A young man who was himself helped through the program will also be present to tell of his experience.

SAMUEL POOLE

A half-hour movie will be shown, and there will be time afterward for any questions or discussion. The meeting will be at 7:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers, Student Union. All are invited to attend.

Language Program at Mich. Sponsors Study Abroad

College and university students throughout the United States are enrolling in Michigan State University's summer European language study program.

Already registered are undergraduate and graduate students aid teachers from Washington State, McGill (Canada), Miami, California, Oklahoma State, Southwestern Louisiana and a host of other schools in all parts of the country.

They will participate in credit and non-credit programs in Spanish at Madrid and Barcelona; in French at Paris and Lausanne, Switzerland; in Italian at Florence, and in German at Cologne.

The summer language programs, offered by MSU's American Language and Educational Center (AMLEC), are scheduled from July 4 to Aug. 20.

These economical programs enable students to gain nine term hours of credit at Madrid, Paris and Cologne, with MSU professors-in-residence as teachers and counselors, along with Eurocentre instructors. Non-credit programs are also offered at all the centers.

Two years of college-level language experience are required for the credit courses; one year of college experience or two years of high school language for the non-credit programs.

Charter planes are tentatively scheduled to leave New York's Kennedy International Airport on June 28, 29, 30 and July 1 for Luxembourg. They will return August 30, 31, Sept. 1, 2. The program includes seven weeks of language study and approximately 10 days of travel.

Applications will be accepted through April 15. Additional information on MSU summer overseas programs can be obtained by contacting AMLEC, 58-A Kellogg Center, MSU, East Lansing, Mich., Telephone (517) 353-0681.

Corridors Seek Students

There is still room for interested students on the men's and women's French corridors for the school year beginning fall, 1966.

Those living on the corridors will enjoy the privilege of "living" with the French language, of having complimentary tickets for the French film series as well as for the annual French plays by Le Treteau de Paris and of attending the French table with members of the French department.

Those who are planning to live on the French corridors next semester should call MRS. DEKERPELY, Head of Residence at Eugene Field House (545-2191). She will arrange an interview with Mr. Niedzielski, the faculty fellow of both corridors.

All students interested in taking part in this activity should telephone as soon as possible while there are still openings.

Leading Scientist Speaks Tonight On The Nature of Biblical Faith

A leading scientist from New Jersey will speak on biblical faith tonight in the School of Business Auditorium 120 tonight at 7:30 p.m.

ULRIC JELINEK, Manhattan Project scientist, former head of the Government's Guided Missile Program Materials Research, now president of Seversna manufacturing Co., a speaker much in demand across the country, will speak on the nature of the biblical revelation in its relationship to modern scientific viewpoints.

This is the regular weekly presentation of College Life. Students have been gathering in the lounges of the various campus living units to hear speakers on the Christian faith. A part of the student movement Campus Crusade for Christ, College Life meetings are now held regularly on approximately 125 campuses in the United States and in 12 other countries. The group is non-denominational in structure and publishes a quarterly, "The Collegiate Challenge."

THERE IS A full-time staff of over 450 recent graduates who work with students on the various campuses.

Here at UMass there are currently four staff members of this organization, BILL HUN-TER, a graduate of Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, GINNY GROSE of Smith College, THERA SMITH of John Brown Univ. and KEN CARLSON of the Univ. of Kansas.

They live in Amherst and meet with students on an individual basis, hold open meetings in the various fraternities, sororities, and dorms on the U-Mass campus. Watch the Collegian for notices of meetings.

PASCAL wrote that in every man there is a God-shaped vacuum which no created thing but only God the creator, made known through Jesus Christ, can fill.

WINSTON CHURCHILL said that this generation may well live to see the end of civilization.

EISENHOWER remarked when President: "Without a moral and spiritual awakening our country has no hope. We're apt to find ourselves waking up as we are disappearing in the dust of an atomic explosion."

JOHN F. KENNEDY was cut down by assassin's bullets before he was able to deliver a major address in which his main theme was Psalm 127:

"Unless the Lord builds the house, those who build it labor in vain. Unless the Lord watches over the city, the watchman stays awake in vain..."

COLLEGE Life discussions center on the contention that Jesus Christ may be known today and that this personal relationship is the central issue in life.

Tonight at 7:30 in S.B.A. auditorium 120 College Life presents Ulric Jelenk. The scientist describes his faith.

Scottish Poet to Speak On Literature Revolt

NORMAN MAC CAIG, prominent Scottish poet, critic, and teacher, will lecture on "The Contemporary Revolution in Scottish Literature," at 8:15 p.m. in SBA 120 of the School of Business Administration, Thursday, March 31st.

MR. MAC CAIG has published seven volumes of his own poetry, has edited two anthologies of poetry, and his work has appeared in several, including THE NEW POETRY, edited by A. Alvarez for Penguin Books in 1962. He has also won awards from the Arts Council of Great Britain. One of his chief awards, and a tribute to his reputation in his own country, was his reception of the Robert Burns Bicentenary Prize in 1959.

Mac Caig is a graduate of the University of Edinburgh and is presently a schoolmaster in Edinburgh.

He is a prominent participant in the renaissance of modern Scottish literature. He credits the great Scottish writer, HUGH MACDIARMID, for much of the present energy and imagination behind this movement.

His lecture is open to the public at no charge.

Crane's Vision To Be Heard Friday: WFCR

FOUR COLLEGE RADIO Station WFCR (FM) will broadcast the three 1966 Ziskind lectures given by Richard W. B. Lewis on "Hart Crane's American Vision: Culture Perspectives of 'The Bridge'" on successive Friday evenings at 7:30 p.m. beginning April 1. The programs will be broadcast simultaneously by WGBH in Boston.

The three lectures were enthusiastically received at Smith College where they were presented earlier this year.

MR. LEWIS'S first lecture is entitled "Poetry and the Age of Iron," the second, "The American Poet and the Vanished Gods," and the third, "A Vision of American History."

Mr. Lewis, professor of English and American Studies at Yale University, is considered a leading literary critic and an authority on the development of the novel over the past two centuries.

HE IS THE author of several volumes, including two books of criticism, "The American Adam," 1955, "The Picaresque Saint," 1959, and a volume of essays, "Trials of the Word," 1965.

Prof. to Teach Math To Indian Instructors

A University of Massachusetts assistant professor of mathematics has been selected to participate in a series of math and science institutes this summer in India.

DR. JACK HACHIGIAN will be among 90 scientists and mathematicians who will establish institutes throughout India to provide an opportunity for teachers in the colleges and universities there to keep abreast of modern developments in their subjects.

Dr. Hachigian will be one of 18 mathematicians specialists who will man nine institutes in India, each with a capacity for approximately 40 Indian mathematics college instructors. The program will run from June 9 to July 26. Among the places that will host institutes are universities in Calcutta, Delhi and Madras.

The programs will help provide an improved subject matter background for the teaching of university courses. Another aim is to help instructors develop suitable methods of teaching and establish new courses and curricula to meet present-day needs in education.

THE INSTITUTES are being organized in India by the University Grants Commission in collaboration with Ohio State University. Financial backing for the project comes from the United States Agency for International Development.

Club Teaches Business; Elects New Officers

THE MANAGEMENT CLUB of the School of Business Administration met recently to elect officers for the year 1966. Those elected were John Cullivan, president; Kevin Malone, vice-president; Monica Pattangell, secretary; and Stephen Dobrydrno, treasurer. All are members of the class of 1967.

The Management Club is an RSO recognized group whose purpose is to provide its members, both Management majors and other interested students, opportunities to become familiar with the world of the professional manager through a series of informal discussions with faculty members and area businessmen.

MEMBERS of the club are introduced to the mechanics of the business enterprise through field trips to some of New England's largest industrial plants. Often the group meets in a socially relaxed atmosphere with fellow students and faculty members to discuss, debate, and evaluate their personal ideas, beliefs, and values.

Aside from this regular program, there are many personal and social benefits which MANAGEMENT CLUB members enjoy, not the least of which are the close student-faculty bonds which have developed and the many friendships that have been made which endure outside the academic environment.

All Management majors may become members of the Management Club, and any student may become an associate member of the group. Every member of the Management Club serves on one of the club's standing committees, and all members play an important role in the success of the club's projects.

MR. ARTHUR ELKINS of the Management Department serves as faculty advisor to the group.

Fraternities and Drinking

By JIM THOMPSON, Day Editor

Because of the recent controversy caused by the university and local police cracking down on the fraternities for serving liquor, a challenge has been offered the fraternities. The houses must remove all physical structures of bars from the premises and must refrain from having liquor in their houses. The threat—and no idle one—is that if a house is caught with liquor it will be closed down immediately for five years. This is in line with present university policy. But there is more to this challenge than just having a house or two kicked off campus. It presents what may be a final and crushing blow to the university fraternal system.

Can the fraternities exist without liquor? Or better phrased, can the fraternal system continue in its present strength without their drawing card of a party with liquor? If the fraternities do begin to decline in importance just because this illegal advantage is removed, then just what is their value? These questions can only be answered with time.

Right now, there may be a riot or two, and the boy with the proper identification may start patronizing the town saloons. We might also note a few more Greeks at Union dances because not all of them are twenty-one, but then these opportunities are available to anyone, not just a fraternal brother. So, the die is cast and it is up to the fraternities to meet the challenge.

Of course there are other alternatives. Perhaps the bars will just be moved over to the sororities and we can watch the rise of that social system...

New Dorms, New Rules

To the Editor:

There is a rule at the University that electrical appliances are forbidden in the dormitory rooms. Although this rule has been in force for many years, it has in recent years been enforced because of the fire in the Abbey four years ago.

This rule is fast becoming outdated because of the new dormitories; for these dormitories are equipped to handle the extra loads of electricity which the old dorms were not. There is no reason why the University cannot allow appliances with self-contained heaters, such as percolators and toasters, to be used in the rooms, while dangerous appliances like hotplates can still be forbidden. The use of a percolator in the open, is certainly safer than an immersion heater used on the sly.

The new dormitories on campus are supposed to have added advantages over the old, and certainly this could be one of them. C.B. '68

University Reform

Blundering Behemoth

By ROBERT ROTSTEIN

In "The Idea of the Multiversity" I presented some of the basic ideas underlying a new concept of the university as popularized by Clark Kerr, president of the University of California. I now wish to critique this multiversity.

My argument is this: the multiversity is a disaster. Why? Because the multiversity ideal would turn the university into a gigantic factory which would process students—the raw material—into well-rounded automatons who would go on to service the many bureaucracies of society. The multiversity becomes a utility serving the technical needs of society; it is a factory for the production of knowledge.

AS KERR sees it, this complex society of ours needs workers to keep it going—scientists, businessmen, bureaucrats, etc. The purpose of the multiversity is to produce knowledge and technicians to service that society. Accordingly, higher education becomes an industry which will turn out workers who will in turn be backed up into business and government.

The trouble with this is that the idea of the university as a servant of its students is lost. The multiversity exists not for the students, but for "society". Research and training replace scholarship and learning. The student is pressured to specialize. He loses contact with his professors as they become more preoccupied with research and publishing. The professors lose contact with one another as they serve a discipline and turn away from dialogue. Increased bureaucracy stifles humane learning.

MEANWHILE, the student is powerless to affect those aspects of the university closest to him. He is forced to take courses that don't interest him. He has nothing to say about how his courses are taught. His education becomes one in which knowledge is poured into him at lectures and regurgitated at exams. There is little opportunity for original study or creative thought. The student studies not what he wants to study, but what others have decided he ought to study. The student has lost control over his own education; some one else decides what is good for him. This should be emphasized: In the multiversity, students become means to ends. They are molded and shaped for a society that has a slot to be filled. As a human being seeking to enrich his own life, the student has no place in the multiversity. He is taught what is decided he ought to learn, not what he wants to learn.

The multiversity may attempt to serve society, but this is done in a bad way. The multiversity is a factory which grinds out workers and knowledge in massive amounts. But being a machine, it neglects the human side of its product. The multiversity pre-plans and manages the student's life for four years. It does not realize that students are human beings who face the task of growing up and living in a society that is sometimes very dehumanized and unlivable. Furthermore, as a servant of society, instead of its students, the multiversity would necessarily reinforce the status quo and resist change. It would fail to provide any kind of social vision for a better society, for it is a machine designed to strengthen and stabilize society as it is. Because a machine must function smoothly and efficiently, the multiversity must eliminate any dissenting or unorthodox ideas which challenge the conventional wisdom of the times. The trend is more and more toward blind conformity.

THIS IS WHY the multiversity is a disaster: because it has turned the university into a factory and education into mass production industry. It is dehumanized and impersonal. It is always run by outsiders and administrators, never by students, for they are means to "society's" ends. The university as an institution for debate and free thinking is lost; it is now a servant of the status quo. This is the final disaster. Rather than train students to "serve" this society, the university ought to educate them on how to live like human beings in it. The multiversity is bureaucratic and inhuman; it trains students to serve a society which is very much like itself. The logical end of all this is the totally dehumanized, mechanized, managed world of 1984. Given the current drift events, we shall arrive there considerably ahead of time.

RED, WHITE and YOU

By PROFESSOR JOSEPH A. DELLAGROTTE

There is a glaring paradox involved in the rules regulating student life at the University of Mass. and the declared purposes of education. If we penetrate beneath the superficial cant of high ideals professed in abstract tones by administrators and educators who laud free inquiry, criticism, and creative thinking, into the actual system which the university imposes upon its students, we meet with innumerable contradictions. How can the student who is subject to the many restrictions and controls over his mind and body performance possibly come to grips with the experiential side of knowledge? The reading of books is useless in itself, and to simply 'absorb information' is to grossly misunderstand the meaning and implication of knowledge. Behind the writings and expressions of great men is a wealth of life experience: involvement, trial, error, danger, pain, and the joy which can only come from he who feels life by living it fully. If the student cannot involve himself empathetically with the experiential content of the work or the material he reads because of his own lack of experience, he understands little or nothing.

THE ACTUAL SYSTEM of rules, regulations, and "guidance" (personal files kept on students, etc.) prevents the student from experiencing life and therefore from experiencing knowledge. The administration's attempt to shield the student from life by exercising control over his moral, social and sexual behavior is tantamount to sabotaging the process of education itself. Diurnally, the student steps from the dormitory situation with its doing, protective, prophylactic, housemothers and counselors, backed up by the full corps and chorus of the university's body repressors, into the classroom situation where critical understanding drawn from one's full, energetic, and free participation in life should be a requirement. The consequence is that knowledge is either sterilized, empties of its critical implications to conform to the depressed level of social consciousness (as is largely the case with the modern behavioral or descriptive approach), or an irresolvable, neurotic - breeding conflict is generated.

On Saturday, April 2, students will have the opportunity to attend a symposium whose purpose is to confront these paradoxes and contradictions. As guest speakers, we shall have Professor David Leonard and Dr. Ronald Leifer, Psychiatrist, Professor at the N.Y. Upstate Medical School in Syracuse, and former lecturer in Sociology at Syracuse University. In the words of Dr. Leifer:

"MODERN UNIVERSITIES have become instruments of social control and socialization. In the service of these functions they use the time-honored methods of control of the body and of the mind. There is thus a deep conflict with the ideal of the university as a forum of free, innovating, and creative thought. This conflict also exists in the larger culture. The impact of this is to create conflict and confusion in the minds of students."

Unfortunately, clarification of this problem will not suffice alone without its necessary complement: the conscious student willing to challenge the system of control, willing to step out of the inscribed circle of administrative rules and regulations, willing to act in the interest of his own emergence from the social cocoon. Too much of our youth has been forced to sacrifice its birthright to the "crackpot" realities imposed by our social overseers.

University of Massachusetts Theatre presents
A Reading Theatre Production of PIONEERS in the new AFROTC Two Year Program. Cadet Captain Stephen Jones, Cadet Captain Theodore Severn, and Cadet 2nd Lt. David Heron.

AFROTC Wants You!

The cadets in the accompanying photograph are leaders in the new AFROTC TWO-YEAR PROGRAM instituted through the ROTC Vitalization Act of 1964. As part of this program, these cadets attended a six week Field Training Unit last summer at Keesler AF, Biloxi, Mississippi, with pay.

The first two weeks of the encampment covered much the same material as is presently covered by the two years of basic AFROTC which freshmen and sophomores receive.

Essentially, this covered educational and professional opportunities in the Air Force and the pros and cons of the life of an Air Force officer. The following four weeks involved professional training, development of leadership skills and self confidence.

Qualifications for the program require that prospective candidates have at least two years academic work ahead of them in either graduate or undergraduate status, and if undergraduate, have at least a 2.0 cumulative average; be in good physical condition and be between the ages of 17 and 28.

This is a nation-wide, competitive, non-quota program and there is no obligation at any time until after this year's Field Training Unit which will be held at Lockbourne AFB, Columbus, Ohio on 12 June 1966, each for a six week period.

At the completion of this Field Training Unit, which will be some what short of six weeks for those in the second unit so they may return to college in time to complete registration procedures, the Air Force will have had a chance to evaluate its candidates and the candidates will have had a chance to evaluate the Air Force. No commitment of any kind is made or signed until next September.

Friends Service Committee Reports On Peace Prospects

The United States cannot expect to achieve peace in Vietnam while it continues to escalate the war by deeds and words.

This is the verdict of an eight-man working party appointed to report on the situation in Vietnam by the American Friends Service Committee. The findings of the group are spelled out in PEACE IN VIETNAM: A NEW APPROACH IN SOUTHEAST ASIA, published by Hill and Wang, New York, N. Y.

North Vietnam will not believe United States peace bids while this country increases its military preparations in South Vietnam and while it refuses to deal with the National Liberation Front, the AFSC group believes. In North Vietnamese eyes, United States peace overtures to date have seemed a propaganda ruse.

Similarly, the United States has rejected peace feelers from Hanoi on seven separate occasions, claiming that they were insincere.

PEACE IN VIETNAM documents peace overtures and other aspects of the history of negotiation. The present negotiating position of the United States, North Vietnam, and the Liberation Front are quite close to each other, the working party has noted, but false premises and mistaken assumptions held by the United States prevent a closing of the gap.

The false premises enumerated by the working party are

- that this "dirty little war" can be won.

- that this is a war of aggression by the North Vietnamese, instigated by China, against the South.

- that if Vietnam becomes a Communist state, all other countries in Southeast Asia will follow like a row of dominoes.

- that if the United States reneges on its commitment to the Saigon regime American credibility will be questioned elsewhere.

The AFSC group concludes instead

- that the zeal of the North Vietnamese and the National Liberation Front renders victory impossible in any complete sense, considering the limitless possibilities of increased commitments from the Soviet Union and China.

- that this is essentially a civil war, although supported by North Vietnam.

- that the rise of nationalism throughout Southeast Asia makes the domino theory inapplicable.

- that our original commitment to Diem's government was in no sense a pledge of military support.

"It destroys both confidence and credibility when America pursues a mistaken course doggedly, regardless of the consequences, and regardless of the human suffering we inflict," PEACE IN VIETNAM states.

The United States course is mistaken, because it is impossible to achieve the objective of a viable political regime in South Vietnam by military means, the working party concludes.

Once negotiations are undertaken in good faith, the job of securing a political settlement will have to be faced. PEACE

Scandinavia, Anyone?

The field representative of Scandinavian Seminar, Miss Barbara Weiss, will visit the University of Massachusetts on Monday, April 11, to discuss with faculty and students the Seminar program for the 1966-67 academic year in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden.

SCANDINAVIAN Seminar, now in its 17th year, offers American students the opportunity to study in the characteristically Scandinavian residential schools for young adults, the folkehjskole; the students also live as members of Scandinavian families, speaking the language daily and taking part in the activities of community life.

MISS WEISS, a Scandinavian Seminar alumna, Sweden, 1962-63, will be available to answer all questions concerning applications, qualifications, curricula, college credit procedures, apprenticeships, etc., relating to the Seminar's program.

Co-operation Helps Build Better Chorale

Co-operation with the Student Government and the Music Department has resulted in an extremely successful year for the University Chorale.

Under a new constitution, a new conductor, and increased publicity, the Chorale has been getting favorable responses from both the Senate and the University as a whole.

The more unified political organization of the Chorale has meant better relations for the group with the Student Senate and with the Music Department. The group is managed by an eight member board of undergraduates which mediates between the Music Department and the members and transacts business with the Student Senate.

IN FULFILLING its obligation to the Commonwealth—to acquaint people with choral music—the Chorale will make a spring concert tour to a number of schools in southeastern Massachusetts during spring vacation. Besides its spring tour, the Chorale performs a spring concert, a winter concert and two concerts for the patients at Belchertown.

The Chorale proved itself the prestige singing group at its last concert when it had to turn people away.

One reason for its excellence is that it is a highly selective group. Prospective members must spend five hours a week rehearsing which insures that Chorale members are sincerely interested in choral music. Members of the Chorale receive one credit a year since the Chorale is both an RSO organization and an academic subject.

THE CHORALE'S repertoire includes examples of every period of choral music from Renaissance to contemporary—from Exultate Deo by Scarlatti to Five Nursery Rhymes by Ralph Hunter.

In the future the Chorale will try to fulfill its role as a cultural extension of the University and will attempt to extend its membership.

Coed to Talk on India

Claudette Cacciabeve, a senior government major at UMass, will give a talk, with slides, on the largest democratic nation in the world—India, at tonight's International Club program. The talk will begin at 6:15, immediately after the coffee hour. Everyone is invited to attend.

Claudette went to India in 1964-65 for her junior year under a program sponsored by the University of Wisconsin. She studied in New Delhi, but visited most of the nation's major cities and rural areas. It is interesting to note that during her ten-month stay she learned the Indian language, Hindi, and some of the popular modern Indian songs.

6-COLLEGE MIXER

After the success of the first "6-college international mixer" this month, another one has been planned for Friday, April 16. Foreign and American students from UMass, Smith, Amherst Mt. Holyoke, Springfield and Westfield colleges have been invited to attend.

A recorded program of piano music prepared by a University of Massachusetts assistant professor of music will be heard throughout Europe later this month over Radio-Hilversum Holland.

Recordings by UMass Professor Howard Lebow featuring the works of Italian pianist Ferruccio Busoni will be aired by the Dutch radio station Thursday, March 31. The half-hour concert is in honor of the 100th anniversary of the Italian composer's birth.

a former pupil of Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, the present day founder and director of JACOB'S PILLOW in the Berkshires.

Mr. Shawn and Miss St. Denis are considered the father and mother of modern dance. Products of their denishawn technique are Doris Humphrey, Martha Graham, and Charles Weidman.

The program is Mr. Lebow's second from Holland this season. Last December the UMass pianist was heard in a 45-minute recital devoted exclusively to the last five compositions by the early 20th Century Russian composer, Alexander Skryabin. Both special programs were recorded last summer during Mr. Lebow's European concert tour.

LOCAL AUDIENCES will also have an opportunity to hear Mr. Lebow this month when he joins the rest of the UMass music faculty for a concert of chamber music March 30, the evening before the Dutch broadcast. On April 18, he will be heard in a solo piano recital.

Both concerts will be in Bartlett Auditorium at 8 p.m., and will be open to the public without charge.

Devens Chaplain Here Tomorrow For All Seniors

MAJOR GEORGE E. FORT, Staff Chaplain from Fort Devens, Massachusetts will be at the University on March 31 to talk to seniors who are planning to go on to seminaries, regarding the role being played by the Army Chaplaincy.

The Seminar Program offered by the U.S. Army allows those in theological schools to become Second Lieutenant Staff Specialists, leading to a commission as First Lieutenant Chaplain.

On Thursday, March 31 from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Major Fort will be in Middlesex Room in the Student Union to talk with all who are interested.

DO YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES TO BE A LEADER?*

*If you do, don't settle for less.

If you will complete your first two years of college this spring and have not had ROTC training, you now have a special opportunity to earn an Army officer's commission in the next two years. You can qualify to fulfill your military obligation as an officer while you study for a college degree in a field of your choice.

Through a new two-year Army ROTC program you will receive leadership training and experience that will be valuable assets for the rest of your life, in either a military or a civilian career. You will receive an allowance of $40 each month during your Junior and Senior years. If you desire, you may request postponement of your military service while you complete your studies for a graduate degree.

Most large business and industrial firms prefer the college graduate who has been trained and commissioned as an officer—who has the ability to organize, motivate and lead others—who has had experience in accepting responsibilities beyond his years.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this important opportunity.

For complete information on the new two-year Army ROTC program see the Professor of Military Science on campus.

Field Announces Personnel Changes

SEVERAL RECENT CHANGES and additions to the student personnel staff at the University of Massachusetts have been announced by DR. WILLIAM F. FIELD, Dean of Students.

WILLIAM W. BARNARD has been promoted to assistant dean of men. A graduate of UMass with B.A. and M.Ed. degrees, Mr. Barnard served as an area director and staff assistant to the dean prior to his appointment as assistant dean. He will carry prime responsibility for individual counseling, liaison with fraternities, and group counseling.

MISS MARGARET C. FORD has been appointed assistant to the dean of women. A former registrar of Manhattanville College, Miss Ford is a graduate of Notre Dame College and Columbia University. As staff assistant to the dean of women, Miss Ford will be responsible for liaison with sororities and with commuting women students. She will also be available for general counseling and administrative support for women undergraduates.

JAMES J. BURKE has been named assistant to the dean of men, and will be concerned primarily with administrative liaison for men's residence halls as well as individual counseling. He is a graduate of Springfield College and holds a master's degree from UMass. Prior to his appointment Mr. Burke was head of a regional high school history department.

Also appointed assistant to the dean of men was THOMAS G. FOX, a graduate of Trenton (N.J.) State College and the University of Vermont. Mr. Fox was formerly on the staff of the dean of men at the University of Vermont.

The Time Has Come

Conference Set for Saturday

THE UNIVERSITY REFORM Committee will sponsor a conference on Social Affairs Saturday, April 2 at 1:00 in Mahar Auditorium to be broadcast live by WMUA, 91.1 FM. The aim of the conference is to focus student opinion on the problems of women's regulations, dorm government and dossiers kept on students by counselors.

A spokesman for the University Reform Committee, ROBERT WILFONG, said, "The concept of in loco parentis, by which the University substitutes its authority for that of the students' parents, is too rigid and restrictive. It does not allow for the development of individual responsibility which is its supposed purpose.

"The time has come for students to voice their feelings and protests and make the administration know that they will no longer stand for such treatment. The administration has its power by default. What it fears most is a united and articulate student body.

"Speak out! Come to the Conference on Saturday."

The conference will start with a panel consisting of ANN FERGUSON of the Philosophy Department; ISABELLE GONON of the Dean of Women's Office; BETTY CHAMBERS, student senator; DAVID LEONARD of American International College; and DR. ERIC LEIFER of the Upstate New York Medical Center. Moderator will be Peter Hendrickson.

Following the panel there will be workshop discussions.

25 Frosh Sought For Next Year's Keys

ALL FRESHMEN MEN with a cumulative average of at least 2.0 are encouraged to apply for the 1966-1967 Maroon Key Society.

THE MAROON KEY is an honorary service organization consisting of twenty-five sophomore men chosen for leadership potential who are interested in promoting the spirit of the University.

The Maroon Keys main function is to orient freshmen and during the past semester initiated a seminar program for all swing-shift freshmen.

THE MAROON KEYS also act as official hosts of the University at athletic events, concerts and are also builders of the bonfires at the rallies.

In an effort to improve upon the traditional University freshman orientation program, one Maroon Key will be assigned to live in each men's residence hall for the fall semester to increase interaction between the Maroon Keys and incoming Freshmen.

Applications can be picked up in the R.S.O. Office and must be returned by Monday, April 4.

ALL MAROON KEYS will be wearing their blazers on Fridays and do not hesitate to ask them any questions about the Key's programs.

Six Times Four Premieres At UMass Tomorrow

by JIM FOU DY,
Managing Editor

"SIX TIMES FOUR," and experimental form of Readers Theater, will make its premier performance at the University March 31 in Bowker Auditorium.

Directed by Vincent Brann, assistant professor of speech at UMass, "Six Times Four" is an anthology of staged readings selected from the MASSACHUSETTS REVIEW.

There is no single unifying element to this University Theater production except that all the works are derived from the same source.

The productions name is derived from the six volumes (four issues per volume) of the Mass. Review and will feature nine UMass students and 48 pieces from the magazine.

With Readers Theater, the director is given free reign to use whatever stage effects he chooses to add impact to the readings.

Void of any costumes or scenery, the experiment does not attempt to suggest a definite locale but to present a variety of people places and events.

Arnold Kenseth of the English writers. UMass faculty members include Mrs. Jules Chametzky author of a recent collection entitled Between Wars;

READERS THEATER is considered by its producers to be active theater and they do not want passive audiences. The audience is invited to use its imagination and participate in the experiences rather than just witness them.

According to the text THE SPEECH TEACHER by Brooks, Henerhan and Billings the purpose of the audience participant "is to fulfill the suggested potential of the literary experience in his own mind: participating in the re-creative experience rather than witnessing it."

Included in the readings will be works from local poets and Joseph Landland, author of

The Wheel of Summer and editor of Poet's Choice.

Two other local poets will be included in the readings: Robert Francis, author of Orb Weaver and Come Into The Sun; Mary Ellen Chase, novelist, essayist, critic and professor emeritus of English at Smith.

Among celebrated national or international writers presented will be Thoreau, O'Casey, Yeats and Martin Luther King.

Dates for the production are March 31, April 1, 2, at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium. Student Tickets are presently on sale in the Union for $1. Non-student admission is $1.50.

The University Theater is offering to the campus community a rare opportunity in theatrical productions. With an imaginative audience Six Times Four could be the most active.

Anthro Assoc. Discusses Drinking Habit

The Northeastern Anthropological Association met at the University of Massachusetts March 25-27 for a series of discussions that ranged from Neanderthal Man and the origins of speech to drinking behavior in a contemporary New York community.

Nearly 125 association members from New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Canada attended the annual meeting at the Student Union. UMass and Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges were co-hosts.

Two concurrent sessions at 2 p.m. Friday, March 25, opened the meeting. One was a series of papers on archaeology and anthropology and the other a series on complex societies.

THE BULK OF THE program on Saturday, March 26, was devoted to a symposium on northeastern archaeology.

A Saturday night banquet and reception at the Lord Jeffery Inn featured an address by the association president, Marvin K. Opler of the State University of New York in Buffalo.

THE FINAL DAY, Sunday, March 27, had two morning sessions, one on North American studies and the other on personality and culture.

THOMAS M. FRASER, JR., assistant professor of anthropology and sociology at the University, was program chairman.

Freddie's Out...

On Friday, however, the Rebel cries of "Yankee, go home" got louder; But the Redmen held on to a five-to-four win and Freddie said "Go take a powder!"

It wasn't enough to beat them twice and make them all very sore; But just before leaving old Bud the driver backed into a Triumph's door.

"I didn't see it before," he said to the campus cop on duty; "But if it's all right with you and the judge you can forward the bill to Freddy."

On Saturday came the final test for the UMass baseball team; And everyone knew that a morning game would mean all must be "on the beam."

Virginia Tech was a rambling wreck after seven innings of play; ... With eleven-to-five they said "Aw heck," and their coach cried "Enough for today!"

With tired expressions upon their faces, the winners prepared to go home;

Pleased they had crossed so many bases, yet unwilling any more to roam.

Aboard the bus all twenty-six men did climb for one more ride; Their destination New England was, their intentions To ride the high tide.

And if you should hear with ears alert an umpire's shrill voice shout; You'll know for sure that on some college green UMass' Freddie is out!

You can boil him in oil, or clothe him in tear, but that won't help much at all;

For Freddie is out for Omaha, and the Redmen are hurling the ball!

King Cassius Decisions Chuvalo in Surprise

Outpointing George Chuvalo in a fifteen-round heavyweight bout last night in Toronto, Cassius "Mohammed Ali" Clay retained possession of his will 'o the wisp American Boxing Association heavyweight title. A seven-to-one underdog, Chuvalo scored a surprising 190 points to Clay's 221.

FIGHTING OUT OF TORONTO. Chuvalo was Canada's favorite son last night. At least that's how it seemed in the Maple Leaf Gardens where a capacify crowd was with him for every round of the no knockout fight which saw Clay jeered during every round while being granted a rousing note of ill-will after the judges' decision.

A long way from Louisville, Kentucky, Clay stated after the fight that he is now looking forward to casting still farther afield and facing England's heavyweight crown holder, Henry Cooper, sometime in the next six to eight weeks.

Lacrossemen Impressive in Exhibitions; Open Season Friday

by TOM FITZGERALD

"Tremendous spirit" is the reason Coach Dick Garber feels this year's lacrosse team will better last year's disappointing record. "There's a real sense of effort there," he says. "It's amazing. I think it's going to pay off."

THE SQUAD ALREADY has seven pre-season scrimmages under its belt, and although it has captured only three decisions, Garber has been impressed by several individual and unit combinations.

The Redmen's exhibition jaunt during the spring vacation "was successful in several ways," the Coach comments. "I was very well pleased with the attitude and hustle of the team. The goals and the close defense did an excellent job."

Monday the team defeated CNY in New York, 7-3. In that one, UMass came up with four goals in the last quarter. The Redmen dropped a pair of tilts to Rutgers in New Jersey Tuesday and Wednesday. Rutgers, which finished fifth in the nation last year and is rated even better this season, won by scores of 8-6 and 5-2.

THE UMASS SHOOTERS found the range in a 14-4 feast against Nassau Community College at Garden City, Long Island. NCC is coached by former Redmen Mike Candel.

In a Friday tilt at West Point, the Army "B" team fired two quick tallies in the last five minutes to take a 5-3 squeaker. The Redmen and the Black Knights, surprisingly, were scoreless at the half in the defensive battle.

On the trip, the players had a real taste of military life. During the three-day stay in New Jersey, they bivouacked in converted WAC's barracks at Camp Kilmer. They spent the next night at Mitchell Air Force Base in Long Island and finished with a stay at West Point.

Freshmen Coach Frank "Pathfinder" Shields accompanied Garber and the team, and, handling the map, he led the group on a somewhat erratic bus ride over the countryside.

Charlie Avakian (left) and Captain Dave Jarret were two of the leading scorers for UMass along the exhibition trail.

ALTHOUGH THIS DEFENSE overshadowed the offense for UMass, mainly because of some poor shooting, five players shone in pacing the scoring-attack—Captain Dave Jarret (Westfield), seniors Charlie Avakian (Whitinsville) and Jim O'Donnell (Holyoke), and juniors Tony Arneri (Worcester) and Howie Goffman (Randallstown, Md.).

The Redmen played another exhibition last Sunday in conjunction with the Western Mass. Officials Clinic and nipped the Connecticut Valley Lacrosse Club, 5-4, on the intramural field. The game was played in sub-freezing temperatures.

In another blood-cooler yesterday, the squad bowed to mighty Trinity, 8-5. UMass closed the gap to 6-5 with seven minutes left, but the visitors struck for two goals in one minute to ice the verdict.

THE REGULAR SLATE will open Friday night as Siena College arrives for a game under the lights at the intramural field. Last year the Redmen whipped the invaders from Loudonville, N.Y., 10-4.

The squad plays its usually demanding schedule. "We don't play the weak teams," Garber says. "Our feeling has always been, if we are going to play, we should play respectable competition. We play one of the most difficult schedules in New England."

The Redmen will meet powerhouses such as Brown, Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Amherst, and Middlebury on this year's schedule. "Dartmouth and Brown are murder," Garber points out. UMass competes in two separate leagues, the New England Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association and the Roy Taylor Division of the U.S. Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association. Garber notes that "The New England league surprisingly is more difficult to win."

ON THIS YEAR'S ROSTER are 19 lettermen, returning from last year's outfit, which dropped to a 2-9 showing, the worst at UMass in the past decade. Garber feels that an increase in experience and spirit will be the key to the team's success.

Garber considers the midfield, which has plenty of speed and depth, to be the strong point of the squad. The first line consists of Jarret, Avakian, and junior Dick Kent (Milton). Jarret, who Garber says "is going to be a great midfielder," notched eight goals and three assists last spring, while Avakian had six goals and one assist.

Other middies will include Dick Howe (Greenfield), Fred Molander (Dedham), Dick Pulisier (Quincy), Bob Murphy (North Andover), Len Caldeira (Hudson, N.H.), Dick Smith (Swampscott), and Dave Kelley (Geneva, N.Y.), who will probably be moved from his defense position, Garber says. The best of the sophs is Gary Palardy (Salem).

THE ATTACK WILL probably feature six alternating players and should be well balanced. The six are O'Donnell, Arneri, Goffman, juniors Kevin O'Brien (Worcester) and Peter Aiken (Arlington), and newcomer Martin Kalikow (Roslyn Heights, N.Y.). O'Brien paced the team in goals last year with 15. Aiken, probably the fastest attackman, is currently sidelined with a broken wrist.

"The close defense is certainly stronger than last year," Garber says. The defensemen are bigger and stronger than last year's group. Competing for starting berths are senior Brad Stokes (Arlington), junior Fred Foley (Beverly) and Don Rana (Worcester), and sophs Walt Alessi (Newton) and Fran Guidara (Mattapan).

THE GOALIE SITUATION seems to have cleared up with the blossoming of sophomore Billy Sinclair (Woburn). Senior Bob Lawson (Allston) and junior Dennis Frye (Wakefield) will also be ready for duty in the nets.

BATS ON FIRE!

Boteze, Andersen Star as Redmen Streak in Dixie

by GLENN BRIERE

An awesome display of power was exhibited by the Mass baseball team last week as it "warmed up" for the coming season by winning six straight contests down South. It was by far the most successful spring training trip in Redmen diamond history, as the team scored a mere 73 runs in six games.

SACRIFICING THEIR spring vacation, the Redmen opened up training at Camp Lejeune, N.C., last Monday with a 5-2 victory over Rutgers. They then proceeded to wallop Camp Lejeune, 21-6 and 14-9; East Carolina, 17-1 and 5-4; and Virginia Tech, 11-5. Coach Earl Lorden's squad batted a hefty .404 with 11 homers and 13 doubles among its 92 hits. The mound staff allowed only 31 hits for a .178 average.

Hagan Anderson, a sophomore third baseman, lashed out 12 hits in 24 at bats for a top average of .500. Anderson also led the rest of the batting department with 13 runs scored, three doubles, one triple, three home runs and 13 RBIs. The other regulars included second baseman Frank Stewart (14-29, .483); co-captain Terry Swanson (10-25, .400); shortstop Jim Babyak (9-25, .360); first baseman John Peacock (8-24, .333); catcher Jim Kuczynski (4-13, .308); right fielder Roy Lasky (5-19, .263); and left fielder-pitcher Ross Piken (3-16, .188).

LEADING THE PITCHERS was junior righthander Carl Boteze, who got credit for three wins. Juniors Bill Smith and Don Gagner and soph southpaw John Canty picked up the other wins. Dave Katz, Ross Piken and Ken Rowe also saw work.

The performance of the team gave considerable hope that it will bring a Yankee Conference title to UMass and the ensuing trip to Omaha, Nebraska, for the college World Series. The season will open at home on April 13 against Amherst.

PSD Cops Pin Crown

by DAVE JARNES

PSD captured the intramural bowling championship in an exciting three-way battle involving the Grayson Flaming A's, the Silver Foxes, and PSD. Grayson took a 72-pin lead over the Silver Foxes and a 79-pin bulge over PSD with an opening 716 game. The Flaming A's stretched their middle game to 93 pins over advantage with a strong 752 PSD and 151 pins over the Silver Foxes. However, the fireworks really came in the final game when Grayson sagged to 597 and PSD roared from behind with a 749.

Meanwhile, the Silver Foxes blasted the pins for a 788 game (a 197 average for each man) and finished ahead of Grayson. The final totals showed PSD on top with a 2124 score, the Silver Foxes second at 2105, and the shell-shocked Flaming A's third with a 2065 total. Fortier was the big spark for PSD with a 593 series.

THE DORMITORY ALL-STAR BOWLING TEAM defeated their fraternity counterparts 4914-4789. The bowlers on both squads were generally off their overages, but Jack Earle of the campus champion PSD bowled a fine 583 series.

The favorites prevailed in the volleyball playoffs. SPE beat the Butterfield Lemons, 15-11, 15-12, and were in turn upended by the Untouchables, 15-3, 15-10, for the title.

FREDDIE'S OUT

by CHARLIE BRADSHAW

(Note: The following lines are a tribute to the University of Massachusetts baseball team which scored seventy-three runs in six games on their Southern trip last week, exhibiting a spirit and desire to win which was second to none. It is hoped by the author that Freddie will stay out all through the up-coming season.)

On the Nineteenth of March the bus set out from Amherst way up North;
With twenty-six baseball players aboard to the Southland going forth.

All day and all night they travelled and talked as the hours went slowly by;
Thinking of friends who were out on the town probably feeling quite high.

At last they arrived at an American base the Marines have called Lejeune;
And knew that the first six ballgames would be coming upon them soon.

Up Monday morning quite early were they to greet the Southern sun;
As all round them they saw soldiers-of-war marching one by one.
They took to the field with confidence, with purpose and with zest;
Determined to prove to themselves and UMass that the team could be one of its best.

As the cry of "play ball" was shouted to members of both opposing teams;
The Redmen clasped hands, and looked to the road that might lead to fulfillment of dreams.

One, two, three the runs piled up, but Keedy wanted more;
And when Rutgers retired on Boteze's order, five-two was the final score.

"Now Tuesday, you know, may not be the same, of that you can be sure!"
At least Coach Lorden felt that way until the next day at four.

For Camp Lejeune could not contend with the red-hot Redman gun;
As they slipped under with only six, while Smith's men got twenty-one.

On Tuesday night it was surely known that the sixty-six spirit was born;
For in the barracks the team's new phrase of "Freddie's Out" was well-worn.

Wednesday's rematch appeared rather dim for the hustling UMass nine;
Till up came Anderson, Peacock, and Rowe to heighten the hot sunshine.

Together with Kruse, Ross Piken, and Canty,
They homered all over the park;
"Six homers! that's fine and certainly dandy," Dave Katz was heard to remark.

So, fourteen-to-nine on a come-from behind was the score of the third Dixie game;
And all Captain Swanson could add to that was "Let's be sure to do more of the same."

On Thursday the team faced East Carolina whose fans screamed "Tangerine";
But the powerful Redmen were ready once more to discharge some excess steam.

"Freddie" got out, the fans went home, as the UMies had their fun;
And when it was over Stewart and others had made it seventeen to one.

Three Budgets Hit New High As Senate Approves $69,000

by FRAN BORONSKI,
Staff Reporter

In addition to passing three of the largest budgets to date, the Student Senate acted upon several bills designed to improve the efficiency of its operations.

The budgets of Index, WMUA and Flying Redmen, totaling $69,113.81 were approved at the Wednesday session. These expenditures were appropriated for the fiscal year 1966-67.

THE SENATE also passed an act, providing for a change in the Financial Policy Booklet, whereby the Senate treasurer will make no transfer of Student Activities Tax funds until money has been appropriated in the fall semester. Previously, transfer was made in the spring semester, before the process of appropriations had been completed.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Gary Bombardier (Gorman) also provided that funds could not be transferred until the Ways and Means Committee has conferred with the business manager of each SAT budgeted organization and has been informed of Senate financial policy. Senator Bombardier felt that these provisions would improve the efficiency of the budgeting process.

THE SUM OF $75 was appropriated to the University Reform Committee to sponsor a conference on April 2. The money is to be used for advertising, programs, published results of the conference, and miscellaneous expenses.

Two proposed SGA By-Law changes were presented and subsequently tabled. Senators Bob Gaudet (Webster) and Tim Young ('68 At-Large) proposed changing the quorum requirement for Senate meetings from two thirds to one half of the members of the Senate.

Senator Greenquist proposed a bill designed to strengthen the Senate Committee System by providing that all bills presented in the Senate will be reviewed by the Executive Committee who will recommend action to be taken. After considerable debating and amending, the bill laid on the table.

SENATORS KEVIN DOWNES (Hills North) and John Greenquist (Thatcher) proposed an amendment to the Senate Election Rules which would limit the total expenditures for the election of any candidate for office in the Student Government Association to $25.

Senator Downes pointed out that students of inferior economic standing are discriminated against and felt that his bill would eliminate this discrimination. Since many of the bill's critics were in favor of the basic idea of limiting expenditures, the bill was tabled to the SGA Committee for further study.

In other Senate business, Sharon Schnare was appointed chairman of Activities Committee. The SGA Committee announced that primaries for class officers of the classes of 1967, 1968, and 1969 will be held on April 21, with final elections taking place on April 28.

COLLEGIAN Rated Tops By ACP Journalists

by JIM FOUJY, Managing Editor

For the first time in its history the Collegian has received an All-American rating from the Associated Collegiate Press Service for the Fall Semester 1965-66.

Rated by a professional journalist, this paper took the top award with 3,860 points needing a minimum of 3,700 for the "superior" rating.

THE EVALUATION was given on the basis of news coverage, content and physical properties which include front and inside page makeup, headlines, typography and photography.

According to Mr. Skip Lebow of ACP there is no record of the Collegian ever having received this award before.

COMPLIMENTING the paper on a "fine job", Lebow pointed out that out of 32 papers in the Collegian's tri-weekly class only about four are rated All-American.

The editor-in-chief of the paper during most of its All-American semester was Peter Hendrickson.

COMMENTING on the rating Hendrickson simply said, "It makes you real happy" and attributed the success to the staff as a whole.

"When I took over the paper in November it was a very sound newspaper with a lot of imaginative writers and editors", Hendrickson stated and continuing said: "The most I could do was to let them use their imaginations and perhaps give some direction, but not control."

Under Hendrickson's lead the Collegian expanded its feature editorial and news departments, began running more two page spreads and increased its coverage of the Student Senate. The positions of day editor were also strengthened and are now the foundation of the paper.

THE FORMER EDITOR admits that college journalism can be "a lot of work", but at the same time he reflected that "it is a lot of fun and when it ceases to be fun that's the time to quit."

Specific commentaries on the areas listed above ranged from excellent to superior with the strongest criticism coming under typography.

It was pointed out to the Collegian that the use of headlines within an article or setting paragraphs in darker type than the rest of the story would improve the appearance of the paper.

ACP NOTED that the rating determines a paper's standing for this year and is not necessarily an indication of progress from year to year.

Present Editor-in-chief Tom Donovan hopes to maintain the high rating of the paper and feels that it is possible to increase the standards of the Collegian even beyond those of All-American.

"The job now", said Donovan, "is recruiting interested people who realize the opportunities the Collegian offers and who are willing to give a few hours a week to the production of a top notch newspaper."

PAY UP!!

Chief Blasko has announced that students who have received traffic violations may pay them off at any time in the District Court at Northampton.

There are over 1,000 tickets handed out and some students owe fines of up to $80.

Failure to pay fines will result in a court subpoena and a police record, the chief reported.

Residence Halls Back to Normal

Editor's note: This is the first of a two part report issued by Mr. John Wells of the Housing Office. It contains the facts and figures for housing on campus next semester as well as regulation changes, and should be read carefully to avoid misunderstanding when the time comes to select next semester's room.

The efforts undertaken several years ago to insure adequate and uncrowded residence hall housing for University students by accelerating the construction program for residence halls, will have been achieved by September 1966. The scheduled completion of the five high rise halls in the Southwest Residence area, and the addition at that time of the second dining commons to be located there, will assure the return of all residence halls to normal occupancy levels.

The successful completion of this phase of the construction program provides opportunities for initiating or extending programs within the student residence halls which have been under discussion for some years.

THIS WORK represents the combined efforts of many hundreds of residence hall students, the Men's and Women's Affairs Committee of The Student Senate, members of The Stockbridge School of Agriculture Senate, The Dean of Women's Office, The Dean of Men's Office, The Director of The Stockbridge School of Agriculture, and the Housing Office Staff. We, of the Housing Office Staff, wish to thank all of those who have expended their time and energy in formulating this program for residence hall assignments and procedures.

One factor in developing this program was the very important obligation to provide improved on-campus housing for the students of the Stockbridge School and for unmarried graduate students.

The over-crowded housing situation on campus for the past several years has resulted in the priority assignment of housing to undergraduate students to the detriment of housing for Stockbridge and graduate students.

Saucers and Science: Asimov Addresses DVP

by JANE ROLAND,
Staff Reporter

"Flying saucers are a kind of security in a terribly insecure world."

One hand resting on the podium, the other in his pocket, Isaac Asimov started his talk on Tuesday night, March 29 on flying saucers, because, as he said, "That is the one question I am sure to be asked while speaking."

ASIMOV, a well-known science-fiction writer and scientist, is the author of 68 books and numerous articles.

Presented at UMass by the Distinguished Visitors Program and the University Science-Fiction Club, he was introduced by Joe Ross, president of the S-F club, and given honorary membership into it. He was very well received by an audience of about 350.

According to Asimov, in a letter to a Science-Fiction magazine, he once said "Anyone who believes in flying saucers is a crackpot," to which he received hundreds of responses, many unkind. He explained his position. "I am a firm believer in Unidentified Flying Objects (UFO's)" He also attested to a belief in things crawling on the ground, Unidentified Creeping Objects, or UCO's.

"LIFE is full of mysteries. They're all around me," said Asimov, and added a belief in those objects which seem to disappear, such as lost buttons, calling them Unfound Missing Objects, or UMO's.

SCRATCHING his nose and looking out at the audience with a deadpan expression after his own jokes, the former professor continued.

"Some people refuse to believe in UFO's. They have to identify them . . . to these people, all UFO's are flying saucers." He added that he would believe in flying saucers when one could be produced for him.

Becoming more serious, Asimov, a middle-aged man who remarked several times on his age and few graying hairs, explained why some people see flying saucers.

"FLYING SAUCERS are a power to watch over us." This is why, so often, men from outer space are depicted as kind benign figures with long beards and white robes—Christ figures visiting earth to help humanity

House Debates Med School Site; Worcester Location Still On

In State House activity this week Rep. David Bartley (D-Holyoke) moved substitution for adverse report the bill directing University of Mass. trustees to locate the medical school in Amherst. He said an educational mistake and tragedy will be made if the school is not located on the present campus.

Agonizing one vote decision to locate school in Worcester will cost taxpayers $500,000 per year to operate school there rather than in Amherst.

Who let this take place? "The Quiet man (Volpe) who said we ought not be sore losers 'cause the school was going to be in Worcester," Bartley said. This is the finest example of executive irresponsibility, he continued.

The adverse report was finally defeated.

Rep. Philip K. Kimball (R-Springfield) favored substitution. At first, when it was estimated a medical school would cost $80 million, a commission was formed to study it. That commission reported a medical school was necessary, and the cost would be $10 to $12 million.

When Bartley places blame on man in corner office he is erroneous, Kimball said.

He pointed out Volpe didn't vote as member of trustees because he then would be dictating. Bartley said precedent for Governors voting at trustees meetings was set by Furcolo and Peabody.

Kimball said trustees and men in the corner office are not to blame. He hopes bill is substituted so school will probably be located at site of parent university.

Substitution was opposed by Rep. Joseph DiCarlo (D-Revere), who said most important point to be made where school is to go is statement that two thirds of faculty of all medical schools were trained in Boston.

Experts said Amherst campus could not provide facilities to have a good medical school. Point is not medical school should be with rest of the campus.

Rep. Walter Kostanski (R-Montague) said only thing that bothered him was last year Legislature approved appropriation of $1,750,000 for land acquisition, and location of Worcester was inserted in bill. Massachusetts Committee for Quality Education has filed a suit against the UMass trustees with the Superior Court. Worcester was fourth site choice. The best education would be available at Amherst location. He favored substitution.

Rep. John D. Barrus (R-Goshen) said he has yet to hear one logical explanation from Worcester delegation for that site. Professional opinion says parent campus is the best location. The only argument presented today is Worcester will have the medical subjects to support the school. That is light and without any particular importance. It was my opinion trustees disagreed on site between Amherst and Springfield, and compromised to go to Worcester. He favored substitution.

Rep. John G. Clark (D-Easthampton) said the best place for the school is Amherst, but the question has boiled down to economics. This is a large industry which will mean a $15 million pay roll for the city of Worcester. Each student who attends the school will require 40 people, he said, from the man who rakes the grass on up. It is going to cost $1 to $5 million more to locate in Worcester.

21 to 26, not substituted. Kostanski sought roll call. Roll call ordered. Roll call vote 63 to 157, not substituted. Adverse report defeated.

Expression Defended

Reformers Meet Sat.

by CLIF SNICKERS,
Day Editor

"College students have rights and a voice with which to express and defend them." This is the theme of the University Reform Committee, and an idea of which many students and faculty at UMass feel the student body is not sufficiently aware.

Following many months of research and discussion, the Committee is sponsoring a conference on social reform to be held on Saturday, April 2 in Mahar Auditorium.

The conference will open at 1 p.m. with a panel discussion on various areas that the Committee considers needing attention.

After opening statements by all the panelists, the discussion will be thrown open to the floor.

A featured speaker on the panel will be Dr. Ronald Leifer, a psychiatrist at a New York medical center. Dr. Leifer's appearance at the conference was made possible through the efforts of Professor Joseph Della-Grotte, who has worked actively with the reform committee.

Workshop discussions will follow the panel discussions. Among the topics scheduled to be discussed will be women's regulations, student government in dormitories, and men's and women's dossiers.

$9 Million Needed For College Experiment

Editor's note: this is the first of a three part story on the new Hampshire College. It was written by Marilyn Swartz, a senior at Smith College and a writer for CPS.

by MARILYN SWARTZ, The Collegiate Press Service

The plan for an educational experiment, which had lain dormant for seven years, came to public attention last August when Harold Johnson donated $6 million towards what would be Hampshire College at South Hadley, Massachusetts.

Johnson felt the plan could meet the needs of a "new generation of students, much more independent, energetic—seeking an education instead of suffering one."

THE HEART of the experiment lies in encouraging intellectual initiative, accomplished through a community as open as possible to the unpredictable development of ideas and as free as possible from tradition, alumni, trustees, and the rigidities of requirements, departmental divisions, and curriculum.

The college would be a residential, co-educational institution situated between Smith College, Mt. Holyoke College, Amherst College and the University of Massachusetts.

LOCATED on a 300-acre site, facilities would accommodate about 1,000 students. Although Hampshire would maintain its own curriculum and faculty, the high quality of the college is felt assured through the support and academic cooperation of the four area colleges.

The blueprint for the plan was written under a Ford Foundation grant in 1958. The plan represented the thinking of people breaking away from the limits surrounding the teaching world and expressing their ideal of what education could be.

CONSIDERATIONS of the college still seem to represent ideals, and there is some question as to whether these can be realized. At least an additional $9 million is needed to get the college started, according to Charles Longworth, chairman of the trust fund that will begin the school.

To date, neither private donors nor foundations have been willing to follow the lead of Harold Johnson. Herbert Heston, director of development at Smith College, points out that donors tend to give money to established institutions rather than to one just being organized. It does not surprise Heston that foundations have not looked more favorably on the experiment.

The original plan maintained that students could be taught to educate themselves under a faculty as small as 50 for 1,000. The formulators had been asked to construct a program of high quality education provided by a relatively small faculty.

COST PER STUDENT would be decreased by having an efficient campus, the reduced faculty, a shared curriculum, no fraternities, and no intercollegiate athletics.

The planners felt the new college would become a member of the four-college group automatically, thereby gaining stature and the opportunity to share library facilities, faculties, the Hampshire County Library Center, and the FM radio station.

Under the New College Plan, as it was named, students would be trained to learn on their own in their freshman year. The plan advocates intensive seminars consisting of 12 students each, beginning in the freshman year, in order to train students for an active role and set the style of intellectual life at the college.

Seminars, Discussions Highlight Springfield "Decisions" Program

by FRAN LIRO,
Staff Reporter

Msgr. Thomas F. Devine, chairman of the Great Decisions, served as moderator of the final session of Great Decisions held Saturday, March 26 at Cathedral High School, Springfield. There will be one more session at Webster Dorm.

The session, The Informed Citizen and the Making of Foreign Policy in the Nuclear Age, included as panelists: Mr. John Everts Horner, Director of the Office of Public Service, U. S. Dept. of State; Dr. Samuel P. Hayes, President of the Foreign Policy Association; former governor Endicott Peabody; and Dr. Emil Starr, Director of the New England region of the Foreign Policy Association.

The final session also included four seminars as follows:

- Struggle for Vietnam. Prof. Luther Allen served as the speaker assisted by Dr. Kenneth Winetroun of American International College.

- Western Europe and the United States with Prof. Marshall Rachleff of Westfield State as speaker. Assisting was Mrs. Richard Anderson of the World Affairs Council.

- Russia after Khrushchev. Assisting Sister Agnes Bernard S.S.J. of Our Lady of the Elms College was Mrs. Karl Benway of Southwick High School.

- Latin America and the United States. Prof. David Leonard of A.I.C. was assisted by Mr. Stephen Reville of the World Affairs Council.

AT THE CLOSE of the seminars students from the Great Decisions groups representing the 20 high schools and colleges in the area were selected for the panel discussion which was opened to the public.

MSGR. DEVINE, President of Our Lady of the Elms College, said that type of conference bringing high school and college students and adults together following the Great Decisions program was the first to be tried in the country and was sponsored by the World Affairs Council of the Conn. Valley with the cooperation of the Foreign Policy Association.

Mr. Horner said that "we have witnessed a Renaissance of interest on the part of young people in foreign policy. Our worst enemy is the oversimplified approach."

Continuing, Mr. Horner said that the Great Decision programs were a great aid in informing the people of the matters vital to foreign policy and the government.

"We have been working," said Dr. Hayes, "to build understanding in a nation that is uninterested and antagonistic to foreign affairs."

GREAT DECISIONS, as a nation-wide program participated in by some 1000 communities, served to get the people concerned in foreign affairs and policy.

"It (Great Decisions) makes our work seem very rewarding," Hayes commented.

Former Governor Peabody said that it is "encouraging to see the amount of interest in world affairs" that was the product of the Great Decisions programs.

PBK Juniors Elected

Four outstanding juniors at the University of Massachusetts have been elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. It was announced today by Dr. Howard O. Brogan, head of the English department and President of Nu Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at UMass.

The four students are: Sally F. Kyle, a history major of 30 Howard St., Haverhill; Helen M. Kucinski a zoology major of 48 Fairfield St., Amherst; Harvey S. Liszt, an astronomy major of 65 Washington Ave., Morristown, N.J.; and Nancy E. Winsor, a zoology major of 2 Birchwood Terrace, Fanwood, N.J.

The four juniors were nominated by a committee on "members in course" and elected at a chapter meeting, March 17.

Broad cultural interests, high academic achievement in the liberal arts and sciences, and good moral character are the criteria used by the committee in selecting new members in course.

Senior class members will be elected to Phi Beta Kappa in about two weeks. At that time, juniors and seniors will be initiated in formal ceremonies.

The UMass chapter of Phi Beta Kappa was established last year. Founded in 1776 by students at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., Phi Beta Kappa numbers approximately 180,000 members.

UMass-Boston Begins Extension Program

THE FIRST extension education program to be held at the University of Massachusetts-Boston will be a series on the consumer and the economy beginning March 29, the Cooperative Extension Service of the UMass School of Home Economics has announced.

The Tuesday evening series of five seminars will run through April 26 from 7 to 9 p.m. each evening in Room 215 at UMass-Boston, 100 Arlington St.

MAJORIE M. MERCHANT, UMass extension specialist in consumer marketing education, will conduct the series, which will study the characteristics of the American consumer in an age of mass consumption.

REFORM CONFER. . .

Through wide publicity and invitations mailed to faculty and administration the committee hopes to have a substantial representation of all elements of the University at Saturday's conference.

Robert Wilfong of the committee said in a statement to the Collegian that a major goal of the conference will be establishing a solid point of contact with administrators by which it will be possible to determine the nature of student opinion and to effect changes where they are deemed necessary.

Wilfong said that it was in this area of bringing out ideas and getting administrators involved that the March 5th conference on academic reform found its greatest success. Success at tomorrow's conference will be proof of the committee's worth.

out of the nuclear mess into which it has fallen, he commented.

Asimov believes that people always ask him about flying saucers because they feel that, as a science-fiction writer, he believes in them, and as a scientist, he could give proof of them.

"Do I have to believe in what I write?", he questioned.

"If I wrote fantasy stories, would I have to believe in ghosts? If I wrote animal stories, would I have to believe that rabbits talk? If I wrote de-

Discussion topics will include importance of the consumer in our economy, the question of customer sovereignty in the U. S., debt as a way of life and the cost of credit to customers, consumer protection, the question of customer confusion as discount store and self-service trends increase, and others.

April Fool Towed!

Tonight at the April Fools' Day Dance the Towed (pronounced "Toads") will appear. Tours for the Towed are handled by Music Productions Inc., of Boston, the same agency that handles The Barbarians and Barry and the Remains.

The Towed have played at Dartmouth, Brown, and New England College Winter Carnivals, M.I.T. Senior Week, The Banjo Room in Cambridge, "Where It's At" in Boston, and Theta Chi Fraternity at UMass. They have backed up Little Eva, The Crystals, Josh White Jr., and Hank Ballard and the Midnighters.

The band has five members. "Buz" Bergdall plays lead guitar and arranges most of the music. Tom Long is the lead singer, specializing in numbers by James Brown. Ray Mersier plays Hammond organ. Dick Conklin, bass guitar, is a graduate of Brown University where he was president of Delta Upsilon Fraternity. Dick will attend George Washington University in September. The drummer, Russ Murphy, is a senior at UMass, writing an honor thesis in government.

pective stories, would I have to believe that all murderers are caught?"

ACCORDINGLY, he feels that the purpose of telling a story is not merely to amuse, but to get across the truth.

Shifting his hand on the podium into his pocket and his hand in his pocket to the podium, Asimov continued dryly, "I am often asked what will this or that be like 2000 years from now. I am asked not as a great scientist, but as a science-fiction writer. . . I even have the suspicion that I was asked here tonight as a science-fiction writer."

Invasion of Privacy?

This is an example of forms sent to head residents and counselors by the Office of the Dean of Women to collect information on student behavior. Such evaluative reports are used to compose a private, secret file on students. Most students are not aware that such methods of control exist. Many questions, therefore, must be raised as to the purpose and the effects of such regulative methods. Why, for example, is so much emphasis given to surveillance of female behavior? Must women be controlled? Does this represent a subtle form of social discrimination, or perhaps manipulation, or even a violation of civil rights? Is such unsolicited information legal? Can such evaluations be potentially or actually deleterious to the student in terms of his application for employment, graduate school, etc.?

The question of dossiers is not new. Investigation into personal files kept at other universities has revealed in some cases gross misjudgment and gross misuse of such reports. Counselors have described students as 'sexually excitable', 'unstable', 'uncooperative', 'hostile'. Some students have been rejected for employment, the Peace corps, and graduate school on the basis of such reports.

Students are entitled to know the reasons and implications of such methods which in reality have the effect of manipulating, controlling, and punishing. The use of such forms in the larger context of the administration's system of control will be discussed openly and critically at the University Reform Conference, April 2, in Mahar Auditorium, 1-5 p.m.

ANNUAL STUDENT EVALUATION SHEET—GUIDE FOR PREPARATION

This is designed to help you to be aware, from the beginning of the year, of some of the characteristics you need to look for as you work with your residents. You will be constantly evaluating and re-evaluating, modifying your judgment of an individual as the year advances in order to be as objective as possible when you submit your final evaluation.

Here are some guide lines for your consideration under the general headings:

- 1. APPEARANCE:
Grooming of the hair and person, neatness, fittingness of dress for occasion.
- 2. HEALTH:
Characterize in general, noting any special difficulties—temporary, periodic, or chronic.
- 3. RELATIONSHIP TO GIRLS IN HOUSE:
Comment on ability to relate with her peers; is she admired, tolerated, or avoided? Do her opinions carry weight?
- 4. RELATIONSHIP TO OPPOSITE SEX:
Discretion in behavior, respect, deference or admiration accorded to her. Dating pattern, where known.
- 5. RELATIONSHIP TO FAMILY:
Comment, where known, on any particular home situation which might bear on attitude or conduct.
- 6. RESIDENCE CITIZENSHIP:
Comment, where known, on her consideration for others, her standards of conduct, her conscientious performance on committees or work, her tidiness in public rooms and own room, her responsiveness in participation in house activities.
- 7. ACADEMIC ORIENTATION:
Comment on study habits, organization, general attitude, and motivation, as far as you know.
- 8. ORIENTATION TO CAMPUS LIFE:
Comment on her participation in or support of various activities or student government groups, attendance at cultural, sports events, discussion groups, social affairs, noting particular emphasis where known.
- 9. GENERAL CHARACTERISTICS:
Shyness, forthrightness, enthusiasm; understanding of others, decisiveness, judgement, courage of convictions and reliability; poise and self-control.
- 10. GROWTH:
Areas in which she has shown growth during the year and areas in which she may need help.

Time to Organize

By JIM THOMPSON, Day Editor

Some students are asking why liquor is not allowed by university policy anywhere on the campus. Are the non-Greeks to condemn our fellow students for having liquor in their houses just because university policy disallows it? For the longest time this campus has been "dry" by order of the trustees and the decision has been left relatively unexamined, at least on a formal level. Could it be that now is the time to bring up this dusty ruling for examination by all? Is this the time for a careful examination of our dry campus ruling by a joint committee of faculty, administration and students. Personally, I think that it is the time now!

Already, the fraternities are beginning to react to the challenge being offered. It is not just the individual houses but the Greek system as a whole. As any group, they have more strength than the individual, but it cannot be overlooked that these houses are built upon individuals who are united with a single spirit.

The challenge is not merely offered to the fraternities but to the rest of the student body, also. Maybe the student body will show they do not want to once again have a "wet" campus. But either way, it is time to examine this issue more minutely and with the emphasis placed upon the student. As men and women of today they should be given the voice that they deserve. Whether the questions that have arisen will be answered in the Student Senate, Faculty Senate, Office of the Dean, RSO, or by the decision of the administration is up to the student. We have an important issue before us and we as students, as intelligent men and women, should stand up to the issue before it is too late and before a decision is made without our opinions ever being heard.

There will be a special workshop on the alcohol problem at the UNIVERSITY REFORM CONFERENCE on Saturday

Letters To The Editor

Holy Fraternity !!

To the Editor:

I have just read Jim Thompson's patronizing editorial entitled "FRATERNITIES AND DRINKING." His anti-Greek attitudes are painfully apparent. It is also quite obvious that he, like most anti-Greeks, doesn't know what he's talking about.

A fraternity is more than a bar and social club. It's a home away from home, a place where one re-asserts his individuality and is more than a seven digit number scanned by a computer. Brotherhood, as corny as it may sound to Mr. Thompson, is the most important facet of Fraternity life. As a member of this brotherhood, one is assured of any help he needs to survive in this impersonal society. Any dormitory resident can sit in his room and drink his beer, but who'll tutor him when he's flunking Geology? If he gets into any kind of difficulty, who will stick by him? Is Jim Thompson satisfied to live in a dorm, maybe not knowing the guy across the hall? Does he enjoy standing in line at the commons and sitting at a table with students he might not even know? Maybe he is, but I wasn't.

Of course, all fraternities are dens of iniquity, dominated by snobs who are only here to have a good time. Look how low our cumes are! Holy averages! They're as high as the rest of the campus! You say most of the leaders of the campus are Fraternity men? Holy coincidence! How can they find time to orgy, lead, and book? Holy split personality! You say Fraternity members don't allow total strangers to come uninvited to house parties! Holy arrogance!

Mr. Thompson is entitled to his opinions, of course. I have tried both systems, however; and the Greek way is the only way, as far as I'm concerned. Don't knock what you haven't tried.

Beer Bier

To the Editor:

For a long time the University had its regulation against alcoholic beverages and the frats had their booze. The great advantage of the Greek system has been the freedom that it could give to its members. Freedom, that is, from the idiot rules of the Administration. Now a great deal of this former freedom has evaporated. Not only have the frats lost their liquor, they've lost their privacy. Now if any drinking in the house occurs, the house is subject to arbitrary decision of the administration as to whether or not he will "see" the violation. (I'd like to see them close a dorm for five years, if there is a violation there.)

I believe the whole campus will benefit by the action of the officers of the frats. Now the whole campus will be subject to some idiot rules. And I hope the great potential in the organizing ability of the Greeks will now be able to be put to use working with the GDI's to change the regulations on alcoholic beverages. There is nothing in the laws of the Commonwealth prohibiting alcoholic beverages on this campus (they legally existed in the past with the same laws). It is solely between the students and the administration. Now all we need is the administration getting on the frats to keep girls out of their rooms and we'll really get the ball rolling. In the meantime, students should look for means of organizing themselves—like the newly formed all-campus Student Party.

UM Theatre Presents "Six Times Four"

by GARY THAYER
Feature Staff

This UMass originated production is "An Anthology of Readings selected for stage presentation from the first six volumes (containing four issues per volume) of The Massachusetts Review."

Not only is this a somewhat new method of presentation, it actually aids in getting a great number of themes to the audience in a limited time. It served the function of giving a much deserved airing of the works of some of the talented poets of the immediate area.

Some how it seemed quite proper to be one moment curiously interested in bank checks considered modest by the giver and miserly by the receiver, and yet at the next moment to be suspended in the midst of a humid August racial lynching.

Often a single spotlight is providing an ample backdrop for an entire piece. In another segment a projected picture of the poet has given depth to a particular work. Musical background was somewhat abrupt and missed the intended effect of joining over momentary lapses.

The use of nationally associated accents, on the other hand, was tactfully employed in situations where such trappings often seem last minute additions.

To have poems for fun, others deeply serious, coupled with criticism, may be thought to cover too much. But in the works of Mary Ellen Chase, Anne Halley, and Robert Francis, just to name a few, can be found a mixture of tastes, yet all well presented and received. Included were poetic works of Ralph Waldo Emerson, E. E. Cummings, and Thoreau, which served to polish an already fine production.

An area of art which might seem slightly out of the program's main stream is found in the "Photomontages" of Peter Selz. This is a technique in which through a mingling of photographs a composite is acquired which is intended to convey a specific idea or impression. The selections were for the most part anti-German protests.

It is next to impossible to briefly cover the thirty-five or so works involved. It might suffice to say that in the trend toward "Modernism" there is, in many cases, a noticeable lack of varied appeal. Not so here. "The National Hymn Contest" and "Orpheus C. Kerr", the selection by Cecil D. Eby, Jr., contains a dosage of every conceivable manner of society.

If there is some part of you that likes a battle between the "good guys and the bad guys", a critic's acid opinions, a plea for civil disobedience, or the legislation of witchcraft, then there is an enjoyable evening to be found in "Six Times Four."

Special Effects Aid "6x4"

Striking visual effects dramatized the University Theatre's presentation last night of Six Times Four, an anthology of selected poems.

The black tuxedos and long velvet dresses of the professional-type speakers lended a formal air to the bleak stage; the costumes served as a good effect for the humorous and satirical poems as well as the solemn dignified eulogies.

The most powerful presentation was that of the artist-poet, John Heartfield. The dramatic darkness and forceful German music served as a wonderful background for the anti-Nazi German's "Photomontages."

His photomontages that were flashed on the stage wall were striking, sarcastic images of Hitler's regime. The most stunningly powerful of these were "During the Hangs," a mutilated figure of Justice; and a picture of a swastika with four blood-soaked axes.

The "Prologue" by James O.

Long was very forceful in itself. Long's poem of a Negro unjustly accused of raping a white girl, was so typical of the South's racial tensions.

The moving words supplied the sound effects for this poem; from the Negro's agony and torture, to the description of the mysterious forces of nature.

The four poems by Keith Gunderson created an amusing mood. The speakers beat their voices to the rhythm of the poems: "Dog Bone Blues," "Hawks and Sparrows and Sparrows."

Special, unusual effects gave this theatrical performance a great impact.

General Visits ROTC

RECENTLY BRIGADIER GENERAL COSTAS CARAGANIS USAR visited the campus as the guest of the Department of Military Science and talked to the Freshmen ROTC Class on the Army Reserve Program.

In his talk he outlined the opportunities available to an officer after he has completed his active duty obligation. He also discussed the role of the Reserves in the overall national defense plan for the security of the country.

GENERAL Caraganis is a graduate of the University, Class of 1933, member of Sigma Phi Epsilon and received his commission through ROTC in the Cavalry. During World War II he served as a staff officer in the 4th Armored Division in Europe.

Until recently, he was Commanding General of the 94th Infantry Division (USAR) of Massachusetts. At the present time he holds a Department of the Army Mobilization Designation Assignment in a Reserve Control Group.

WFCR Premieres New Play

Samuel Beckett has written a new play especially for radio.

Four College Radio - WFCR (88.5) will premiere it in Western Massachusetts, Tuesday, March 22, at 10:30 p.m. (repeat Friday, March 25, 5 p.m.).

Beckett calls his work "Cascando" which means "falling." It contains only two players: "The Opener" who opens and shuts the doors of human emotion; and "The Voice" a great hulk of a man who descends, always descends in search of something that is forever beyond his reach.

Like all Beckett's plays, "Cascando" is concise, with deep meaning compressed into every word. Each listener will find different things in "Cascando" and that is the way Beckett wants it, for he has always refused to discuss the meaning of his work; instead he prefers to let each person decide for himself.

Produced by the British Broadcasting Corp., this new play by the author of "Waiting for Godot" continues Beckett's search for human identity, a quest that stretches the mind and touches the imagination.

Housing Report . . .

AN ADDITIONAL FACTOR in developing this program was for the provision of a Senior women's residence hall to be administered by the residents with few, if any, curfew rules. A large number of present Junior women have indicated that this is a very desirable factor.

Another factor concerned was for the inclusion of residence hall space for Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority who are moving from their present facilities. Due to the stepped up residence hall construction program at the University this is now possible.

A FINAL FACTOR in developing this program was the need for increased faculty office space. Because of unscheduled delays in various other University building programs and, in fact, due to our fine residence hall construction program, the University will make use of certain residence hall spaces for faculty offices.

Within the general principles stated above, then, the following residence hall assignments are programmed for September 1966:

ARNOLD HOUSE—because of its location and physical facilities being conveniently adaptable, will be used for faculty offices. Arnold House residents will be integrated into other residence halls as described below.

COUNTY CIRCLE—All of the County Circle units will be removed from student occupancy. The construction in the Southwest Residence Area and the highway leading east to west will require the removal of all of these buildings from the active list. The residents of these units will be integrated into other facilities. Single students will be integrated as noted below.

FOR QUICK RESULTS...
USE THE COLLEGIAN
CLASSIFIED SECTION

Residence Halls for Women

Brooks House—Senior Women's House; Van Meter South 5th and 6th floors—Sigma Sigma Sorority; Crabtree House; Dickinson House; Dwight House; Emerson House; Eugene Field House; Hamlin House; Johnson House; Knowlton House; Leach House; Lewis House; Mary Lyon House; Melville House; Thoreau House; Van Meter North; Van Meter South First Four Floors; T-2; T-4; T-6 (Lower House for graduates).

Residence Halls for Men

Baker House; Brett House; Butterfield House; Chadbourne House; Gorman House; Grayson House; Greenough House (Snack bar for Hill area students in the basement.); Hills North House; Hills South House; James House; Mills House; Thatcher House; Webster House; Wheeler House; T-1; T-5; T-6 Lower House for graduates. Upper two Houses for undergraduates.

Stockbridge students will integrate the Southeast area residence halls on a 25% of normal occupancy for each house.

ROOM CHOOSING

Actual dates for room choosing have purposely been eliminated here due to the fact that present student room rents are under study. No student will be asked to reserve a room for the 1966-67 academic year without first knowing what that room will cost him.

The Board of Trustees is very concerned about room rent increases but is also aware of rising costs in construction (6% per annum) and labor. The present room rent structure is now under study by The Buildings and Grounds Committee of The Board of Trustees.

The Student Personnel Staff has been discussing these matters with the students of the Men's and Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate and these discussions will continue until the room rent situation has been solved.

Equestrian Club Plans Clinic

Are you a member of the "horsey set," or maybe just interested in horses and wanting to find out more about them? If so, then here is something designed just for you. The University Equestrian Club is sponsoring a Judging Clinic, to be held at the Eastern States fairgrounds. This clinic is designed to be an informative day for everyone.

Arabians, Morgans, Quarter horses, American Saddlebreds, and Thoroughbreds will be brought in from Massachusetts and the surrounding states. Three prominent judges—Mr. Lyman Orcutt, Mr. John Lydon, and Mrs. Ruth Karahalls—will be officiating in the ring with mikes, so that they can explain to the spectators exactly what is going on.

The purpose of the clinic is to explain the differences between, and the expected performance in, the various classes in a horse show.

There will be registration from 9:30-10:00. From 10:00 until noon the judges will explain the points of stock seat, saddle seat, and hunter seat equitation classes.

After lunch will come the performance classes—hunter division, english division, and western division—with each judge explaining one division.

The date is tomorrow, April 2nd, and the admission and transportation are free. Buses and cars will leave from the horse barn at 9:00 and 10:00, so bring a friend and come along.

Critique Needs Help With Questionnaires

Wanted: people to pass out questionnaires

Next week is the week Critique will pass out its questionnaires in the classes that will be evaluated this semester. The Critique staff can not possibly do this job without the help of volunteers from the student body. All next week a table will be set in the S. U. where you can sign up to pass out the questionnaires.

Distribution of the Questionnaires takes about fifteen minutes and simply requires that you pick the questionnaires up at the Critique office, pass them out in the classroom, and return the completed ones back to the office. With over sixty courses to be critiqued volunteers are needed desperately!

Frosh Program Faces Changes

On Sunday evening, April 3, the Orientation Committee will meet in Machmer Hall to continue work on the reorganization of the existing Freshmen program. As yet no definite revisions have been decided upon and the committee welcomes suggestions from any interested persons.

The meeting will be held at 7:00 p.m. All those students who feel that they could contribute worthwhile suggestions are invited.

The existing revisions include a program to help the freshmen before they start classes and also a continued orientation throughout the first semester.

Although the men's Affairs Committee has initiated these revisions, the major portion of the program will be carried out by the Maroon Keys, Scrolls and Revelers.

Dear Dee Bee,
"I Need Help."
Signed, D.B.

Dear Dee Bee,

What's the easiest, quickest, best way to solve my problems? Nothing is going right. I don't know which way to turn. Everyone is against me. Isn't there some way I can rid myself of this dilemma? D.B.

Dear D.B.

Well, you've come to the right place. But first, before I give you, or anyone else, my advice, would you answer just one question? What, exactly, is your problem?

(editor's note: If things aren't going right for you, either, just write down your problems and send them to Dee Bee, c/o the Collegian, Student Union, UMass. Replies will appear in the Collegian Feature pages.)

Feature Staff Members--

There will be an IMPORTANT meeting of the staff on Monday, April 4 at 6:30 p.m. All are expected to attend.

WEAK IN REVIEW

by SNIF CLICKERS

THE NATION

Washington: The Senate is holding hearings whose purpose is to investigate the Communist tendencies of Walt Disney.

Hawaii: The WAVES will stage a sympathy strike starting Monday in opposition to the proposed tax on surf boards.

THE STATE

In keeping with its motto of "A Free and Responsible Press" the Collegian felt obliged to refrain from any state news, which might, in any case, tend to be defamatory.

THE CAMPUS

A new fraternity is scheduled to appear on campus. Lambda Sigma Delta plans to open a house on campus in the fall. LSD hopes to offer UMass students something they can't get at fraternities now on campus.

In reparation for action taken against fraternity drinking, the trustees have agreed to pay the cost for planting long-bladed, luxuriant Kentucky bluegrass in the proposed fraternity park.

The administration has passed a ruling recently restricting sunbathing for women to: the roof of the Student Union, the roof of the Cage, and the Yahoo office.

Plans have been drawn up by the University Theater for restaging the famous Battle of Hastings in this, its 900th anniversary year. Present plans call for an invasion of the campus pond and storming Hasbrouck Laboratory.

The Northampton chapter of the Red Cross has agreed to furnish free coffee and donuts at this year's Spring Day.

The University will, starting next year, offer full room, board and tuition to any student interested in changing the bulbs in the red beacon lights on the 22-story dorms when they burn out.

The Young Independents, it has been learned, have plans to hold a drink-in in Mahar Auditorium in opposition to administration action taken against UMass fraternities. Refreshments will be supplied from an unknown but ample stock.

A new RSO has gained recognition. The Society for the Preservation of April Fool's Day was formed late last night. Anyone who has read this foolish article from top to bottom may consider himself a member.

Open House Planned

The Chapel of the Newman Center will be the scene for an ecumenical Open House on Palm Sunday, April 3. It is the purpose of this project to promote understanding among persons of different traditions and to reflect the spirit of ecumenism here on the campus of the University of Massachusetts.

Jointly sponsored by the Newman Club and the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine unit at the College of Our Lady of the Elms, Chicopee, the program will feature guided tours of the Chapel and an explanation of its sacred vessels, vestments, and devotional practices. Following the tour of the Chapel there will be an informal coffee hour in the Social Hall of the Newman Center where questions will be answered by the clergy, Catholic faculty, and members of the student body.

All students and faculty members are cordially invited to attend this April third Open House at which tours will begin at 2:00 p.m. and continue until 4:30 p.m. for the convenience of all interested persons.

S. U. Needs You

People who like people — do something! Man is a social being and it is part of his nature to search for chances to be with others. An important part of your college education takes place outside of the classroom. By now you may be wondering what the point of this article is — give up studying and just Hatch it? No, we all realize that studying is important.

There is a ready made means for you to meet new people as well as spend some time away from the books.

As a member of any of the Seven Standing Committees of the Student Union you can not only meet many new people, but also be an active planner and co-ordinator of the many and varied programs that your Union sponsors for the benefit and enjoyment of the entire University population.

The seven committees are: Arts and Music, Dance, Movie, Personnel, Publicity, Recreational Activities, and Special Events. If you are interested in any of these activities applications are now available at the Program Office at the Union. All applications must be submitted by Friday, April 8 anytime before 5 o'clock.

If you wish further information as to committee activities Miss McRevey at the program Office will be glad to discuss the matter with you.

SPFLD "DECISIONS" . . .

gram. "Our government is no stronger than the support we give it and foreign policy is no stronger than we make it," he said.

"Without the World Affairs Councils," Dr. Starr pointed out, "the Foreign Policy Association couldn't operate. Through Great Decisions we have gone one step beyond (simple discussion) and have given people the chance to meet face-to-face with those who make decisions and policy."

DR. STARR QUOTED Rousseau in saying that when one person asks of the government "What does it matter to me?" the State may be given up for lost. But, he said that the Great Decisions program gave the people the chance to play "let's pretend" and to find out what it mattered to them.

"The worth is one that cannot be calculated," he concluded.

LA DOLCE VITA

La Dolce Vita will return to campus this Sunday, April 3, at 7:00 p.m. The SU Film Comm. decided that it should be brought back for a second showing to accommodate the many students who were unable to attend the first showing and all who might wish to see it a second time. Directly following the presentation there will be a discussion of the film with Mr. Richard Stromgren of the Speech Department as discussion leader. Refreshments will be served during the discussion, which will be held in the Colonial Lounge.

BIOCHEMISTRY SEMINAR

Dr. Robert C. Wilhelm of the Dept. of Molecular Biophysics from Yale University will speak on "In Vitro Studies of the Suppression of a Non-sense Codon," in Goessmann on Wed., April 6, in Rm. 152.

AMERICAN SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Tickets for a trip to the American Shakespeare Festival and Academy in Stratford, Conn., to view a matinee performance of Twelfth Night are still available in the SU Box Office. The trip will take place this Sat., April 2.

NOTICE

The Collegian wishes to retract the following statement which appeared in Monday's editorial "Fraternalism and Drinking": "The threat... is that if a house is caught with liquor it will be closed down immediately for five years." This statement was based upon an exaggerated rumor. No definite policy has been established yet concerning penalties.

with a chartered bus leaving the SU at 10:00 A.M. which will return at approximately 5:00 p.m. The ticket price is $5.50, including bus and theatre fees. Please bring your own lunches. Beverages and picnic facilities are available on the theatre grounds. The trip is sponsored by the SU Program Council.

SCIENCE-FICTION CLUB

Nominating Comm. will meet Sunday, April 3, at 7:30 in Worcester "A". Elections will be April 12.

MAKRON KEYS

NYC Home Economist To Speak Here Monday

Miss Claire Boasi, field home economist for Farley Manning Associates of New York City, will be a guest lecturer at the meal management class Monday, April 4 at the School of Home Economics at the University of Massachusetts.

"Nutritional Aspects of Meal Management," will be the topic of the 8 a.m. lecture in Room 217. Afterwards, students in the foods in business major and related fields will have an opportunity to meet Miss Boasi and discuss career opportunities open to qualified home economics graduates.

Miss Boasi has a B.S. degree in home economics from the University of Colorado and an M.S. in nutrition from Hunter College. For the past ten years she has worked in both the consumer service and institutional fields. She has been a dietitian for the Hotel Statler in New York, assistant to the home economics director at the Reynolds Metal Co., and in the home service department at Farley Manning, a firm that represents trade associations such as the Aluminum Association and the Processed Apple Institute.

Castro's Cuba Major Topic of Discussion

by FRANCIS T. LIRO,
Staff Reporter

"Latin America is a major area where people and government have undertaken a revolution to have a whole class strip themselves of power or at least to share it," said Dr. David Leonard, History professor at AIC, at Tuesday's Great Decision's Program entitled Latin America.

Dr. Howard Wiarda, of the U-Mass history dept., speaking as the other panelist said that our sending troops into the Dominican Republic was "probably our most inglorious action since the Bay of Pigs. It shows a profound lack of understanding of the political and economic developments in Latin American countries."

DR. LEONARD devoted much of his opening statement to giving general background information about the relation of Latin America to hemisphere and specifically to the United States.

"In the 16th and 17th Centuries," he said "the Spanish held to the idea that the Caribbean is the zone of apex to the Americas; and was a place that had to be defended against all powers at the pain of war."

Dr. Leonard added that at the end of the Spanish Colonial period, "the United States took over the same fundamental monopolistic policy. The Monroe Doctrine was not a self-denying article," he said.

AT THE END of the 19th Century, Dr. Leonard said that we took up a policy that "was because of interests in Cuba and not imperialistic." But rather, the Isthmus of Panama, we wanted to keep Latin America secure "as a whole entity."

"THE ERA from 1900-1933," he commented, "was the Classic Era of United States active intervention. The price of this exercise of imperial powers was a bitterness on the part of the Latin American countries. The reaction of Latin America caused the United States to form a new policy that would take into account that Latin America was an area 'sensitive to its own security.'"

This was the New Deal Era, "a psychological and diplomatic effort to change the image of previous policies," according to Dr. Leonard.

Dr. Leonard pointed out that "the Cuban Revolution was the greatest spur to the forming of a new policy. The United States has undertaken a major program — a commitment to aid these countries in updating themselves."

THE SITUATION in Latin America has "nothing like it in the world," he said. "The revolt in Cuba represents the dramatic and drastic challenge to a voluntary change in the power structure. I would hope that you ask whether it is possible for a culture to modify itself without violent upheaval."

Debut Set For Sunday

THE UNIVERSITY YOUTH ORCHESTRA will give its debut concert on Sunday, April 3rd at 4:00 P.M. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The newly formed group, comprised of local students in the elementary and secondary schools, will perform a program of representative orchestral works ranging in style from Bach to the contemporary John Verrall.

The orchestra is under the direction of Joseph Contino of the Department of Music. Admission is free.

COPIES OF THE 'COLLEGIAN'
MAY BE PICKED UP
AT S. U. LOBBY COUNTER

Dr. Leonard sees two alternatives to the Castro in Latin America: "the explicit Renaissance of the Church;" and "the effort of the military to clamp down on popular pressures." This second would amount to "a kind of colonial fascism."

Dr. Wiarda said that two major issues of discussion are Castro's Cuba and the revolution in the Dominican Republic.

"Both have given rise to more myths and untruths than many political events in recent years," he commented.

SOME MYTHS listed by Dr. Wiarda were: Cuba was poor and undeveloped, that Castro was a Communist all along, that the revolt was a peasant revolt. United States imperialism was another myth he listed.

"One of the greatest effects that Cuba has as a Communist country is to emphasize the importance of Latin America in United States thinking," Wiarda stated.

"THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC was many things that Cuba was not," continued Wiarda. "The Dominican Republic was almost a stereotype of the poor, sleepy, banana republic. The Communist party was one of the weakest in Latin America while the Cuban Communist Party was one of the strongest."

He added that our intervention "has probably caused more Communists in Latin America."

Dr. Wiarda said that "The Dominican Revolution was almost a classic tragedy. The United States was caught in a maze — it didn't understand. We tried to cover up the mistake by calling for the Marines. U. S. intervention was not for the protection of the lives of U.S. and other nationals. That was a facade to cover a decision—that the revolt was Communist and had to be put down."

ACCORDING to Wiarda, because of the intervention, we have "made difficulties more profound. The revolution and intervention has probably created far more problems to the Dominican Republic and to the United States with regard to Latin America than existed before 1965."

In the discussion that followed, Dr. Leonard said that "U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic on the grounds that it was a Communist led revolt was one of the most appalling errors of all times."

He added that the Latin American countries can "begin to regard us as a virus as much as we regard Communism as a virus. We are slipping into a stance against international Communism which has the effects of the thing we oppose."

"I FIND myself appalled by what we did," exclaimed the former UMass professor. "We aren't here to say what we like to hear; our effort is to understand a difficult, complex and tragic area of the world."

Planned or not, the audience produced speakers who did much to effect an understanding.

THE MOST interesting and apparently authoritative was an anonymous Latin American graduate student in Landscape Architecture.

His descriptions of the conditions — "some people literally don't know the color of milk or the shape of an egg"—and the feelings — "Businessmen in the United States realize that they can gain a larger profit in Latin America. This is why there is intervention—to protect the business interests."—of the people were so vivid that they did much to add to the understanding of Latin America.

Fly-in for half the price.

Braniff International's new fare, for anyone twelve through twenty-one, virtually cuts the cost of flying in half.

At these prices, the fly-in may soon become as popular as all the other in things that are going on today. (We will permit guitar-strumming and folk-singing on route, but no noisy political debates, please.)

Eligibility requirements are simple. Just send us a $3.00 registration fee, and we'll issue an identification card which, when validated, will entitle you to buy tickets at approximately half fare on our flights in the United States.

Of course, this will be subject to availability of space at departure time, and does not apply during certain holiday periods.

Soon, the same card will qualify you for discounts on hotels and other services.

Marksman Place Fifth In New England Finals

by PETER GALLAGHER
Staff Reporter

The UMass varsity rifle team concluded its match firing for the season at the New England College Rifle League finals at Hanscom Field in Bedford, Mass., on Saturday, March 19. Although the UMass marksmen fired over their season average, the opposition from the other groups of the NECRL proved overwhelming.

Firing a 1246, the Redmen placed fifth behind UMaine (1317), the Coast Guard Academy (1309), Northeastern (1292), and Norwich (1276), while defeating only Nassau College, which had a score of 1211.

Those who figured in the scoring for UMass were Homer Davis (262), Maurice Case (253), Howie Burbank (244), Al Medeiros (244), and John Bergs (243).

OFFICIAL LEAGUE averages were posted at this match. Homer Davis, the team captain, who finished sixth out of more than 130 shooters with an average of 26.2, was the only UMass team member to place in the top 20 and receive an award for individual average.

COACH MARGELONY is optimistic about placing among the top teams in the league again next year. Although he will be losing his two top guns, Homer Davis and Maurice Case, he is hoping for improvement in the returning members. He also reports that there will be some hot shooters moving up from the freshman team.

Large Field in Swim Tourney

by DAVE JARNES

This year's swimming tournament has a record number of entries. Trial heats will be held at Boyden on Monday at 7 p.m., and the finals, which will consist of the top six men in each event, will be on Wednesday at 7. Entries may practice at either Boyden or Hicks.

SOFTBALL AND SOCCER rosters must be in by Friday. Soccer is being played for the first time and all games will start at 4:45 p.m.

Those who wish to enter the badminton tournament must sign up by April 7. Trophies will be awarded to the individual winners and points will be given to the units the contestants represent.

LAST YEAR'S SOFTBALL champions may find the going a little tougher this year. The Moody Blues, the defending campus and independent champs, will go with essentially the same team this year, but several other potent independent teams will give them plenty of competition.

TKE reigns as king of the Greeks but it looks like AEP and LCA will be the top guns among the fraternities. The Chadbourne Maroons were tops among the dorms last year but the well-balanced Greenough Grants may displace them.

Mound, Infield Strength Boost Redmen's Conference Chances

by DAVE JARNES

Optimism, determination, and a winning spirit permeate throughout the UMass baseball team this year. Returning from their best southern trip ever, in which they won all six of their games and hit a lusty .408 while scoring 73 runs, the Redmen nine got off to a blazing start in their quest for the coveted Yankee Conference title.

VETERAN COACH Earl Lorden commented, "Our southern swing gave the team confidence in itself. The boys showed terrific spirit and they're really determined to win the Yankee Conference this year."

Pitching is the key to any ballclub and UMass has a strong, experienced staff sprinkled with talented newcomers. Junior southpaw Carl Boteze, the breadwinner of last year's team, was especially impressive during the exhibition games, winning three games.

Bill Smith, the number two pitcher last season, has had trouble getting into peak form, but the junior righthander is counted on as a regular start. Don Gagner is a good control pitcher and Coach Lorden thinks Don can be an effective relief pitcher. Sophomores Dave Katz and John Canty were praised by Lorden for their performances in Dixie. Ken Rowe and Ross Piken, the only senior hurlers, round out the mound corps.

COACH LORDEN ADDED, "Our pitching staff may not be

Lorden--

'We'll give 'em

all a run

for the money.'

the best I've had here, but it's really good. We've got quite a few boys who can do the job and I'm not afraid to call on any one of them at anytime. I won't have to keep my starters in there the whole game because I'll always know there's a capable man in the bullpen."

Lorden called his infield "the best I've ever seen at UMass." After checking the infield personnel, this praise is well justified. Sophomore third baseman Hagan Andersen, a .410 hitter with the frosh as a shortstop, was slightly sensational with a .500 average during the southern tour. Jim Babyak, last year's regular shortstop and a .344 hitter, is back at the same station.

FRANK STEWART sat out most of last season with a broken leg, but he was impressive last week at second base. Stewart, Babyak, and Andersen all played varsity basketball this winter.

Senior John Peacock, a .232 hitter last year, has the inside track for the first base job, but he is being hard-pressed by junior Roy Lasky (.235 last year). Sophomores Don Ferron (.378 with the frosh), Vin Donahue (.292 as a freshman) and Ron Shepard will keep the starters on their toes.

ACCORDING TO COACH LORDEN, "Catching holds the key to our season." If UMass has a weak position, this is it. Senior Jim Kuczynski, a .146 hitter at third base last year, is being converted to this difficult position. Juniors Bill Breen and Frank Kruse are also vying for the job.

Captain Terry Swanson is the only man assured of a starting position in the outfield. Ross Piken, Roy Lasky, Ted Mareno, Jeff Whiney, and Alex Vyce will battle for the remaining two outfield berths. Sophomore Vyce, a .304 hitter with the little Redmen, drew special praise from Coach Lorden. "Alex has great potential. He could very well end up our top hitter this year."

NATURALLY UMASS' GOAL is to win the Yankee Conference, but this will be no easy task. The league is extremely well-balanced and there are no pushovers. If New Hampshire had not upset UMass and Maine last season the conference would have finished in a four-way tie for first. Last year UConn and Vermont tied for first at 7-3 while UMass and Maine were 6-4. UConn won the playoff game with Vermont and represented the Yankee Conference in the NCAA tournament.

UConn has essentially the same team again this year and is favorable to win the title again. Maine, which has somewhat of a disappointment last year, will field the same club which finished first two years ago and upset USC and Arizona State, the number one and two teams in the country, during the 1964 NCAA tournament.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, Vermont, and Rhode Island all figure to be strong contenders as well. However, coach Lorden predicts, "We'll give 'em all a run for the money. Our chances of winning the title are as good as anyone's, but we've got to beat UConn and Maine. I wouldn't trade our club for any other team in the conference."

Lacrossmen Host Siena In Season Opener Tonight

by TOM FITZGERALD
Sports Day-Editor

With two key performers on the shelf with injuries, the Redmen lacrosse team will open its 1966 slate tonight at 7 with a game against Siena College under the lights at the intramural field.

Captain Dave Jarret has sustained a leg injury, and attackman Pete Aiken will be out a minimum of three weeks with a broken wrist.

Their absence forced Coach Dick Garber to juggle the lineup for tonight's contest. On the attack will be Tony Arneri, Jim O'Donnell, Howie Goffman, and Martie Kalikow.

Charlie Avakian, Dick Howe, and Kevin O'Brien will make up the first midfield line. The second line will include Dick Kent, Murphy, and Dick Puisiver, and the third unit will have Gary Palardy, John Cooke, and Dave Kelley. Rounding out the defenses will be a fourth line composed of Phil Bozenhard, Dick Mahoney, and Bill DeRosa. Fred Foley, Don Rana, Brad Stokes, Walt Alessi, and Fran Gudara will make up the defensive group, with Bill Sinclair and Bob Lawson sharing the goal-tending duties.

The contest will be an inter-divisional meeting, since the Redmen compete in the Roy Taylor Division of the U.S. Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association and the visitors from New York state are in the Laurie Cox Division.

Saturday UMass will travel to Cambridge to oppose Harvard in two unofficial clashes at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The games will take place on the field adjacent to the football stadium.

This year's Redmen have six of the top eight scorers from last year's squad. A possible seventh would be Bob Edmonston, who suffered a complicated knee injury early in the hockey season.

The scoring punch is there, but the outlook for this season is unpredictable since the other teams in the New England league all figure to improve, judging from reports given at the NEILA meeting held here in February.

Reform Conference

Panel Rejects Hypocrisy of "Dual Role"

by CLIF SNICKERS, Day Editor

THE UNIVERSITY REFORM Committee brought to fruition several months of preparation with the social reform conference held Saturday in Mahar Auditorium.

With an attendance of about 300 people—students, faculty, and administrators—the conference was launched with an air of frankness regarding all aspects of social behavior and regulations.

The opening panel discussion, moderated by Peter Hendrickson and broadcast live by WMUA, started with a survey opinion of the philosophy behind social regulations given by guest speaker Dr. Ronald Leifer.

LEIFER GIVES VIEWS

DR. LEIFER, assistant professor of psychiatry at an upper New York Medical Center, and formerly of Syracuse University, pointed to a conflict within the university created by a dual role.

On the one hand, the university exists to educate. But on the other, the university has to integrate the student into the existing society.

"In being pressured by outside forces, by the forces of the society, the university takes upon itself this task of socialization of the individual. This conflicts with and injures the basic values of education."

"In a democracy," Leifer said, "the individual must be allowed to become, under law, an independent choice-maker. Every time the university is less than unbiased it interferes with the development of this ability."

Leifer also pointed his finger at infantilization as enforced by the university. He cited university actions which protect students from the enforcement of state laws. "The university handles university crimes," he said.

"Where University laws overlap with state or federal laws, students are deflected from experiencing responsibility."

GONON SPEAKS

FOLLOWING DR. LEIFER on the panel was Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, Assistant Dean of Women. "We need to look for answers together," was her main comment.

She spoke about the sort of rebelliousness she had experienced in the '20's. "Then too," she explained, "students rebelled against the prevailing intellectual atmosphere in America."

"I am in agreement with active interest and inquiry," valid university functions to some degree but that at UMass they have exceeded their properly narrow limits.

"Students," she said, "are virtually not held responsible for any of their actions. And they are protected from the law."

DEVELOPING THE POINT she observed that "protection can boomerang. Because students act in turn as they are treated. They thus begin to act irresponsibly."

Pursuing the idea of "protection," Miss Chambers made reference to "attempts by administration to blackmail the Student Senate into . . . cutting off Yahoo . . ." and in various other areas of action.

SHE CITED counselors as both guides and policemen. House councils, she said, practically speaking, are chosen by house mothers. "In practice, written opinions of students and house mothers are submitted to the Dean's office. But in effect the housemother's opinion is overriding."

"In many cases, Miss Chambers said, "the selections made by students are overlooked, ig-

'The Martyred' Returns

"The Martyred," a Korean film based on University of Massachusetts Prof. Richard E. Kim's best-selling novel, will be given a special screening with comments by the author Tuesday, April 5, at 8 p.m. in the Student Union.

Prof. Kim will introduce the film and provide commentary and translation. The two-hour and ten minute feature is in Korean, without titles. It was premiered in Seoul, Korea, last summer and entered in the 1965 Venice Film Festival.

The Cinemascope film, the work of Korean director Yu Hyon-mok, is being presented by the University of Massachusetts Theatre Film Study Series. It is open to the public without charge.

Prof. Kim's novel, published in the U.S. in February, 1964 and subsequently printed in a dozen foreign editions, uses the chaos of the Korean War and the brutal murder of a group of Christian ministers by the North Koreans as a background to examine universal questions of faith in God and man's responsibility.

As a lieutenant in the South Korean Army, Prof. Kim saw service in the Korean War, came to the U.S. afterward to study. He has been an assistant professor of English at UMass since September, 1964 and teaches English and imaginative writing.

The University Theatre in November of last year presented a world premiere of a stage version of the Kim novel by New York playwright Richard Greenbaum.

she said. But there must also be temperance in action, she explained. People must seek to find out the truth about an existing situation before rebelling against it.

"Students are now living under rules that were established last spring in an open meeting of the Student Senate," she explained. Not all of them are aware of this."

Commenting on the evaluation sheet that appeared on the editorial page of Friday's Collegian she said that the form was used for one year and then discarded. Such forms, she said, are designed to be of service to students in making recommendations.

MRS. GONON NOTED that the Student Personnel office and the Faculty Senate also have dossiers now under discussion.

A STUDENT'S VOICE

BETTY CHAMBERS '67, a counselor and student senator, followed Mrs. Gonon on the panel. In her talk she presented examples which brought to bear the theories and principles put forth in Leifer's talk.

Miss Chambers commented that in its position of "in loco parentis," the university sets out to protect and punish its students.

She noted that both protection and punishment are nored, and reversed. This is a discrepancy between philosophy and practice. And, she noted, philosophy means nothing without a follow-through action.

"The University administration claims to treat students as adults, yet the students are in a constant state of fear."

Backing up her point Miss Chambers cited the specific example of the evaluation system used by the heads of residence. "Counselors say nothing derogatory toward it, out of fear."

"They see no reason to be bothered, yet they know that a check list gives a false impression of what a student is like because it cannot be complete enough."

"Counselors frequently disagree all along the line," she said, "but they are afraid, to speak out."

"A conversation will cease when the house mother enters the room. This is an overwhelming example that this fear exists."

THE PRIMARY BASIS of the fear as seen by Miss Chambers was the importance students place on a good evaluation by administrators as necessary for a job after college.

"This has been happening for a long time," Miss Chambers concluded. "It's time students spoke up."

PROFESSOR POINTS

TO HYPOCRISY

Following Miss Chambers, UMass philosophy professor Pamela Ferguson noted differences between what students say to her and what they say to their housemothers.

"The university adopts a set of assumed goals," said Miss Ferguson, "which conflict with its academic goals. For certainly its main function is to offer education."

"The critical method of thought, consideration, and evaluation must be developed. For no power can equal that of the individual coming to his own conclusions."

"The University's social regulations are aimed with good intention," Miss Ferguson commented. "But they stifle independence and self-responsibility."

"And considering the university as a four year job, the parent function must be absurd. Your employer is not responsible to you or your parents to know where you are when not at work. Why the university?"

MISS FERGUSON continued that the "university has an obligation not to enforce any single view but to protect all with impartiality—without hypocrisy."

"But, to cite an example of partiality, the signature of the head of residence is no longer required on an overnight pass for a girl, but she still must see the pass to note the girl's whereabouts."

"Therefore if a student has the audacity to sign out to a motel she can get away with it."

At the Alcohol Workshop last Saturday all concerned students leaders and campus organizations met to discuss the question of a wet campus. The general opinion, was in favor of repealing prohibition.

The important points—how to organize student opinion and also just who would do the repealing were discussed. Because in 1959 the Faculty Senate voted to have prohibition, who could repeal the law or whether anyone could, was the pending question.

Curfews, Sign-Outs Examined; Petition May Be Result

by RICHARD DANCA, Staff Reporter

A petition calling for the elimination of women's curfews will be the major result of a workshop on women's regulations held Saturday as part of the University Reform Committee symposium in the School of Business Administration buildings.

Students, professors and heads of residence at the workshop also discussed elimination of sign-out sheets and the alleged lack of communications between students and the office of the Dean of Women.

Volunteers will start to circulate the petition door-to-door in each women's dormitory to-night to see if women approve of the proposal.

Some students expressed doubt that the petition could be drafted and signed before the dean of women's office April 25 deadline for changes in women's regulations.

After talking about such alternatives as dorms with and dorms without curfews, and versions of keys for each woman, the workshop participants decided to concentrate mainly on elimination of curfews and the related issue of sign-out sheets.

Ann Ferguson, faculty resident at Emily Dickinson and a speaker in the symposium panel, told students at the workshop to "ask for what you want, not what you think you'll get" in the elimination of curfews.

Miss Ferguson was referring to a statement made by student panelist Betty Chambers who said the Women's Affairs Committee to which she belongs only submits to the Dean of Women proposals they feel will meet minimal resistance.

Miss Ferguson also said she thinks the petition will show

Collision Near Hills North

No Injuries Sustained

by GORDON DAVIDSON, News Editor

Two university students were involved in an accident in front of Hills South last night, at the intersection of Stockbridge Road and Clark Hill.

Robert W. Burnett of 49 Mt. Pleasant St. and Robert E. Goda of 1640 Carew St., Springfield, the drivers of the two cars, suffered only minor injuries, and declined medical treatment.

The two cars, a '62 Alfa Romeo, and a '60 Corvair, were towed from the scene. There were no other passengers in either of the two cars.

One of the operators will be charged with a traffic violation. After colliding at the intersection, one of the vehicles struck a lamp post near the intersection, breaking the large glass globe.

WEEK IN REVIEW

by PAM METAXAS, Staff Reporter

THE NATION

PRESIDENT JOHNSON has announced that 15,000 troops were sent to Vietnam in March to further the American war commitment. While fighting continued throughout Vietnam, there were numerous anti-American demonstrations.

This weekend in Da Nang and Hue, the student demonstrations against the American war effort were aided by South Vietnamese soldiers. Cries of "Yankee go home" were heard in Saigon by Buddhists rioters.

Because of these violent actions, the trip planned for Robert Komer, the President's chief aid for peaceful reconstruction of the economy and Presidential Press Secretary William Moyers to Saigon was postponed.

There has been no announcement as to when the trip will be re-scheduled.

A NATION-WIDE RAILROAD STRIKE has affected eight major rail lines in 38 states.

The strikers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, involved more than 8,000 union members whose complaint was centered around the rail lines' refusal to bargain on a proposed program to train firemen as engineers.

The railroads argue that the strike was an attempt by the unions to re-establish a featherbedding job since firemen are not needed on diesel engines now.

Because of continuing the strike dispute a back-to-work injunction Thursday, the union is being held in contempt of court.

THE CAMPUS

AFTER A RAID at QTV Fraternity on Mar. 18 by the Amherst Police and representatives from the University Administration, alcoholic beverages were discovered.

The University policy on drinking is that no undergraduate drinking is allowed on campus even if the student is over 21.

Dean Barnard met last week with the Greek Presidents and Vice-Presidents and requested written statements concerning internal enforcement of the University policy through the I.F.C.

He pointed out that if the fraternities work in cooperation with the Administration in a responsible manner, a better solution to the problem may be devised.

A JOINT COMMITTEE of the Faculty and Student Senates considered questions Thursday about student participation in policy formation and faculty-student communications.

The committee also considered the possibility of establishing a student communications board.

THE STUDENT SENATE approved a budget of approximately $69,000 for the combined budgets of Index, WMUA and Flying Redmen Wednesday night. These expenditures were for the fiscal year 1966-1967.

REFORM . . .

Commenting on the infantilization of students by rules Miss Ferguson said that "the student is not relieved from responsibility because he has allowed someone else to take the responsibility."

"Since he is not accepting that which rightfully comes with his level of maturity he is regressing. Students must not allow others to help them run their lives. Students are not separate from the full experience of life."

GIVING HER PERSONAL opinion on certain specifics Miss Ferguson said, "There should be no curfews except for first semester freshmen, to aid them in leaving the home atmosphere and adjusting to the university atmosphere."

"And the curfews there are should be for both men and women."

"Visiting hours," Miss Ferguson commented, "should be decided in each dormitory. Not to have regular visiting hours is an utter invasion of privacy."

"No evaluations are made of people without their expressed permission. This is the way it should be and evaluations should be made voluntary, she continued."

"And as for drinking, 'there should be either no rule about drinking on campus or a rule enforced in fraternities as well as dormitories. No rule would be best."

There is a state law regarding drinking, why should there be a university rule as well?"

LEONARD CALLS FOR VITALITY

THE PANEL'S FINAL speaker was Professor David Leonard of American International College, and formerly of UMass.

Leonard opened his remarks with a comment that "it is not a coincidence that this is coming after Berkeley."

"For the spirit that was generated at Berkeley is spreading throughout the educational community in America and will go down in American history."

He went on to discuss the student's relationship to his society picturing students as the redeemers of society.

"STUDENTS," HE SAID, "are not yet corrupted by the standards of society and are in a position to object and to change these standards."

"What each of us fears as the very death which may overcome him in life is personified in Eichmann. Everyone to the degree to which he unwillingly consents to customary practice is guilty of Eichmannism."

Students have always tried to overcome this enduring problem in our society. On the university level the problem assumes the shape of 'learn but don't do—

Journalist Looks at Freedom

by ELLEN LEVINE,
Staff Reporter

"That's a hell of a question. If I couldn't go into some aspect of the journalism field, I don't know what I'd do. I guess I'd just travel; geez, I'd travel and work at whatever I could work at."

Senior Gordon Davidson, sitting casually behind the news desk of The Collegian, spoke enthusiastically about his Senior Honors project and his interest in journalism.

The lanky news editor is using "all the material I can get my hands on" to present a research of freedom and responsibility in the college press as related to the environment in which the college press exists.

Davidson, a senior from Plymouth, explains his project as an analysis of the Four College papers using type, methods and history as criteria for evaluation. Picking up a pair of broken scissors and jabbing them in the air as he speaks, Davidson emphasized the importance of a working definition of freedom to his project. "I'm going to take my definition of freedom and apply it to the newspapers I'm researching," he pointed out.

The definition that Davidson is striving for will be a combination of his own opinions and those he has read in texts he is using for his project. Freedom, Davidson feels, is closely related to responsibility and individuality.

"It's a very tricky thing. You have to be very careful where you draw the line between freedom of the press and individual rights," he says. Davidson thinks that the professional press is just beginning to realize the difference between the two. . . .

As a journalism major, the rosy-cheeked senior transferred to UMass from Northeastern University because "it offered what I felt a university should." The results of his project, Davidson hopes, will be applicable to the Collegian.

Taking a few minutes to look over the copy for the next issue, Davidson says he enjoys working on the Collegian and feels it is the best way to meet people who don't live it."

This, he said, "is stultification. Learning is living. We are as alive now as we will ever be, and the idea of 'preparation' for living is phony."

"THIS UNIVERSITY IS NEW," he continued. "It is not yet made, not petrified. It has been and is asking itself what it should become."

To some degree the University had to play a role to the state that students are playing to the University.

"It had to gain freedom from legislation. This freedom is slowly being won."

PROFESSOR LEONARD closed his remarks with a reference to Thoreau's 'Walden,' which he paraphrased in part, saying:

"I put life in a corner to study it and find out what it is so that when I came to die I would not find out that I had not lived at all."

are interested in the same things I am.

"I've learned a lot working for the paper, but what you learn is worth the time you put in up to a point, after that it's time to cut down on the time you spend working for the paper."

Besides what he has learned from the Collegian, which Davidson describes as "slightly disorganized," he has been taking courses in the English and journalism departments to increase his copy knowledge.

Assessing the journalism department, Davidson feels "there has been some improvement due to new talent and ideas." Widening his smile, Davidson commented: "Al Oickle is the best thing that has happened to the department as far as practical experience goes."

Davidson admits that his plans for his final approach to his project aren't complete because he really hasn't started writing it yet. "I really can't be too specific yet, but I do have an outline for what I hope to accomplish."

The outline includes a detailed look at the status of the collegiate press, its responsibility and the extent to which it can and should be influenced by its environment.

Included in his project will be a close look at the campus community served by a college newspaper. "You have to remember that freedom is a state of mind, it all depends on what the campus community is used to," says Davidson.

The project, his Collegian work and his courses are all a prelude to a career in journalism for Gordon Davidson. "I've always wanted to do some sort of writing. Once I wanted to be an outdoors writer; you know, all about hunting and fishing. Now I guess I'll do that after I've had some other experience," Davidson added.

A desire to travel has prompted Davidson to consider a job as a correspondent. Contemplating work in Viet Nam, Davidson feels that "anything you write from over there is good."

"What I really want to do," he adds, "is just go ahead and start writing. I could stand a lot of improvement, but I'm capable enough now to judge my own writing. I know when I'm good and I know when I'm bad."

Leaning forward in his chair and dropping the scissors he had been holding, Davidson re-emphasizes his interest in his project and his writing. "It's an emotional outlet sometimes," Davidson guesses, but mostly the subjects of writing and freedom and responsibility are interesting and thought-provoking ones.

Are you curious, creative, and willing to learn?

THE COLLEGIAN-INDEX PHOTOGRAPHY STAFF can teach you how to take beautiful, crisp, saturated color slides; can teach you how to use grain for effect; can teach you how to create moody black and white photographs; and can provide an opportunity to express yourself through the media of photographic images.

THIS THURSDAY, APRIL 7, AT 6:30 P.M., the Photography Editor of Index, the Photography Editor of Collegian, and the Color Editor of Index will conduct the first of several training sessions. If you want to learn how to take black and white or color photographs, we invite you to attend this meeting. Experienced photographers need not sit through the boring details. There will be a special meeting to acquaint you with our equipment and facilities.

If you cannot attend the first meeting, then contact either Rich Sadowsky in the Index Office, or Fred Pilon in the Collegian Office, or attend the second session on Monday, April 11, at 6:30 p.m.

DOLEFUL DOSSIERS DISCUSSED, COMMITTEE TO REQUEST REMOVAL

by GENA COREA, Staff Reporter

If Socrates had been a student at UMass, his counselor probably would have filled out a dossier on him something like the following: "Socrates creates conflicts and avoids responsibility. He lacks understanding. His peers reject him. His influence on fellow students is negative. He is aggressively antagonistic toward his government."

DISCUSSION LEADER STEVE SMITH opened the University Reform workshop on dossiers (personal evaluations of students by counselors and housemothers) with this hypothetical case. He then left the discussion open to the approximately thirty-five people present at the workshop.

Kenneth Smith spoke first and posed these questions: "How well do counselors know their peers? Do counselors have special training in psychology that qualifies them to evaluate other students?"

Several people, including Prof. Joseph DellaGrotte, said that counselors were not qualified to judge their dorm mates. No one supported the opposite opinion.

SMITH THEN SAID of the dossiers, "These forms are passed on to prospective employers and can affect a student's entire life. Any information other than grades which the University gives to interested persons is a violation of privacy."

Dr. Ronald Leifer, a panel member of the preceding general discussion, stated his opinion. He challenged Mrs. Isabelle Gonon's statement in the panel discussion that the dossiers were a service to the students.

"The dossiers are not a service to students;

A counselor then spoke about her aversion to filling out the "fruitless" dossiers: "I wanted to refuse to fill them out. But as an individual, I couldn't. A group of counselors would have to refuse."

Offering a suggestion, Dr. Leifer said, "You can do something. Why not check off everything on the positive side of the form for every student? A bureaucracy can't stand counter-bureaucracy."

Mrs. Theresa deKerpely, Head of Residence at Eugene Field House, questioned the function of the dossiers. "Why do we do it? What purpose does it serve?"

Kenneth Smith suggested that the dossiers be thrown away. "This", Smith said, "would free the administration from meaningless, petty paperwork."

RAISING HIS HAND, Prof. DellaGrotte commented, "I haven't heard one defense of this system. The Dean of Men threw the dossiers out. Are women students second-class citizens?"

Defending the Dean of Women's office, Dr. Robert Gage, head of the University Health Service, said, "The Dean of Men threw out the evaluation sheets without discussion, scooping the Dean of Women's office. I'm not criticizing Dean Hopkins, but simply pointing out that it was a unilateral action."

Prof. DellaGrotte continued his comments and questioned the legality of the evaluation system. "Can someone legally collect information on you and give it to employers? While counselors don't usually say anything bad about students, it is

BECOME FRUSTRATED— IT GETS THINGS DONE

by JIM FOUDEY,
Managing Editor

Saturday's reform workshop on dormitory government was not only a discussion of goals but a practical course in tactics for achieving a student run residence hall.

While everyone agreed that a house mother or some representative of the administration is necessary to maintain order, the general feeling was that these heads of residence have in many instances usurped their power.

Leading the afternoon workshop Dick Wimberly said that "The dorm is set up as a place for a student to live while he is here . . . since the set up is for the student why can't the student decide on the rules of the house."

Continuing, Wimberly commented: "The student is someone who has reached or is fast approaching adulthood . . . we have accepted on a University level the idea of student government and should now be accepted in the dorms."

A number of incidents of house mother "dictatorships" were discussed. The participants were particularly impressed by the report of a head of residence who called the dorm "an institution not a home".

It was agreed upon that there should be a separate council elected by students to consider dorm regulations.

Wimberly advised the students to "talk it up" in the dorms and when a majority is reached to take their proposals to the Dean's office for incorporation into their house constitutions.

"You have to be frustrated," Wimberly told the group, "Once you are frustrated then you can tell the dean and get something done."

Arms waving, Wimberly concluded, "It is our dorm and not the House Mother's."

'68 EXEC COUNCIL CRUMBLES

Last night's meeting of the Sophomore Class Executive Council dissolved into a political confrontation between two of its members.

The breakdown came when discussion of class expenses on campus entertainment campus became heated and then boiled over.

The verbal exchange developed during the first hour of the meeting and came to a head shortly after a vote was taken on bringing the singing group The Byrds to campus during finals week. The vote was substantially negative.

they are a means of social control. You inhibit yourself if you know that someone is watching and judging you. These dossiers encourage inhibition, fear and conformity. They inspire the "other-directed" person described in David Reisman's The Lonely Crowd."

Later he said, "With these dossiers, the college has a life and death power over you because it's an economic control affecting your chance for a job."

Picking up a copy of the dossier now in use, Dr. Leifer commented on the check list. "Seeks intellectual stimulation—attends public lectures, concerts, etc." This implies that it is good to seek intellectual stimulation. Personally, I detest public lectures."

ON THE NEXT ITEM, "accepts responsibility", Dr. Leifer said, "This means, 'Is the student obedient?' Responsibility is a euphemism for obedience."

Glancing at the form, Dr. Leifer read "excellent insight". "That means," he said, "that he agrees with me."

Dr. Leifer mentioned the semantic difficulty of the dossier form: "Instead of saying 'passive', why don't they say 'self-restrained'? Instead of 'moody', why not 'sensitive'?"

their prerogative to do so. That is an arbitrary and authoritarian system."

DELLAGROTTE THEN PROPOSED that a committee from the workshop group be formed to ask the Dean of Women's office to throw out dossiers.

Kenneth Smith said that action should be taken under the aegis of a formal body, such as the University Reform Committee, and not by individuals.

Bringing up a new point, Dr. Gage said, "Some administrators sincerely feel that if they tell a prospective employer that they have no information on a student, the employer infers a negative opinion of the student. He suggested that information about a student be released with the student's approval."

Steve Smith opposed the plan. "If the employer knows the University's policy, then the student must, in effect, release the information. Otherwise, the employer will conclude that the student has something to hide."

Concluding the meeting at 5:00 p.m., Ken Smith urged students to join the Students' Party. "You don't have to sit back and worry about University policies. You can do something."

Fight

The program of the University Reform Committee has gotten off to a good start. Just as the University is the critic of society, the reform movement has become the critic of antiquated social regulations on campus. Responsible leaders are presenting to the campus a plan of action based on the belief that the student can and should help mold this still young institution so that it can properly assume its role in society. But a good beginning does not necessarily insure success.

While Saturday's conference was more than just a sounding board for complaints, the movement could easily stop here and be like so many other reform moves on campus—a short lived period of excited talk minus definite action.

The leaders can only carry the ball so far. It is NOW time for all students to take an active part in the improvement of UMass. Just as the University fought state legislature for its autonomy, the student body must fight for its social independence and recognition of maturity.

The bandwagon has started to roll. The burden of responsible change rests on the shoulders of ALL students. If curfew and social regs are the same next year it may well be a result of the steps you take today.

PUERILE JUGGERNAUT

By De WITT SMITH

In pondering the University's recent decision to close fraternity bars I'm reminded of the story about a farmer, who, having kicked his mule for hours to arouse him, was rewarded for his efforts when he succeeded, by being bitten. At last the University has been kicked into taking decisive action on an important issue. One which has long been obscured by ambiguity. Now, if only there were some way to turn the administration around and, without sapping its new-found initiative, get it headed in the right direction.

Banning bars in fraternities offers an intelligent and efficacious solution to nothing. Drinking will continue. The effects of drinking, instead of being ameliorated, will be compounded. Now, instead of being able to drink within walking distance of the campus, students will have to drive someplace, or for lack of any other relatively comfortable place, will simply drink in cars.

The University, in enforcing a ban on fraternity bars has in reality done nothing but assuage its own pompous, bureaucratic, conscience. It, in effect, has washed its hands of the drinking problem, instead of having the courage and imagination to tackle an admittedly knotty problem and to attempt the achievement of a fair, effective, and realistic solution.

KEY TO PROGRESS

By STEPHEN W. SMITH

after each symposium; dwindle and relax in the interim. The Committee has no definite organizational structure to insure continuity and excellence.

These observations are not intended as criticism. The University Reform Committee has done a laudable job of stimulating student concern, and of offering proposals for action. Now what is to be done? If the committee succeeds in gaining all of its proposed reforms, do we then wait for another symposium before students can act together for reform? Change is a continuous process; it does not occur at scheduled intervals.

The Student's Party is the solution to this problem. Rather than organize itself around specific issues, the Party will have a staff devoted to the gathering of information and experience in all aspects of campus reform and student rights.

It is representative not of one group on campus, but of all, with continuity and a definite structure. Any reform or problem, whether proposed by individuals, the University Reform Committee, Student Senate, fraternities, sororities, dormitories, or other bodies, will be researched and pursued efficiently and effectively by a well organized and dedicated staff.

The Party works closely with both the University Reform Committee and Senators to avoid duplication of effort and insure that the Party's services are always available. It has received the enthusiastic support of Student Senators, class officers, the University Reform Committee, and faculty members.

Any student interested in working at one of the many interesting jobs in the Party should contact his dormitory representative or call AL 3-9675. A list of representatives will be in Wednesday's COLLEGIAN and will be posted in the Student Union. A booklet fully explaining the purpose and operation of the Students' Party will be available upon request.

Letters

Think

To the Editor::

After reading Michael Parker's letter which appeared in Friday's Collegian, I feel compelled to reply, for it is obvious that he doesn't know what he is talking about. His attack on Mr. Thompson is simply an example of the hasty conclusions to which most people jump when they see the words "liquor" and "fraternity" in the same paragraph.

Mr. Parker's letter was in rather poor taste for several reasons:

1) Obviously he failed to read Mr. Thompson's editorial with understanding (as did most of the student body at this institution of "higher learning"), for Mr. Thompson made no statements which could be taken as pro- or anti-Greek. Rather he put in print what everyone on campus has been asking himself: Will fraternities decline and die without liquor, or will they meet the challenge?

2) He seemed to read a bit into the editorial. Why did he bring up such topics as cumes, orgies, dens of iniquity, etc.? (Guilty conscience, perhaps?) Who was he trying to convince—the campus or himself?

3) Perhaps his most blundering error involved his comments on dorm life; for while he doesn't live across the hall from Mr. Thompson, he does live in the same dorm—in fact, on the very same floor! And Mr. Thompson happens to be very friendly with everyone in his corridor. Friendship is up to the individual.

As one who is currently pledging a fraternity, I feel qualified to make these statements; for I feel Mr. Parker's letter does not reflect well on the Greek community. And as one who knows Mr. Thompson I also feel qualified to attest to his attitudes, which definitely are not anti-Greek. Mr. Parker's letter is typical of those written by people who "fly off the handle" and write letters which miss the point entirely.

Perhaps in the future it would be wise for Mr. Parker and people like him to "think twice before speaking once."

Stockbridge

The Problem

By BOB GORMAN

Editor's note: The following is the first of a series of articles dealing with the problems of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

When the Stockbridge School of Agriculture was first founded in 1918, it held a policy of academic and social isolation from the rest of the then Massachusetts State College. Stockbridge had its own football team, convocation and graduation dates, and its own social and academic organizations.

This policy was all very good and proper for that time. However, about 1945 the policy began to change and Stockbridge started to become less independent.

Today, the policy of Stockbridge is eventual total social integration with the University. This policy probably grew out of the post-World War II idea that no one could exist by himself in this modern world.

However, with the housing integration of next year, Stockbridge students are finding that many things should be changed. The reason for the changes is that Stockbridge students can not just be "allowed," to room with University students; they should live with University students.

The present Stockbridge University student governments not only should, but have to be changed. Presently, the Stockbridge Student Senate has one non-voting representative to the University Student Senate. To say the least, this policy is unfair.

Stockbridge Students annually give an approximate $5,000 to the University Senate, yet have no say as to how this money is used. Granted, the money goes to the fine arts and student communications, but Stockbridge has no say as to how these organizations use the money.

A survey of students, faculty and administration revealed that no one could justify this, "Taxation without representation."

Also, the possibility of another voting Stockbridge Senator to the University should be considered because presently Stockbridge students are not represented by any University class. Therefore, one Senator for each year (there are two years) should be considered.

Similarly, the Stockbridge Judiciary must and is being changed because of integration. The problems of having two separate Judiciaries dealing with students rooming together do not have to be stated.

However, the plan for merger of the judiciaries should definitely allow for a proportional number of Stockbridge members.

Presently there are two joint committees of the Stockbridge and University Student Senates dealing with the above problems. One committee is investigating the merger of the two judiciaries. The second committee is reviewing problems dealing with Stockbridge integration.

However, neither of these committees have ever scratched the surface of the Stockbridge's problems. Stockbridge is naturally known as the best two-year agricultural college of its type.

Isn't it about time that the University which Stockbridge is part of recognized this fact?

NAZI TACTICS

Editor's Note: The following article is reprinted from the Hartford Times.

If identifiable members of a crowd of young bullies who beat up some pacifists in South Boston the other day are not prosecuted, respect for law in this country—and especially for law enforcement in Massachusetts—will be severely set back.

The pacifists were on their way to be tried in connection with a sit-down demonstrations at Boston Army Base some days earlier. Four of them stopped on the courthouse steps to burn their new draft cards. They and several sympathizers were punched, beaten and kicked by high school students who had stopped to watch. A girl sympathizer was slapped in the face, and several of the pacifists bled from their wounds.

Clear pictures of the incident have been published in newspapers and broadcast on television. The next step is up to the police and the prosecutors. We hope they appreciate that the civilized world is watching.

The pacifists who burned their draft cards were subject to arrest and trial. We have police departments and courts for those purposes. But the hoodlums, reminiscent of the street gangs of brown-shirted Nazis who prowled German and Austrian cities as Hitler was rising to power, should be prosecuted too. They are a more serious threat to respect for the law than are the minority zealots whom they attacked.

One need not approve either the purpose or the exhibitionism of the draft card burners to deplore the substitution of lawless vigilantism for patriotism. Americans do not beat up dissenters.

In continuation with the conference on students' rights that was held Saturday the University Reform Committee is now undertaking an experiment to reach students in the informal atmosphere of the dormitory. Interested students sponsored by the U.R.C. and the Student Senate will be holding an open discussion at 7:30 p.m. tonight, Monday, in Mary Lyons to relate and to discuss issues that were raised at the conference Saturday.

This will be your opportunity to question, criticize, and suggest any ideas you might have on University Reform. We want your participation, for only through forceful action, vocal and otherwise, can the student hope to be heard. Success depends upon your interest and your presence. Stop by tonight, at 7:30, in Mary Lyons and voice your opinion.

ANY STUDENT who is a senior or age twenty-one by October 1, 1966 may apply at the Housing Office for permission to live off-campus. They must indicate their intentions by Counseling Day or July 15, 1966 the latest, or they will be charged for a semester's rent.

ALL OTHER UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS are required to live on campus unless commuting from home or living in a sorority or fraternity house. Each of the following letter codes represent a letter code in sequence which will be used in the selecting:

- A. All Brooks House Seniors ('67) who wish to remain in that house.
All Arnold House Seniors ('67) who wish to move to Brooks House.
All assignments will be made in the Student Senate Chambers of the Student Union. (Times and dates to be announced.)
All other Senior women ('67) who wish to move to Brooks House will do so on a number selection basis. All assignments to be made in the Student Senate Chambers of the Student Union. A waiting list will be maintained for those not able to obtain space at that time. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- B. All other residents of Arnold, Brooks, Van Meter 5th and 6th floors, and Plymouth Houses who wish to reserve a room in one of the Tower residence halls. (Times and dates to be announced.)
Women may choose a room in a residence hall in one of the following Towers, T-2, T-4.

Men may choose a room in a residence hall in one of the following Towers, T-1, T-5, T-6 (Upper two Houses). Residents of Melville House may reserve rooms in T-2 as a unit if they so desire on this day.

- C. All other residence hall students of the Class of 1967 who wish to reserve a room in a residence hall of a Tower may do so on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- D. All other residence hall students of the Class of 1968 who wish to reserve a room in a residence hall of a Tower may do so on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- E. All other residence hall students of the Class of 1969 and 1970 who wish to reserve a room in a residence hall of a Tower may do so on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- F. All residence hall students who wish to retain their present rooms for the 1966-67 academic year (with or without roommates). (Times and dates to be announced.)
- G. All other residents of Brooks, Arnold, Van Meter 5th and 6th floors and Plymouth Houses who wish to reserve rooms in other than Tower residence halls may do so on this day. Stockbridge applications will be inserted at this time on a preference and percentage basis. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- H. All students who wish to move within their present residence hall may do so on this day by class priority to be devised by your head of residence. (Times and dates to be announced.)

- I. All remaining residence hall students in the class of 1967 who wish to move to residence halls other than a Tower or their present assignment may do so on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- J. All remaining residence hall students in the class of 1968 who wish to move to residence halls other than a Tower or their present assignment may do so on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- K. All remaining residence hall students in the Class of 1969 and 1970 who wish to move to residence halls other than a Tower or their present assignment may do so on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)
- L. Any student who now resides off-campus who wishes a residence hall room assignment may make reservation at the Housing Office on this day. (Times and dates to be announced.)

It is the hope of Housing that the above outline will help to answer the questions that hundreds of student have been asking. More explicit information will follow soon.

WOMEN'S JUDICIARY ELECTIONS will be held April 7 from classes of
'67, '68 and '69

Black Berets Roam Woods

Armed men, wearing the distinctive berets and field uniforms of special forces troops, appeared in the hills near here one recent rainy weekend, moving mysteriously by night and cooking over open fires in the soggy woods.

The men were wearing the black berets of the Bay State Special Forces, an elite ROTC unit from the University of Massachusetts. They were slogging through the Shutesbury hills on an escape and evasion field problem, part of a training program closely patterned after that of the U. S. Army Special Forces — the famed Green Berets of the Vietnam war.

The U. S. Army created its Special Forces troopers as guerrilla specialists for brush fire wars. They are trained in outdoor survival, hand-to-hand fighting and escape and evasion techniques. In a conventional war their mission is to organize local forces in guerrilla action behind enemy lines; in the Vietnam war, they have a counter-guerrilla mission — organizing the South Vietnamese, mostly the mountain tribes, as a counter force against the invading Viet Cong guerrillas.

At UMass, the Bay State Special Forces unit is a volunteer group, made up of about 40 selected students from the Army ROTC corps. The unit takes special forces-type training in addition to its regular ROTC military science courses.

This extra-curricular training includes things like ambush and counter-ambush techniques, hand-to-hand combat, SCUBA diving and arctic and jungle survival. The Bay State unit may spend one weekend mountain climbing in New Hampshire, another camped out in the dead of winter on Mt. Toby or a third in grenade and bayonet training at Ft. Devens.

The recent escape exercise in Shutesbury was an example. Their objective was to escape and be able to find their way through the woods without being detected. The orders read this way:

"Aggressor guerrillas have occupied and control the Leverett, Shutesbury and Amherst areas. Effective propaganda has been successful in winning over most of the natives... the aggressor is tough, well-trained, vicious and fanatical about his cause."

Thirty-five Bay State Special Forces troopers from UMass, along with 60 bussed in from Northeastern University in Boston, went up into the hills Friday night and were promptly "captured" by the aggressors — a group of 30 juniors and seniors from the regular ROTC cadet corps.

The special forces men spent a wet Friday night in a prison compound deep in the Shutesbury boondocks, being interrogated, harassed and brainwashed. By prearranged plan, they puffed off a mass escape in the small hours of Saturday morning. They worked their way through the woods in small groups through the rest of that night.

THE COLONEL COMES TO CALL during a recent University of Massachusetts Bay State Special Forces survival exercise in the Mt. Toby area. At left is Col. Joseph A. Bohank, UMass Army ROTC commander, and at right Cadet Paul J. St. Laurent of Methuen. In the background is the cave that was home to St. Laurent and three other members of the black beret unit during the four-day survival problem.

APG to Have UM Chapter

An organization meeting of a campus chapter of Alpha Phi Gamma has been called for tonight (Monday, Apr. 4) at 7:00 in the Collegian office by Joyce Harvey, chairman pro-tem.

Invited to join the group are students who have held major positions on publications for one semester, or lesser positions for two semesters. They must have a 2.0 cume.

Alpha Phi Gamma is the national coeducational journalism honorary fraternity which recognizes student journalism achievement.

APG has chapters on 55 college campuses throughout the United States. The only other New England chapter is located at UConn.

Auto Inspection Begins

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Richard E. McLaughlin today announced that the Spring compulsory motor vehicle inspection will begin on April 1 and end on May 15.

A RED STICKER printed in black will be placed on windshields of vehicles which meet the inspection requirements. An oval white sticker with a red band across the middle will be placed on windshields of vehicles which are rejected, and will not be removed until the repair work required to pass inspection has been satisfactorily completed. All other stickers should be removed from the windshield.

In addition to automobiles, trucks, trailers, motorcycles, motorbikes and school buses must be inspected.

EQUIPMENT WHICH WILL be checked includes: brakes, headlights, taillights, stop lights, marker lights on commercial vehicles, muffler and exhaust systems, steering gear, suspension system, windshield and windshield wipers, rear window, number plates, tires, and external sheet metal. Trucks will also be checked for reflectors, chock blocks, and splash guards. Trailers will have safety chains and lights inspected. Motorcycle and motor-scooter inspection will include brakes, lights, and exhaust system.

"Motorists are cautioned, nevertheless, that even with a safe vehicle, defensive driving is necessary on today's busy highways," said Registrar McLaughlin.

Lacrosse Team Whips Siena in Opener, 13-6

Pulsifer, Arnieri Net Four

by TOM FITZGERALD

It was April Fool's Day, but the UMass lacrosse team wasn't fooling around as it polished off Siena College, 13-6, on the intramural mud field Friday night under the lights.

SENIOR MIDFIELDER Dick Pulsifer and junior attackman Tony Arnieri paced the offense with four goals apiece. Jim O'Donnell contributed two goals and an assist, while Martie Kalikow had a goal and an assist. Kevin O'Brien and Howie Goffman each added a tally.

The Redmen struck for the first five goals, all within the opening eight minutes. Arnieri started it all off after only two minutes and was followed by O'Brien, O'Donnell, and Pulsifer, before he hit the net again at 7:50.

SIENA GOALIE Fred Vollmer came up with one good block on O'Donnell, but was helpless during the first canto, as the Redmen penetrated the Indians' man-to-man defense.

Meanwhile, UMass net-minder Bill Sinclair was up for the occasion, whenever Siena mounted an attack.

The visitors from upstate New York executed their first tally after only 22 seconds of the second canto when Tom Reilly scored off a pass by Dick Seely. This combo clicked again, and Ed McCarty also scored during the quarter, but Pulsifer and Arnieri both tallied to give UMass a 7-3 halftime advantage.

SIENA NARROWED the gap to 7-5 on scores by McCarty and Don Brutnell. The Redmen scored five of the last six goals of the period, with Pulsifer (2), Arnieri, O'Donnell, and Goffman bolstering their statistics. McCarty scored his third marker, while UMass had a man out on a penalty.

Kalikow's shot with a minute and a half left provided the only scoring of the last fifteen minutes.

THE SUPERIOR condition of the midfield and the sturdy close defense, made up of Walt Alessi, Brad Stokes, Fran Guidara, Don Rana, and Fred Foley, were major factors.

Saturday the team traveled to Boston to scrimmage Harvard, Tufts, and the Boston Lacrosse Club. Three unofficial contests are on the slate for this week. UMass will host R.P.I. Wednesday at 4 p.m., the Boston Lacrosse Club Friday night at 7, and Williams Saturday afternoon.

Frosh Lacrosse Features Seven Vets

by TOM FITZGERALD

For the past 10 years at UMass, an experienced freshman lacrosse player has been considered a rare bird. In fact, a player who knew what "cradling" meant before he came to the University has been about as common as a home track meet.

THIS YEAR'S FROSH squad is unique in that seven of its members played the sport during their schoolboy days. Coach

Frank Shields' "veteran" seven are goalie Mark Schlossberg, defenseman Kevin Collins, and midfielders Kevin O'Connor, Gary Vassar, Paul Mushovic, Don Agnoli, and Ken Hubbard.

Schlossberg is from Randallstown, Md., a lacrosse hotbed, while O'Connor hails from Mineola, N.Y. Vassar played at Mt. Hermon School; Mushovic at Deerfield Academy; Agnoli at Monson Academy; Hubbard at Manlius School, and Collins at Winchester High, the only public high school in Massachusetts that competes in lacrosse.

OTHER ATTACKMEN on the roster are Dan Murley, Greg Stillman, Tom Voisin, Mark Widiss, Don Togneri, and Don Legg. The middle crop will also include Bob Asquith, Kevin Deckel, Mike Nadler, Howie Murray, Steve Anderson, and Bob Capeless.

Besides Colling, others vying for starting positions on defense are Tom Tufts, Carl Larkin, Jim Pye, and Steve Chambers. At this point, Schlossberg is the team's lone net-minder.

FRIDAY NIGHT THE SQUAD scrimmaged the Siena College frosh at the intramural field and came out with a 2-0 decision. Vassar and O'Connor came through with goals, and, in the words of Coach Shields, "the defense was stellar."

The collective ability of freshman players is difficult to judge, as Shields says. "Based on the comparative experiences of the candidates," he nevertheless points out, "this appears to be a better than average year."

Harper to Captain Green Tennis Squad

by JAN KNUTSON

Coach Stephen Kosakowski has described this year's tennis team as "untested." The usual unpredictable spring weather has kept practice indoors and this year's team is relatively new without the usual number of men returning from the 1965 season.

Half the team members are inexperienced with only three men back from last year, Gerry Johnson, Harvey Medicov and Captain Roger Harper, Stephen Cohen moved up from last year's freshman team.

THE NEW MEMBERS, William Stevens, John Lisack, Harold Duncan, and Andy Meagher, show good potential but Coach Kosakowski says that the major strength of his teams has been in doubles competition. As good doubles combinations require well matched personalities and men who have spent much time playing together, the netmen will be faced with a real challenge in this respect.

The first match will be with Army on April 19 and is expected to be a rugged test. The coach predicts that the match with Connecticut on May 3 will be close, an especially good one to watch, and that UMass will be in the thick of the YanCon race.

Stale 76'ers Easy Prey for Ageless Celts

A touch of the flu, a 10 day layoff, and a red-hot band of Boston Celtics were just too much for the Philadelphia 76ers, as the NBA eastern division champs dropped the opening game of the long-awaited divisional final playoff, 115-96.

SAM JONES, JOHN HAVLICEK AND BILL RUSSELL led the fired-up Celtics, who were in command most of the way. The series now shifts back to Boston, where the two clubs will do battle Wednesday night.

Coach Steve Kosakowski chats with Captain Roger Harper (Ware). Harper and his teammates should challenge for YanCon laurels.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7, 1966

University College Discussed— An Experiment in Education

by JOAN LEZAR, Staff Reporter

Details for the proposed new Co-educational Northwest Residence Complex, to be completed in 1969 were explained by Provost Tippo at a meeting for students on March 31.

By 1969, it is estimated that there will be 17,500 students on campus; 5,000 students will be housed in the new University College Complex.

PLANNED housing for such a large body of students presents a great opportunity for the University to create a totally new academic program. The present Orchard Hill Complex, with its live-in faculty idea, serves as a pilot project for planning the Northwest Residence Complex.

Tippo expressed a desire to hear students' ideas while the Complex is in the planning stage. He said that the Complex is still a proposal and he is very interested in student suggestions.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE will have its own faculty and dean. It will be organized into five groups of 1,000 students each, and each of these separate colleges will in turn have its own dean.

Each of these groups will be an academic community composed of 1,000 undergraduates, a dean, 5 resident faculty fellows, 33 graduate students who will be teachers and counselors in residence, 62 non-resident teaching faculty members and a professional manager. It is hoped that the availability of the faculty will stimulate student-teacher discussion.

The physical set-up of the Residence Complex will provide rooms for 1,000 undergraduates (arranged as doubles, singles and apartments for more than two students); living quarters for the deans, resident faculty members and graduate counselors.

EACH resident faculty member will have charge of 200 students, and each counselor, 30. Classrooms, seminar rooms and offices will be provided, as well as a separate dining hall for each 1,000 students and a small library of 10,000 volumes for each 1,000 students.

The College will have its own curriculum. Electing the University College will be optional for students entering UMass. Subjects may be given on the four course plan to allow study in greater depth than is possible with five courses. Courses will be of a broader nature; instead of the 'ology' courses now offered, there will be full-year courses in biological sciences, physical sciences, behavioral sciences, and humanities.

Non-science majors will be able to have broader courses geared to their interests and abilities.

REGULAR professional courses and science courses for science majors will still be taught for those who wish them, however. (In courses outside the student's major, grades will be either pass or fail.)

Although the program is far from worked out and is still open for suggestions, the first two years may be devoted to basic disciplines for all students whether or not they major in liberal arts or go on to pre-professional work.

Courses will be:

FRESHMAN YEAR

1. year course in science, either biological science or physical science, or a semester of each
2. world civilization—includes philosophy, arts, etc.
3. English literature and composition
4. Foreign language, or mathematics, or an elective (students are not required to have a language or mathematics, but may choose it if they wish).

SOPHOMORE YEAR

1. Behavioral Science
  2. Economics and Government
  3. Philosophy
  4. Fine Arts or elective
- Students may elect a proficiency examination if they wish to by-pass any course.

All courses are taken in the particular Residence College.

SEAN O'CASEY—The amiable pipe-puffing man shown above is really the irascible Irish wit, author, poet and lifelong rebel, whose colorful life has been made into the play PICTURES IN THE HALLWAY, which will be seen at Bowker Aud. on Mon., April 11. The play was fashioned from the six-volume autobiography of O'Casey, by adapter Paul Shyre, who also acts in it.

Reform Marches On

Petitions, Discussions Accent Drive

by GENA COREA
and BOB GAUDET

Women's Regulations and Counselor Evaluation sheets high-lighted Monday night's opening meeting of the University Reform Committee's drive to discuss openly student rights among members of the campus community.

LED BY DICK WOOD and Tim Young, senate representatives, the lounge of Mary Lyon House was transformed into a public forum on problems of the University. Coffee and an informal atmosphere produced lengthy discussion on pertinent issues such as Women's Regulations, Counselor's Evaluation of Students, course curriculum changes and the role of the student as an active participant in University affairs.

Over fifty students were present at the first of these person-to-person meetings planned by the Reform Committee to generate student interest in the academic and social functioning of the University.

TIM YOUNG (Senator At Large '68) discussed the role of the Student Senate in furthering any ultimate changes of the rules.

Senator Young mentioned that the Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate will hold open meetings in the dorms on April 12, and 14. Recommendations on Women's Rules will be considered by the committee and interested students at these meetings.

The position of the University

Reform Committee was presented by Dick Wood, who called for "Responsible student action in effecting any student reforms."

"STUDENT INTEREST is the only sure means for producing significant change," Wood maintained.

The interest that was demonstrated Monday night convinced the University Reform Committee to hold an Orchard Hill discussion on Student Rights this Wednesday night in Emily Dickinson at 7:30 p.m.

A committee of students attending the April 2nd University Reform workshop on women's regulations is also circulating a petition for the elimination of women's curfews.

HEADED BY WREN Farren,

Dick Wood and Tom Young lead discussion on University Reform.

the committee includes a girl from each of the 17 women's dorms. A girl has also been assigned to collect signatures from women students living off-campus. The petition will be completed by April 15.

Next week, sympathy petitions for male students, graduate students and faculty will be posted in the S. U. lobby. Any girl who has not had an opportunity to sign the petition by then, will also be able to sign in the lobby.

Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, Assistant Dean of Women, made some remarks at Saturday's University Reform symposium which sparked the idea for the petition. Among those remarks were:

"Are you aware that you women students are living under the conditions you asked for last spring as nearly as the Women's Affairs Committee of the Senate could determine from its open hearings in every women's residence hall."

"THERE SEEMS TO BE some misunderstanding concerning the rules the students have themselves made."

"I didn't establish the curfew hours, nor did I say, I think, that there should or should not be a curfew. I hope that this will be examined and that students will decide what they want to do . . . I don't know what Women's Affairs has ever Interested students continued the discussion on University Reform after the coffee hour.

D. V. P. to Present "Pictures"—The Story of Sean O'Casey

The Distinguished Visitors Program of the University of Massachusetts will present the play "Pictures in the Hallway," in Bowker Theater on Monday, April 11 at 8:00 p.m. (admission free). It is the story of the famous Irish wit and rebel Sean O'Casey from boyhood to manhood.

The material for this play was culled from O'Casey's six-volume autobiography by Paul Shyre who will be appearing in the triple capacity of author, director and actor.

Shyre, a close friend and idol of the irascible playwright, has done much to spread the fame of O'Casey throughout America.

When O'Casey became gravely ill several years ago, Shyre, who was at that time appearing on Broadway in "Pictures in the Hallway," immediately had himself replaced in the cast and flew to Ireland to visit and comfort him. Mr. Shyre's warm friendship with the author lasted for many years until O'Casey's recent death.

Also appearing in the coming performance is one of Broadway's foremost actresses, Anne Revere, who will be playing several roles including the mother of young O'Casey as well as that of a bawling peddler.

Miss Revere has received a number of coveted awards for brilliant acting throughout her career: the Academy Award for best actress of the year in "National Velvet," and the Antoinette Perry Award for her performance in Lillian Hellman's smash hit, "Toys in the Attic." Miss Revere is equally at home on campus as well as on stage for she has taught at Vassar College and also appeared at Purdue University as the Nurse in "Romeo and Juliet."

Helena Carroll, born in Ireland and the daughter of the Irish playwright Paul Vincent Carroll, will be putting her Irish background to excellent use in "Pictures in the Hallway." She worked for some time in the Irish Player's Company, playing the role of Brigid in her father's play "Shadow and Substance." Most recently Miss Carroll appeared in the Broadway musicals of "Pickwick" and "Oliver."

John Leighton has played in roles both on the stage and on television. His latest appearances in the theater have been from the play portfolio of Paul Shyre, including the Westport production of "The Whitman Portrait."

Wayne Maxwell has had a wide range of acting experiences, playing in national tours of "The Golden Fleece" with Bob Newhart and "Father of the Bride" with Pat O'Brien. His particular interests of late have been the plays of Paul Shyre: "John Dos Passos, U.S.A." and "I Knock at the Door."

Alan Mixon was born into show business and began his career in his father's circus. He then went on to play in Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth" and in Arthur Miller's "A View From the Bridge" and "Desire Under the Elms."

With such an outstanding cast of experienced actors Sean O'Casey's "Pictures in the Hallway" will be a performance well worth seeing.

Activists' Role Cited In Academic Society

The "new Breed" of activist students has taken a new role in the academic society.

That was a strong theme developed by several speakers at this week's 21st national conference of the Association for Higher Education (AHE) held in Chicago.

"THE 'NEW BREED' of college students is dissatisfied with the present system of the society and the university and feels intensely involved in the world outside the walls of the academy. He protests the increasing bureaucratization and depersonalization he sees everywhere, especially in higher education."

This was the portrait painted by Richard L. Cutler, Vice President for Student Activities at the University of Michigan.

THE PORTRAIT was filled in by several other speakers at some of the 44 panels of the conference.

According to P.H. Ratterman, S.J., Dean of Men at Cincinnati's Xavier University, "The basic indictment brought by the 'new breed' against modern society concerns the institutionalization of values."

As an example, he cited racial segregation, which has hardened itself into what amounts to an American institution." Ratterman warned, however, some of society's institutions "are basic to civilization. Some, indeed, are basic to the circumstances in which the 'new breed' itself would carry on its argument."

WHILE AGREEING there is a new movement of activism on campuses, Charles M. Stanton, graduate student at Stanford University, noted "those who actually participate in political affairs are rare indeed. Even more scarce are those who foment demonstrations and organize public protests."

Studies have shown, Stanton said, the majority of "college youth indicated an amazing complacency about the quality of their education as well as a basic self-interest and non-commitment to social or political issues."

But the New Breed cannot be described as alienated, Stanton said, since "the truly alienated withdraw from society...the student agitator chooses to confront society with its hypocrisies and injustices."

THESE STUDENTS reject communism, indict the Socialist Party for its bureaucracy and ineffectiveness, and "acclaim pure democracy" and action.

How should university administrators meet the challenge this "new breed" presents?

ACCORDING to a 1962 survey by the American Council on Education, the most commonly used methods were: student ratings, informal student opinion, classroom visitations, colleagues' opinions, and the opinions of a chairman or dean.

"This leads us to the group being increasingly heard from on American campuses: students," Stanton said. The most common forms of student comment and opinion are informal discussions with faculty, deans, and administration, publications by student groups and formal student rating surveys.

Banquet Highlights Cadets' Year

One of the social highlights of the current semester for the Arnold Air Society Cadets of the 370th Detachment of AFROTC was a joint banquet with the Angel Flight held on 11 March from Westover A.F.B. One of the major events of the evening was the presentation by Cadet Major Edward B. Parks of Cadet Capt. Charles A. Seavey as Commander of the Allan B. Bunce Squadron for the coming year. Elections for this position were held earlier in the month.

Also included in the night's activities were the following:

The initiation of fifteen cadet pledges into the Arnold Air Squadron as associate members; the presentation of ten Distinguished Service Awards by the Squadron Commander to Arnold Air Cadets who have contributed much to the Squadron's success;

the presentation of this semester's Commander's Award to Cadet Capt. Albert P. Richards Jr. for his outstanding contribution to the Squadron as a whole; a change in command ceremony for the Angel Flight; the presentation of token awards to Capt. Elliot Feiner and to Lt. Col. Roy D. Simmons Jr. who have both acted as Squadron advisors during the past year.

The election of Cadet Capt. Charles A. Seavey as Commander was complimented this past week with the nomination and election of the Squadron's staff and project officers for the next year. As a result of the elections, it is believed that the Squadron will equal if not better its own record for activities and accomplishments during the next year. Among the activities already sponsored by the Arnold Air Society here at the University are: Boy Scout work; assistance to the Civil Air Patrol in the Amherst area; high school visitations explaining the AFROTC program; a Belchertown project; and various campus activities.

University College...

dential College, or group of 1,000 students, in which the students reside.

In the last two years of the program, the student can elect courses given in the rest of the University, and select a major in liberal arts or in professional schools. However, majors will be offered in the University College itself and will be of an interdisciplinary nature, such as: behavioral sciences, humanities, science, American studies, philosophy of science, comparative literature, area studies (East Asia, for example). Perhaps at the Senior year there will be comprehensive exams.

THE AIM of the plan is to provide the advantages of a small college, with intimate contact among students and faculty, yet at the same time offer the advantages of the larger university with its vast library, extensive laboratory facilities, and large distinguished faculty. The University College will not be an isolated, elite community but its students will use the facilities of the rest of the campus and participate in the social and athletic activities as well.

There are many problems that, as yet, have not been solved. It is hoped that the University College faculty will not become isolated from the University.

IN RECENT years on campuses throughout the nation, students have begun to complain about the growing depersonalization of higher education; some students dislike the big, IBM universities.

It is claimed that undergraduate teaching is being neglected for the sake of research and graduate study. Students claim that they are being treated as masses without consideration for individual academic needs. The new curriculum which is being planned for the Northwest Residence Complex, will be the administration's attempt to come to grips with student complaints.

APO Cries 'AUK'

Last Friday was April Fool's Day. Many strange things happened; and, as usual, the Hatch was the focal point of quite a few of them. There was a demonstration demanding equal rights for green monsters, there were people dumping pepper in their friends' hamburgers, and there was a blindfolded person sitting on top of a table crying "Auk, Auk."

Who goes "Auk" in the Hatch?

Most of the stunts were just for a laugh. The AUK event was for a purpose: It was designed to give more publicity to AUK, Aid to Underprivileged Kids.

AUK is an Alpha Phi Omega-sponsored project that will be operating in Springfield community centers, Homes, and shelters on Saturday afternoons. It is set up to help the underprivileged children have the same recreational opportunities as have the more fortunate ones.

AUK volunteers will be working with these kids in one of two ways. There will be a One-to-One relationship at Brightside and the Children's Study Home, where each child will have his own volunteer to talk things over with, go to movies with, and play with. There will also be group projects, such as Riverview, where a small number of volunteers will organize a large number of kids into group sports, such as baseball.

For further information on AUK, what it is, how it works, and how you can help, contact either Arny Klayman, 320 Wheeler, or Anna Dalton, B-3 Van Meter South, Co-Chairmen of AUK.

Honor Students Visiting

More than 200 high school students and teachers will be the guests of the University for the annual High School Honor Students' Day on Saturday, April 16. The program, run by Adelphi, the Senior Men's Honor Society, varies greatly from those of the past several years.

THE PARTICIPANTS come from 40 public, private, and parochial schools throughout the state, and will view a widely varied program.

The morning program is composed of a panel discussion and question hour, led by students, faculty, and administration, and covering the broad experiences of being a student.

Following a luncheon, highlighted by an address by Dr. Dario Politella, they will be involved in a program prepared by the Department of English. Activities close with a campus tour.

Past programs were aimed at familiarizing high school guidance counselors with University admissions' policy, and at giving honor students a broad introduction to the University.

Staff... Take Note

Attention All Collegian Staffers!!!!

The new regime of Collegian hierarchy has instituted a new policy for the staff. Assignments for every member on the mast will be left in the new assignment boxes on the right wall just inside the door.

Every staffer is expected to check every two or three days for messages and assignments. If assignments are not picked up within a week the student will no longer be considered a member of the staff and his name will be removed from the mast.

This means you!!!!

Hamp College to Symbolize Freedom and Innovation

Editor's notes This is part two in a series of three articles on the new Hampshire College written by Marilyn Swartz, a senior at Smith College and a writer for the Collegiate Press Service.

Prof. Cesar Barber, a former professor of English at Amherst, now at Indiana University and a member of the 1958 committee, said in an article written for the Amherst Student that "by investing a great deal of faculty time in training students, at the outset, to take the initiative, we can count on them, with reinforcement from each other and from the faculty, to make a habit of doing things on their own." BECAUSE THE COMMITTEE felt a heavy load of courses takes this initiative away from the students, they proposed selection of three courses per semester. Each faculty member would give one lecture course, the rest of his time being devoted to seminars of his choice. In four years, each student would be required to take at least one other course in the Connecticut Valley Schools.

"There will still be prerequisites and sequences appropriate to the various subjects, notably in the sciences," Professor Barber explained. "But we stressed that the most important coherence is not in progressions of courses but in progressions of students."

Individual programs, designed by the students and periodically reviewed by faculty panels, lead to junior and senior field examinations and research projects in which the student demonstrates disciplined mastery of recognized fields of knowledge. He covers subjects, not just courses.

During a four-week interim after the Christmas vacation, all students would take the same two courses, one dealing with an aspect of western culture, and the other in a non-western field.

THE CUSTOMARY system of courses, credits, and departmental majors would be liberalized. Grades were proposed as "fail, satisfactory, and distinction." The number of courses offered would be reduced by dependence on the four colleges, elimination of a language requirement, and careful planning.

The New College Plan is specific in description of physical layout: The center of the college would be the library. Near the library and connected by covered walks would be the laboratories, the auditorium, and the administration building. Dormitories, grouped around a common kitchen, would be located uphill from the library; the recreation center downhill. Traffic should circle the central living and working areas. If possible, adjoining woodlands should be purchased for nature study and an outing club cabin. The site is already favorably located near Mt. Tom for skiing and near the Connecticut River for sailing.

UNTIL JOHNSON, a retired attorney, became Hampshire's initial benefactor, nobody had done much about the proposal. Johnson, however, felt it was a "remarkably attractive idea."

"I decided it needed a substantial contribution," he said in an interview with the Amherst Student. "Starting a new college is more of a contribution than helping keep up another college. You can contribute to existing colleges, but most of them are supported by their alumni and will continue to be," he explained.

Johnson was a Phi Beta Kappa in the Class of 1918 at Amherst and later graduated from the Harvard Law School. After World War II he participated in many international missions of the World Bank and became a special partner in the largest American brokerage firm, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner, and Smith.

HE PLANS to devote a good deal of attention to the unsolved problems of the college. "There's a lot to be done and somebody's got to push it," he said.

The man who will be the primary "pusher" is the Hampshire College Trust chairman, Charles Longworth, a 1951 graduate of Amherst. Longworth points out that changes in the future system of the college will result from a renewed study of the New College Plan.

Because the former committee has since dispersed, a new committee has been appointed and includes representatives from the four nearby colleges. Longworth hopes in this way the new ideas will merge with the old.

LONGWORTH SAID the new committee encourages self-education, a breakdown of the tyranny of courses, requirements and departments. The committee has also retained the freshman seminars, the upperclass-led seminars, and the four-week interim after Christmas.

As outlined in the preliminary statement of the plan, the college will —broaden and strengthen the existing four-college cooperation and joint utilization of facilities, —experiment with educational innovations,

—reduce the cost of a college education.

Longworth is sure that Hampshire will be unlike any other college in the country. He compares its organizational set-up to a confederacy. In contrast, the California Claremont Colleges, whose system comes closest in resembling the Hampshire plan, are a union of six institutions in close proximity with one library and many shared classes. Hampshire College will not be so dependent on the other four as it will have its core of fundamental courses and its own campus.

Volunteers Seeking Joiners

The Northampton Volunteers, a student volunteer organization working with patients at Northampton State Mental Hospital, is seeking additional students to work with the mentally ill.

The services this group renders has helped to fill the void resulting from the lack of hospital personnel. At the same time it provides patients with a valuable contact with the outside community.

The weekly visits also offer a person-to-person basis with individuals who need conversation and companionship.

Presently over 200 students from nine colleges in the Springfield-Amherst area are participating in the various volunteer program offered.

The UMass group meets every Wednesday evening at 6:30 in the Student Union Lobby. From there transportation is provided to the hospital in Northampton.

Leaders of the group have suggested that any interested students meet with the group on these Wednesday evenings to be provided a first-hand look at the kind of projects now underway.

Women's Regulations - Some Answers

Editor's Note: The following is an imaginary discussion among several girls in a dormitory.

by JANE ROLAND

Presently a petition is being circulated to every woman student on campus to determine student sentiment towards abolishment of curfews. This petition is a direct result of the University Reform Conference on Social Regulations held last Saturday. At this conference, Assistant Dean of Women Isabelle Gonon reiterated the position of the Office of Women's Affairs: regulations are made by the Women's Affairs Committee representing the girls on campus as accurately as can be determined, and the present rules are those specified by the girls at the end of the previous year. The petition calls simply for an end to curfews for all accept first semester Freshmen, and for signout sheets to be made voluntary. If a majority of women students sign this petition, it will present tangible evidence that the majority of the women students at UMass do not want curfews — and thus curfews must be rescinded.

"However, this is more than a fight to eliminate curfews. It is a test—to determine whether or not the administration recognizes the student as an articulate and informed member of the University community who has the right and the responsibility to take an active part in the formulation of the regulations and code that direct and control that community."

first question

"I have a question. Curfews give me something to fall back on in social matters. When I'm with a date I don't like or at a party in which I feel uncomfortable, or in a position I feel I should leave, curfews provide me with an excuse to return to my dorm."

(answer)

"Curfews should not be a social crutch — that was never their purpose. Part of becoming a mature and responsible adult is learning how to handle yourself in social situations — thus realizing by yourself the need to return to your dorm, or making up your own excuse, if need be, as a headache. Had you not continued your education after graduating high school, you would probably be living in an apartment by yourself, without any curfews. There, out in society, you would automatically be accepted as an adult. Here, we are not being accepted as adults. We cannot become responsible citizens unless we are accepted as such."

second question

"I personally think this is a good idea; I'd love not to have curfews. But there are many girls on this campus who need the protection. Besides, I needed curfews when I was younger—otherwise I might have flunked out."

(answer)

"All girls have to learn sometime to organize their own social and academic life. The intellectual atmosphere of the University is the place to learn. Besides, no curfew certainly does not mean that all girls will stay out all night—it's more the principle of the thing. Think of all the time spent in your dorm now not studying—should there be rules to make you study?"

"Also, it is not up to anyone to make a decision for anyone else. Given the chance to control her own life, the girl you think needs a curfew will become a more responsible individual."

third question

"I like having a curfew. This is a large university, and it makes me feel that someone is concerned about me."

(answer)

"The University is large, and the feeling that someone cares is important and understandable. However, impersonal rules should not be the only contact between the Administration and the students. Rules will still exist, such as quiet hour regulations. If the University is to eliminate curfews in the hope of making more responsible citizens, then this is certainly a sign of their caring."

fourth question

"Curfews never bother me, I never want to come in late. Why should I bother to sign the petition?"

(answer)

"Under a no-curfew system, it would be your responsibility whether or not to return to the dorm. It would be your choice to make as an individual. Also, although curfews do not bother you, they do disturb many girls. Your helping them on the petition would help the majority of the girls (if a majority sign and the law goes through), rather than hurting most for the will of the minority."

fifth question

"I doubt that the parents of most girls at the University would like to see their daughters without curfews."

(answer)

"Parents have had 17 or 18 years to bring up their daughters. Once a girl leaves home and goes to school she should be considered to be on her own. She is of the age to decide for herself what to do. This could also be considered a double standard, in that most parents would probably be surprised if male students had a curfew."

sixth question

"This could be a good idea, but it'll never work—how can we manage it? Especially because this is a state school."

(answer)

"The important thing is determining the sentiment of the girls towards curfews, as they are the ones who make their own rules. Once it has been found that girls do not want these regulations, the means can be worked out."

"As for this being a state institution, that is all the more reason for the wishes of the students to be made into law. At a private institution, you can be considered, in effect, as buying a certain product. A state University is run for the citizens of the state. All the more reason to carry through the will of the majority of students on campus."

A Conservative View

by SHELLEY KACZYNSKI, Senator from Dickinson

What exactly are "student rights"? Does a student actually have any "rights"? Some people will say of course he has rights, because he is a member of society, a citizen of the United States. But I contend that students, at least those undergraduates under 21, are not full-fledged members of society, just as they are not full-fledged citizens. (i.e. They cannot vote; men cannot enter into legal contracts without approval of guardians; etc. This government recognizes guardians for those under 21.)

As a state university, the administration has to answer for its actions to the Board of Trustees who are responsible to the state government, and all the taxpayers who are subsidizing student education, yours and mine. Students should realize that attending this university is a privilege, not a right. Because they have been granted this privilege, students have no right to tell the administration what to do. They may ask for privileges, not rights, to which the university has listened patiently and has acted upon, generally to the advantage of the student.

All students over 21 should have no complaints about this system as men and women over 21 may live off-campus, and drink in their rooms, and stay out all night if they think that this creates responsibility. But just as long as they are living in state subsidized dorms, they have to follow the rules of the University.

Students are not asking for basic rights; this university does not treat students as slaves, nor does it starve them in any physical or intellectual manner. What it is doing is instituting rules of restraint for its own protection, and these rules are not especially strict.

Changes in all stable systems must be brought about gradually. If they were not, they would be destructive to the system itself and the society as a whole. Changes are being instituted now. Next year there is going to be a senior dorm with no curfews, and will perhaps be student run. This is an experiment, and if it runs well, perhaps there will be more dorms on this model. In a couple of years there may be no curfews for juniors as well as seniors. But all changes must be gradual; they must be planned, with all the consequences of these changes being considered.

People have to earn privileges; they must show that they are capable of handling these privileges. Changes cannot be instituted to their fullest extent immediately, just because students want them.

This is your chance to make your feelings known. Please take advantage of this opportunity, for you—the women on campus—make the rules. You will decide if there will be curfews next year, if partials will exist, if evaluation sheets will continue and how your counselors will be selected!

When the representatives of Women's Affairs Committee come to your dorm, SPEAK YOUR MIND!

On April 12th and 14th, the Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate will send representatives to each Women's Residence Hall to solicit suggestions of changes, modifications and revisions.

The Dean of Women's Office has pledged full cooperation to the Committee and the Committee is prepared to implement the wishes of the majority of the Women on campus.

In the past, the ideas and suggestions of the women on campus have been brought to the Dean of Women's Office by the Women's Affairs Committee and have been approved.

Stockbridge: Part 2

— HOUSING! —

by BOB GORMAN

In numerous interviews many Stockbridge students stated that they had been treated as second-rate citizens. Some of those interviewed said that this treatment and social degradation was because Stockbridge has been isolated. However, the fact remains that some degradation does exist and is the result of ignorance on the part of both Stockbridge and University students toward each other. Mr. Wells, UMass Housing Director, stated: "There have been times when Stockbridge students have been considered second-rate citizens." Also, President Lederle commented recently: "Likewise, Stockbridge has been the phantom of the University. You (Stockbridge students) have had your problems."

The most outstanding reason for Stockbridge's problems is housing segregation. Housing on campus for Stockbridge students was available to only a very few students until 1957. Many students still are forced to live off campus because there is no room in the Stockbridge dorms.

Supposedly, this will now all be changed by integration, but it should be remembered that the rooms in the Stockbridge dorms are one-half as small as the smallest University rooms; both acoustics and ventilation are inadequate. Even the Housing officers interviewed admitted that the Stockbridge dorms are barely livable, and are highly inferior to all other University dorms.

The academic isolation cannot be greatly changed through integration. Many Stockbridge students are interested only with the technical fields and have no desire to partake heavily in the liberal arts program. But there are other Stockbridge students who plan to transfer into a four-year program upon graduation.

There are also many complaints about the Stockbridge courses, regarding their variance from the courses offered in the liberal arts program. The reason for the difference is because the Board of Trustees will allow Stockbridge to function only as long as its courses vary from the four-year program.

As soon as Stockbridge offers the same courses as the four-year program, then the need for a separate school within the University will be non-existent, and Stockbridge will be liquidated. Thus, at least some difference in the program of the two year programs is necessary for the survival of Stockbridge.

— Letters to the Editor —

The Faculty Votes

To the Editor:

I have recently read Jim Thompson's editorial entitled "Time to Organize". I agree with Mr. Thompson's statement that we must all organize to examine the present University policy on Alcoholic Beverages on campus.

True, this present concern has developed with the restrictions placed on the Fraternities, but the Independents must join forces with the Greeks, since this problem also concerns them.

Committees have already been formed composed of both Greeks and Independents. Some of our most influential campus leaders, Greek or not, are on this committee, and they are working hard to organize and draw up a reasonable policy on Alcoholic Beverages. But we on this committee need your support in order to function efficiently.

Mr. Thompson stated that this campus was made dry by order of the Board of Trustees, but this is incorrect.

Previous to the '59-'60 academic year, the campus was "wet". According to past minutes of the Board of Trustees, President Jean Paul Mather, on August 4, 1959, "informed the Trustees that he is going to urge the Faculty, under Article 12 of the Board of Trustees By-Laws which states, 'All important matters relating to the work of the University—its research, instruction, and the welfare and discipline of the students, may be considered by the Faculty as a body to consider the regulation that no alcoholic beverages may be consumed or stored on the campus or in any student housing off the campus.'" This regulation which President Mather intended to recommend is that regulation which we are now presently under.

Mather stated that he would make this recommendation because he felt "the relationship between an individual and a University community is a voluntary one." He said that a student applying for admission must meet his moral commitment to the University, since his presence here is a voluntary one.

On September 10, 1959, Mather presented his recommendation to a General Faculty meeting. The Faculty accepted his recommendation by a vote of 413 for, 33 against.

It still remains, however, under Article 12, quoted above, that the Faculty may have the decision of a wet or dry campus.

We, the committee, will organize with administrators, but the students in general must speak to instructors and get their opinions about the topic. The ultimate decision of whether or not this campus will be wet may still lie in the hands of the Faculty as a body.

— Ye Gads! —

To the Editor:

Most University regulations make at least a limited amount of sense. Granted, some of these should and will be changed, but a kernel of sense nevertheless prevails. Most of these rules also at least attempt to come to grips with reality.

But there remains one set of regulations—a system if you will—that evidently transcends the realm of mere common sense; or else ignores it. I refer, more specifically, to the current policy regarding dormitory counselling.

Since the avowed purpose of counselling is to guide the student, albeit in a rather nebulous fashion, towards a more realistic concept of what he ought and ought not to do and since the individual counselors possess no small amount of authority in regard to their fellow students, one might expect that the qualifications for such a responsibility would be comprehensive indeed. But, on closer examination, we are startled to find that far from being comprehensive these qualifications approach the level of non-existence. For example, a prospective counselor may be appointed solely on the recommendation of the housemother involved. Although this is not always the case, it happens far too often. Such a state of affairs is ridiculous.

Why should any student be given power over his peers? In the case of evaluation reports, why should a personality conflict cause an unfavorable report, as has reportedly been the case? Why are there no standard qualifications in writing for the job in the first place? Why, indeed, does the system as it is exist?

These are questions which deserve answers and until such answers are forthcoming and until a change is initiated you, the individual student, will suffer. Not the administration, but you.

A possible alternative to the existing situation might be as follows:

1) The institution of specific requirements, preferably sociological and/or psychological in nature, to insure that students will be helped, not hindered.

2) An evolution of the counselor to salaried employee. This would be an excellent excuse to further the education of interested and qualified graduate students. Certainly, the function is important enough to justify the expenditure.

3) The absolute abolition of the system as it now exists i.e., no undergraduate (with the possible exception of seniors) to have any control whatsoever over any other undergraduate. The job of counselling is administrative by its very nature.

As with many other of the reforms now being acted upon by the URC, none can be successful without your help. Talk is cheap; action is what we need. But it doesn't take another Berkeley to initiate change. Our administration is interested, but we've got to show them what we want and then be prepared to fight for it.

Think Again

To the Editor:

Mr. Michael E. Parker II's editorial in last Friday's Collegian entitled "Holy Fraternity" points out some very good aspects of fraternity life. To quote him, "A fraternity . . . is a home away from home, a place where one re-asserts his individuality and is more than a seven digit number scanned by a computer. Brotherhood . . . is the most important facet of fraternity life." Mr. Parker also mentioned other important aspects of fraternity life, such as brotherly tutoring, stick-togetherness, and more home-like dining conditions. Yes, these are all very wonderful aspects of fraternity life, I must agree. And so I must agree, Mr. Parker, that with all these unequalled advantages of fraternity life, fraternities certainly do not need liquor, now or ever, to remain an important, worthwhile segment of the campus. On the contrary, perhaps it is the dorm-rats, like me, that need the liquor to help drown our sorrows because we don't have everything that you have. So, pour us!

Oh, one more thing, Mr. Parker, last semester's averages had fraternities at 2.1 while overall university was 2.3. I wonder how high the university average might have been if we hadn't had the fraternities to bring it down. Always make sure your Holy information is Wholly correct.

Poor
Sam

To the Editor:

Perhaps my appreciation of poetry is poor, or I've a lousy sense of humor, but my only reaction to Sam Sparc's latest "attempt" was disgust.

If this clever young man (I mean that seriously, not facetiously) was attempting an accurate parody on a recent song and its writer, he might check Life magazine's coverage of the same individual, two weeks ago. In a brief article, verified information stated: Mr. Sadler's injury was inflicted by a Viet Cong booby trap; he was discharged from active Viet Nam service due to this injury; is still—or was at Life's printing, living with his wife; and his "off key" ballad has more support with the American soldiers in Viet Nam than would such a highly cynical, sensational report as Mr. Sparc's. I could care less about the song, but isn't a newspaper, particularly the Editorial Page, a place for the airing of FACTUAL grievances and the like? Isn't this too-cuteness of SS's going a bit overboard?

What I'm saying, simply, is hooray that somebody like Sam Sparc can be so clever—but why doesn't he put this cleverness to good use (the Academic Reform movement could use a push, satiric or otherwise, in his column) instead of so innately and ignorantly knocking something like "The Yellow Beret"? It was a sick display of great potential.

International Club

Variety Show Planned

by AARIF GHAYYUR

The UMass International Club is planning a big variety show to be held on Saturday, April 30, at 7:00 p.m. in Bartlett Aud.

This program will consist of dances, songs, instrumentals, international dress parades and other items of international interest. The show will be presented by members of the international clubs of the four college area, with UMass contributing the most. Both American and foreign students will take part.

"Variety is the spice of the show," was the reply of Alladin Hashim, Club president, when asked to describe the theme of the program. "It is not a professional show, it is a student effort," he continued, "and I hope residents of Amherst will enjoy it, because everyone is working hard to make it an excellent show."

Soesmono Kartono, a graduate student in engineering at UMass from Indonesia is the chairman of the sub-committee for the variety show and Bob Darling will work as the assistant chairman.

Highlighting the show will be songs, dances and other cultural items from such nations as the Philippines, Pakistan, Indonesia and several African nations.

Tickets are $ .75 and are available at the S.U. ticket office and from any member of the club. They will also be sold at the door. All are welcome to attend.

TALK ON MALAYSIA

Alladin Hashim, President of the club, will give a talk with color slides on his native country, Malaysia, at 6:30 tonight in the Governor's lounge at the club's regular coffee hour. All are invited.

TALK ON INDIA

At last Wednesday's coffee hour a senior Government major from UMass, Claudette Cacciabave, gave a talk with slides on India, a nation she visited during the 1964-65 academic year.

While giving her impressions of the largest democracy in the world, Claudette said that India is a land of variety and contrast with rich cultural heritage and a bright future.

LOIS COHEN, FEATURE EDITOR

Spring Brings Ice Cream Boom

by BARBARA PROKO

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of... ice cream, judging by the 725 extra gallons that students eat on campus during second semester.

Ice cream cones are carried to classes and Hatch sales soar when spring begins, even though the weather and the calendar seldom come to terms on the official date—this year, March 21.

According to Russell W. Colvin, manager of the Student Union food service, about 28% more ice cream and sherbet is served in the spring than in the fall by the Hatch and the catering service in the Union. The 7500 gallons that are used yearly are eaten plain, in sundaes and sodas, and in 29,000 ice cream cones.

The Hatch offers four standard flavors—vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, and coffee—one "special" which changes daily.

The nutritional value of ice cream depends upon its ingredients. A milk product, it contains the same constituents as whole milk, but in different amounts: ice cream's fat content is 300-400% that of milk, and it has 12-16% more protein.

How can a student benefit from eating ice cream? Generally, it is thought to be an excellent source of energy.

Eating ice cream might be good preparation for an "all-nighter." It is considered an excellent source of vitamin A, which is important in preventing night blindness; the same vitamin builds resistance to respiratory infections.

For those who feel listless or ready to collapse under the strain of exams and papers, ice cream offers vitamin B1 (thiamin). An anti-neurotic vitamin, it stimulates the appetite, helps maintain normal digestion, and reduces the chance of fatigue, moodiness, and apathy.

In addition, it is a fair source of vitamin K, an anti-sterility vitamin.

How long has ice cream been on the scene, bringing health and happiness to those who eat it?

Water ice, the "grandfather" of today's ice cream, was first made by southern Europeans over 500 years ago. It was probably discovered by accident. People in the 15th century B.I.C.T. (Before Ice Cube Trays) cooled their drinks in ice or snow mixed with saltwater; over-cooling drinks produced flavored ice.

The first printed record of "cream ice" appeared in "The Experienced English Housekeeper" in 1769.

Although ice cream was advertised by New York retailers in 1777 and George Washington mentioned "the purchase of a machine for making ice cream" in his records, Mrs. Alexander Hamilton and Dolly Madison share the credit for introducing the dairy product to the United States at presidential receptions.

Operating on a larger scale, the Dining Commons serves ten to twelve flavors ranging from the "basics" to peppermint and coconut. Ice cream and sherbet are served there three times a week, including week-ends.

It takes the Commons 22,500 gallons a year to feed the 5600 students who eat there regularly. Where does it all come from?

The Department of Dairy Industry in Flint Lab produces 1500 gallons for campus use. Commercial manufacturers bid for the off-campus contract twice a year; the Amherst Creamery presently supplies UMass with the remaining 28,500 gallons.

REFORM . . .

been told that this (the elimination of curfews) was the desire of the students in women's residence halls. It certainly has never been proposed to the office of the Dean of Women."

COMMENTING ON these remarks,

Robert Wilfong of the University Reform Committee said, "Assistant Dean Gonon has said in effect that if the women want curfews eliminated it will be done. The petition is a direct response to this statement. The administration cannot withstand unified student opposition. The petition is a basic test of the administration's power: to rule students arbitrarily. If we can win this, real student participation in policy making will have begun."

Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women, just recently returned from a trip, was not immediately available for comment.

SIX-COLLEGE MIXER

The date for the six-college mixer has been changed to Friday, May 6 at 8 p.m. It will be held in the Farley Club House (behind Machmer Hall). All are cordially invited.

Innovations Highlight Newport Festival

The Newport Folk Festival, one of the summer's annual musical events, will be held July 21 through July 24 in Newport, Rhode Island. In addition to the annual four days of evening concerts and daytime workshops, the Board of Directors of the Newport Foundation have designated Wednesday, July 20, as a pre-festival day, specially geared for children.

Oscar Brand will organize the children's day, and has already lined up performers such as Theo Bikel, Judy Collins, Bessie Jones, Jean Ritchie, and Buffy Sainte-Marie. A group of children from the city of Newport will perform singing games of the United States and Canada.

ANOTHER INNOVATION of the 1966 Folk Festival is the inclusion of traditional folk crafts, which will be shown at the daytime programs, and will make an important contribution to the children's day. The complete wool process, from the shearing of sheep to the finished wool tweed will be shown daily by skilled artisans. A mountain potter, wood carver, and basket weaver will work beside Seminole Indian patchwork makers, an Eskimo ivory carver and a Nova Scotia fisherman who will weave nets and make lobster traps.

In keeping with the aims of the Folk Foundation, traditional artists from the United States, Canada and the British Isles will be an integral part of the 1966 festival. Many of these artists have been located by the field work done by the Foundation during the past year.

Theo Bikel, Oscar Brand, Brownie McGee and Sonny Terry, Judy Collins, Bob Dylan, Jack Elliott, Mimi and Dick Farina, Flatt and Scruggs, Carolyn Hester, Bessie Jones, Clark Kessinger, Phil Ochs, the Pennywhistlers, Jean Ritchie, Grant Rogers, Buffy Sainte-Marie, Joseph Spence, and Howling Wolf are among the many performers appearing at the 1966 Folk Festival.

Reform Rebroadcast Thursday

WMUA will rebroadcast the University Reform speeches from Saturday's conference on social regulations tomorrow at 8 p.m. Speakers were Dr. Ronald Leifer, Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, Dr. David Leonard, Miss Ann Ferguson and Miss Betty Chambers. Moderator was Pete Hendrickson.

Curfews, drinking rules, dosiers and academic reform were the main topics of the afternoon discussions. The continuing debate will be discussed by a Collegian Editor and a member of the reform committee after the rebroadcast of the speeches.

Pre-Law Meeting Set for Tonight

Kenneth Suid, assistant Provost of the University, announced Friday in a statement to the Collegian, a meeting for undergraduates interested in law school.

The meeting, scheduled for tonight at 7:30 will be held in the Nantucket Room of the Student Union, will be highlighted by a session on law school tests.

Suid hopes that the meeting will be able in part to clear up several prevalent misconceptions regarding requirements of law schools both in and out of Massachusetts.

Although many students have been discouraged in taking pre-law courses because of excessively high tuition rates at law schools, the number of applications for law school doubled this year over last year.

And of this number, 50 per cent will be going to out-of-state law schools in the fall. High prices have led some students to comment that they would find a University law school most attractive.

Suid will be explaining pre-law advising for next year at tonight's meeting, and has urged all interested undergraduates — freshmen, sophomores, and juniors — to attend:

Through a new program, you can be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant after taking two years of Army ROTC training while you complete your studies for a college degree. You can qualify for this program by attending a special six-week summer training camp after your sophomore year and then completing the ROTC Advanced Course in your junior and senior years of college.

Here's what ROTC training and an officer's commission will do for you:

- It will qualify you to fulfill your military obligation as an officer.
- You will learn to organize, motivate, and lead others.
- You will develop leadership qualities that many college men miss—self-discipline, physical stamina, poise, bearing, the acceptance of responsibility and other qualities that contribute to success in either a civilian or military career.
- You will receive $40 per month during your junior and senior years, plus pay and mileage for summer training.

The training and experience you will receive through Army ROTC will pay off for the rest of your life. A decision to take advantage of this new program could be one of the most important you will ever make.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this new important opportunity.

For complete information on the new Two-Year Army ROTC Program see the Professor of Military Science on campus.

Russ, Satch, K. C. Cited for Defense

Three Boston Celtic stars are rated among the eight top defensive players in pro basketball, according to a special poll of NBA top scorers and coaches appearing in the current issue of Sport magazine.

CENTER BILL RUSSELL, forward Tom Sanders and guard K. C. Jones were the Celtics named, and each was selected as the NBA's top defensive player at his position. The St. Louis Hawks' Len Wilkens joins Jones, in the pros' estimation, as a top defensive guard, and the Baltimore Bullets' Gus Johnson and the Los Angeles Lakers' Rudy LaRusso are the other outstanding defensive forwards. Wilt Chamberlain of the Philadelphia 76ers and Nate Thurmond of the San Francisco Warriors are rated right behind Russell as tough defensive centers.

ELGIN BAYLOR, Gus Johnson, and the Royals' Jerry Lucas and Jack Twyman, all top offensive forwards, rate Sanders the toughest man they must face. Coach Dolph Schayes of the 76ers agrees, calling Sanders "tenacious enough to keep you from getting the ball." Johnson's strongest asset on defense is his physical strength and Larusso's is his hustle and determination.

K. C. JONES' UNUSUAL combination of great speed and strength in a guard makes him the best, and Schayes characterizes his defense as the application of "relentless pressure." Wilkens, though not as strong or aggressive as Jones, is credited with having the quickest hands in the league and is best at stealing passes and dribbles.

Knickerbocker center Walt Bellamy says Russell is in a class by himself on defense, due to his lightning reflexes, and that Chamberlain is vastly underrated and even harder to bully under the boards than Russell. Thurmond's great defensive ability, according to the poll, is recognized by the players who call him the "next Bill Russell."

Bill Russell himself sums up his own view of defense with the statement, "Defense is nothing but hard work."

DICK PULSIFER

It's not often that an athlete earns a varsity letter for a sport in which he is a beginner. Dick Pulsifer did just that last year, and figures to be an outstanding member of this spring's UMass varsity lacrosse team.

Pulsifer, a senior midfielder from Quincy, Mass., proved his proficiency in the sport by scoring four goals in last Friday's win over Sienna. This was a far cry from last spring, when he tried out for the team as a junior with no previous experience in lacrosse. Dick's hustle immediately made an impression on coach Dick Garber, and he earned himself a spot on the squad. He became a subsequent success, and went on to score eight goals and earn a letter. He was seventh on the team in total points.

A good all-around player, Dick's main assets lie in his superior strength and speed. He possesses excellent moves, and it is not unusual to see him dodge pass opposing defensemen to try for a shot at the goal. The well-built midfielder is also aggressive, and his brand of play can be characterized as fairly rough. Pulsifer's hustle is exactly the type that a coach wants in a good midfielder. He is also a good defensive player in combination with his offensive talents.

Dick's performance Friday night confirmed hopes that he will strengthen the already strong Redmen midfield.

Pulsifer majors in physical education, and enjoys most other athletics.

Celtics Meet Philly In Crucial Battle Tonight

Reprinted from the Springfield Daily News

The Boston Celtics, surprised by their easy opening-game victory, are worried about the potentially explosive reaction of the Philadelphia 76ers when they resume their National Basketball Association Eastern playoff series tonight at Boston Garden.

CELTIC BACKCOURT veteran K. C. Jones admitted Monday that the eight-time playoff kings generally believed the 115-96 Boston victory at Philadelphia on Sunday would put the 76ers back into game condition.

"We wanted to celebrate the victory but we had to be worried because Philadelphia is still Philadelphia and (Wilt) Chamberlain is still Chamberlain. We expect a much tougher game Wednesday night," Jones said.

BOSTON CORNERMAN Don Nelson, a former member of the Los Angeles Lakers who has been outstanding as a Celtic substitute this season, said the club regards the coming game as the most crucial of the playoffs.

COACH RED AUERBACH had the squad hold a routine drill on Monday under the direction of captain Bill Russell. But Auerbach, who retires as dean of National Basketball Association coaches after the playoffs, took a day off himself to visit his family in Washington.

It was probably just as well because the Celtics experienced two disturbing incidents during the drill. Hot-shooting backcourt substitute Larry Siegfried showed up with a twisted left ankle suffered in Sunday's game. To complicate matters, Siegfried's car had been broken into during the night and his sneakers stolen.

AND THE PRACTICE session had no sooner gotten under way than cornerman Tom Sanders twisted his right ankle. Examination showed that neither injury was serious and both players were expected to be ready for regular service to-night.

Sox on TV

New England Red Sox fans will be able to watch 55 games on television in 1966, according to the schedule just released.

The new telecast schedule includes two doubleheaders, with Chicago from Comiskey Park on Monday, May 30, and with Baltimore at Fenway Park on Sunday, June 19.

All told, 34 Red Sox home games will be telecast, and 21 will be beamed to New England from every American League city except Anaheim, California, the new home of the California Angels. The first telecast will be next Tuesday, when the Red Sox open against Baltimore at Fenway Park.

Veteran announcer Ken Coleman will head the play-by-play team, succeeding Curt Gowdy, and he will be assisted by Ned Martin and Mel Parnell. The telecasts will originate through WHDH-TV in Boston, and will be available locally over Ch. 22.

Intramural bowling individual award winners: (l. to r.) Sears, high single 227; Elsdon, high single and high average 176; Misky, high three 614.

Metawampe Scrubbed Down--For Time Being

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

The University's two foremost wine bottle artists obliterated their most recent pop-art masterpiece yesterday at the request of University officials.

Al Boissy and Don McCarthy of Baker House scrubbed the Green paint from Metawampe's oxidized bronze body to placate certain deans.

"We celebrated St. Patrick's Day at 1 a.m. by dousing him with green paint from conveniently emptied wine bottles," McCarthy explained.

The erstwhile artists then fled to Holyoke to wash the paint from their clothes. Said McCarthy, "We were soured and the paint didn't wash out, anyway."

Unfortunately the ever-alert Holyoke Police were curious why someone would be washing green splattered clothes in the wee hours of the morning. Lane excuses did not prevail. The University's finest were then notified of the incident and the two Van Goghs were on the hook.

That same night St. Patty found his green way to Amherst College. McCarthy had no comment on the Amherst green paint incidents.

The 15 minute paint job took over three hours to undo yesterday. The men were aided by Nancy Baltakis and Nancy Sideman of Melville House during the scrubbing down festivities.

Maintenance will be reimbursed for the paint-removal materials, but that is the only price the artists must pay. The last cleaning project was done by APO-GSS during the Spring last year following a similar art project by undisclosed persons.

Student Senate Endorses, Strengthens Committee System

by FRAN BORONSKI, Senate Reporter

The Student Senate quickly dispensed with Old and New business and spent considerable time on a number of important Special Business motions at this week's Wednesday meeting.

A bill designed to strengthen the committee system by providing that each proposed bill be submitted to Executive Committee for initial action was passed, after being tabled last week. The bill, sponsored by Sen. John Greenquist (Thatcher) was an amendment to SGA By-Laws.

A ROLL CALL vote of the Senate defeated a proposal made by Senators Young ('68 At-Large) and Gaudet (Webster) to lower quorum requirement from two thirds to a majority. Debate on this bill centered around the basic function of representation. It was felt that by lowering the quorum, the representative image—the fact that every constituency on campus has a senator—would disappear.

Unanimously defeated was a bill presented by Senator Cripps (Mills) which would have allowed that all senators who have devoted at least one year of service receive a letter of gratitude.

Under Special Business, the Senate denied the proposal to give the Amherst Chamber of Commerce $250 to continue free bus service to Amherst on Friday and Saturday. It was felt that the merchants of Amherst assume responsibility for this service.

MORTAR BOARD was given $567.50 to aid in sponsoring a trip to the United Nations for the International Club on April 19. There will also be room for a number of non-members. $440.14 was given to Adelphia to aid in their sponsoring of High School Honors Day.

Senator Richard Harriman (Fraternities) introduced a motion to place a referendum question on the ballot of April 21. The Senate overwhelmingly approved the motion. The referendum will read: "Should the University remove those restrictions on the possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages not prescribed by Massachusetts Law?"

The referendum came as a result of recent controversy over the liquor situation at UMass.

The Senate was able to adjourn at 11:15 p.m., with all business completed.

Hampshire College Experiment Will Anticipate Student Demands

STUDENT EXPRESSIONS

about Hampshire College's future reveals frustration with present student life. Smith girls hope for less bureaucracy, fewer required courses, more creativity, no Saturday classes, and a better four-college cooperation.

At Amherst, where many feel there is a discrepancy between the excellent education and the mediocre architecture, students are keenly interested in the architectural planning. Some Amherst students, feeling stifled in the small college, country atmosphere, look forward to a "campus close by that will provide a new and exciting environment," as the Amherst Student put it editorially.

Editors at the University of Massachusetts Collegian, hampered by the usual college newspaper problem of staffing, look forward to a situation where a vigorous college press can be established with a strong organizational system from the outset.

Students from Smith and Amherst recently submitted their own proposals for Hampshire. They felt independent, divergent, and highly critical thinking should be fostered at education institutions. Their report emphasized an "intellectual community" throughout.

They suggested a highly flexible academic program: the content of many of the courses would grow out of a confrontation between students and pro-

Equating University Reform

The program of the University Reform Committee has shifted into high gear with a series of coffee hours and discussions aimed at acquainting students with the goals of the program.

Is the program working?

The circulating petition has been receiving 70% approval in each of the dorms it has been to.

At last night's senate meeting a recommendation was passed to eliminate women's evaluation sheets and a committee to study the question of drinking on campus was established.

INDEX Plans Expansion For '67 Yearbook

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

Though this year's Index is not yet completed, the planning for next year has already started under recently elected Editor-in-Chief, Alex Dean.

Dean announced today that this year's book will be distributed shortly before May 25 under a streamlined system. "No more ID punching, no more endless lines," he said. "Each head of residence will hand out Index Pass Cards to her residents which will entitle them to one book. You can even send your roommate down to get the book. Commuters will receive their cards at a separate desk and then zip on through."

The final proof sheets are now being checked for accuracy by the old editors under the supervision of former Editor-in-Chief, John Lawrence who said he is confident that the deadline will be met.

Dean said that he is happy with the budget of $57,900 for next year, an increase of $12,000. "It will allow us to expand in many areas and provide an even more comprehensive and exciting book," he said.

Areas of expansion now under consideration include:

- color page increase from 32 to 48 or 64
- total page increase from 448 to 480
- professional photo developing and printing to free photographers for more actual assignments
- addition of an organizations editor with a separate section so that the organizations will be covered more completely and efficiently
- attendance at more conferences and special journalism school this summer at the Uni-

Teen Challenge Promotes A Purpose for Living

by PAM METAKAS,
Staff Reporter

After a short introduction last Friday night, Samuel Poole introduced a movie called Teen Revolt with the comment, "I hope this movie shocks you — shocks you into praying." The movie concerned actual shots and interviews into the haunts of teen gangs, prostitutes, addicts and homosexuals. Photographed in Brooklyn, Teen Revolt served as a vivid description of the type of people Teen Challenge, an organization formed by Rev. David Wilkinson, helps.

POOLE pointed out that Teen Challenge, began in 1959, offers a positive cure to addicts and people tormented by their present life. The cure involves good food, friendship and religious inspiration. After an addict has been helped he is encouraged to go out every night to conduct rallies to recruit others for Teen Challenge. The motto is "Every addict—win an addict."

TEEN CHALLENGE centers have sprung up all over the nation including a one for girls in Rheinbeck, N.Y., where the wayward girls are given a new life through the power of the gospel.

Poole also said that these people have searched everywhere for a meaning to their life—through marijuana, pills, wild parties and mainlining and after it all they are "still as empty as before and there is still a vacuum that has not been filled."

EMPHASIZING that these people have "been through Hell on Earth," he introduced a person who would verify this incredible theory that religion can save those who could not be helped through doctors, psychiatrists and social workers. He was Oscar Muriel, native of Puerto Rico and one-time leader of the ViceRays, a notorious New York gang. "For my own self, I could not accept Christ and God," he said. He added, "At the age of 8 I joined the group in New York where I got in trouble in school."

Oscar admitted he and his gang had robbed, mugged and did anything else just for kicks. "My only God was a rifle and my attitude was 'I don't care.'" He added that he started smoking pot, sniffing glue, drinking and going to wild parties thinking that this was "the answer." He left home, went to clinics, doctors and social workers, but nobody could help him.

THEN he was introduced to Teen Challenge through a friend. He realized those in Teen Challenge "had a purpose for living—that thing I wanted." In church he asked for "peace, joy and all that was missing in my life." "I began to weep. Where there was no feeling before, there was something later."

He concluded by echoing the words of Poole and Rev. Wilkinson that the key word in Teen Challenge is desperation—people who are desperate with their lives and are searching for something better.

Conference Here Monday On Cleft Palate

THE DEPARTMENT OF Speech, University of Massachusetts, will hold an interdisciplinary conference on cleft palate on Monday, April 11, 1966, at the Student Union for public school speech and hearing therapists and public health nurses. The conference is co-sponsored by the Division of Special Education of the Massachusetts Department of Education and Services for Crippled Children of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

Mr. John F. Murphy, Supervisor, Speech and Hearing Handicapped Children, Division of Special Education, Massachusetts Department of Education will be the presiding chairman for the all-day conference.

THE MORNING SESSION will open with greetings by Ronald Reid, Head, Department of Speech, University of Massachusetts. Miss Ruth E. Curtis, A.C.S.W., Public Health Social Worker, will outline the Cleft Palate Program of Services for Crippled Children, Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

Speech and hearing problems of children with cleft palate will be discussed by Dr. Inez E. Hegarty, Director, Speech and Hearing Center, University of Massachusetts and Miss Catherine Hanifan, Assistant Professor of Speech, University of Massachusetts.

Dr. Joseph M. Baker, plastic surgeon, consultant, Plastic Clinic, Services for Crippled Children, Massachusetts Department of Public Health, will conclude the morning session with a lecture on medical and surgical aspects of cleft palate.

IN THE AFTERNOON SESSION, the interdisciplinary approach to cleft palate will be continued in presentations by three consultants to Services for Crippled Children: Dr. Bernard Gotlib, otolaryngologist; Dr. Vincent P. Marran, Jr., orthodontist; and Dr. Alex Fox, prosthodontist and dental surgeon.

Graduate students in Speech will assist as hostesses, including Miss Barbara Lee, U.S. Office of Education Fellow; Miss Pamela Batson and Miss Phoebe Russell, Vocational Rehabilitation Administration Fellows; Miss Virginia Kochanowski, Miss Linda Lane, and Miss Marie Raymond.

Senate Kills Change of UM Trustees

Without a peep of debate, the Senate Thursday rejected a House-approved bill to alter the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees.

THE PROPOSAL called for cutting the membership of 23 to 19 to make the board somewhat less unwieldy. It would have removed from the board the commissioners of agriculture, education, public health, mental health, and the governor. It would require that one of the 18 appointees be "engaged in agricultural production." The 19th member would be the UM president.

The bill would have given Gov. Volpe one new appointee to the board, but would remove the governor from it. The measure is a recommendation of the Willis-Harrington education commission which felt politics and conflict of interest should be removed as far as possible from the Board of Trustees.

SENATE PRESIDENT Maurice A. Donahue, D-Holyoke, after the Senate action, said he opposed the change in the board. The four state commissioners were among the 12 who voted to place the state medical school

Peace Corps Training Courses Announced

MAY 20 is the deadline to enroll in 11 Peace Corps training courses for college juniors to be held this summer at U.S. universities, the Peace Corps announced in Washington, D.C.

Peace Corps officials advised that students enroll immediately because of the time required to process the applications. "The sooner the better," they said.

The courses — 10 starting in June and the other in July—are designed to enable future Volunteers to integrate Peace Corps training with their senior year of college. Each course runs 10 weeks.

JUNIORS QUALIFIED to enter the Advance Training Program will be prepared for assignments in 14 countries. The assignments cover community and agricultural development, secondary education and teaching English in French-speaking West Africa.

In their final year of college, the trainees' courses of study may be tailored to fit their Peace Corps training. The ATP enrollees will complete their training in special field programs the summer of 1967.

A Peace Corps loan fund for ATP enrollees helps cover the loss of income trainees might have otherwise earned from summer employment. Trainees may borrow up to $600 at low interest rates to pay expenses during their final year in school.

ATP WAS BEGUN in 1964 as a solution to the increasing difficulty in preparing Volunteers for certain assignments. Some Volunteers, for example, must learn two languages to handle their work effectively. ATP gives the Peace Corps 15 months to prepare the Volunteer instead of the normal three.

Further information may be obtained from the Peace Corps liaison office on campus or by writing Room 722, Division of Public Affairs, Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. 20525.

Student Group Formed To Propose Solutions

A GROUP OF STUDENTS and instructors who met recently in the attic of the student center at Wayne University, Detroit, had little in common except that they had complaints about the University and they wanted change.

Out of the meeting came a new organization—the Students' Organization for University Reform—set up to promote student involvement in University affairs and issues. The group was formed to do more than criticize, reports the Daily Collegian; it also plans to propose workable solutions to University problems.

A spokesman for the group said that this will be done "by working within the system and using all available resources and prerogative powers available to the student as an autonomous self-determining individual."

IN A POLICY STATEMENT, the group said:

"It is our concern that student freedom and the educational experience are being infringed upon by the lock-step, patchwork of the quarter that quarter system, grading system, freedom of demonstration, inavailability of instructors, sports, library hours, and additional courses.

is the present university education factory.

"This organization shall be a channel for collating specific mechanical problems, e.g., inadequate classrooms, salaries, housing, parking, and to link these with the larger underlying issues common to all involved in the educational experience, e.g., the quality of education, the learning process, students rights, and academic freedom.

"TO FACILITATE OUR ENDS we shall institute groups (a) to process specific grievances of any and all factions, student and faculty, left and right; (b) to study viable alternatives to the present system...; (c) to be concerned with the mechanics of various channels open to us within the system and without and (d) to enlist the support of the whole University."

Some of the issues discussed at the meeting but not mentioned in the statement are the

Do College Women Exist In Their Own Little Dream World?

COLLEGE WOMEN live in a dream world, says the Daily Texan, University of Texas. For four years they are equal to men. They compete with them for grades, for honors, for recognition. They can even become student body presidents or newspaper editors.

The Daily Texan said in an editorial:

Quota Halved For June Draft Call

Reprinted from
The Springfield Union

The Defense Department slashed the draft rate by more than half Wednesday and requested induction of 15,000 men into the Army during June.

THE JUNE QUOTA compared with a draft call of 34,600 men for May and 21,700 for April.

"The decrease in the June draft call is primarily due to the fact that voluntary enlistments normally increase in June at the end of the school year," the department said.

VOLUNTARY enlistments in the Army have been running at a post-Korea high since the start of the year.

Latest figures show that the armed forces had 2,935,562 men in uniform on March 1. They are building toward a strength of 3,093,000.

THE DRAFT REACHED A high of 40,200 in December and had been expected to average about 30,000 a month until the Viet Nam War buildup was completed.

The lower June figure may mean that a draft of college students can be avoided.

SELECTIVE SERVICE OFFICIALS, although conducting tests preliminary to such a draft, have said it may be unnecessary to call up college students if monthly quotas are well below 30,000 between now and September.

Attention, Staff

Our day editors have complained that they are lonely. They are looking for staffers interested in learning the ropes on a person to person basis. If you really want to be where it's at come in on the publishing night of your choice, latch on to a day editor and fill that lonely gap in your life. You too can be a campus leader.

Many women graduate expecting to find careers in which they can use their educations, where they can be "fulfilled." "Me? A mere housewife? Never!" they say disdainfully. Most will find that while their understanding of Elliot and Toynbee and Kierkegaard may make life infinitely richer, it may not make them materially as well off as a few courses in shorthand and typing.

A LUCKY FEW will snare positions in which they can make good use of their education and intelligence. We are warned, however, that careers may not be as attractive in the flesh as they seem in one's imagination. Of course, many men, too, are subject to post-graduate disappointment.

Still, more men are successful than women. Some persons still insist that women simply are not as intellectually agile as men. That's why there have been no female Tolstoy's or Beethovens or Nietzsches, they argue. There haven't been any Negro Beethovens either, but that doesn't mean there won't be.

Women and Negroes are both second class human beings in this society. According to a recent magazine article by satirist Jules Feiffer, Negroes are "star victims" while: "Women's position is far less dramatic and, consequently, less conscience-demanding (than the Negro's). Lost in the shadow of our greater prejudices, she drags along, her problem not taken seriously by either herself or anyone else, her identity a mess because she has neither a rock of acceptance nor rejection to anchor it. Woman is a second class victim. And what is her problem? We all know it is man."

ACCORDING TO FEIFFER, men created women simply to become "deliciously conscience of themselves." They really don't like women at all. Whether or not women are liked by men, most of them will choose or be forced into a role basically of satisfying a male counterpart. There seems to be a basic motivation for women to look up to men, for men look up to men, and no one to want it any differently.

A renegade female can choose a career, but she will be branded a misfit by most of society. Or a woman can choose to juggle both a career and marriage, but here probably will be a second class career. When hubby is transferred, she will quit her job and administer the moving. When the children are ill, she will take a leave of absence to mother them back to health.

WE SEE NO WAY for the female to evade her own particular kind of necessity. One writer in Look magazine's special January issue on "The American Woman" suggests that she find her "way back to true womanhood" so that "the American man will recover his pride and his manhood."

On the other hand, we were told during childhood that if one can touch her left elbow with her left hand, she will change sexes. Now let's see...

fessors, one expressing what they want to study and how, and the other describing what they want to teach. The curriculum would have no specific requirements.

Instead of grades, the official records of the student would consist of assessments made by the student, the course instructor, and the student's adviser. The faculty would be actively involved in most phases of student life, including the admission process.

TO SUSTAIN interacting communities, the students suggested the campus be divided into five villages of about 200 students living in houses. "Each residence would be administered by the students themselves," the proposal suggests. "Students would be responsible for social regulations and dormitory upkeep. Students who wished could live in co-ed dormitories."

The report suggests that each village also contain a central building which would house seminar rooms, living rooms, studio and shop facilities, and a dining room.

THE REACTIONS to the student proposals ranged from the "interesting, we'll consider it" registered by Longworth to Heston's "unrealistic."

Heston said he doubts the faculty would have time to undertake all the student proposal suggests. Although he said he found it "encouraging" that students would study a college plan and develop proposals, he said they should have talked with the people who managed the funds.

HESTON SAID the village plan would be as expensive as a resort and much more expensive than the original New College plan.

"It is most unfortunate that the original news release about Hampshire implied the cost of a college could be substantially reduced without lowering the quality of education," Heston said. "No one knows yet what the cost will be."

He points out that about one-third of the education costs at Smith comes from endowments and other gifts "and Hampshire has neither."

THE EXPECTED $3,000 tuition for Hampshire (approximately the same as the three private colleges) is supposed to indicate a reduction in overall costs of education. The tuition would cover everything, and Hampshire would not have to subsidize the education of its students. Mt. Holyoke, for instance adds one million dollars a year to students' fees to cover education costs; Smith College spends approximately $1400 extra per student.

Mr. Heston does not believe that the few suggestions mentioned in the New Plan for decreasing costs will be effective. Like the Hampshire proposal, Smith has an efficient campus, no intercollegiate athletics, and no sororities, but it still is burdened with very high costs.

MT. HOLYOKE'S President Gettell, in considering the Hampshire plans, said "It is an entrancing notion, but it's going to take awhile."

That is precisely the concern of the college's supporters, whether the ideals will ever be translated into realities.

by JACK DEAN, Day Editor

Most college students believe that they control their own destiny; yet, as the University Reform Committee has illustrated, such is not entirely the case. While the women may complain about their curfews, it seems that the men have much more to worry about concerning the draft. The University may control the women for four years, but local draft boards have the power to permanently influence the future of every college male.

Strangely enough, most students eligible for the draft haven't the slightest notion of how they might possibly take part in directing the course of their future. Hopefully, the following information will clear up the confusion caused by the increased call-ups due to the war in Viet Nam:

Q. Why should I take the Selective Service College Qualification Test?

A. It is to your advantage to take the test because if you make the required score (more than 90% taking it do) it will serve as a continuing criterion for deferment even though your grades might slip for a semester or two. On the other hand, should you not make the test score, good grades can serve as deferment criteria.

Q. I am a graduate student. Must I take the test?

A. If you are successfully pursuing full time courses you do not need to take the test.

Q. How will my draft board use the test score?

A. Your test score will not be the deciding factor in the eyes of your draft board. It is only used as a criterion along with your class rank:

YEAR	RANK	AND/OR SCORE
Freshmen	Upper 1/2 of Male Members of Class	70
Sophomores	Upper 2/3 of Male Members of Class	70
Juniors	Upper 3/4 of Male Members of Class	70
Seniors (Accepted for Graduate work)	Upper 1/4 of Class	80

Q. I am a senior who has been accepted at Grad. school. Must I take the test?

A. Again, it is up to the individual, but it can't hurt to take it (see question above.)

What now should be understood is that the test will neither cause you to be drafted if you flunk, nor exempt you from the draft if you pass. You may inform your draft board which of the criteria you want them to use—your test score or class rank. In other words, while it may not help you to take the test, it certainly can't hurt.

Letters To The Editor

Whose Side?

To the Editor:

"The governing generals in Saigon are too corrupt and too inept to stay in power." These words of the Mayor of Danang, South Vietnam, Nguyen Van Man (N.Y. Times, April 5), aptly characterize the type of men the United States Government seems to be backing to the hilt. How can we claim commitment to a regime which is illegally instituted, obviously despised by the majority of the people, and headed largely by such corrupted bar-room, brothel dwellers as Premier Nguyen Cao Ky?

On April 4, some 5000 students, teachers, and other townspeople of Hue (55 miles north of Danang) marched to the U. S. consulate to present a message addressed to President Johnson. According to the N. Y. Times, April 5, they were blaming "the United States' policy of interference with the domestic affairs" of Vietcong as "the cause of all the crisis in South Vietnam." And they also stated that the educators of Vietnam had decided "not to recognize any de facto government, either military or civilian, that is influenced by the United States to implement a policy that goes against the aspirations of the Vietnamese people."

Think about these words for a moment. What are their implications? To answer this question bluntly, the implications are shocking. For those words are in direct opposition to the very core of U. S. Governmental assertions that we are aiding a popular regime by invitation. By invitation, mind you, which presupposes the legality of the Saigon government!! They are precisely the antithesis of our government's claims! They say, in effect, that we are propping up an illegitimate, corrupt, and highly unpopular military regime. This is certainly astounding!

For now it implies that the U.S. is not necessarily in favor of a popular and democratic government, but any government that waves the banner of anti-Communism, and therefore gives American intervention its justification, its raison d'être.

Old hat you say. Surely, but that does not make it less true. What is happening to our nation when it gives any support desired to any government claiming to be anti-Communist? No doubt Chiang-Kai-Shek is a staunch anti-Communist. Trujillo was. Diem was. Ky is. Or so they all said, for money. Are we Americans about to say: Well, we have got to sacrifice something in order to prevent the spread of Communism? Does saying the magic word "anti-Communist" make it morally and legally right for us to impose our own choice of leadership and ideology upon a people?

Our recent actions in Vietnam to back-up the Ky regime have clearly demonstrated what role the United States Government is playing there. We are playing a part that can be termed nothing less than reactionary, and we are keeping alive a corrupt and unpopular gang of criminals! Everyone knows this.

Last April we helped snuff out popular demonstrations in the Dominican Republic (have we so quickly forgotten?) Only yesterday, April 5, we transported pro-government troops (in American uniforms, with American weapons and machines) to Danang to put a stop to popular demonstrations against the Ky regime. Little difference as to whose soldiers they actually were. These are not the actions of a democratic, fair-minded, free and humanitarian nation—they are the ugly deeds of a reactionary power. They happened in Guatemala in 1954. They happened in Cuba, in 1961; Santo Domingo, 1965, and now Danang, 1966 (to mention only a very few!)

What is happening to us—to our government and to the people—when we walk out on freedom and justice in the name of anti-Communism? Doesn't it seem strange and disgusting that American soldiers are dying in order that a corrupt regime may maintain its privileges and influence? And that Vietnamese soldiers and civilians are killed while their leaders fill their own coffers with American dollars?

How can we sit idly by, apathetic to whatever our foreign policy makers lead us? Isn't it about time we said, ENOUGH! No, not isolationism, but certainly not the role of reactionary, not a supporter of dictators!

Stockbridge: Part 3

— INTEGRATE! —

by BOB GORMAN

As was previously pointed out, Stockbridge courses cannot become the same as those of the University. However, there seems no reason why Stockbridge students cannot have one elective with the rest of the University. The present elective system is very limited. In some majors the students are offered electives only in the areas of Business English or English Composition; or General Math or Algebra. The remaining majors have a very limited choice of one course out of about eight. There is no doubt that a choice of at least one elective would greatly enhance a student's education.

There are, however, courses which are required for all of the University including Stockbridge. But even in these courses, taught identically throughout the University, the Stockbridge students are segregated from the rest of the student body. Though there is often a conflict of scheduling, Stockbridge students should be given the right to go to integrated classes with the rest of the University whenever this is possible.

The question is sometimes raised as to what difference integration will make. Perhaps the best answer to this question is provided by two faculty members who have been associated with both student bodies. One professor asked to teach Stockbridge students because she had heard that they were "highly motivated and interested in getting the most out of college." Another instructor stated that Stockbridge students "are equal to University students." Both professors are always very interested in talking to Stockbridge students. Also, both bluntly concurred that Stockbridge and the rest of the University have so much to offer each other, that it is wasteful to keep them separated.

However, if the present policy of academic isolation is followed, the students will be denied the opportunity to hear a different point of view. This policy only allows for Stockbridge students to room with the rest of the University students. Many Stockbridge students favor complete integration because "we (Stockbridge students) can learn much from the University." And the reverse is also true. Therefore, integration should not just refer to housing, but to the entire University scope, including social and academic affairs.

Poor Planning?

To the Editor:

There is not one student on campus that isn't asking himself: "Why was the Spring Vacation so poorly scheduled?" This week would have been an ideal time for Spring Vacation. The Jewish students would have been home for the Passover Holidays and the Christian students would have been home for Easter. As it stands now, students who desire to be home for these holidays must cut classes in order to do so.

With these two important holidays coming so close together, within one week; one would think that the university would use more foresight in planning Spring Vacation. Perhaps next year Spring Vacation will be planned with a more careful look at the calendar.

REFORM COMMITTEE

"A Den of Activists"

by ERIC WISH

The University Reform Committee, continuing its series of informal coffee hours, stimulated student thought and action through debate on topics such as curfews, dossiers, academic requirements and the dormitory counselling system.

Applause and hissing punctuated the discussion on University Reform held in the main lounge of Emily Dickinson House Wednesday night.

Dick Wood and Bob Rotstein, founding members of the committee, made opening statements emphasizing the potential effectiveness of responsible demands by a united student body on the actions of the administration.

Speaking on the role of student government, Wood emphasized that "No matter how effective the system of student government looks on paper, it means nothing without a basis of strength in student interest." He also suggested a change in the role of class officers: "Up until now the class officers have been little more than social chairmen. It's time that the student body started demanding more from their student officials."

During the discussion, Bob Meo noted that the actions of the Students and Administration are directly responsible to the taxpayers, who support the University. The students disagreed, saying that they consider themselves taxpayers equal to and perhaps more valuable to the state than other non-college workers.

Betsey Mills won vocal approval from those present when she remarked, "Boys' jobs are probably three times as important as girls', and boys don't need dossiers to be used for job references anymore."

Barbara Zukroff said that as a counselor she must prepare the dossiers but also that this did not constitute approval of the system.

Students in general seemed to be dissatisfied with the counselling system and expressed a desire for a representative system similar to that in use in the Orchard mens' dormitories.

At the completion of the meeting the "No Curfew" petition was circulated among those present. Reports are that it is receiving wide acceptance.

Dick Wood termed the meeting an overwhelming success. He described the atmosphere as a "den of activists." Further plans of the Reform Committee were not available.

Senator Speaks on Meeting

by JIM FOUDEY, Managing Editor

According to Tim Cunningham, student senator and active member of the reform committee, the programs are designed to "acquaint students with the goals of the movement and to stir their active interest."

"The discussions have been going very well," Cunningham continued and he pointed out that the petition has been receiving better than 70% approval in the dormitories.

"The reason we are stressing women's dorms now," he explained, "is because the Women's Affairs Committee will be going around to the dorms April 12-14 seeking the ideas of students... we want them to know all the issues before then."

Cunningham expects the Student Senate to make a statement on curfews, one way or the other, very shortly.

The Senate has already approved money for the coffee hours, passed a recommendation to eliminate women's evaluation sheets and has established a committee to study drinking on campus.

Cunningham said that the reform committee is pleased with the results of its drive so far but warned that "for complete success every student is going to have to participate."

Mass. Aggie Crew Team

The Great Race

The year was 1871. The day was July 21. And the crew team of Massachusetts Agricultural College entered the first regatta of the National College Rowing Association against Harvard and Brown.

Ninety-five years later, the University Rowing Association is attempting to bring back some of what made this school in 1871 a part of the crew tradition in America. Today's team has, except for one shell and one set of oars, all donated equipment. The team does not have varsity recognition; in fact, it doesn't even have a boat-house.

Yet what was visible in that illustrious former team can be seen growing at UMass once more in the pride and spirit of the University's unofficial 23-man crew team.

The following account, from the New York Tribune, is the story of what was never lost but just forgotten, and of what may yet come to be.

"At 7:04 (p.m.) o'clock, 'Are you ready?' is answer affirmatively. The crews receive the word, and while Amherst (UMass) seems to catch water first, both Harvard and Brown strike together, and away they go to decide the question of superiority.

"The Amherst men...display remarkable skill and speed at 47 strokes per minute, and almost before the start is fully realized they dash ahead of both rivals foot by foot, slowly but surely... In three or four minutes from the start the race is plainly visible from the heights at Ingleside and when the crews are directly opposite, with Amherst still leading...excitement runs high, and the scene beggars description.

"Amherst men who had collected here in large numbers were well-nigh frantic and could not restrain their outbursts of enthusiasm. Wide maroon bands, striped with white, adorned their hats, which were tossed high in air, and they sent up such shouts as victorious soldiers in a forlorn hope do when the odds have been fearfully against them....

"The spectators on Chicopee bridge have a splendid view of the race on the home stretch.

When the boats are first seen, everybody is anxious to know which has the lead.

"'Is not Amherst ahead?' somebody queries... 'By jingo! It is Amherst, as sure as you're born!' yells the short, bright-eyed, auburn-haired commodore of the Amherst rowing club, as he begins to recognize the six men whom he selected for the contest.

"...and jumping up and down in the sand, perfectly wild, he yells to Leonard, 'Sock it to her, Georgie! Sock it to her, Georgie!'

"But Georgie does not need the encouragement, for he and his crew score 42 strokes per minute, and seem as fresh as Dexter is at the end of a half-mile.

"And so, while the eager multitude all stare in one direction, from bridge, bank and beach; while the college men indicate their university by the joy or sorrow depicted on their faces, and just as the sun is setting, the great university race of 1871 is ended.

"In reviewing the race the Republican said: 'It has been quite the fashion since the race to say that the winning crew won by mere strength.

that it was a triumph of brute force over science. Granted that Harvard College has a monopoly of the 'science' of rowing; perhaps this is true, for the Amherst crew did not pull exactly like that from Cambridge.

But the agricultural college boys clearly had science enough for all practical purposes, and we advise students of the noble art of rowing to take lessons on the Connecticut rather than on the Charles in the future."

CREW TEAM

Who Is The UM R

The University Rowing Association rowed against Amherst College in the fall of '65, and they lost to the Amherst boat by only four feet. Amherst coach Hank Dunbar said at that time of the UMass boat, "They look real good. There's a lot of potential for a good season."

On the last Saturday of Spring Vacation, with some new men and some of the older oarsmen gone, the team found themselves on the Charles River, rowing against a polished Harvard Freshman crew.

And once again they were almost, but not quite as good as their competition. But anyone would admit that the competition was of a somewhat different quality.

The team covered Harvard's three-quarter mile course ten times that Saturday. And with the day's soreness and exhaustion came the experience of rowing against a trim and polished team from a school where winning crews are the rule.

But who are these twenty-three UMass oarsmen? Where did they come from? Where are they going?

"Hopefully," says Coach Dave Clarke, "they are the beginning of a varsity crew. Last fall I would have had more than a little doubt about their chances. But the eagerness and the dedication is even stronger now than what I saw then. And I think it's only a question of time."

The Rowing Association's history is rather unusual. For they began as a club without a shell to row in or an oar to row with, three years ago.

A year after their founding they had eight oars and a 45 year old shell with a gaping hole in the bottom, donated by Yale.

The oars had been purchased with money donated by the Student Senate and the team was able to get out on the water once during the whole year.

This year, thanks to what the oarsmen consider "fantastically lucky breaks," they have three shells, four sets of oars, and a coach who is an experienced oarsman.

Organization began in early fall of first semester. A meeting was announced on posters put up in the Student Union and the dining commons.

Along with Bob Ford, Barry Beswick, and some of the other original founders, about eighty interested people showed up, one of whom was Dave Clarke.

... A tradition returns to UMass

Rowing Association?

"I knew I'd be coming to UMass and come here for the first time in the spring of '64. At that time I looked up Hank Dunbar, the Amherst coach, because I wanted to work with the Amherst frosh."

"Hank was interested and I did work with the freshman team for quite a while. Then one day I saw a sign announcing a crew meeting in Boyden. At the meeting I saw Hank, who was doing some work with the boys and giving them what help and advice he could."

"After the meeting I spoke with Bob Ford because it seemed like they needed help and were eager to do great things."

"That's how we got started. We practiced six days a week for a while, working out of a tobacco barn in Sunderland where the shell and oars were stored."

"A core of about thirty interested people came out of the first meeting and for the most part all of them have stayed. And all along we have picked up other interested people."

"As more people came to know about us we got more and more donations. The Naval Academy donated a set of German oars, oarlocks, and seats, last fall. Harvard also gave us a set of oars and Amherst donated some old rowing machines."

When they came off the water in November, the team used the machines for rowing indoors all winter. The oarsmen also ran a drive for Green Stamps and collected enough to purchase four sets of weights to complement their training program.

During the winter Harvard gave the UMass team a good 38-year-old shell to supplement the one they had from Yale. On March 4 the team went back on the water with both boats.

The whole team stayed on campus during spring vacation and rowed twice each day. They alternated rowing with running and Coach Clarke is more than pleased with the progress they've made in "dropping the beer bellies and picking up some chest and shoulder."

"That Saturday we spent at Harvard was invaluable for the team," Clarke said. "Although some of the boys were disheartened by Harvard's crew, they learned a lot about what they should be doing and weren't."

"I think they're a lot more eager to work and a lot closer team because of the experience."

And is the coach jubilant? "I wouldn't call it jubilation," says Clarke. "But I do have a lot of pride in what the boys have done together and a heck-of-a-lot of faith in what they will do this spring."

"When you consider that in September we had a handful of members and only ten dollars, you have to be amazed with the distance we've covered."

"We've had donations of $3,400 in cash and $7,000 worth of equipment. More importantly we have twenty-three men with muscle and the spirit behind it to win crew meets."

With Lady Luck for a tailwind they can rewrite the name of UMass in the annals of crew history.

Coach Clark Demands Team's All

"O. K. Weigh enough! Coxy, turn 'em around and take 'em back. Stroke them at a 32 and when you get under the bridge take it up four."

The lingo is crew talk and the voice is that of Dave Clarke, an oarsman himself and the Coach of the UMass crew team.

Clarke came to UMass from Boston where he had worked as an insurance salesman. While taking studies here he learned of the infant rowing association and wound up a week later coaching the team.

While working in Boston Dave competed for the Union Boat Club of Boston, one of the oldest rowing clubs in America.

His ability took him twice to the American National races held by the New York Athletic Club at Orchard Beach Lagoon. There he rowed in the 2,000 meters and quarter mile singles events.

To his ability as an oarsman can be added the ability to build a 65-foot shell from scratch, for he was head rigger for Union as well as a member of their team.

Dave even ties in his ability as a salesman for the team. He sold crew to the classes of '66, '67, '68, and '69 and got in return donations totaling $2,500.

The Student Senate bought Dave's fund-raising speech for $370.

And by talking to coaches he knows Dave has contributions of equipment from the ample stocks of Harvard and Amherst Colleges.

The team's reaction to Coach Clarke is in their outspoken respect and quiet admiration that typifies an oarsman.

"His dedication and leadership have transformed the club into a team," says one oarsman.

"He never lets us down." "If he thinks you can give a tenth more, he asks for two tenths."

"When he's in the launch yelling at you to put out, you know why he's yelling and you have to try harder for him." "He's one of the best."

"Somehow we keep rowing even after we know we can't."

These are typical remarks from the team Dave has welded. And yet if you ask him he gives all the credit to the oarsmen. So why argue? It's obvious that they all have the spirit in common. Team and coach work well together, for one another. And the total effort is thus multiplied many times.

What's Happening

Marlboro Music at UMass

Four distinguished artists from the renowned Marlboro Music Festival, directed by Rudolf Serkin each summer in Vermont, will appear at UMass on April 25, in the S.U. Ballroom. "The Music From Marlboro" group will present a program of varied and unusual chamber music works selected from the summer Marlboro concerts, in this extension of the Festival's activities to the regular concert season.

The program will include Soprano Songs and the "Clarinet Trio in E Flat" by Mozart, "Shepherd on the Rock" and "Sonata in A Minor for Violin and Piano" by Schubert, and Bartok's "Contrasts for Piano, Violin, and Clarinet."

Four celebrated artists will participate in this performance.

Try April 23

In the article entitled "Variety Show Planned" on page six of Wednesday's Collegian the date of the UMass International Club variety show was given as April 30 at 7:00 p.m. in Bartlett Aud.

This was a proofreader's error and we wish to make it clear that the show will not be given on that date but on April 23 at 8:00 p.m. in Bartlett Aud.

The program will consist of dances, songs, instrumentals, international dress parades and other items of international interest.

"There are still many position left on the INDEX staff. All those interested please contact Bob Gaudet, 414 Webster.

Lederles Comment on Trip Abroad

Beautiful, clean, prosperous, rich in history; these were the sentiments of President and Mrs. Lederle during their two week stay in Europe.

They were members of a charter group of teachers and alumni of Amherst College which visits different European countries each spring. Since Lederle has an honorary degree from Amherst College, he and his wife were able to take advantage of this year's trip to Spain and Portugal. Their first night was spent in Cordoba on the southern coast of Spain.

Mrs. Lederle noted that "the air was filled with the perfume of flowers and oranges."

They proceeded north to Madrid where they stayed for four days. Madrid is a "modern and lovely city with wide boulevards."

They visited the campus of the Madrid which is presently undergoing a "tremendous amount of building and expansion." Here they met a professor who will be teaching at UMass next year.

In Segovia, north of Madrid, President and Mrs. Lederle saw background for production.

Finishing touches are all that remain to be completed before the production next Thursday at 8:00, Friday at 6:30 and 8:00 and Saturday at 8:00.

Admission is free, but everyone who wishes to attend must have a ticket which may be obtained at the Student Union Monday thru Wednesday next week.

a Roman aqueduct that was built without mortar and is still in use today. They also saw a large monument in the shape of a cross that was dedicated to the Spanish Civil War dead.

OF ALL THE CITIES they visited Mrs. Lederle felt that Granada was by far the loveliest. She described it as resembling "a scene from Arabian Nights."

The weather of Granada was similar to our month of May and throughout the city flourished "fabulous gardens."

Mrs. Lederle found the city of Ronda to be "rugged and beautiful, set high in the mountains." It was founded by the Romans and consisted of a cliff separated into two parts with a Roman bridge still in use connecting "resembled Shangrai-la in the Lost Horizon."

In Portugal they visited the city of Lisbon. Granada and Ronda place where Henry the Navigator set up his famous schools.

Lisbon was a "lovely, clean city" according to Mrs. Lederle. She felt that America could learn a lesson from European cities which are much cleaner than ours.

To Mrs. Lederle the trip was a wonderful and memorable experience somewhat "like something out of a fairy tale."

Turkish Boy Seeks Pen Pal

(Editor's note: This letter was received by a UMass professor from a boy who wants pen pals for the sake of learning to write English. Anyone who is interested can write to him at this address:

Dear Sir:

I always wanted to correspond with a foreign country boy or girl. (Especially from America) But I don't know any address. The subject about women in your letter, I didn't receive a letter. If she wishes to correspond with me she must write a letter or must send her address to me. Then I'll write to her. It is not absolutely necessary a girl friend to correspond, all my purpose is to learn English, so my corresponding friends can be girls or boys.

From an other relation, I wish to put an advertisement in an American newspaper. Then I may have many corresponding friends. If you help at this matter, I'll be very much obliged to you. I don't know how much money for this matter will I pay? Please write me. I'll try to send after getting your letter. Very much thanks for your help from now.

Reid Named Head of Speech Department

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees has named Dr. Ronald F. Reid a full professor and head of the speech department, it was announced today by Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences.

PROF. ARTHUR E. NIEDECK, head of the department since it was created in 1955, has relinquished the post to return to full-time teaching and study.

A native of Herington, Kansas, Dr. Reid received a B.A. degree from George Pepperdine College and an M.A. from the University of New Mexico.

He received his Ph.D. from Purdue University in 1954 and became an instructor in English and speech the same year at Washington University in St. Louis.

DR. REID was named an assistant professor at Purdue in 1959 and was promoted to associate professor there in 1961, a post he held until his UMass appointment.

While at Washington University he served as chairman of the member of a similar committee in Indiana while at Purdue.

Dr. Reid's field of study is the Missouri Secondary Speech Curriculum Committee. He was a history of rhetoric, particularly 19th century rhetoric, and he has published 15 articles in this field. He is the editor of "Introduction to the Field of Speech," published in 1965.

He is a member of the editorial boards of the publications Speech Monographs and the Journal of the American Forensic Association.

The UMass speech department now has 24 faculty members and 115 undergraduate students majoring in speech. Its special programs include the University of Massachusetts Theatre, the Speech and Hearing Center and the intercollegiate debate program. The department offers a master of Fine Arts degree in theatre and an M.A. in speech pathology and audiology. Twenty-one students are presently enrolled in these graduate programs.

As head of the department, Dr. Reid said, he hopes to expand the graduate program in all areas. A particular effort will be made to increase the course offerings and to promote research in the historical and theoretical aspects of the field of speech.

Pacifists Heckled on Boston March

Reprinted from
The Springfield Union
About 175 pacifists, heckled with cries of "coward" and "maggot," marched on Boston Common Wednesday in protest against alleged inadequate police protection for peace demonstrators. Police broke up one scuffle.

Some 150 policemen including several on horseback and motorcycles guarded two bands of pacifists who paraded from two different starting points to the Common where about 1000 persons gathered to watch them.

A third group which included members of the Civil Liberties Union called on Mayor John F. Collins at City Hall to formally complain about the alleged lack of policemen March 21 when 11 pacifists were beaten by a crowd of high school students on the steps of South Boston District Courthouse.

Two pacifists were hit by thrown eggs when 75 of them set out from the courthouse. Crowds of spectators shouted insults and one heckler followed them with a dead chicken on the end of a stick.

At Arlington St. church, the other starting point, self-styled "Polish Freedom Fighter" Joseph Mlot-Mroz was punched by two persons. Police intervened.

Mayor Collins met for more than an hour with Dr. Myron W. Fowell, chairman of the Massachusetts Congregational Conference; Prof. Paul Deats, Jr. of the Massachusetts Council of Churches; and Howard S. Whetstone and Luther MacNair, president and secretary of the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union.

UMass Students See United Nations in Action

Residents of Hamlin House under the direction of Head of Residence Mrs. Mulford Rich sponsored a trip to New York, on April 2. The itinerary included a visit to the United Nations, dinner at a New York restaurant, and a Broadway play. The group of about forty University of Massachusetts students from fourteen dormitories toured the United Nations. The Economic and Social Council of the U.N. was in session, providing an excellent opportunity for the students to see the United Nations in action.

Trustees Name Dixon Head Of M.E. Department

Dr. John R. Dixon, a specialist in thermodynamics now teaching at Swarthmore College, has been named head of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Massachusetts, it was announced today by Dr. E.E. Lindsey, acting dean of the School of Engineering.

DR. DIXON'S appointment by the UMass Board of Trustees as a full professor and department head is effective in September of this year.

The former head of the mechanical engineering department, Prof. William H. Weaver, retired last year.

Dr. Dixon received a B.S. degree in general engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1952 and an M.S. in mechanical engineering from MIT a year later. He received his Ph.D. degree in mechanical engineering from Carnegie Institute of Technology.

He began his teaching career as an assistant at MIT and was named an instructor in 1953. He worked from 1955 to 1958 in industry, first as an engineer with Jarl Extrusions, Inc., of Rochester, N.Y., and then as a project engineer with Joseph Kaye and Co. of Cambridge.

He was on the Carnegie Tech faculty from 1958 to 1961, first as an instructor and then as an assistant professor. He was an associate professor of mechanical engineering at Purdue University from 1961 to 1964, when he took the post he now holds, associate professor of engineering at Swarthmore.

DR. DIXON'S publications within the last five years have included two books, articles in Nature Magazine, Science Magazine, the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientist, and the American Scientist, plus a variety of papers and articles in technical journals.

One book, A Programmed Introduction to Probability, appeared in 1964 and a second, Design Engineering: Inventive-ness, Analysis and Decision-Making, is now in press at McGraw-Hill.

His articles and papers have covered a wide range, including thermodynamics, engineering education, and sap movements and transpiration in plants.

He was awarded a Purdue Research Foundation Grant in 1962 to study biology and an American Society for Engineering Education Programmed Learning Project grant for writing in 1965. Dr. Dixon taught advanced mechanical design at IBM in Endicott, N.Y. during the summer of 1963.

He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Sigma Xi, the International Society for General Semantics, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Association of University Professors and the American Society for Engineering Education. A member of the ASEE's executive committee of the educational methods division, he is chairman of that group's committee on teacher management.

Public Invited To View Slides

On Monday, April 11, at 6:30 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union, the Outing Club will show slides taken by Larry McGee on his trip to Antarctica last fall.

MR. MCGEE WENT to Antarctica as part of a three-man research team and his talk will include information on living and working on the Cold Continent as well as scenes of the passage there.

The public is invited.

SSS Sentences Satirist

court decided in compliance with a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision.

The decision was pioneered by prosecutor "Granny" Pureblood of the Dean of Women's Office who had to show only that defendant Jones pandered to human lust, a bounteous commodity on the UMass campus, she claimed. Jones had been sentenced to obscurity after certain issues of last year's magazine met with official disfavor. He was released on good behavior but violated his parole with the current issue.

At Jones' trial in the Star Chamber Room of the S.U., the prosecution pointed out that he had promised his readers sexual titillation from reading his publication. In fact, they said, he even tried to make the mailing of the magazine a dirty joke.

Denied permits to mail from the Men's Room and Women's Room of the S.U., he secured permission to use the adjacent Middlesex Room. Visiting Justice William J. Brennan, Jr., noted, "The trial court found the obvious, that these rooms were chosen only for the value their names would have in furthering the petitioner's efforts to sell their publications on the basis of salacious appeal.

He continued: "The lead story of the magazine was designed to lead our investigators off the track. It was well-written and cleverly satirical, though it did cast aspersions on the potency of national defense. Unfortunately, we cannot prosecute on these grounds; it simply was not dirty," the justice sighed.

The justice gleefully rubbed his hands in discussing the article entitled, "A Day in the Life of an Amateur Pimp."

"We almost had them on this one," he gloated. "Unfortunately some of the justices thought that the material was not utterly without redeeming social importance, the old obscenity test. I argued that Glosband was trying to titillate lustful students under the guise of a sociological report."

The candid description of Glos-

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

band's efforts to lure his fellow students into the arms of a "hooker", the court decided, "was not enough to declare the magazine obscene." The court was not able to show that his business transactions were, in fact, a devious promotional plan for the magazine. "We may get him still for soliciting on campus without clearance from the Dean's Office," a University official reported.

Balefully dismissing a protest from the Newman Center which had choked over the robed magician on page 7, the justices consulted the Federal Trade Commission to see if the magazine had cleared the CAUTION labels through that agency. A decision is expected pending an FIC hearing.

The court pinned the main body of its case on the Queen photos found on the first page and center pages of the magazine. "That first photo was obviously a lure into the middle of the magazine," they said. "And Jones promoted the whole display by allowing Jacobs to develop the photos in the Collegian darkroom."

"The deliberate representation of petitioner's publications as erotically arousing, for example, stimulated the reader to accept them as prurient; he looks for titillation, not for saving intellectual content. Yahoo was created, represented and sold solely as a claimed instrument of sexual stimulation it would bring."

Court photographers found the horizontal photo of Miss Pierce "a technically poor photograph." The other two photos on that page were said to be of much higher quality—"delightfully appealing without offending" was the term used. The center spread was beguiling but poorly reproduced.

"The TV Gas was the last straw," Justice Brennan, Jr., reported. "The entire spoof lead to the CBS Sex Special on the last program page. It is patently offensive to the entire female population of the University." The guide was designed to direct the viewing habits of the undergraduate population, but the administration and faculty registered a complaint, saying that increased TV viewing would decrease study hours. Editor Jones said that the authorities were merely unable to solve the crossword puzzle and took out their frustrations on the magazine.

The Student Senate Supreme Court, in its frontal attack on the growing army of campus smut merchants, handed down a decision today that gives campus authorities a more powerful weapon in the battle against obscenity.

The SSS Court voted 5 to 4 to uphold the conviction of UMass editor wit Roger Jones after careful study of the most recent issue of Yahoo, the campus humor magazine. Publications can be found obscene if the seller makes "a business of pandering to the widespread weakness for titillation by pornography," the

Jarret and Avakian: Experience at Midfield

by TOM FITZGERALD

In lacrosse, the attackmen and defensemen are confined to their respective halves of the field. The duty of carrying the ball from zone to zone rests, for the most part, on the shoulders of the midfielders. The middle has to know how to handle the hickory. But above all, the job takes stamina.

Two of the more accomplished men at the position for UMass are Dave Jarret and Chuck Avakian, both of whom are three-year veterans of the lacrosse wars and both of whom rate high praise from Coach Dick Garber.

The midfielder, with his constant running, may be more prone to leg injury than his more stationary mates. Both

He spent two years at a machine design school in Connecticut and then went to Lowell Tech. After only a semester there ("I didn't like it"), Dave came to UMass in January of 1963.

The 6', 170 lb. athlete is majoring in Personnel Management and is a member of the Management Club. He hangs his hat and parks his 1964 GTO at Alpha Sigma Phi.

Dave is engaged and will be married this summer to Miss Kathy Burke, a West Hartford, Conn., schoolteacher.

A born leader, he is the captain of this year's team, and, according to Garber, "has had a great deal to do with the improved morale of the team." His leadership qualities appear elsewhere. Last semester, he served as president of Alpha Sig, and during summers he works as a foreman at a manufacturing plant in Westfield.

As captain, he is heading the drive among the players to increase the support of the student body for the team. "The major reason I'd like to see lacrosse promoted at the University," Jarret remarks, "is to give the students a chance to understand the sport more thoroughly. It's a great spectator sport."

"The greatest thrill I see is the personal benefits a person gets out of playing, what it does for him physically and mentally."

Known as the "Deacon" by his teammates, senior Avakian is a hard worker. Garber says that "Charlie has always been one of our best conditioned midfielders. He is a good example of a self-made player."

The coach quips that the 6 foot-175 pounder is "considered by his teammates to be a prime example of sartorial elegance" and that Chuck "is tutoring Dick Kent in the left-handed pick-up for right-handed players." But Garber notes that Avakian "has developed an excellent outside shot. We're looking for some goals from him this year."

Charlie hails from Whitinsville, Mass., where he went to Northbridge High, competing in football and track. He did not

DAVE JARRET

Jarret and Avakian are currently sidelined, the former with a small bone chip in his right ankle, which will sideline him for two to three weeks, and the latter with a pulled hamstring muscle.

"Without a doubt, our best all-around midfielder," Coach Garber says of Jarret, citing his speed and ability to stickhandle, score, and play defense. "He will probably be our candidate for the North-South game."

Jarret, to use a common one, has been around. He was a 1960 graduate of Westfield High, where he didn't play any sports.

CHARLIE AVAKIAN

play lacrosse as a freshman but did take the sport in gym. In his sophomore year, he took the advice of former Redman star Steve Harrington and tried out.

The brother of Lambda Chi Alpha scored two goals in his first year and five goals with one assist in his second. Among the players he rates as the best he has played with are Harrington, Frank Infusino, and Dick Brown. He says that the best team he has opposed was last year's Army "A" team.

Avakian, who is a Management major, plans to go into the army for three years after graduation.

Sore-armed Southpaws Sour Sox Swaps

by MIKE GOULD, Sports Editor

Never give a sucker an even break.

People have made fortunes using this motto since the beginning of time. The philosophy has finally fallen into the corrupt minds of Major League top brass. The culprits: Atlanta and Philadelphia. The suckers: Boston's Red Sox.

THINGS were looking up for Red Sox fans when sly Mike Higgins traded away lackadaisical Dick Stuart for ex-Phillie Dennis Bennett before the start of the 1965 season. The colorful Bennett seemed to be just what the doctor ordered for the Hub club. The Sox had been searching throughout Back Bay for several years for a good left-handed hurler. Since the days of Mel Parnell (he presently babbles over the 'Gansett microphone), the best that the Boston scouts could offer were the likes of Tom Borland, Dean Stone, Ted Wills, Ted Bowsfield, Frank Baumann, Leo Kiley, Arnold Early and the Belmont flash, Wilbur Wood. Even the green monster in Fenway Park's left field could not serve as an adequate excuse for these jokers, for they took equal poundings on the road.

So into Beantown strolled the much publicized Bennett, on whom depended much of the Sox chances to move up in the standings. On to Philly stalked Stuart, alias Dr. Strangelove, whose presence in a Red Sox uniform decreased the team's chances to move up in the standings. It was a blessing to be rid of the big mouth and iron glove of Stuart, whose carefree attitude and fielding inability hurt the club more than his big bat helped.

DENNIS BENNETT had a sore arm when the Sox acquired him. He was of little help as the team finished ninth last season, and will probably spend the summer in Toronto, the home of the Sox triple-A farm club.

Not that the loss of stonefiners hurt the team anywhere but at the gate, but Your Lordship Mr. Yawkey and his beloved Higgins certainly could have exercised their persuasive powers and come up with some reasonable substitute for Stuart, who, for a reason beyond imagination, is somewhat esteemed among those who "know" in the majors.

A sore-armed pitcher is about as effective as a singer with laryngitis. The Red Sox all but gave away Dick Stuart.

The Phillies simply pulled the proverbial wool over the eyes of the strong-willed but unknown Red Sox. You may ask, didn't the Boston scouts get a look at Bennett before the trade? Couldn't they detect something being wrong with the southpaw's arm? Perhaps the scouts who were sent out to Pa. to watch Bennett hurl had a wee bit too much of that famous Philly brew.

But everybody has the right to be wrong at least once. Anyone can make one faux pas, but when newly acquired Bob Sadowski recently left the field during an exhibition game complaining of agonizing pain in his pitching arm, even the most dedicated and forgiving Red Sox fan could not help but feel a sharp pain in the midsection.

YOU WILL REMEMBER that Boston traded Lee Thomas, a consistent hitter and good fielder, and mediocre Arnold Early to Atlanta for Sadowski and Dan Osinski, a reliever in the twilight of an unimpressive career.

If Buddy Leroux's magic fails to improve Sadowski's ailing limb in time, the Sox will have virtually thrown away two first basemen in the space of about a year. What gives with this organization?

The Sox recently traded Chuck Schilling and Russ Nixon to the Minnesota Twins. The return package was lefty Dick Stigman. One can't help but consider the possibility that the Twins are hiding something from the Boston brass.

Stewart, Babyak Elected Redmen Court Co-Captains

Sports Information Release
Jim Babyak of Easthampton and Frank Stewart of Lynnfield have been elected Co-Captains of the University of Massachusetts varsity basketball team for the 1966-67 season by a vote of the Redmen letterwinners.

NEW REDMEN Head Coach Jack Leaman voiced his approval over the selection. "Babyak and Stewart have been two of the hardest working players we've had here since their freshman days. Their conscientiousness and willingness to be team players have developed them into outstanding competitors. They should be fine leaders next winter."

Babyak, a 6'3" junior, has lettered twice. As a sophomore, he saw limited action, but this winter emerged into a consistent scorer and a ball-hawk on defense. He ranked second on the team with 424 points and a 17.7 average. Jim became a deadly outside shooter and hit a .473 percentage. He won the Samuel L. Samuels foul-shooting trophy with a .796 percentage. Eight times he made over 20 points in a game and was the second leading scorer (to teammate Clarence Hill) in the Virginia Tech tournament. Jim was chosen second team All Yankee Conference and received All New England mention.

STEWART, a 6'4" junior, has also lettered twice. He started several games as a sophomore and won the George H. Richards Cup as the most improved Redman. This winter he was the "unsung" hero of the young Massachusetts team. Frank ranked fourth in scoring with 187 points and a 7.8 average and shot at a .448 percentage. He ranked second in rebounds with 155 and assists with 74, and was strong defensively.

Stewart and Babyak are both Engineering majors and members of Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity. Their feats are not limited to the basketball court as they form the keystone combination on the varsity baseball team. Last Spring Babyak became one of New England's best shortstops and turned in a .344 average. Stewart was the starting second baseman but suffered a broken jaw in the third game.

Massachusetts new head basketball coach Jack Leaman congratulates the Co-captains of the 1966-67 squad, Frank Stewart (left) of Lynnfield and Jim Babyak of Easthampton.

65 to Report for Spring Football

The University of Massachusetts will begin fifteen days of spring football practice this Thursday with approximately 65 candidates expected to report to Head Coach Vic Fusia.

Fourteen lettermen from last year's team will be missing when Fusia calls the first drill including All Conference performers, ends, Milt Morin and Bob Meers, linebacker Bernie Dallas, and fullbacks Phil Vandorsea and Dave Kelley. During their college careers this quintet played in only four losing causes while winning twenty-eight games.

"THESE COULD BE the most important spring practice drills in my five years at Massachusetts," Fusia explains, "if we are able to accomplish some of the major objectives that confront us."

He indicated he plans to single out the best thirty-three football players on the squad and then assign them to positions where their abilities may be exploited the most. Finding a back up quarterback for Greg Landry is high on the priority list and the kicking game is a cause for concern since last year's punter man squad can improve its 1965 mark of 5.4. Last season's contingent owned victories over Amherst, Rhode Island, Worcester Academy, Leicester Junior College, and AIC, and bowed to Springfield, UConn, and Mount Hermon. This year's ledger lists Amherst, Rhode, Worcester, AIC, Springfield, and UConn as repeat contestants. Mount Hermon has both players.

The Little Redmen usher in the 1966 season a week from Wednesday at 3 as they play host to Amherst on the varsity diamond.

and placement specialists have graduated.

Twenty lettermen, led by co-captains Rod Brooks and Ed Toner, will form the nucleus of the 1966 contingent and Fusia is hoping to get a little more backfield speed from several sophomore candidates.

"WE MUST ACCOMPLISH a lot this spring if we are to be ready for the opening two games this fall. The 1965 Lambert Cup and Lambert Trophy winners, Maine and Dartmouth, lift the curtain on a schedule that is the most challenging I have had at Massachusetts."

The Redmen spring drills will conclude with the annual intrasquad game on May 7 that follows the coaching staff's annual football clinic.

IM Report

A record turnout of entries highlighted this year's extremely successful swimming tournament. KS took the overall team honors with 34 points. SPE was next with 29 points and was followed by the Hill South HiLo's (23 points).

The following are individual winners, their winning times and the runners-up:

- 50-yard freestyle—O'Neil, SPE (26.5), Dempsey (Hawks)
- 100-yard freestyle—Sullivan, HiLo's (1:01.1), Melanson (SPE)
- 50-yard butterfly—Beck, Buf-faloes (29.5), Calsie (KS)
- 50-yard backstroke—Williams, BKP (32.4), Rojewski (Flaming A's)
- 50-yard breaststroke—Calsie, KS (30.7), Toamila (Aces)
- 200-yard medley—Aces (2:14.2), KS
- 200-yard freestyle—SPE (1:51.2), Hill South HiLo's

Pitching and Infield Strong for Promising Frosh Baseball Squad

by TIM MURPHY

Speed, spirit, and skill, prime factors in the formula for a winning team, epitomize the freshman baseball scene this spring. Veteran mentor Dick Bergquist, assisted by former pro baseballer, Arlan Barber, looks forward to a successful campaign and comments, "Our infield appears to be especially fast and strong, and on the basis of three weeks' workout, I am enthusiastic, certainly, about our prospects for the season."

PITCHING, AS THE LOS ANGELES DODGERS can affirm, is the meat of a baseball team and the frosh mound corps shapes up as an effective unit. Expected to be the dominating twosome of Bergquist's chucksers is Norm Elliot of Waltham and Rich Rappoli of Somerville.

Rappoli, the lithe proprietor of a rifle arm, was a mainstay on the staff of last year's state schoolboy champion, Somerville High, and will probably be the workhorse of the team.

VIEING FOR THE OTHER STARTER SLOTS are Al Holcomb, who hails from East Falmouth, Larry Pearlman of Revere, Ed Tichenor, a puckster during the winter of Stockbridge, and Warren Barrett of Belchertown.

Turning to the highly praised infield, three fine prospects are locking horns in battle over the starting third-base berth. Al Craig of Oxford, Clark Henebry of Clinton, and John Mitsakos of Dudley "are all good, and may be either platooned or moved to other positions if necessary," says Coach Bergquist.

Shortstop seems to be nailed down by Somerville sensation Joe DiSarcina, familiar to winter sport fans as the hoopsters' backcourt ace. The quick-handed DiSarcina comes to UMass sporting very impressive high school credentials. While sparking Somerville to the state crown in 1965 he was selected to participate in the Hearst Newspaper All-star classic at Yankee Stadium, in which he was runner-up in the MVP balloting.

BERGQUIST, HAPPY TO HAVE LANDED so promising a prospect, remarks that "Joey has all the equipment to be a topnotch college ballplayer."

The other half of the keystone combo is up for grabs, with five second sackers in the competition. Mike Panchuck, one of only two out-of-staters on the squad, hails from Paramus, N. J., while Jim Spinelli comes from Springfield.

Others seeking the second base berth are Craig Wilgus of Wellesley, Bruce Crampton of Monson, and Barrett, who may play there when he is not pitching.

FIRST BASE also offers a spate of talent in Mike Murphy of Holbrook, Brian Sandy of Rancut, and basketballer Lonnie Lehrer of Haworth, N.J. All have exhibited their skill around the bag and any of the three is able to handle the chore with finesse.

Bergquist's coterie of catchers has been hard-hit by injuries during pre-season workouts in the Cage. Milford's Tony Chinappi, who also handles himself well in the outfield or at first base, sustained a knee injury and by doctor's orders will not strap on the gear this season. His big bat demands attention and he probably will be used frequently in the outfield. The disabled list doesn't end here, however, as backstop Ed Lagov of Huntington will be lost for three weeks with a broken index finger on his right hand.

HARRY LEWIS, A DUDLEY NATIVE, and Frank Bozek of Adams will take up the slack but further injuries to the catching contingent could prove disastrous to the yearling baseballers.

The outfield boasts speedster Larry Snook, who patrolled the pastures last year for Burlington, Al Seibert of Framingham, both of whom "do a good job," according to Bergquist, and Rappoli, whose heavy hitting merits a berth in the outfield when he is not on the mound.

Snakebeaters Face BLC In Scrimmage

The UMass lacrosse team will play a pair of unofficial contests before resuming regular action Wednesday afternoon at Wesleyan. The Redmen will host the Boston Lacrosse Club tonight at 7 on the intramural field and Williams Saturday afternoon.

Last Wednesday, the team scrimmaged R.P.I. and showed the aftereffects of an extremely busy weekend, bowing 11-5. Howie Goffman scored two goals, while Bob Murphy, Dick Pulsifer, and Gary Paleari each had singletons for UMass.

that a facility problem has restricted all workouts to the Cage thus far, but the optimistic coach expects to run his charges through timed runnings outside tomorrow. Soon to be completed is a practice diamond to be utilized by the freshman team in the vicinity of the new Alumni Stadium. UMass workers are presently clearing a few acres of a Hadley resident's land at a feverish pace to facilitate the field's use.

Until he can evaluate the players outdoors, Bergquist reserves a final line-up decision. The U-Mass frosh has the horses, but it remains to be seen if the 23-

UMass Employees Union Plans Seminar

by LOIS LEMIRE, Staff Reporter

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS Employees Union, Local 1776 AFSCME, Amherst, Mass., AFL-CIO, which was organized in May, 1963, will conduct an all day seminar beginning at 8:00 a.m., on Thursday, April 14, 1966, in Farley Lodge, concerning the new state Employees collective bargaining law.

President of the Local 1776, Paul Korpita, announced that International Union Organizer, Fred Mensch and State Council Representative, John J. Keefe will explain the new statute to employees of the University.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE has granted public employees the same rights that workers in private industry have enjoyed by law since 1935.

The statute allows state workers to bargain for wages, hours, fringe benefits and other conditions of employment. Administrative employees will not be able to participate in the employee organizations.

Recently, Council 41, AFL-CIO, of Boston sponsored a single-salary schedule bill asking for a 10% salary raise, which has been approved by the Massachusetts Legislature.

The last raise on campus was in 1963. The bill is now awaiting Governor Volpe's signature. If approved, it will be law by July 1, 1966.

THE AMHERST LOCAL 1776 has initiated a concerted drive to organize the necessary majority to get a union contract with the University Administration.

All state employees are welcomed to join the twelve hour seminar and to stop by Farley Lodge for coffee and donuts.

A meeting of the local union representatives from other state colleges and universities will be held on April 21, 1966 from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. in Farley Lodge.

Those schools being represented will include Bridgewater State College, Boston State College, Salem State College, Lowell State College, Lowell Technological Institute, Framingham State College, Massachusetts Bay Community College, Worcester State College, Fitchburg State College, and Westfield State College.

THE AGENDA for this conference will be as follows:

10:00 a.m. President Lederle—Address
10:15 a.m. Mr. Gerald Grady, University of Mass. Business Manager—Address and questions
11:00 a.m. Harvey L. Friedman, Asst. Director of Mass. Labor Institute and Research Center—State Employee Collective Bargaining Law

1:00 Lunch
2:30-4:00 p.m. Business Meeting—discussion of employee problems
4:00-10:00 p.m. Open house to all employees—coffee and donuts will be served

UMass Fire Draws Three Trucks

At 11:50 p.m., Thursday night the UMass Fire Dept. and the Amherst Fire Dept., responded to a one alarm fire at the administration building now under construction.

The fire was limited to a shed at the rear of the building. The shed was completely gutted. Two saws and other tools were ruined, and lumber in the area was burned.

Before the Fire Dept. arrived several Stockbridge students from Middlesex and Berkshire dorms were removing lumber and throwing dirt on the fire.

Dave Gringquist, who helped despite his leg being in a cast, Herb Dorherty and several other students kept the lumber adjacent to the shed from burning.

The UMass Fire Dept. was the first of four trucks to respond to the alarm. Both the janitor from a near by building and the faculty resident of Middlesex House called in the fire.

The shed was engulfed with flames as the Fire Dept. arrived. Fire officials were not sure of the cause of the fire, but they said that it could have been set. However, a smoldering pile of rubbish was lying about 200 feet from the shed.

The structure was owned by O'Connell and Son Contractors. Mr. Norm Matherson, the building superintendent for the company, did not know the amount of damage done.

A pile of concrete forms, valued at about $1,000, which were adjacent to the fire, were not damaged.

Howe Gives Viet Talk

by DON DULIO

A talk entitled "Vietnam" was given by Professor Irving Howe of Hunter College to an audience of about 200 last Thursday, April 7, at Amherst College.

In introducing himself, Professor Howe emphasized the fact that his point of view was intellectual, thereby disclaiming being classified an expert.

Howe opened his discussion with a short history of the events leading to French occupation of Vietnam following World War II.

He then described how the Viet Minh regime gained steady support from the peasants. This support, Howe explained, was in reaction to the Dai regime charging peasants a land rent which often amounted to fifty percent of their crop yield.

According to Howe the Viet Minh in 1945 was not solely Communist; but by 1954 the overwhelming majority of Vietnamese favored Communist Leadership.

Howe went on to say that with the removal of the French supported Bao Dai and the institution of the U.S. supported Diem regime there was a chance to establish a democratic government.

Diem's only efficiency, however, was in persecuting Communists. His land reform program was an outright failure with only ten percent of the peasant tenants receiving land which most of them had owned anyway before the program was initiated.

Diem also prohibited local elections, although the late President Kennedy had urged that governing positions be held on a local level.

Instead of improving the situation, Diem drove the Vietnamese closer to Communism and the U.S. prohibited any of the factions that might have brought order to the country to come to the fore.

Professor Howe concluded his talk with reasons for his objection to U.S. policy. He cited the internal social and political decay of the country and the failure of U.S. foreign policy experts to understand and accede to the political movements on the Asian mainland.

Commenting on the present administration situation Howe said, "There are only cliques, searching over Vietnam like vultures over a bleeding body. We cannot win now as we have wasted whatever opportunities we had between 1954 and 1960. To speak now of winning would mean to kill everyone who comes in our way."

"It is not for us to decide if the Vietnamese are better dead than Red."

Although Howe views the choices open to the Vietnamese as a variety of disasters, he sees one possible alternative. This would take the form of agreement between the warring factions which would include free elections for public offices.

Elliot Speaking Tonight

George P. Elliott, poet, critic, essayist, short story writer and novelist will make two appearances at the University of Massachusetts next week through the courtesy of the UMass Fine Arts Council.

Monday, April 11, at 8:15 p.m. he will conduct an open critique of two student short stories; Tuesday, April 12, at 8:15 he will speak on "Nihilism in Contemporary Fiction."

Both programs are in the West Auditorium of the School of Business Administration — Room 120 — and are open to the public without charge.

"Among the Dangs," a book of short stories published in 1961, first focused national literary attention on Elliott. He has also written three novels, "Parktilden Village," "David Knudson," and "In the World," a narrative poem "Fever and Chills," and a book of essays titled "A Piece of Lettuce."

He has published essays, short (Continued on page 2)

Dean Curtis Abolishes Dossiers

Dean of Women Helen Curtis announced yesterday that women's evaluation sheets will be discontinued, effective immediately.

In the past, these evaluation sheets were submitted to the Office of the Dean of Women whenever a student withdrew or left a residence hall.

These dossiers recently have been brought to the attention of the entire University by the University Reform Committee, resulting in a recent wave of critical analysis by the student body, faculty, and administration. The variance of opinion had ranged from "a service to students" to "a violation of privacy."

North Carolina Press Wants End to Grades

The present stratified system of grading should be abolished, says the Technician, North Carolina State University.

The Technician said in an editorial:

INSTEAD OF THE 4-0, 3-0, 2-0, a system of pass or fail based on oral and written examinations at the end of the semester or year should be instituted.

The need for the eradication of the present system is shown quite clearly during exam time when students begin cramming, cribbing and crabbing with the hope of passing or making a higher grade. The grade therefore is used as negative reinforcement; if you don't work the grade will be low and if you fail, you might not be able to return to school.

Another factor is the Selective Service, which bases draft deferments partially on accumulative grade point averages.

IN ALL CASES, the reinforcement is negative. Students with 3.0 or better averages tend to wear them as shields whereas the 2.0 or lower student rationalizes his low grades. And there's no certainty that a graduate with a high average is better educated than a compatriot with lower marks.

If it is accepted that the primary objective of a university is to produce educated people rather than human tape recorders or super-specialists with vast knowledge in one field and very little in others, then a grading system becomes superfluous. When graduation time draws near, the determining factor in presenting a degree should be the total knowledge and understanding obtained by the student in his four or five years at the university. Doubtless to say, many of today's graduates would not pass such an examination, whether it was oral, written or a combination of the two.

Under such a system, a student would be judged against both what the faculty decides he should know and the knowledge of his peers. At the same time, a different approach to classroom instruction would be easily assimilated by the faculty as the constant need for numer-

DVP Holding O'Casey Play

Pictures in the Hallway, a play based on the life of Sean O'Casey, will be presented tonight at 8 in Bowker Auditorium.

The DVP-sponsored production was adapted to play form by Paul Shyre, from material in O'Casey's 6-volume autobiography.

The production features six professional actors and actresses, including Anne Revere of Toys in the Attic fame, and Helena Carroll, who has appeared in Broadway's Oliver and Pickwick.

WEEK IN REVIEW

THE NATION

PRESIDENT JOHNSON has announced he plans to approach Congress with Social Security Changes.

His plans would cover the following areas: Federal-financed dental care for children under 6, greater benefits for the aged, new insurance protections for widows and orphans and new devices to prod those on welfare to find jobs.

He said in a speech at San Antonio, Tex., he was anxious to increase benefits "across the board for 21-million beneficiaries—the aged, the disabled, widows and orphans—including an increase in the monthly minimum, the monthly maximum and total family benefits."

IN SAIGON SATURDAY, the churchmen of the Buddhist hierarchy announced in a communique that all future anti-government demonstrations would be led by the Buddhist monks under the flag of the "National Buddhist Struggle Force."

This war-like declaration came after Premier Nguyen Cao Ky changed commanders again in five Buddhist-dominated provinces. In South Vietnam more than 70% of the people claim to be Buddhists—politically as well as religiously.

In the meantime more than 595 Americans were evacuated from the explosive areas in the North and were ordered off the Saigon streets because of five consecutive nights of anti-U.S. rioting.

THE NEW COMMISSIONER of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, Dr. James L. Goddard, spoke last week on the $3.5 billion American drug industry to the annual meeting of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association.

His candid talk was viewed as a new phase in the history of Federal efforts to insure the public safety of the sale of drugs over the counter or through a doctor's prescription.

He told the Association, at one point, that some pharmaceutical firms have been doing shoddy jobs on the reviews of new drugs for the FDA.

He commented, "I have been shocked at the materials that come in to us. I have been shocked at the clear attempts to slip something by us."

"I am deeply disturbed at the constant, direct, personal pressure some industry representatives have placed upon our people."

IN A MEETING before a Congressional committee last week, leading executives of the four major automobile manufacturers, defended themselves against the attacks made against them for their contribution to the nation's large accident toll.

A spokesman for the four said, "As a result of long-term vehicle safety programs by the automobile companies today's U.S. built cars are the safest in our history, and the safest in the world."

AS A RESULT OF A 20-day period in March, New York crime statistics rose dramatically. The burglary and robbery rate nearly doubled, grand larceny rose one-half, felonious assaults increased 44.6% and automobile thefts were up more than 20%.

But New Police Commissioner Howard Leary pointed out this did not mean the incidence of crime was also rising.

He explained when he began his term, he ordered all his men to report all crimes, hiding nothing. Before this it seems the NYC police have been under-reporting crime in the city making the figures lower than they should have been.

THE STATE

BOSTON'S 33-DAY newspaper strike is over. Friday the papers published after a period of more than a month beginning on March 6.

The longest strike in Boston newspaper history ended when the International Typographical Union, representing the printers and mailers, agreed to a $16.30 weekly pay package with fringe benefits.

Gov. Volpe commented "I am pleased to learn the Boston newspapers will again return to our newsstands."

"The people of Greater Boston have missed the news coverage provided by them and eagerly look forward to their return."

THE CAMPUS

AFTER BEING painted a mint green, for St. Pat's Day, Metawampe was returned to his normal state last week by the two boys who created the masterpiece. At the request of University officials, Al Boissy and Don McCarthy spent three hours scrubbing the paint off the Indian statue.

THERE HAVE BEEN a series of University reform discussions and coffee hours aimed at acquainting UMass students with the aims of the Reform program.

Some of the topics discussed have been curfews, dossiers, academic requirements and the dormitory counselling system.

Several "No Curfew" petitions have been circulating this week and are apparently meeting with wide success.

Summer Workshop for Writers To Be Held in Nantucket

A three-week Summer Workshop Course in Technical Writing will be offered from July 24 to August 13 at the University facilities on Nantucket Island. Participants may earn three credits, graduate or undergraduate.

The course will require intensive writing and analysis of case studies in scientific, industrial and engineering reporting, scientific journalism, graphic procedures, and industrial advertising.

A broad spectrum of techniques for the communication of factual information will be explored.

All activities including lectures, laboratories, and evaluation sessions, will be conducted in residence at the former Peabody Estate.

A partial list of the staff includes: Woodbridge Brown, President of the radio and television agency "Radio Design"; Harold Buchbinder, publisher of ELECTROMECHANICAL DE-SIGN, FREQUENCY, and CIRCUITS magazines; Kenneth Tong, President of the Society of Technical Writers and Publishers and Eastern Editor for John Wiley and Sons; and John Mitchell, Communications Consultant and Associate Professor of Technical Writing at the University of Massachusetts and former Director of the Writers' Workshop at Tufts University.

Applicants from any disciplinary background are eligible, provided they qualify for upperclass or special graduate status at the University.

Fees including tuition, books, board, room and linen will be $150. Limited scholarship aid is available. Day students will be accepted at a reduced rate.

Deadline for applications is June 1, 1966. All inquiries should be addressed to:

UN Trip Is Taking Shape

Members of Mortar Board, Senior Women's Honor Society, and the Student Senate are sponsoring a trip to the United Nations building to be held on Tuesday, April 19 for both foreign and American students.

Two buses will be leaving the campus between 7-8 a.m. that morning in front of the Student Union. The itinerary will include a tour of the building and a luncheon in the special Delegates' Dining Room, with free time remaining in the afternoon for visits to the General Assembly.

Since the Student Senate has allocated funds for the buses, the only expenses incurred by students will be money spent on meals and tours.

All those interested in such a trip should sign up with Mary Hudzikiewicz in the R.S.O. Office before Friday, April 15 with a deposit of $3 to be used to cover the cost of the tour and lunch in the Delegates' Dining Room.

Curfews Are Out at Purdue

Purdue University sophomore, junior and senior women will no longer have any curfew restrictions after Friday, April 8.

The new rules eliminating hours for upperclassmen were approved early this year by the campus Associated Women Students and the dean of women's office. Freshmen hours remain in effect.

Each women's residence unit will establish its own procedures for effecting the new policy, subject to the approval of the dean's office.

Purdue's AWS took the initiative in seeking the elimination of hours. The subject first received serious consideration last year, but the university discovered that the strongest resistance to change came from the women themselves.

The women feared that without closing hours they would no longer be able to escape "extended dates with creeps," an AWS spokesman said. AWS held "fireside chats" in each dormitory, contending that without closing hours there would be no social pressures to stay out to any given hour—women could set their own hours. The women changed their minds.

AWS' subsequent resolution called for the elimination of all hours, but a compromise was reached with the dean of women's office which leaves freshman hours intact at 11 p.m. on weekdays and 1 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays.

ical grades would be eliminated and more time could be devoted to guiding educational progress.

Many schools and universities have already successfully adopted such a plan. It can and will work, and although its adoption will not create an educational or intellectual nirvana, it will aid the educational process.

Serendipity Singers Coming Here

The Serendipity Singers, sporting a world record, an upcoming tour of Russia, and two disturbingly beautiful girls, will perform at Curry Hicks Cage this Saturday night.

Sponsored by the University and Amherst College Chest Drives, the 7-man 1-girl concert will feature a program of folk, jazz, and satirical numbers, comedy sketches and blackouts. The Serendipities, who first won popularity at The Bitter End night club in New York, rose to the top of the national hit parades two years ago with "Don't Let the Rain Come Down." Their TV credits include The Jack Paar Show and Hootenanny.

They hold the world mark for the longest record album title in history: "The Serendipity Singers Sing of Love, Lies and Flying Festoons, Clams, Psychiatrists, Lilac Trees, Monkeys, Muddy Rivers, Elephants, Infidelity, Desertion, Draft Evasion, Plastic, Boa Constrictors, and Other Songs by Shel Silverstein." Silverstein is Playboy Magazine's cartoonist-satirist, whose compositions include "My Ever-Lovin' Machine" and "Stay Way from a Yellow-Haired Woman" (Hooray for a Bald-headed Woman).

Next July the Serendipities begin a ten-week State Department-sponsored tour of the Soviet Union. Following in the footsteps of such American institutions as Louis Armstrong, Benny Goodman, and "My Fair Lady," the group will sing in Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, and other major Russian cultural centers.

A flashy $365-Honda is to be given away as a door prize at the concert, which will begin in the Cage at 8 p.m. Tickets, priced at $2.00 each, are on sale at the Student Union.

The Serendipity Singers, a group of seven men and two women who specialize in doing just about everything well, will appear at the Curry Hicks Cage this Saturday night. The program features jazz, folk and satirical music, plus comedy highlights.

UM African Students Are Westover Guests

Westover played host to visitors from three African countries, Thursday, March 24. The visitors were students from the University of Massachusetts.

Students from the country of Malawi studying agriculture at the University are Laston Kaunda, James Ntholo, and Bill Mtwali of the Malawian Ministry of Agriculture. They have been at the University of Massachusetts since Jan. 3 and will leave May 28. These individuals are undergoing training in extension administration, agricultural sciences and economics.

Peter Makhamhera, Enoch

Ntokotha, Redson Kapitao, Joshua Mwiruni and Vincent Gondwe, also from Malawi, are studying for degrees in agriculture. They will also be trained in teaching methods since upon their return to Malawi they will be assigned to teach agricultural education at a university level. Kenya representative is George Elkonyo, a senior majoring in food science and chemistry. He plans to study for a Master's degree and will, upon his return to Kenya, specialize in food research and development.

Edward Manu-Boafo and Emmanuel Asante from Ghana, are research scientists in the Ghanaian Academy of Sciences. Manu-Boafo is an agronomist, Asante a botanist. They will be at the UMass College of Agriculture for three months studying agricultural research methods and extension administration.

All these African students and officials are at the University under a program supported by the United States Agency for International Development.

Commentary

Still an Unfair Draft

Editor's Note: Commentary is a new weekly feature of the Collegian. It will present editorial comment from commercial newspapers on current topics of significance. Today's comment is an editorial which appeared in the New York Times on March 29.

The inadequacy of volunteer enlistments to meet all the military manpower needs of the war in Vietnam has made draft procedures, and especially the criteria for deferring college students, a matter of intense controversy. The new deferment rules issued by the Selective Service System make only a limited contribution toward a more equitable draft or a reduction in controversy.

The enormously expended emphasis on higher education has, of course, aggravated the problem of keeping the burden of national defense from falling on the shoulders of a minority made up of the least affluent and least academically talented of American youths. Today more than half of each high school graduating class goes to college and the number rises sharply every year. As college and postgraduate studies lengthen, academic deferment often becomes total exemption.

The device of using class standing or aptitude test as a yardstick for selection is of dubious merit. Making professors, in effect, responsible for the military selection through the marks they give their students adds external pressures to tally unrelated to the central purpose of learning. The conflict thus created is underlined by growing unwillingness of some faculty members to grade students competitively, if such marks are to be used for what they consider the improper, or at least unrelated, purpose of deciding who goes into the Army.

Two remedies, possibly in combination, should be considered. The first is to return to the original lottery, with the number of drawings adjusted to the projected manpower needs. The second is to change the draft into a concept of universal national service. This could broaden the traditional forms of military service to include such activities as the Peace Corps and its domestic counterparts in schools, hospitals, community improvement and conservation. Such service rather than interrupting post-high school education, could increase the maturity and commitment of many students. If this system failed to yield enough applicants for military duty, then a lottery could be used within the over-all program.

Naturally, there would have to be exemptions based on a sound evaluation of national manpower priorities. But these could then be held to a minimum, based on concrete policy. They would not be the automatic privilege of the college student as a protected bystander whose obligation for national service had to be fulfilled by a less favored stand-in.

Spring Ball Planned

On Friday, April 29th from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. the University Women will hold a Spring Ball and Evening Buffet for faculty and guests in the Coachlight Room, Hotel Northampton. Paul Waldron's Orchestra will provide the music for dancing starting at 9 p.m. The buffet will be served continuously from 10 p.m. Optional dress has been announced by the committee.

Those persons wishing to purchase tickets should consult the last University Women's notice or University Bulletin for prices and send a check payable to University Women and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Ronald Fredrickson, 74 Valley View Drive, Amherst, or Mrs. William Venman, 42 Ridgcrest Road, Amherst, RFD #3.

The deadline for making reservations is Monday, April 25th. Members of the committee are: Mrs. Korby Hayes and Mrs. Theodore Leod, Co-chairmen, Mrs. Ronald Fredrickson, Mrs. George Higgins, Mrs. William Venman, and Mrs. Leo Redfern.

Seminar To Be Held

College and high school students throughout Western Massachusetts and Northern Connecticut will have the opportunity to expand their knowledge of history, politics, economics and other fields when they attend the National Security Seminar April 18 to 29. The seminar, to be sponsored by the Joint Civil Agencies of Greater Springfield, will be held in the Springfield Municipal Auditorium.

The National Security Seminar will consist of 33 lectures designed to inform and prepare individuals for their role as citizens of the United States and in the world.

Louis L. Del Padre, general chairman, said the seminar will supplement and complement the school program of social studies, civics, history and economics.

Student groups, Mr. Del Padre said, are being urged to attend the entire National Security Seminar, or any portion of the two-week event should it coincide with their course of study. Teachers are requested to contact the security administrator, Lt. Col. Allan L. Baiardi at the JCA office, 134 Chestnut St., Springfield, Mass., to reserve viewing space in the Municipal Auditorium.

"Students and instructors will find this a unique opportunity to gain from such experienced military leaders a first-hand picture of the current knowledge on world politics and world problems," Mr. Del Padre stated.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

A Note from Sam Sparc

The Sam Sparc column has attracted much attention, stirred much thought. This was its purpose and I am grateful for its success. However, themes often lose their effectiveness when they must constantly be molded to a particular cast. There is so much that I feel should be written, but these important topics lose much of their impact when they are compelled to comply to a humorous vein; this limited singularity often results in ambiguity or sundried and many times incorrect interpretations. And because of the limited nature of the column, much of what I have had to say has also necessarily been limited. I therefore now am going to extend the scope of my writing to encompass not only serious satire, but also straightforward writing and, at times, a mixture of the two. Far too many interpretations of the current-style column have been totally antithetical to their intended meaning.

This does not mean that I no longer wish my readers to interpret, to challenge; nor does it mean that there will be no hidden meaning or jibes in between the lines. It means that I am taking something that is now hopefully effective and expanding its boundaries, with the firm belief and desire that this expansion will lead to a more effective and potent force on the campus of the University of Massachusetts.

Change, resulting from the criticism of others and of an introspective self, is the basis for growth. Please pass the spinach.

SAM SPARC SPEAKS OUT
There Can Be No Other Way

The Ballad of the Green Berets has sold millions of copies in the last four months. It has brought goosepimples to the skin of countless patriots. It has brought nods of agreement from those in the Armed forces and in Washington. It has caused the hearts of incalculable number of mothers and adolescents to beat faster than usual. Barry Sadler is portrayed by RCA and LIFE as an All-American boy, the boy next door: charitable, nice, courageous, loyal.

In short, the inspiring five verses of his song have cast an image of Barry Sadler as a man to be admired by all America.

My image of Barry Sadler is based upon my interpretation of his song. And his song is the most hopeless and futile expression of mankind's most destructive course.

Our purpose for entering World Wars I and II was to end war to provide a peaceful world. World War II especially was to be the war to end all wars. Once in a war, it has been the practice of this nation to try and end the war as soon as it is prudently possible; thus, Harry Truman's momentous decision in 1945. America prayed that that bomb would be the last bomb. On the transport home, G.I. Joe also prayed, prayed that his son would be a doctor, an engineer, or anything his son wanted to be, in a tranquil world that would allow him to make this freedom of choice.

Yet, in 1966, we find ourselves engulfed in another blood bath. Supposedly, we are once again protecting world freedom. (There is much debate on the veracity of this supposition; however, discussion in that area is beyond the scope of this article.) But whether we are right or wrong in our policy, it should be our desire to expediently tend this "conflict", restore peace, and once again pray that the peace will last, that no one else will have to be slaughtered on a red battlefield.

And so, at last, we now arrive at the Ballad of the Green Berets: fearless men who jump and die; who have trained in combat hand to hand; who fight by night and day. In a war, expert combatants of the caliber of the Green Berets are mandatory for an effective war effort. The Green Berets may well be the finest fighting group in the entire U.S. Army. But let it not be said that they are America's best.

MODERN WAR-PROGRESS OF MAN??

Mr. Sadler projects the occasion of his death in combat. Sadler's last request is not for peace for all time, not for an end to man fighting against himself; rather, his last request to his waiting wife is to put silver wings on his son's chest, so that he too will become a Green Beret, so that he too can jump, so that he too can die. This man is hoping that his son is allowed the opportunity to "be a 'man' they'll test someday," to be "America's best."

Mr. Barry Sadler, I do not want my son to prove himself that way. I want my son to be a peacemaker, Mr. Sadler, because history has proven wars to be futile and peace to be progress for all man. And any individual who can in some miniscule way promote the peace should be called America's best. If Americans must die in Vietnam today, then we must, in the words of John Kennedy, "...bear this burden", but let us bear it with the prevailing, cyclic desire that this be the last such burden. Here is a song now in which the prolongation of war for generations is glorified. How many Americans really want their sons to die 25 years hence in Vietnam?

Woodrow Wilson, Winston Churchill, Adlai Stevenson: these men represent the true dream of mankind; they are America's best. That is what I will tell my son: of these men, and of the hopelessness of trenches and jungles. I shall pin on him not a silver star, but an olive branch. There can be no other way for civilization, no other hope. This should be the music of a troubled America today.

Stockbridge: Part 4

Do Something Besides Talk

In a recent survey many Stockbridge students said that they have been made to feel inferior. Much of this idea of being inferior is caused by the student. However, no one will deny that some individuals have this feeling toward Stockbridge students. Even President Lederle has said that there are some professors and instructors that treat Stockbridge students as inferiors. But it should be remembered that these people only make up a small minority. Most people are willing to accept anyone on campus as being equal.

There are some social problems which concern the student body. Socially, Stockbridge students have at times been looked down upon. This also is caused by a minority which is really unknowledgeable on the subject. Some students complain about being unable to get dates. Others have said that they can not get into fraternities because they go to Stockbridge. These are individual problems, however, and there is no solution except mutual understanding.

But there are a few aspects that can be changed. The most common complaint is ineligibility for sports. The reason for the ineligibility is a ruling of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. This ruling makes all two year students ineligible for N.C.A.A. sports. This ruling covers almost all sports.

In order to provide Stockbridge students with athletic opportunities, Stockbridge has its own soccer, riflery, basketball, and hockey teams. However, the possibility of participating in sports such as skiing and lacrosse with the rest of the University should be thoroughly investigated.

The issue of integration is most touchy. Stockbridge students are not any different than anyone on campus. Perhaps they should be admired because they have never complained about any of their troubles. The Stockbridge student is usually older than the average college student and is most interested in getting the most out of college. For this reason he will not complain. The integration is going to pose problems next year. For example, will Stockbridge students be able to run as dorm officers? Problems such as this can only be worked out with time. But isn't it about time that something be done besides talking?

TGIF Meetings Well Attended

by SUSAN KOSTO

Every Friday, Amherst College holds a meeting of TGIF—Thank-God-It's-Friday—for the students in the four-college area. Organized by Mike Opton, TGIF's purpose is meeting in a boy-meets-girl-meets-professor cycle.

With folk groups, student-produced movies, and soft drinks, as entertainment at the Friday coffee hours at Stone dorm—the new social dormitory—these meetings are the result of Amherst faculty criticism of student life, and the split between pleasure and thought.

Amherst College's TGIF members talk over the latest social movie.

Now, before it's too late be selfish

Take the job that can do most for you, fastest. One you may not even have given a thought to.

If you're single, graduated and looking for a job, you're free as a bird.

Be a bird! Now. Before you get caught up in a web of routine—and maybe dullness. Nailed down in one place.

Picture yourself as a United Air Lines stewardess.

Who, me?, you say. You've never even thought of such work.

Well, think about it. There's no job we know of that will do so much for you, so fast—enjoyably.

To start, we run you through a 5½ week school (no charge to you—we even give you pocket money) that's like two or three charm and fashion schools rolled into one. However good you look, sound and feel now, you'll likely come out feeling like a new you. With a pair of wings!

Then, into the skies. As an ornament? No, as a crew member. By government regulations, the plane can't leave the ground without you. Responsible work, that builds assets such as poise, confidence, tact, a vastly greater knowledge of people.

Travel! Not only as you work (United is the world's largest airline, remember), but also on vacations—free. And anywhere you go, your wings make you a part of the friendly world of United. If you've heard that airline people are fun to be with, and that you meet the most interesting people aloft, including celebrities, you've heard right. We hate to spoil all this by coming down to earth and talking about money; but the fact is the money is pretty good—25% to 50% higher than many office jobs and such, plus a lot of extras and very good benefits. Some even extend to your parents; they can fly at fractional rates.

Look into it now. While you're single, and free—make like a bird and see the world. Don't pay us—we'll pay you.

Real Gone With The Wind

It's getting to be that time of the year again, when Southern belles and brave confederates, suh, will be strolling under magnolia trees slurping mint juleps. Dainty in dimity, Southern womanhood and daring and dashing generals will once again re-create "the South that was and lives forever, in the hearts of Johnny Reb."

Commenting on a local fraternity's annual festival re-creating the atmosphere of the Old South, Jackie Hodgson, writing in the University of Southwestern Louisiana Vermillion, continued:

The idea's great, and everyone enjoys dressing up. But upon what is it founded? The fictitious South.

Begun by "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and perpetuated by the world-famous "Gone With The Wind" and Frank Yerby's passion-besotted "historical novels," the tradition is solidly set of a South that was all magnolias, singing darkies, old Massa and Missus and a random score of other non-existent beings.

Admit it, all of us Southerners would like to believe that our ancestral home was three stories high and had 24 columns, sweeping lawns full of camellias and roses and a fountain or two.

We picture the people who lived inside in terms of sweeping crinolines, hoopskirts and dashing uniforms. They were all ladies and gentlemen and if they had any nasty little traits, well, they took them out in romantic duels . . . and other such harmless pursuits.

That's the way the novelists picture them for us and Hollywood has certainly helped. Who wouldn't want to think his great-great-grandpappy looked like Clark Gable and went around sneering, "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn."

What bothers me is, that if everyone's grandpappy and grandma were landed gentry with a hundred slaves at the Daughters of the Confederacy would have us believe, where, then, were all the po' folks?

I seem to recall a history professor mentioning that less than 10 per cent of the population of the South ever owned one slave, much less a hundred. And slaves didn't count for people in those days, so that left the 90 per cent to procreate and be our ancestors, unless you were really lucky and happened to hit upon a Byrd of Virginia or suchlike for an ancestor.

Nope, I can't picture a lot of lovely girls and brave bearded men as the "True Old South," paperback novels and souvenir shops to the contrary.

Playboy Has Pull

by CHET WEINERMAN

Webster House, one of the growing number of Residence Colleges on campus, has recently instituted a new policy in an effort to bolster attendance at dorm dinners.

Dorm dinners are meals (held in a little room in the North Commons) that only the designated dormitory may attend; Webster's night is Wednesday.

The function of these dorm dinners is to unite the dormitory—both with its faculty fellows and itself—in a pleasant and casual atmosphere. But for some reason, Webster House just wasn't getting much of a turn-out. The fellows were eating dinner for one, and the students were playing new game called "Wednesday Hide-N-Seek."

Then things began to change. The House Council and the College Activities Committee decided that perhaps some sort of enticement (sometimes referred to as "bribery") would be in order. "We have nothing to lose" was the shout heard 'round the dorm. And it was a pretty long shot, fellow.

But it worked. The first week of the experiment, posters were tacked up in strategic posts announcing that a year's subscription to Playboy would be given away to some lucky Websterman. At that dorm dinner, the attendance boomed by 400 %!

In following dinners, the prize list grew larger: 10 free grinders; free and unlimited Cokes for everyone; and ten free tickets to the Amherst Cinema.

Last week, the Hamlets—well-known campus band—played for two hours after the meal, as Eugene Field House joined Webster for a dinner-dance. Attendance at all these dinners has been phenomenal.

No longer do professors dine alone. Now, students are becoming accustomed to dining with their fellows, and are realizing that all faculty don't bite...that they're pleasant and stimulating company.

Now, Webstermen look forward to Wednesday nights, and Hide-N-Seek is out. And now Webster House leads Orchard Hill in attendance at dorm dinners.

Playboy and a Coke can work wonders—just ask Noah Webster.

O'Brien, Howe Provide Offense, Defense Tandem

by TOM FITZGERALD

Despite the loss of Captain Dave Jarret on account of a leg injury, Coach Dick Garber still has plenty of talent in his first midfield line, thanks to the eye-catching play of junior Kevin O'Brien and senior Dick Howe. O'Brien paced UMass in goals a year ago with 12, and Howe, according to Garber, is the best defensive midfielder on the squad. The two thus form an effective offense-defense combo to team with veteran Charlie Avakian.

O'Brien played on attack last year and Garber said, before the season, "Moving him from attack to midfield has taxed his physical condition for running, but he's getting there."

"He's probably one of the top all-around stick handlers that we have," Garber says. "He has a hard side-arm shot. He should be one of our leading scorers if he gets more aggressive with the idea of scoring."

Although Obie chipped in a dozen goals last year, Garber

A Worcester native, O'Brien played football and baseball at St. John's High ("But when I came up here I just wanted to change to another game."). O'Brien, who is a Physical Education major and a brother of Kappa Sig, was an attackman on the '64 frosh team.

He says his biggest thrill was scoring three goals in last year's Siena game and then two more against Bridgeport after the long drive to Connecticut from upstate New York.

O'Brien calls Dick Brown the best player he has teamed with, "but Howie Goffman has been about the biggest help to me." As for the strongest team he has seen, he says, "Rutgers sticks out in my mind."

O'Brien, who is planning on grad school, says, "I'd like to try my hand at coaching lacrosse."

O'Brien's linemate Dick Howe is called "Hoover" by his mates, because, says Garber, "he's like a vacuum cleaner on ground balls." The lacrosse mentor is liberal in his praise of Howe's defensive skill, particularly in man-down situations. "Actually, if you had ten guys like him," Garber remarks with a smile, "you'd probably win every game, 1-0."

"He had a shoulder operation last winter," Garber adds, "and it was tough and go as to whether he could play." But now, the coach says, he's "perpetual motion on the field."

A brother of Beta Kappa Phi, Howe came from Greenfield High via Greenfield Community College. In high school, Dick competed in football, basketball, and track. "I went out last year as a junior in fall practice," the 5'9"-165 lb. athlete says. "The first time I saw the game was last year. I was on the first or second line by the end of the year."

In rating the athletes he has played with, Howe says, "I think Dick Pulsifer has the best offensive skills, shooting and dodging, but (Dave) Jarret is the best team player I've played with here. . . . Brown would be up there."

Howe rates as his biggest thrill the award he received last year from the Connecticut Valley Lacrosse Club as UMass' most improved defensive player ("I really appreciated the thought behind that").

Like O'Brien, Howe is a PhysEd major and hopes someday to coach lacrosse.

KEVIN O'BRIEN

comments that "As a feeder he wasn't getting the shots. He got a lot of his goals on fast breaks and extra-man plays."

The 6'1"-185 pounder showed plenty of aggressiveness in scoring a third-period goal against the Boston Lacrosse Club Friday night. He executed nifty twists by two defenders and beat the BLC goalie with a hard shot in-to shot into the upper left corner of the net.

Collegian
Pennant Picks

It may seem hard to believe, but major league baseball begins today with the traditional openers at Cincinnati and Washington. Our board of experts has revealed its choices for the 1966 campaign. The defending champion Minnesota Twins, the Detroit Tigers, and the Baltimore Orioles received equal mention amongst the Collegian sports staff.

As is usually the case, the National League figures to be a wild scramble with any one of six clubs being given a good chance to take all the marbles. The only team among last year's top six that didn't receive any votes from the Collegian was the defending world champion Los Angeles Dodgers. Here are our picks:

Briers—Baltimore, San Francisco

Curran—Detroit, San Francisco

Fitzgerald—Detroit, Philadelphia

James—Minnesota, Pittsburgh

Murphy—Baltimore, Atlanta

Gould—Chicago, Cincinnati

Track Star at Odds With Athletic Policy

by TERRY CARPENTER

Editor's note—Terry Carpenter has been a stalwart performer on both the UMass track and cross-country teams for three years. He is well qualified to speak out on the iniquities of our varsity athletic program.

The Yankee Conference Championship track squad has been training regularly in preparation for the upcoming outdoor season which begins on April 16 at Boston College. The field event men, who had no place to work out indoors, have the facilities outdoors. On the lower athletic field there is a discus, shot, and hammer circle; a pole vault and high jump setup; and a broad jump and triple runway and pit. Yet for the runners there is no track. Coach Footrick, in his 11th campaign, has been measuring out distances by the foot with a tape measure. To aid his runners as much as possible, he recently gained permission for the team to practice at Amherst College on occasion. Since the dates of the meets in question are in conflict with previous plans of both Amherst tracks, however, UMass will have no home meets. This means that over the last four track seasons, the team will have had only one home meet!

It has been said that the home court advantage in basketball is worth ten points, and the home game in football means a touchdown. In track the home meet has advantages too. Not only does the athlete get to perform in front of his family and friends, but he also isn't hurt by a long bus ride and its stiffening effects. There is a morale problem, too. When the trackmen know before the season even starts that they will have no track and no home meets, they are bound to be discouraged and have much less enthusiasm. In fact, several good track and field competitors haven't come out for the sport for this reason.

When you add all these disadvantages to the fact that there are no athletes on the varsity team with track scholarships, you would expect to come up with a losing team. However, UMass not only had a winning season indoors, but also copped the Yankee Conference Crown. They're not going to lie down and play dead outdoors either. Ask anyone on the team, and he'll tell you that we've got the team to beat.

While the baseball and lacrosse teams were warming up and showing their talents to their coaches with southern trips during the spring vacation, the track team members were training on their own at their homes in an effort to stay in shape between the indoor and outdoor seasons. And now the maintenance department is hastily preparing a field for the FRESHMAN BASEBALL TEAM to play on. If the freshman baseball team is going to get a field, then the track team is certainly deserving of a track; a track NOW, not "in a few years."

Redmen Nine
In Opener Today

by DAVE JARNES

UMass will open its 1966 season against crosstown rival Amherst College at home on Wednesday at 3 p.m. This year the Redmen will play their home games on the old freshman field, which is adjacent to the intramural field.

Carl Boteze, the ace of last year's pitching staff, is expected to take the hill against the Lord Jeffs. Colorful Hagan Anderson is another UMass player to watch. The sophomore third baseman hit .410 as a freshman and .500 on the recent southern tour.

UMass will be aiming to improve upon last year's disappointing 7-11 record. In last year's battle Amherst withstood a 7 run rally in the ninth inning to win an 11-10 slugfest.

Visiting Professor Will Not Pay Income Tax

A University of Massachusetts visiting professor is among 360 professors, scientists, writers, doctors and entertainers who yesterday announced they would refuse to pay part or all of their 1965 federal income taxes, on the grounds that U.S. forces in Vietnam are "clearly being used in violation of the U.S. Constitution, international law and the United Nations Charter."

Milton Mayer, visiting professor in English at UM, is a writer and lecturer as well as teacher and has associations with the American Friends Service committee, the University of Chicago, Frankfurt University and the Protestant Theological Seminary in Prague. His book, What a Man Can Do, was published in 1965 and a study of the rise of Nazism in Germany, They Thought They Were Free, will be released this year. He has written articles for Harper's, Christian Century, the Progressive and the Catholic Commonweal.

Mayer states that he is "a conscientious objector to war. Because of my religion, I felt this way before and during the second World War and ever since," he says.

In a statement which they issued today (Sunday) the group declared that at least as long as these violations continue, the signers will refuse to pay their taxes voluntarily.

It was explained that some of the signers will merely leave the money they owe the Government in banks, where the Internal Revenue Service could seize it, while others will contribute the money to CARE, UNICEF or similar organizations.

According to Section 7203 of the Internal Revenue Code, willful refusal to pay taxes may be punished by jail sentences of up to one year and fines as high as $10,000.

Among the signers were Joan Baez, the noted folk-singer, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, the poet, Prof. Staughton Lynd, Professor of History at Yale University, publisher Lyle Stuart, and Prof. Albert Szent-Gyorgyi, winner of the Nobel Prize.

The statement compares U.S. action in Vietnam and the Dominican Republic to Italian atrocities in Ethiopia and Russia's intervention in Hungary, and it compares the indifference of Americans to "the crimes being committed in their names, by their brothers and with their tax money to the indifference of most Germans to the slaughter of the Jews."

Senate Elections, Reform Bills Topics for Tonight's Meeting

First order of business at tonight's Senate meeting will be the election of new officers for the 1966-1967 term. For the office of president the chief contenders are John Greenquist (Thatcher) and J. Kevin Downes (Hills North).

For vice-president the candidates include Bob Gaudet (Webster), Lew Gurwitz (Married Students), Mike Garjian (James) and Tim Cunningham (Gorman). Fran Boronski (Leach) will be running unopposed for the office of secretary.

Candidates for the office of treasurer include Jim Collins (Brett) and Burt Freedman (Baker).

The agenda for the meeting includes three bills which are being presented by Senator Betty Chambers (Van Meter South) involving Senate recommendations to the Dean of Women regarding appeals to the Discipline Board and counselor selections.

These bills, said Senator Chambers, are direct results of the action of the committee on University Reform.

Also included in the agenda are three budget requests. These are coming for the first time from the Astronomy Club and the Sport Parachute Club. The other is from the University Chorale.

WMUA has scheduled a special four hour program which will cover this election.

Mount Holyoke Fasting To Oppose Herbicide

More than seventy Mount Holyoke students and faculty members yesterday began a three day fast protesting against our government's use of herbicides on the rice fields in the continuing war in Viet Nam.

ALTHOUGH THE FAST produced a variety of opinions, all agree on the following:

"For already starving people to be denied food is no less a crime than poisoning food they already have."

THE FAST community has circulated an opinion letter to the Mount Holyoke community explaining their purpose and urging others to join in support of their protests.

The fast method was decided upon because of its relevance to the starving people in Viet Nam.

Discussions are being held on the war in Viet Nam in Elliott House every evening from 5:00-6:00 p.m.

Professional Pantomimist To Perform Here Saturday

On Friday, April 15 and Saturday, April 16, the Yakims, an Israeli pantomime duo will be performing on campus.

On Friday at 8 p.m. they will hold a lecture workshop in Bartlett Auditorium. On Saturday morning they will put on a classroom demonstration in pantomime in the Women's Physical Education building.

THE YAKIMS will be available for informal discussion on Saturday afternoon in the S. U. council chambers at a coffee hour starting at 3:30. They will conclude their stay at the University with a pantomime concert on Saturday evening at 8.

The Yakims are a husband and wife team. Their act envelopes the act of mime as both a serious and a comic mode of expression.

The pantomime skits that they do include one called "Evolution" in which they start in unison doing a simple movement pattern. Gradually Salomon Yakim takes on seemingly extra energy and his movements become more individual and awake. In the space of a minute or two you see him change form to ecstatic appreciation, to intelligence, to final horror at what he sees and then he blacks out.

In the meantime she continues the same lazy pattern with humdrum indifference—without consciousness or purpose.

THIS IS MIME in its highest form—when it can translate completely into movement so large a mental and emotional experience. It conveys a universality that cannot be equalled in words.

The Yakims have been working as a team since they met in Paris in 1958 at Marcel Marceau's school of pantomime. Yakim has served as both performer and teacher in both Europe and the United States. Both he and his wife, Minna, have made television appearances on the Mike Wallace Show and The Today Show. Together they performed in an industrial film which won the International Film Festival Award in its category.

In 1963 the Yakims opened off-Broadway with a full length theatrical presentation of their duo concert. New York critics hailed their performance and thus enabled Salomon Yakim to establish his own school and a permanent pantomime theatre company.

DURING 1965 Yakim was commissioned by the Contemporary Composers Society to create a pantomime treatment of Henza's The Emperor's Nightingale which was performed in concert at Carnegie Hall.

The 1966-67 season brings The Yakims to the University as part of their program tour of colleges, universities, and communities throughout the United States.

Precisionettes to Perform In Cherry Blossom Time

Under the direction of Susan Wanczyk, commander, and Bernard Cabral, drillmaster, the University Precisionettes will perform in the National Cherry Blossom Festival parade and competition in Washington, D.C., April 14-17.

ALSO IN ATTENDANCE will be men's and woman's drill teams from various universities throughout the nation.

The girls will include in their precision drill a variety of new eye-catching routines, some created by the girls themselves.

THE PRECISIONETTES WILL soon be preparing for their participation in the Spring Military Review on May 20th.

Also, included on their agenda is the recruitment of new members for the team. The program will consist of coffee hours, instruction periods, and try-outs.

Any interested freshman and sophomore women are most welcome to try out for the membership of the Precisionettes.

Harvard Instructor, Fired for Refusing to Take Loyalty Oath, Attempting Reinstatement

A YOUNG HARVARD INSTRUCTOR, fired by the university for refusing to sign a Massachusetts loyalty oath, is attempting to get reinstated while he fights the oath in the courts.

Samuel Bowles, who began teaching economics this fall, refused to sign the oath which Massachusetts requires of all teachers in both public and private schools. Apparently Bowles expected Harvard to support his challenge and permit him to continue teaching pending a court decision. A similar case, involving a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor, is already before the Mass. Supreme Court.

HARVARD CHOSE, instead to comply with the law as it now stands, forcing Bowles to carry the full burden of challenging the oath. The University did, however, give him time to sue for temporary reinstatement, and last week President Nathan Pusey promised that it would not contest the suit. Bowles is expected to get his court order.

He charges that Harvard could have postponed any decision on his refusal to sign an oath until its constitutionality has been tested. The University's position is based on a reluctance to endanger good relations with the state legislature, according to Pusey.

THE CURRENT OATH itself is the result of a long fight which Harvard waged in the 1930's, and many officials believe if this oath were not in effect, a much stronger one would be. Although it is generally believed to be innocuous, the oath, Bowles said, "represents a politically inspired interference with the dependence of the university, an invasion of the teacher's privacy of opinion, and an inhibition of his freedom of speech."

The case now pending is expected to be decided next fall. If the oath is found to be constitutional, Bowles will then have to sign or be fired, Pusey said.

THE ENGLISH ORIENTATION program is the foreign student's first contact with the University. He must complete the program before becoming a full-time student.

Jack T. Norman, who supervised the program for the past 13 years, left his office last fall. Norman said he was ordered by Yarrow to limit scholarships available through the program to important and influential families.

Yarrow denied the charge. Chancellor Taylor has expressed concern over the controversy and is speaking "off the record" to foreign student groups in a personal effort to discover the sources of discontent.

In part, the petition of Jan. 31 states:

"IT IS OUR BELIEF that Dr. Andrew Yarrow fails to understand the needs and concerns of the international students and that his appointment as Students has resulted in a serious deterioration of foreign student morale and a breakdown of trust and confidence between these students and the Director of the International Student Office, and that an irreparable harm is being done to U.S.-Foreign relations, which will manifest itself over many years to come.

"Dr. Yarrow has succeeded in making these students feel that they are seen as numbers and not as human beings. We have looked to an adviser and been met with contempt and disinterest."

Chancellor Taylor issued a statement Feb. 28 recognizing the university's increasing concern with "fulfilling its international role." He said the administrators have "been aware of degrees of dissatisfaction on the part of our international students this year and recently have made serious efforts to get at the facts. Where there are problems and difficulties, we are prepared to take early corrective action."

Yale to Allow Co-eds Or New Women's College

Reprinted from New York Herald Tribune

The Yale Corp., the University's governing body, has given the go-ahead to further exploration and discussion of the possibilities of admitting women to Yale.

THE CORPORATION, which said it would prefer the "coordinate college" approach rather than expansion of the existing undergraduate school, made its first "unofficial" statement ever on the subject of co-education.

After a meeting of the corporation on Saturday, Yale President Kingman Brewster, Jr., said:

"We think we ought to make a further study to see whether we could not serve women more than just in our graduate and professional schools. We want to know what kind of co-education makes sense."

"We would prefer the coordinate college such as Columbia and Barnard. If a women's college were to open near by, then we might have undergraduates attending Yale providing the thing were to work out."

NO VOTE was taken on the possibility of making Yale co-educational, and it was made clear that the governing body's action should not be construed as an official blessing for co-education at Yale.

President Brewster's statement was in response to a suggestion from Yale Daily News editors, who asked:

"When and how is Yale going to respond to co-educational needs?"

The governing body qualified its interest in the subject of admitting women with these additional limitations:

• It would not be in favor of admitting women if it meant reducing the number of men at Yale College.

• The addition of women would have to be "underwritten by sufficient funds to maintain the quality of the University." Mr. Brewster said a year ago that $50 million would be required for the purpose.

'Where the Boys Are'

Smith and Mount Holyoke girls have struck back at Princeton's now infamous book, Where the Girls Are, by compiling a booklet entitled Where the Boys Are.

The booklet, which claims that "Princeton is the only place in the world where, when a boy and his date walk past a mirror, it's the boy who stops to comb his hair," examines the life and mores at the Big Three and other men's schools.

AMHERST, FOR EXAMPLE, is seen in the light of its traditions, which "never die: Lord Jeffrey Amherst tried to deal with the Indian problem by sending them blankets contaminated with smallpox germs. Today, two centuries later, Amherst men are trying to cope with another problem, again with blankets."

The New WMUA A Radio Station On The Move

by PETE SVOBODA

What's new? Everything! We have new officers, new training schedules for members and new improved programs for our listeners.

Under the direction of station manager Norm Ryan, assistant station manager Bob Sawyer, and program director Dan Weir, a new schedule has been developed. Here are some samples:

If you like rock and roll be sure to tune in to the Weekday A-Go-Go or if you want a complete change of pace, tune in Saturdays from 4:00-5:00 for Doc Monty who will be playing the all time greats, both present and past, of country and western music. For opera lovers, WMUA will present World of Opera, uninterrupted performance of the world's greatest operas. For those interested in the written and spoken arts, there is Reflections, a program which will feature such plays as "After the Fall," "Incident at Vichy" and "Don Juan in Hell."

And this is just the beginning. Along with the rest of our scheduled programming, WMUA is looking into the possibilities as broadcasts from the Broken Egg and is also exploring means by which to discover and air more of this area's local talent. Plans are under way to record and broadcast the Caesura poetry hours and in the very near future WMUA may be able to follow the Redmen baseball team to some of its games.

On Monday April 11, WMUA will begin its new programming and to celebrate the new WMUA, the WMUA studios will have an open house Saturday and Sunday, April 17 and 18 from one to six p.m. Everyone, young and old, is invited to come in, browse around, and talk to members of the staff. Tours of the station will be conducted. So drop in to our studios in the main engineering building and listen to the New WMUA, 91.1 on your FM dial. You're always welcome.

WMUA Seeks New Members

WMUA is looking for new members. They are looking for people to fill positions which will be vacated this year by graduating seniors. This is your chance to join the WMUA bandwagon.

We will train you in announcing, engineering, record libbing, promotion, or anything else your heart desires.

You may think that it takes years of experience and training to announce on WMUA, but this just isn't so. You may be able to step into a position on our staff right away.

All you have to do is drop in to our studios, located in the Engineering Building, and say "Hi." We'll take it from there.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

System Defended

by JOYCE HARVEY, News Day Editor

A lot has been said in the past week against fraternities . . . especially since the raid on QTV by the Amherst police that revealed drinking in that fraternity. A few editorials in the Collegian have challenged the stability of the fraternity system without drinking. But, drinking is not the reason why a fraternity exists. In fact, drinking should not be a reason for joining a fraternity.

A fraternity, ideally, is a small group of people brought together by similar interests with a real desire for fellowship. If a fraternity member is asked why he joined a fraternity, he will answer "brotherhood" — a sense of belonging with a group of people that he first associated with as a freshman or sophomore. He joins a fraternity because he enjoys the company of the brothers, whether watching TV, playing football, or general bull-sessions.

The brothers in a fraternity are a very close group. There's someone there to turn to if a problem comes up. Many of the fraternities have scholarship committees to promote studies.

A fraternity is known for its athletes and campus leaders. All of the fraternities encourage participation in the campus organizations—class officers, senators, DVP's, campus guides, intramural sports.

The fraternity system does not look for a special type of person as a member. The prospective member is seen as an individual with individual merits. The norm, however, has been for the clean-cut type with no long hair or beards. Also, the prospective member seems to be already active in extracurriculum activities. The fraternity is not interested in the person who sits alone and does not care to participate. Nor is that person apt to be interested in fraternity life.

Contrary to popular opinion, there are no dangerous initiation stunts. Even Hell Night only includes a small bit of mystery. All the stunts are done in fun, whether doing pushups, wrestling, or being dumped-on by the brothers. When the pledges are required to paint or wash, the brothers are there also. This initiation period serves as a time for getting-to-know the brothers rather than as a time for foolish stunts.

There IS more to the fraternity system than drinking. A fraternity is a place where people can meet who have similar interests. The social functions, including the parties on the weekend, are ways in which to meet new people and to broaden outlooks.

Living in a fraternity, according to one fraternity president, is a real experience—not merely academic or social—but as an opportunity to form close friendships—friendships that will last after graduation and continue into the business world.

Stars Club

To the Editor:

The members of the Astronomy Club at the University would like to extend their appreciation to the members of the Student Senate for granting an appropriation toward the purchase of some much-needed new equipment. This will enable us to begin serious work on our projects, and will, we hope, attract new members to the club.

Also, we would particularly like to thank Mr. Jim Collins and the Senate Finance Committee for their assistance in this respect.

Finally, the Astronomy Club would like to thank the Department of Astronomy for allowing us to use department equipment in our programs.

To the Editor:

It Just Isn't The Same
My brothers here at UMass
Will never be the same.
The stores of alc'y 'neath the bar
That the cops now call 'fair game'.
This policy is just, I guess
It's legal — to the T;
But now we'll have to re-define
The term 'fraternity'.
Now we're forced to be brothers —
Each other we'll have to know
It used to be that our greatest guys
Were Seagram and Old Crow.
The rule's been going for 'nigh two weeks.
No drinking! Did I pledge for THAT?
Now that the purpose is no longer there —
I'd best be a sober dorm-rat.

— Suffer? —

To the Editor:

Before people begin to ask for more freedom and responsibility, perhaps they should first learn to use wisely that which they already have. Are the reasons behind this reform movement justifications for its need, or merely rationalizations?

The House Councils on Sunday nights seem quite busy. Are the people who cannot live within rules suddenly going to become responsible by the elimination of restricting hours? It is true that those who have lived within the system without disturbance, should not "suffer" because of less mature residents. Would it not then follow that the appeal should be restated to include only those who have, by their resident records, proven that they are ready to live under a no-curfew system? Another item that might gain more support for the change would be a re-wording of the sheet that has been posted for signatures. Why don't you stop demanding and begin to sound a little more mature about the affair — or, has your desire for responsibility replaced the fact that any woman who wants anything should exhibit?

Lady Bird

To the Editor:

The current display at the Student Union should be very gratifying to Lady Bird Johnson. But after all that effort to beautify our nation's highways, what on earth is the purpose of unloading all the collected litter at the Union? Couldn't the space be better used for something worthwhile, like an art display, for example?

Don't Stop Now!

"The personal evaluation of women students are eliminated as of April 11."

So spoke Dean of Women Helen Curtis in her second step toward changing the inequities that presently exist in Women's Regulations.

Last Monday's action followed Dean Curtis's decision of last month to eliminate the late libe penalty. These changes were precipitated by a wave of criticism by the students, the administration, and the faculty.

However it is hoped that these steps are only the first in a long line of necessary action concerning Women's Regulations.

How Great Can It Be?

To the Editor:

I was shocked and dismayed recently when I discovered that there is no established program at the University for independent study and research on a project of the students own choosing, save the senior honors program. What becomes of the moderately intelligent, but not brilliant student, who desires such a program? Due to his lack of a specific cume is he denied the opportunity to study, research, and write on his own for credit; is his ambition to develop a coherent study of a subject of interest to him stifled? In this University the answers would seem to be affirmative. Why does this lack of opportunity for the expression of individualism exist? It would seem that the nominal student is being deprived of his right to search, probe, and seek answers to specific questions on his own.

What we seem to have here is a form of discrimination against the nominal student who is anxious to seek his own answers but is not permitted to do so, as he is being offered only what is in the catalog and in cases not even that. Many departments in their list of course offerings have a seminar or special problems course; such a course could be ideally suited to fill the void apparent in the above discussion. However in discussing such a course within my own department it was revealed to me that it had not been given for several years and that there was no prospect of it being given in the near future. Is this not in the nature of false advertising?

We have been told that this is a "Great University". Just how great can it be with what is supposed to be the focal point of American historic tradition so submerged, i.e., individual initiative? We are, it is said, a nation of innovators, and upon innovation a large part of our nation was built. The question is will our nation and the ideals it stands for remain strong if our institutions of higher learning crush initiative and strive solely to produce people who fit into today's society. Today's society need not concern us as much as tomorrow's, and in its concern for the future one aspect of academic endeavor that the University must not overlook is that of an independent approach to knowledge, for if the University overlooks this approach to education it can only move closer to being a supplier of automatons for tomorrow's society.

TO THE BACK OF THE HATCH

To the Editor:

To The Back Of The Hatch:

What have you done to show you are not an apathetic college student?

Do you have a cause?

How many pints of blood have you given to the Viet Cong?

How many troop trains have you blocked?

How many times have you picketed Fort Devens?

How many Bob Dylan albums do you own?

Have you burned your draft card yet?

No! Well get out there and do something constructive. Help make America free.

But I can't. Alas, I like L.B.J. I support the war in Vietnam. I am even so resigned in my complete atmosphere of utter mediocrity as to admit that I believe in capitalism.

I guess that all that there is left to do is hide behind my "frat" pin and pin-strip shirts for I have no cause. Yet at the same time, most honored paper mache judges and void philosophers of all mankind, I thank my stars that I don't live in the world you live in: a place where futility reigns supreme, a place where meaninglessness is the trend, a place where the ultimate dignity and strength of mankind must undergo the panaceas of loud and echoing nothingness proposed by you, the back-of-the-hatchers, the thinkers, the philosophers, the do-nothings.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

(Editor's note: The guest editorial that follows is the first of three written by Professor Paul Sanders of the English Department.)

Religion in the Classroom?

Of course, one way or another. It's unavoidable. The question is not whether religion should be studied but whether it will be studied consciously and competently. As a universal (or nearly so) aspect of human existence, it has the same need to be examined and understood as any other. A university that arbitrarily rules out as a subject for academic investigation one whole area of human experience and history jeopardizes its own integrity.

We need, perhaps, to define "religion" and "university."

A university is before all else a community of scholar-teachers: thinkers, researchers, writers, experts in dialogue. This community admits for varying periods of time and at varying levels of participation younger members deemed able and interested in learning what learning is; these younger members (students) are in the nature of the case transients and juniors. A class is a primarily shared experience of learning. Laboratories and libraries are tools. Administration exists solely to service this community. Except incidentally, campus and buildings are not more important than Mark Hopkins' log, even when upended.

A university's primary mission is not to train for trades, vocations, or professions; nor to serve the agency that created and supports it, whether a state, religious denomination, or private corporation; nor even, except in the broadest sense, to serve society. Its basic work as a community of scholars is to conserve, clarify, and advance human knowledge; ultimately it serves only truth.

Religion is harder to define in a universally acceptable way. (That is one reason why its study is a valid academic pursuit.) The complexity of phenomena called "religious" shows the richness and at the same time the ambiguous character of "religion." It enters into every aspect of life. It grasps the person at every level of his being.

It has to do with belief; as intellectual concern, it is related to philosophy. It has to do with action; so it is related to ethics as theoretical inquiry, and to politics and economics and every other human pursuit, in practice. It involves feeling and the imagination: its nearest affinities are to literature and the fine arts. Its manifold expressions arise within persons and among persons; and so psychology, anthropology, and sociology must consider among all others religious data.

The prime religious attitude is faith, its prime activity worship: the individual (and, in Western religions, fellow-believers) before God. Though not identical with it, religious devotion shares with the scholar's devotion to truth the quality of being final: no ultimate justification is possible, or needed.

Though clearly not having said the last word, I do not believe I have falsified either definition. Nor do I beg the question whether religion—or which religion, or any—is "true." No particular view of religion is initially more obviously true than another. Thomas Aquinas has to be heard as well as Marx, the Buddha as well as the Christ. The instructor who professes a religion and one who does not, have the same duty to the university: to deal openly, honestly, and competently with their students, their own subject, and all human learning as far as they are able.

Until religion is as obviously superseded as alchemy, a university will inevitably have to consider it as one among all human concerns. Religion is already in the classroom.

In my own course "The English Bible as Literature," we talk about what the Biblical material is talking about, and that is religion understood in a certain way. An oracle of Jeremiah, as a poem of Wallace Stevens, is what it is, inseparably "form" and "content." Irrespective of my own stance or that of any of the students, Jeremiah's poem is a religious poem and can only be studied as such.

Any history course must describe religion's place among the phenomena studied. I have scanned the University's offerings: with the possible exception of "Military History of Modern Europe," there is no course whose proper matter does not include facts about and interpretation of religion.

Of course, interpretation; and that naturally is the most sensitive spot. In a university it is the right (I should say the duty, rather) of the historian, or psychologist, or whomever, to interpret all, including religious, data properly falling within his purview. He must decide what are facts; what the facts are; how they are inter-related; and what the pattern of facts thus established means.

It is not simply obvious that any particular historian, or literary critic, or bio-physicist is competent to deal with the phenomena of religion. This is so at least partly because religion as a subject for investigation has been widely neglected in American universities. A professor is as ignorant as anyone else in a field he has not cultivated.

Should the history of art be left to the general historian? (Should it be left to the artist with no understanding of historical method?) Should the philosophy of science be taught by philosopher or scientist? Should the meaning of those experiences usually called religious be interpreted by an experimental psychologist? I do not imply a necessary answer. It is the nature of a university to refuse "necessary answers." Facts, statements, hypotheses, attitudes, conclusions—all are subject to continual examination and restatement.

The mind that has any right in a university at all will be continually observing all phenomena and helping devise means of understanding them and relating them to one another in fruitful synthesis. Religion as an academic discipline differs not at all from any other in this regard.

Teaching religion does not mean indoctrinating students with the views of a particular faith. It means treating religion in the manner of all ideal university teaching. An instructor who tells the student, "what he ought to know" can indoctrinate in the natural sciences or literature as well as in religion. (Some disciplines approach more nearly indoctrination than others, perhaps.) The instructor who, without compromising his own conclusions, and without either hiding them from the student or forcing them upon him, guides him into careful and informed study, is not indoctrinating, whether his discipline be religious studies or something else.

Religion is in the classroom. Perhaps it would be salutary if we all might say so, out loud. And in the pause that follows, we might ask how a university best meets its responsibility in this regard.

Letters To The Editor

From the Reform Committee...

To the editor:

We as representatives of the University Reform Committee feel obligated to raise certain questions about the opinion poll issued by the Dean of Women's office on April 11.

Although these issues are uppermost in the minds of students the opinion poll was introduced and required to be returned before the next Senate meeting and "Collegian" publication thereby precluding necessary deliberation in the two major campus instruments for discussion. There was no time for informal or formal discussion between students. The poll in fact was introduced, distributed, and collected in about 48 hours.

And it did need deliberation. The questions were vague, misleading, and often loaded. Students, for example, were asked to answer questions such as, "Should these (women's dossiers) be abolished with the realization that the Dean of Women would no longer be able to furnish recommendations for scholarships, fellowships, employment, etc?" and "Should curfews be retained but liberalized?" What specifically does "liberalized" mean?

The poll offered only a limited number of alternative views to the issues proposed. Note for instance, on the complex issue of parietals, only two alternatives were provided, "Should men be allowed in women's dorms?" and "Should men be restricted to the public social rooms?"

Many irrelevant questions were also asked. On the same day that the poll, which contains two questions on dossiers, was introduced dossiers were abolished (by the same office). Rather than raise the question of a dry or wet campus, the poll asks the question, "Should there be a 'Rathskeller' on campus?"

How will the poll be interpreted? Does a poll such as this, with its limited alternatives and vague wording, truly represent the opinion of the women undergraduates on this campus?

CLASS OF 1968, HAD ENOUGH?

These are the key issues I believe, of the coming CLASS ELECTIONS. I offer these alternatives to you as a STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

Problem 1: Failure of communication between class officers and class members resulting in a lack of interest on the part of the student body.

I Propose: 1.) A monthly newsletter to all members of the class.
2.) An Executive Council where every member and every dormitory is proportionally represented.

Problem 2: An Executive Council whose primary purpose has been as a mere ratifying body.

I Propose: 1.) A cooperative, but not submissive Executive Council INITIATING what it feels to be best for the class.

Problem 3: Lack of cohesion between the President Class of '68 and other elements to campus wide student government.

I Propose: 1.) A closer coordination of the activities and efforts with the other classes as well as stronger relations with the Student Senate.

Problem 4: Accomplishments related to only the area of concerts and banquets restricts the role of the class president to that of a mere social chairman.

I Propose: 1.) A new conception of the class executive whose concern enters the realm of academic as well as social problems. Good student government must go a good deal farther in meeting ALL the concerns of ALL the students.

If you agree with these views, I would ask you to support my candidacy for the PRESIDENCY OF THE SOPHOMORE CLASS on PRIMARY DAY—Thursday, April 21.

Film Committee Will Present Hitchcock Flick

The Alfred Hitchcock hit Marnie will be presented by the Movie Committee of the Student Union in the S.U. Ballroom on April 21 at both 6 and 8:30 p.m. This film will be shown as a substitute for the originally scheduled film North by Northwest, which has been withdrawn from circulation by the producers.

The stars of this thrilling Hitchcock movie are that James Bond man (Sean Connery) and that The Birds woman (Tippi Hedren), who are cast in one of the most suspenseful films in recent years.

THIS SHOW HAS SOMETHING for everybody: chills and thrills, suspense, surprises, psychological overtones, morality and of course sex, love, and hate. In other words it has everything and is one of the most interesting and exciting well done films that Hitchcock has produced.

Marnie is a film that Hitchcock fans will like and those that do not call themselves Hitchcock fans will really enjoy and perhaps even become fans of the master of suspense.

Four Colleges Discuss Viet Policy Opposition

Tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Norfolk room of the S.U., representatives from UMass will hold a meeting for all students concerned with U.S. policy in Vietnam. Without student participation, this proposed group will not be able to function.

ON MONDAY, MARCH 11, representatives from the 4-college area met at Smith College to discuss steps which students from the area could take opposing U.S. foreign policy in Vietnam.

Several alternative plans were discussed including holding a panel discussion at UMass and starting a petition in the area against U.S. intervention. A publicity board was established to provide for improved communications between the four colleges.

Students and faculty are invited to attend tomorrow's meeting.

NAIAD Tickets Still Available

Tickets are still available for all performances of the annual NAIAD synchronized swimming production this week at WoPe.

The show is in the last stage of preparation—putting on the finishing touches—before it goes before the public.

THE DATES AND TIMES of the annual show are Thursday at 8:00 p.m., Friday at 6:30 and 8:00 p.m. and Saturday at 8:00 p.m.

Tickets are being given out at the Student Union ticket window during the day.

Poem Festival to Feature Yeats, Lennon Selections

From Yeats to John Lennon! That's right, the Inter-Collegiate Poetry Reading Festival to be held at Emerson College on May 7th will feature modern poets ranging from Yeats to the Beatles' own John Lennon.

THE FESTIVAL is an annual event that is composed of representatives of colleges and universities from all over the country, who gather in a different city every year to compete in the readings.

KATHLEEN FIDDES represented the University last year at Brooklyn College, where she read Robert Frost's Maple.

This year's representatives will be chosen in competitive tryouts on Thursday evening, April 14th at 7:30 p.m. in Bartlett 127, and

Friday afternoon, April 15 at 4:30 p.m. in Bartlett 131.

EVERYONE IS WELCOME to tryout and those students currently enrolled in Speech 200 are especially encouraged to tryout, as are those who have had the course in previous years. Everyone should be prepared to read a short poem by a modern poet.

Any questions about the Festival or the tryouts should be addressed to Miss Doris E. Abramson of the Speech Department.

Color Film on Red China Will Be Here Next Week

One of the tragedies of contemporary history is the severance of communication between the United States and mainland China. As a result of this political hostility, there has been a shortage and distortion in the news coverage of China.

Next week, on April 19, the University will be visited by Felix Greene, noted British author of Awakened China and A Curtain of Ignorance, coming here to speak on the problem of U.S. ignorance about the people of China and on the customs and culture of that nation.

The following evening will be his epic documentary, "China," the first major color feature filmed in Communist China in this decade, and in the words of C.B.S. TV, "a film every American should see."

A. L. Flag Race Seen Toss-Up--

Colavito, Wagner, and Whitfield supply the power, while Vic Davalillo, Dick Howser, and Pedro "Speedy" Gonzalez supply the speed.

The dynasty of the New York Yankees was broken a year ago, but they are by no means willing to play dead. The Yankees need a wave of comebacks and a lot fewer injuries to regain their former place. Roger Maris, Jim Bouton, Elston Howard, and Mickey Mantle were hampered by injuries in 1965. It is especially important that Mantle play a good part of the schedule since he is valuable not only for his bat but for his inspirational leadership.

The California Angels are out of the shadow of the Dodgers this year and this should boost attendance. Whether or not their play will improve is another question. Dean Chance, Marcelino Lopez, Fred Newman, and Bob Lee form the nucleus of a good pitching staff, but the Seraphs have an anemic attack, to put it mildly.

Power but a pitching deficiency—that's the story of the Washington Senators this year. Frank Howard, Ken McMullen, Don Locke, and Willie Kirkland will lead the attack, while Pete Richert and Phil Ortega should add much to the hurling.

Although the Boston Red Sox will score a lot of runs this year, their pitching will give up more. Tony Conigliaro and Carl Yastrzemski spark the exciting Boston attack while Dick Radatz steadies the mound corps. The annual youth movement is finally working at Fenway. Guido Grilli, Darrell Brandon, Ken Sanders, and Pete Magrini are rookie pitchers and should get plenty of opportunities to show their stuff. Big George Scott tore the cover off the ball at Winter Haven, thereby winning the third base assignment. His roommate Joe Foy will probably find a way to get himself in the lineup. If the Red Sox get some pitching, they will move up.

Alvin Dark had problems when he managed the San Francisco Giants, but nothing comes close to his troubles now with the Kansas City A's. The infield of Harrelson, Green, Campaneris, and Charles could lead the A's out of the cellar but this is unlikely. The outfield, where Manny Jimenez is making a comeback, is unstable, and the mound staff consists largely of unknowns such as Paul Lindblad and Chuck Dobson. The Athletics do have a good bullpen headed by veterans John Wyatt and Wes Stock.

DO YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES TO BE A LEADER?*

*If you do, don't settle for less.

If you will complete your first two years of college this spring and have not had ROTC training, you now have a special opportunity to earn an Army officer's commission in the next two years. You can qualify to fulfill your military obligation as an officer while you study for a college degree in a field of your choice.

Through a new two-year Army ROTC program you will receive leadership training and experience that will be valuable assets for the rest of your life, in either a military or a civilian career. You will receive an allowance of $40 each month during your Junior and Senior years. If you desire, you may request postponement of your military service while you complete your studies for a graduate degree.

Most large business and industrial firms prefer the college graduate who has been trained and commissioned as an officer—who has the ability to organize, motivate and lead others—and who has had experience in accepting responsibilities beyond his years.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this important opportunity.

For complete information on the new two-year Army ROTC program see the Professor of Military Science on campus.

A.L. Flag Race Seen Toss-Up

by MIKE CURRAN

Vice - President Humphrey threw out the first ball Monday to open the American League season. Last year the yoke of Yankee dominance was thrown off, but unfortunately the pennant race was still a runaway. This season experts are hopeful of a tight race involving six teams.

Any kind of a flag race would help boost league attendance and prestige. In recent years the rival National League has dominated not only attendance records but also World Series and All-Star play.

The Minnesota Twins stood pat during the inter-league trading session hoping last year's combination of power and speed will again lead them to the title. In order for the Twins to win again, Camilo Pascual will have to regain his 1964 form, and Jim Grant will have to retain the form that led him to 21 victories a year ago.

Under Eddie Stanky's direction, the Chicago White Sox were by far the most impressive team this spring. Two years ago they finished second to the Yankees by one game. Last year they were runnersup again even though Gary Peters and Juan Pizarro had off-seasons, totaling 16 wins between them as opposed to 38 the year before. If these two make a comeback, and Eddie Fisher and Hoyt Wilhelm continue their yeoman work in the bullpen, Chicago could win.

The Robinson boys, Frank and Brooks, are being counted on by the Baltimore Orioles to lead them to their first flag. The Birds have a fine lineup, but their usually sound pitching staff has a number of kinks. Rookie Andy Etchebarren is being relied upon behind the plate and newcomer Gene Brabender will team up with junk ball pitcher Stu Miller in the bullpen.

The best team on paper this year appears to be the Detroit Tigers. Cash, Lumpe, McAuliffe and Wert form a solid infield, while Horton, Demeter, and Kaline form one of the league's best picket squads. Catcher Bill Freehan will handle a strong hurling corps headed by Mickey Lolich, Denny McLain, Joe Sparrma, and Bill Monbouquette.

Talented UMass Nine Opens At Home Today vs. Amherst

Starting for the Redmen in their opener today is right-hander Carl Boteze.

Sam McDowell to give them a pennant. McDowell, Sonny Siebert, and Luis Tiant give the Indians a good starting nucleus.

Expectation and spirit will be high as the talented Redmen open the 1966 baseball season today against Amherst College.

CARL BOTEZE is the probable starting pitcher for Earl Lorden's nine. The junior right-hander is the possessor of a great curveball and a live fastball. Boteze won five of the seven victories garnered by the Redmen last season.

UMass should score many more runs than they did during the '65 drought. The potential punch is there. Infielders Anderson, Babyak, Stewart, and Peacock are all good with the stick, while Capt. Terry Swanson and Ross Piken supply the bulk of the outfield power.

LAST YEAR'S contest with the cross town boys was a homey. The Redmen scored 10 runs on 19 hits but lost the game 11-10. UMass scored seven times in a wild ninth inning which saw Swanson fly out with the sacks jammed to end the game.

Lorden's boys will be out to avenge last year's loss to the Jeffs and to start what should be an interesting and successful season on the right foot.

Swami Sparc Spews Spectacular Sport Speculation

April 12: Red Sox lose opening game 5-4. Billy Herman says: "Despite our loss, I think we proved that our team is a lot better than people give us credit for."

April 18: Don Drysdale, after losing his first game, assaults the official scorer for not charging Koufax with half of his loss.

April 21: Mickey Mantle breaks his right arm, but agrees to bat one-handed for the rest of the season.

Crew Team Victorious

Entering its first race, the new University of Massachusetts crew started the season by defeating Amherst College and the University of Rhode Island third varsity.

THE UMASS CREW'S second boat, made up mostly of freshmen and composed entirely of oarsmen who had no rowing experience prior to this season, looked impressive, crossing the finish line almost a full minute ahead of the competition.

In the varsity race, the first boat finished a close third to Villanova and Amherst. U.R.I. placed a distant fourth. The varsity contest, rowed against a strong headwind, was the final event of the day. Although the University's crew understroked the opposition throughout the entire race, the Redmen's inexperience prevented them from taking advantage of the more practiced Amherst and Villanova crews.

BOTH BOATS ARE looking forward to this weekend, when they will travel to Middletown, Conn., to compete against Wesleyan, Clark, and Worcester Polytech.

SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE

All candidates for spring football practice should report to the football office in Boyden Building at 5 p.m. today. Anyone who does not attend this meeting but is still interested should report to the football office as soon as possible.

FOOTBALL MANAGERS

Anyone interested in becoming a football manager should report to the football office in Boyden Building at 5 p.m. today. Anyone unable to attend should either call George Albrecht, 425 Gorman, or leave his name and address at the football office.

April 29: Red Sox drop to second division after losing seven straight. Herman says: "We have got a young ball club with a lot of potential. Once we get a little experience, we'll be all right."

MAY

May 3: Charlie Finley hires Warren Spahn to pitch for Kansas City. Spahn gratefully thanks Finley: "If I didn't think I could win anymore, I'd quit, but I know I can help this ball club," quoth Spahn.

May 4: Spahn makes his debut against the Red Sox. Rico Petrocelli gets a single off him in the second inning. Spahn stalks off the mound and quits baseball for good, a humiliated man.

May 13: Houston replaces its grass with a new chemical compound which looks and feels like grass, and tastes like the food at the dining commons. When asked why Houston bothers having synthetic grass if it looks, feels, and tastes like grass a spokesman replied: "I dunno, but we must be doing something right."

May 22: Yankees surge into first place on the potent left-handed bat of Mickey Mantle.

May 30 (4:45 p.m.): Red Sox win their third game of the season on the strong left arm of Darrell Brandon, whom Herman claims will be the next Sandy Koufax.

May 30 (4:54 p.m.): Brandon threatens to quit unless his salary is raised to $167,000 a year.

JUNE

June 1: Mets almost win their first game of the season as Dick Stuart hits three home runs, knocks in 9, and makes 7 errors in the ninth inning as Mets lose 10-9.

June 15: Mickey Mantle breaks his left leg while trying to break up a double play with the Yankees ahead 18-3. As Mantle was carried off in a stretcher, he was heard to mutter, "Well, I guess those are the breaks."

June 23: Dick Radatz gains 35 pounds in 24 hours. Radatz asserted that the extra weight was necessary to stop line drives with his stomach.

June 24: Red Sox lose again as Radatz tries to protest a 3-2 lead in the ninth inning with the bases loaded. All three men on base trotted home when Pepitone hit a line drive to Radatz who lost the ball in his belly. "It is apparent," Herman conceded, "that Radatz has gone to pot."

JULY

July 4: Red Sox hotel burned to ground last night at 3:00 a.m. Early today, Manager Billy Herman happily reported that none of the Red Sox were in the hotel at the time of the fire.

July 12: Carl Yastrzemski steals his first base in 16 attempts.

July 19: Willie Mays leaps over the centerfield fence with a sparkling game-saving catch and disappears for three days.

July 26: Bob Tillman hits a deep drive 410 feet away, over the head of outfielder Jimmy Piersall, who chased the ball to the wall, slipped, broke both legs, kicked the ball to the left-fielder, who fired to first, nabbing Tillman by two strides. Tillman collapsed from excessive fatigue and Sammy White was recalled from his bowling alley. "He'll bolster our defense and steady the new kids in our youth movement—like Smith, Christopher, and Kasko," Herman gurgled.

AUGUST

August 6: John Roseboro attacks Juan Marichal with a catcher's mitt.

August 9: Rico Petrocelli gets his second hit of the season.

August 21: Leo Durocher knocks out three umpires in one game and immediately gets a challenge from Cassius Clay.

August 28: Red Sox trounce Minnesota 19-2 as Conigliaro wallops three home runs and a double and knocks in 11.

August 29: Red Sox lose 1-0 as Conigliaro strikes out 4 times with the bases loaded and Carl Yastrzemski is caught stealing home in the ninth inning with nobody out.

SEPTEMBER

September 3: Red Sox plummet to last as Herman admits the Sox won't win the pennant, but he assures the Boston fans that the Sox would at least have a lot to say about who does win.

September 8: Tigers capture first as Monbouquette wins his 22nd game.

September 18: Selective Service Board gives Petrocelli a mental deferment when it was discovered that on his questionnaire Rico claimed that he was a baseball player.

September 20: Yogi Berra predicts the Mets will win another game in 1967.

September 23: For the first time all year Atlanta Stadium isn't sold out so Braves owner McHale signs a contract to move his team to Japan for the 1967 season.

September 25: On his way to the ballpark Dean Chance is catapulted in the path of an on-rushing freight train by a strong gust of wind. Chance managed to escape injury except for his pitching arm which got caught in one of the train wheels. Doctors are fearful that they might have to amputate. Said one M.D. "There is a one in fifty chance that he will ever lift a baseball again."

September 26: Sox announce trade with L.A. Yastrzemski, Wilson, Conigliaro and $100,000 in cash for Dean Chance and Frank Malzone. "Chance will fit right in with our staff and Malzone will augment the experience movement that I have planned for next year's Red Sox."

CHINA EXPERT TO EXPLAIN "WHAT'S NEW IN CHINA"

On April 19 the DVP will present Felix Greene, former British Broadcasting Company correspondent and an authority on Red China.

He has recently returned from his third visit to Communist China during which he conducted an extensive study of the lives, customs and traditions of the Chinese people, in an effort to aid the western nations in alleviating the ignorance and misconceptions about China.

COMMISSIONED by British television -ATV-TV, Mr. Greene traveled throughout the country for the purpose of making a filmed report in depth of the day-to-day life of the Chinese. This documentary entitled China will also be presented here on April 20, following the lecture by Felix Green in "What's New in China?"

The entire week constitutes an excellent program designed to better acquaint the students with this problem of China facing the United States today by giving them a realistic representation of conditions in that country of over 700 million people.

ON APRIL 24, there will be a lecture by Frederick Nossall, journalist for the Toronto Globe and Mail, on "What's new in Peking?" to be followed up on April 28 with a panel discussion on "A Close Look at the Chinese Empire," with authorities speaking in ideological, sociological and military fields. The entire symposium strives to provide a closer understanding of this urgent issue and to put forth comments and possible solutions.

GREENQUIST PRESIDENT IN SENATE ELECTIONS

by CAROLYN LEVOSKY,
Senate Reporter

In a seven hour Senate meeting devoted exclusively to elections, John Greenquist (Thatcher) defeated Kevin Downes (Hills North) 32-18 for the presidency.

For vice-president Tim Cunningham (Gorman) defeated his nomination acceptance speech, described the role of the president as a leader ready to take over immediately. He said, "Enthusiasm needs to be generated at the very beginning," and generated with "wholehearted effort."

SENATOR DOWNES commented on student-Senate relationships. "The lack of communication is appalling. Our public relations are atrocious." Both Greenquist and Downes proposed more Senate involvement and more action on student desires and reforms. The presidential campaign, however, was not one of issues, but of competition between the candidates' experience and past record.

Senator Cripps, who nominated Greenquist, described the three areas of qualifications he considered most important—ex-three candidates, Mike Garjian (James), Lew Gurwitz (Married Students), Bob Gaudet (Webster), 26-19, in a final battle with Gaudet.

President John Greenquist

The offices of Secretary and Treasurer were uncontested. Fran Boronski (Leach) will assume the office of secretary and Burt Freedman (Baker) the office of treasurer.

PRESIDENT DACEY, in his last official speech, sympathized with the candidates saying, "One year ago I was sweating on the floor, sweating profusely." After reviewing the Senate's new commitments to student reform, Dacey ended his speech with, "The Student Senate will go straight on up and nobody, but nobody, is going to stop it."

perience, leadership, and ideas. He felt Senator Greenquist's actions on the executive committee, Men's Affairs Committee of the Senate, as vice-president of the Senate and three years of Senate service qualify him in all areas. He described Greenquist, saying, "John is always listening."

JACQUE HALL, nominator of Kevin Downes, warned the Senate, "We cannot spend another year introverting," and urged the election of Downes who has worked with the Collegian, APO, the Belchertown Volunteers, and as chairman of the Campus Blood Drive.

BAKER HOST TO STARVING CO-EDS

A new co-ed activity has been instituted on campus. Eating!

Several new vending machines have been installed in Baker house, and permission has been obtained from the Dean of Women's Office to allow women to study and relax in the lounge area between seven and nine p.m.

New machines for soda and sandwiches have been installed, and micro-wave ovens are planned in the future, which will provide dinner-type snacks. New furniture has been supplied by housing, and theatre-type seats are planned for the TV-lounge area.

It is hoped that these facilities will provide the students from Van Meter, Greenough, Chadbourne and Baker with a place to go for a study break without the inconvenience of walking down the hill to the Hatch. It is also close to the students in the Orchard Hill complex, and the Brett Mills area.

There will be several student attendants on duty at night to make change and manage the area. It has been reported that the turnout has been promising.

The Yakims, an Israeli pantomime team, will be the guests of the Distinguished Visitors Program on Friday and Saturday, April 15 and 16. Both performances are open to the public. The Yakims are a husband and wife team who try to put across expressions of feelings that cannot be expressed in words.

MOODS AND EMOTIONS

The Yakims, an Israeli pantomime team, will be performing at the University on Friday, April 15 and Saturday, April 16 under a DVP program. All performances are open to the public.

Tonight at 8 p.m. the Yakims will hold a lecture workshop in Bartlett Auditorium. On Saturday morning at 10 they will put on a classroom demonstration in pantomime in the Women's Phys Ed Building.

Tomorrow afternoon the duo will be available for informal discussion at a coffee hour in the Student Union Council Chambers starting at 3:30. They will conclude their stay at the University on Saturday evening with a pantomime concert in Bartlett Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The Yakims are the only husband and wife mime team performing today. Their aim in the mime is to convey expressions and moods which do not come through merely with words.

According to the Yakims the pantomime "is at best an adventurous excursion into emotion and mood designed to take you away from yourself."

The pantomime concert, though not as well known in the United States as in Europe, should prove most interesting and enjoyable.

Supervised Tours Scheduled Through High-Rise Dorms

The Housing office announced yesterday that supervised tours of the high-rise dorms will begin for "any member of the university community who is interested" on Wed., April 20.

The Housing office feels that such supervised tours are necessary for the "safety and convenience" of those who wish to explore the dorms. There will be two scheduled hours at which students will be free to view the dorms. Wednesday mornings from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and Tuesday afternoons from 2:30 to 3:30 will be open. There will be no other times at which there will be any visitors allowed in the buildings.

The tours will be conducted through Tower-1 by officials from the Housing office. The meeting place will be at the north entrance to this tower, and there will be parking allowed in the Boyden lot.

This program will be open to anyone associated with the university and will continue until otherwise announced.

There have also been set up in the S.U. lobby the floor plans of the high-rise dorms to afford the campus community another opportunity to view the towers.

Career Training

A career opportunity in the field of mass communications is presently being offered by the Collegian. If you feel qualified see News Editor Gordon Davidson on any publishing night.

UMass to Extend Computer Service

A multiple access service plan to vastly extend the use of the University Research Computing Center through remote terminals was announced today by the University of Massachusetts.

According to Dr. Caxton C. Foster, director, the plan will make the center's powerful CDC 3600 computer virtually a state-wide facility by permitting use from remote locations in other campus buildings, in the Four-College area or as far away as UMass-Boston. Target date for operation of the plan is Jan. 1, 1967.

The system will be known as UMass Unlimited Machine Access from Scattered Sites. Its purpose will be to increase the computer's effectiveness many times by providing nearly simultaneous use by many people, Dr. Foster explained.

"In effect, it puts the computer console in almost everybody's office," he said.

Faculty and students who use the computer at present must go to the center at the Engineering Laboratory and wait up to one or two hours to have their programs run.

The new system will provide up to 64 Teletype locations on campus or off, connected to the CDC 3600 by a PDP 8/860 communications system unit manufactured by the Digital Equipment Corp. of Maynard.

Users will type their program and data on the Teletype for transmission to the computer via telephone line and the computer will execute the program and type the answer back.

Provisions will be made for saving any program so that it may be retrieved at a later time for modification or re-running.

Teletype Model 33 page printers will be used for input and output in two types of installations, according to Dr. Foster. Public installations will be open without charge to all student and faculty users on a first-come first-served basis. Private installations will be made for major users, with access limited to the user and his group.

Public machines are planned for 10 major buildings, with five additional machines at the computer center. Each will be available about fourteen hours a day on a sign-up basis, with use controlled in half-hour blocks.

Predominately student use is envisioned for public machines, according to the computer center director, since only limited memory storage will be available. This factor would make such machines impractical for use in the larger problems involved in many faculty research projects.

Campus users with sufficient need to require a private unit and research funds to support one may have a machine installed in their offices or laboratories. Private units may be either keyboard send and receive machines which transmit either by keyboard or punched tape.

Private users will be charged an installation fee and per-hour charge, with total usage fees set at a $200 minimum and a $3000 maximum per year.

Private off-campus users will include those in the Four-College community, UMass-Boston or any other in-state educational institution whose admission to the system is approved by the University Computer Committee. Off-Campus users will be charged $3000 per year for keyboard units and $3300 per year for tape machines.

All private users will be charged for on-line disc storage at the rate of two cents per day per 1000 words.

The remote system will run this way, according to Dr. Foster: to run a program on the system, the user will type a request for a connection to the computer storage unit on an idle teletype machine, and identify himself to the machine.

He will then type out his program in FORTRAN—the most widely-used computer language—just as if he were sitting at a key punch. After he has completed the entry of all his information into storage and done any necessary editing, he will type RUN.

This will connect him to the main frame of the computer and within a very few seconds his results (or the computer's diagnostic comments on his program) will begin to be printed out on his teletype machine.

Users may, on appropriate arrangement, type SAVE on their machines and their programs and data will be stored.

Users considering private unit installation are asked to make immediate application to Dr. Caxton Foster, Director, University Research Computing Center, at once. Deadline for private user applications is July 1, 1966.

Dick Wood speaking before the Interdorm forum Tuesday night on the subject of University Reform.

Interdorm Forum Formed to Investigate Campus Reform

At a meeting Tuesday night, the men's and women's interdorm councils merged into a single, organization, the interdorm forum. The move is intended to promote closer co-ordination and co-operation between dormitories. After a great deal of discussion, the organization's constitution was drawn up and voted into effect.

At the invitation of Vic Puglia, Dick Wood spoke before the meeting on the subject of university reform.

Wood stated that now is the time to act, through the existing channels of student government, if the student is to participate in shaping future policies that affect him as a member of the university community.

"Generating interest is the first step," he said, "but all campus groups must co-operate to instigate action."

In response, Steve Burrell, Baker dormitory president, moved that the councils give an endorsement and vocal support to the ideals of University reform.

Test Recommended For Student Deferment

by Linda Salolo

Numerous posters are alerting college men of the Selective Service college qualification test which will be given only on Saturday, May 14—Saturday, May 21—Friday, June 3, 1966.

STUDENTS WHO plan to request occupational deferments as college students should apply immediately by obtaining a Bulletin, an Application Card, Ticket of Admission, and mailing envelope from the Machmer Placement Office 13. Applications for the test must be postmarked no later than Saturday, April 23, 1966.

The Selective Service System has established this testing program to provide local draft boards with evidence of the registrants' aptitude for continued college work. Mr. Emery from the Placement Office states, "no student is forced to take the exam, but it would be to his distinct advantage to do so."

SCORES on the test will be used by the Selective Service local boards in considering the eligibility of registrants for occupational deferment as students. A score of 70 is required as a criterion for deferment of undergraduates. A senior, planning to go on to graduate school, needs a scoring in the 80 percentile. Taking the test is entirely optional, but it gives students a kind of double insurance against being drafted.

The Selective Service Qualification test prepared and administered by the Science Research Associates, is designed to test the student's ability to read with understanding and to solve new problems by using general knowledge. Some of the questions are based upon reading passages, charts, tables, or graphs. Other questions test abilities to solve problems based upon the meaning of words and words. There are also mathematical problems designed to test abilities of comprehension and use of numerical relationships.

Contest Underway for New Lyrics For University Fight Song

A prize of a $20 gift certificate to Ann August or the House of Walsh will be awarded to the winner of the University Fight Song Contest. In addition, the winner's name will be printed with the song.

The contest, initiated by the Public Relations Committee of the Student Senate has been organized in order to improve the University Fight song by having students write new lyrics.

THIS EVENT is the outgrowth of a bill proposed in the Student Senate. Feeling that the melody of the Fight Song is an integral part of UMass song spirit, the Senate voted that the song lacked the proper words to express this spirit.

Judging the entries will be Prof. John Jenkins, Conductor of the Marching Band; Dr. Robert Tucker, Asst. Prof. of English; Senator Kevin Downes, sponsor of the bill; and Senator Frances Boronski, Co-chairman of the Public Relations Committee.

This contest is open to all students of the University, and begins Friday, April 15 and closes at P.m. Friday, May 13.

THIS IS A UNIQUE opportunity for students to exercise their lyrical talents as well as to be recipients of a valuable prize and an esteemed place in UMass musical history.

Original words for revision:

FIGHT MASSACHUSETTS

Fight, fi-yi-yight, Massachusetts
Fight, fi-yi-yight, every play;
Fight, fi-yi-yight, for a touchdown,
Fight all your might today.
Fight down the field Massachusetts,
The Stars and the Stripes will gleam;
Fi-yi-yight, fi-yi-yight for old Bay State, fi-yi-yight.
Fight for the Team, Team, Team!

Rules For Contest

• All entries must be submitted typewritten on 8½ x 11 paper.
Mail to: University Fight Song
Student Senate
University of Massachusetts

• Names must appear on a separate sheet attached to the entry. No entries will be returned.
• All entries will be judged on:

1. originality
2. diction
3. over-all composition
4. grammatical structure

Any questions regarding the Fight Song will be answered in the Senate Office from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The Judges Reserve The Right To Reject Any And All Entries. The Decision Of The Judges Is Final.

Nominations Now for Annual Award

Nominations are now being accepted for the annual "Outstanding Professor Award," presented to the professor who has best distinguished himself in the classroom.

Students are asked to write down the name of the professor they have studied under or worked with in any way whom they consider outstanding in his work. The award is based solely on teaching excellence, and performance outside the classroom (excepting special help or tutoring) is disregarded.

A box in the lobby of the Student Union will be available for nomination. Greater student support of this project will help to make selection more meaningful and easier for the award committee.

Spring Is Sprung!

by SCOTTIE INGLIS, Editorial Staff

Spring is, and therefore Spring Day will be. At the University Spring Day is a tradition, a tradition frowned upon by the administration as it is often characterized by unfortunate incidents."

With administrative consent and individual responsibility, Spring Day could remain here as a tradition. It could be a time when all students and faculty members are able to forget their "duties" for the day. A time when we could lay aside the burden of the future and enjoy the present—the joy and hope offered by Spring.

That Spring Day will be, is guaranteed by the nature of the student. However, that Spring Day will be an event unmarred by the consequences of irresponsible and unthoughtful actions can only be realized by mutual cooperation between administration and students.

That we will have our Spring Day is already determined. We will have it. Now it is up to the administration and students to make it a harmless, carefree, undergraduate tradition.

Stockbridge: Part 5

Now It's Up to You...

by BOB GORMAN

As a result of the fact that Stockbridge has a separate office of admissions, some Stockbridge students consider themselves set apart from the rest of the University. Four-year students generally conceive of Stockbridge as being different as a consequence of the existence of separate athletic teams. Others think that Stockbridge is different because its program differs from that of the rest of the University. In a recent interview, President Lederle cleared up these misconceptions.

Concerning the relation of Stockbridge to the University, the president said, "Stockbridge is a separate school, but all Stockbridge students are definitely a part of the University." Stockbridge students have all the rights of any other student. The President further expressed a hope that all student organizations would realize this fact.

DR. LEDERLE also stated that no variation in marks could be drawn between Stockbridge and any other school or college at the University. Besides this, Dr. Lederle commented that there is no great distinction between Stockbridge and the University.

Although Stockbridge was originally founded as a practical arts school, it is today neither a junior college nor a technical school. Rather, it is now a training program for many students who plan on furthering their education.

CONCERNING THE FUTURE of Stockbridge, the President said that Stockbridge is a highly applied agricultural school and will be part of the University until it is no longer in demand. "However, today Stockbridge is the best in the nation and it is growing continuously," he added.

THE REASONS for Stockbridge's housing integration were also explained. Since half of the freshmen class leaves in April, separate housing was given to Stockbridge students. Also, Stockbridge was probably segregated because of some educators' argument that when all students in one field are placed together, they will increase their knowledge in that field. However, since Stockbridge students are interested in meeting other students interested in meeting other integrated next fall.

Integration will not end all inferior treatment of Stockbridge. It is up to each individual to seek his equality. Now that Stockbridge's position has been revealed, no Stockbridge student can be turned away from any student organization.

OPINION POLL OF ALL WOMEN UNDERGRADUATES

Before considering possible changes in women's regulations, the administration would like to know your opinion in the following matters. I am asking women Senators to be responsible for administering the poll of all women residents.

Thank you. Helen Curtis, Dean of Women

	YES	NO
Evaluations of students by Heads of Residence in consultation with student counselors:
Should these be abolished with the realization that the Dean of Women would no longer be able to furnish recommendations for scholarships, fellowships, employment, etc.?	—	—
If evaluations are continued, should there also be evaluations of counselors and Heads of Residence by students?	—	—
Curfews:
Should curfews be retained but liberalized?	—	—
Should curfews be retained for Freshmen and abolished for all other classes?	—	—
Should curfews be entirely abolished?	—	—
Should curfews be retained as they are?	—	—
Sign-out for the evening:
Should students sign simply "out" and "in" for information of the dorm desk?	—	—
Should sign-out be purely voluntary as aid for students who wish to be reached?	—	—
Sign-out for absence overnight:
Should students sign out with address where they could be reached in emergency but with no permission or signature of the Head of Residence?	—	—
Should sign-out be voluntary?	—	—
Should sign-out be abolished?	—	—
Alcohol:
Should there be a "Rathskeller" on campus?	—	—

Attention UMies:

Let's Fix Our Fight Song!

OPEN LETTER TO THE STUDENT BODY:

The Beatles did it, Francis Scot Key did it, and now you too can do it! Yes, now you too can be the first one on your block to compose a song that will be sung and lauded by millions!

The Public Relations Committee of the Student Senate is conducting a song-writing contest for new words to the UMass Fight Song. The tune stays the same, but the words shall be changed to protect the listeners.

Like, here we are, on the fifty yard line, and old UMass scores a touchdown. How do we, the student body, express our utmost joy and enthusiasm to and for the team?

We do it with a "fight fi-yi-yight (one line even begins fi-y-yight, fi-yi-yight)". Say these words over a few times out loud, and if you don't feel a teensie, weenie bit like an idiot, come immediately to the Senate office; people with such school spirit should not go unrecognized.

If, however, you are slightly repulsed by the nonsensical song that inadequately expresses our true sentiments to the team, then sweetie, break out the pen and let history be made!

Thrill to the sound of thousands singing Your song! See beanies fly as thousands sing Your song! A university that sings together, stays together.

Let Your university stay together while singing Your song!

Congratulations For the Collegian

The staffers of the Collegian are to be congratulated on the ACP All-American rating for the Fall semester. It is the first time the Collegian has received a "superior" rating and reflects the caliber of work done by writers, photographers and editors of the staffs.

The long hours, bitter critics, and infrequent rewards are diminished in the knowledge that the job has been well done. The paper is sound. The work is exciting.

I wish every success to the new staff and thank them for the pleasure of working on the same team.

Hooray for Sam!

To the Editor:

Hurray for Sam Sparc! Comments like his will keep our campus newspaper a product of a "Free and Responsible Press" by and for a free and responsible student body.

The appeal to the emotion which has so popularized the "Ballad of the Green Beret" has made any disapproval of the song and its idea appear to be as cardinal a crime as denouncing Mother and Apple Pie. The notion that America's best must have pie in his belly, mother in his heart, and a scrap of green wool on his head is certainly a debatable one.

It may seem far-fetched, but Sam Sparc and his speaking out constitute, for me, anyway, greater potentialities for America's best (whatever that generality may imply) than does any wearer of a green beret.

Student Senate Receives A "Pat on the Back"

To the Editor:

There has been much criticism of the Student Senate lately. I would like to sound a positive note by giving my heartfelt thanks to the Student Senate for its aid and cooperation in planning the University of Massachusetts Chorale Tour in March. Special thanks should go to Gary Bombardier, Jim Allen, Dick Homan, and Bert Freedman for their personal help in making these plans.

We had a very successful tour and have plans for another year. This success for the Chorale and the University would not have been possible without the aid and help of the Student Senate.

Student's Party: A Positive Attitude

To the Editor:

What is the objective of the Students' Party? To serve as an expressive vehicle for University Reform. What gave it life? It exists because a dynamic University is constantly subject to revision, and a vehicle for such change must be provided. Existing institutions have failed to give adequate expression to such needs. The Students' Party will provide this expression.

A University is not a viable entity in itself; it exists for and because of students. It must meet students' needs or be changed to do so.

Inappropriate regulations should not be preserved at the expense of student welfare. Positive, stimulating regulations are called for, and the Students' Party is, in my opinion, the vehicle through which they can be won.

Previously, University reform has been expressed indirectly or incoherently. The sum of sporadic efforts has been negligible. The Students' Party is not content to function sporadically and ineffectively.

Through a mutual endeavor with all who are interested in bettering our University, the Students' Party offers a direct, coherent and continuing vehicle for change.

It's Been Too Long

To the Editor:

At the STOSO Banquet, President Lederle said that for the five years he has been here, he has been "unhappy" that Stockbridge has been "the phantom arm of the University." Five years is a long time to do nothing about wretched dorms of the second-class image. Mr. President, do you think Stockbridge is really an arm, or just a tumor?

A Sincere Attempt?

To the Editor:

Dean Curtis surprised us with what seemed to be a sincere attempt to understand our desires as women students in the form of a poll which was distributed to all women's residence halls on Monday evening. We feel, however, that the poll could not possibly provide a valid statement of our opinions.

The questions were poorly worded, ambiguous, unqualified, and not relevant to the basic issues with which we are concerned. We strongly object to this poll. It does not truly represent our opinions as women undergraduates!

To the Editor:

Wasn't it great the way Auntie Dean, in an effort to let us express our true feelings, gave us that wonderful, unambiguous, relative, highly intelligent "opinion(ated) poll" to answer?

We bet she spent a great deal of time devising those questions, which were obviously designed to elicit unbiased responses from the student-children of our great parent-university. All of the questions were completely unrelated so that we could answer each one independently of the other (isn't that so?). In that way no one could in any way misinterpret any of our responses. The questionnaire has enabled us to make our opinions crystal clear to Auntie Dean, hasn't it?

We would just like to thank the big, mother Auntie for exhibiting so much faith in our native intelligence.

'New' Concept of War Demands New Tactics

To the Editor:

Sam Sparc commented Monday upon the Green Berets as well-trained, expert killers, the antithesis of his own wishes for his future children. I agree with Mr. Sparc in that I do not relish the thought of my children as trained counter-insurgents, but the situation in the world is such that men of the caliber of the Green Berets are a necessity.

The atom bomb and the hydrogen bomb have more-or-less destroyed the concept of war conjured up by memories of the Second World War. Today, war is a political force involving the destruction of a nation's economic and social structure with the clash of arms as only one aspect of the conflict. What is happening in the Congo, Santo Domingo, Vietnam, and various other 'hot spots' is just that. To avoid any political conflict I will use French Algeria as an example.

The FLN in Algeria used the 'new' concept of War. They built up a complete economic and social structure which drove the French out, even though the FLN was militarily checked. In the western sense of war the FLN was defeated in the field, but they carried the day with the 'new' kind of warfare in which the Green Berets are trained. By means of terrorism, sabotage, and coercion the FLN destroyed the control of the French over the countryside, with French administrative control effectively destroyed, the FLN then established economic and social control of the country. The French controlled the battlefield and lost the country.

In one case, the Battle of Algiers, Foreign Legion and Colonial paratroopers defeated the FLN at their own game with their own tactics.

It is unfortunate that American soldiers must be trained in terror, sabotage, and coercion, but we cannot ignore the lessons of Algeria, Cyprus, etc. The only means of winning a 'new' concept war is by being prepared to combat all aspects. Green Berets are as necessary to maintaining the peace as AID teams, medical teams, and foreign aid, all parts of the Army fighting a 'new' war.

He's Sitting In Front!

To the Editor:

I am the world's most apathetic, dirty, long-haired, unpatriotic beatnik.

I have absolutely no cause, nor even a good excuse for existence. However, I have....

- 1) Given fifty pints of blood to the Viet Cong.
- 2) Picketed Fort Devens once a month for the past year.
- 3) Bought two copies of every Bob Dylan album.
- 4) Burned my draft card, library card, meal ticket, drivers license, and my left thumb.
- 5) Blocked every troop train I've seen, which isn't a whole lot, but then again, a troop train is pretty hard to block.

Right now I'm sitting around waiting for futility, apathy, meaninglessness, communism and in general, utter chaos to take over the world.

Only trouble is...I'm sitting in the front of the Hatch.

From The Bottom Up

To the Editor:

Reform appears to be coming to UMass. Student groups in the form of the Student Party and the Univ. Reform Committees are approaching administrators with suggestions and appeals for change.

There has always been a lot of talk from South College that administration is "willing and eager" to solicit student opinion. I would venture to say that this "eagerness" has never been over-ly implemented.

So when change does occur, when improvements are made, though they be handed down from the top, let us take note now for memory's sake that they originated at the bottom.

Sex Team Tells Hatch: "Keep it dirty"

by CLIF SNICKERS
Hygiene Reporter

"Sex is dirty, and now I don't have to worry about it and I can enjoy it."

This was the theme and the concluding line of a brief but effective production in the Hatch last night at 8 o'clock.

Some said the two performers (one disguised as a girl and one disguised as a guy) were UMass fraternity pledges. Some said they were Amherst fraternity pledges. Some just laughed.

ONE UNRELIABLE source claimed the production was sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program. But as no advance publicity was received by the Collegian, the paper assumes this not to be the case. Dressed in a mop wig and a Gordon Linen towel the GIRL discussed with the BOY the relative "cleanness" or "uncleanness" of sex.

"You mean it's not like brushing your teeth?" was his startled reaction.

THE CLIMAX of the show came when they acknowledged their mutual concern, jumped off their respective tables, and embraced on the floor. The large and responsive audience rendered the pair a hearty round of applause.

The Collegian was unable to determine whether future productions are being planned. But it was overheard that advanced ticket sales for a repeat performance are going extremely well.

Annapolis Reputation Suffers From Grade-Fixing Charges

The academic reputation of the United States Naval Academy suffered two blows in as many days when it became known that a blue-ribbon accrediting team from the Middle Atlantic Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools plans to recommend the academy upgrade its academic program by de-emphasizing military and athletic activities and then when a professor charged his contract is not being renewed because he refused to participate in grade-fixing activities.

The academy's grading practices were at the heart of both disputes.

A. BERNARD DROUGHT, the academic dean, acknowledged to the accrediting commission that the academy has an official policy limiting the number of students permitted to fail their courses, regardless of grades.

The dean said he initiated the policy shortly after he came to Annapolis in 1963. He said the action was prompted by an increase in failures when the school changed to a letter grade system from numerical grades and the desire to keep an "attrition rate" at a steady 35 per cent "as it has been for the past 10 years."

THE COMMISSIONS also cited a 288-page self-study by the academy and dated Feb. 1, 1966. The study was prepared for the use of the commission and covers every aspect of the academy's program. It was signed by Rear Adm. D. L. Kauffman, the academy's superintendent.

The study said "it is a matter of great concern to many of the faculty that the practical necessity of graduating reasonable numbers of Naval officers each year makes it difficult, if not impossible, to base grade distribution solely on scholastic competence."

The self-study said there is "undeniable evidence of 'coasting' on the part of significant numbers of middle-C average midshipmen who have learned to make the minimum effort and pass successfully."

THIS EFFECT, the study said, "is well recognized among seniors since they realize that the financial investment and pay of each midshipman is a deterrent to their dismissal except for serious doubt as to their future potential as Naval officers."

Just as sources at the academy were fuming over the prospect of the commission's report, Kent Ponder, an assistant professor of Spanish, said his contract was not being renewed for the fall because he had refused to engage in grade-fixing.

PONDER SAID that a midshipman whose father is a high-ranking Naval officer was allowed to pass a first-year Spanish course even though the youth only scored 16 per cent on the final written examination.

The head of the academy's foreign languages department, Capt. Robert S. Hayes, denied that there is any connection between the decision to let Ponder's contract expire and the question of grade adjustments.

As early as September, Hayes said, his civilian faculty aides had "begun to question the caliber of Ponder's performances."

PONDER SAID that Hayes, and even Superintendent Kauffman, were involved in efforts to get him to pass the midshipman. Ponder said he was called into Kauffman's office where the superintendent, who stressed he was acting as a "friend of the boys father," asked Ponder to give the boy "extra help" so he could pass. Ponder said he replied that the boy was receiving extra instruction but his chance of passing was slim.

Ponder said the boy's grade was changed after he had given it.

Naiads Demonstrate Synchronized Swim

by SUE SHAFRAN

Last evening, the girls' physical education pool was the scene for the first Naiads presentation of 1966. This synchronized swimming event is sponsored annually by the Women's Athletic Association for the public free of charge.

The atmosphere was one of pure relaxation. With the idea that "To name is to destroy; to suggest is to create," the group of girls presented nine numbers, each suggesting a different title but no unifying theme. In a background of pink, blue, and white lights and a combination of serious and light music, the pool became alive with lovely swimmers.

Junior Naiads, a group of eleven, opened the evening to the marching rhythm of "Parade of The Charioteers." Clad in blue bathing suits and gold caps, they swam into various formations, all in perfect time with the marching tempo.

One of the most interesting feats of synchronized swimming was performed by Elizabeth Novak and Carolyn Miller. Each girl repeated the same stunts, one on the pool's side and the other in the water.

Another lively sequence was "Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs." Girls, playing the roles of the various story-book characters, swam to the tunes of "High Ho, High Ho" and "Somebody My Prince Will Come."

Still other inspiring numbers followed. All were done with expert precision and elegance of poise. For an evening of enjoyment, visit Naiads 1966.

Stratford Festival in Rehearsal For 14th Annual Season

The Stratford Festival Company, Stratford, Ontario, made up this year of many of the finest actors from Canada's two historic cultures, start the eight-week rehearsal and 18-week performing period, April 11.

IT WILL BE the heaviest schedule for the longest season ever. For a few it will be their debut on the dramatic Stratford stage. Most, however, will be familiar favorites to the more than a third of a million expected visitors.

For the last two months the spacious workshops at the Festival Theatre have hummed steadily as the production department began the long process of "building" the hundreds of costumes and properties needed for the 14th annual season.

OPENING NIGHT, June 6, will present the culmination of the History Cycle launched in 1964, "Henry V," directed by Michael Langham, Artistic Director of the eFestival, returned after a year's leave of absence.

On Tuesday, June 7, the "Wars of the Roses," cycle is begun with "Henry VI," directed by John Hirsch, Founding Artistic Director of the Manitoba Theatre Centre. A third Shakespeare play, "Twelfth Night," will be staged by David William, Director of Productions for Glasgow's noted Citizens' Theatre and opens Wednesday, June 8.

All opening-night performances begin at 7:30 p.m., with subsequent presentations at 8:30 p.m.

SOME 38 ACTORS, the first contingent of the 60 needed for the five productions will pour into Stratford during the weekend.

Besides the Shakespeare plays are "Nicholas Romanov," by William Kinsolving, also directed by Mr. Langham, and Strindberg's

"The Dance of Death," directed by Jean Gascon, Artistic Director of Le Theatre du Nouveau Monde and Associate Director of the Festival. There open July 12th and 19th respectively at the Avon Theatre.

The music season opens July 8 with Mozart's "Don Giovanni." The Royal Winnipeg Ballet's original work, "Rose Latulippe," opens Aug. 16.

All matinees and Sunday concerts will begin at 2:00 p.m.

Yale University Will Offer "History of the Cinema"

Yale University conceded Sunday that there may be something in these new-fangled motion pictures after all.

The university announced that starting next fall the motion picture gains new status. It officially will be recognized as an art form, and a course in "The History and Art of the Cinema" will be initiated as part of the regular liberal arts program.

The new course will be devoted to "the development of the film as an art form" and "historical and aesthetic analysis."

Teaching the course will be a 30-year-old history of art instructor with several movies to his credit.

Movie-maker Standish Lawder says his course will concentrate on films up to the 1930s, "leap nimbly over the Hollywood wasteland of the '50s and '60s, and end with a brief look at developments in post-war avant garde film making."

MILITARY COMMAND TECHNOLOGY

MITRE is chief technical advisor and systems engineer to the Air Force Electronic Systems Division of the Air Force Systems Command. In this capacity, we design and develop such global, computer-based systems as the NORAD Combat Operation Center and the Back-Up Interceptor Control System. Other commitments: development of a future air traffic control system and supporting the Defense Communications Agency in the development of the National Military Command System. We call this Military Command Technology.

For the young systems engineer, this is uniquely rewarding work. You associate with the top men in your field. You work in an atmosphere that allows you to extend your capabilities professionally and academically.

At MITRE, men trained in single disciplines are encouraged to grow beyond their original fields of interest. Systems designers learn to work from an increasingly broad base.

You may work in such diverse areas as information theory, computer design, display techniques and propagation. You may analyze. You may synthesize. You may deal with systems or individual components. At the highest levels you may have to consider political, economic and social factors... as well as the available and predictable technology.

If you have a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in Electrical Engineering, Physics, or Mathematics and want more information regarding opportunities at MITRE, call collect, James L. Glinos (617) 271-2078 or write in confidence to College Relations Coordinator, The MITRE Corporation, Box 208 Bedford, Massachusetts.

N. L. Race — Take Your Pick

Only Cubs, Astros, Mets Without Pennant Hope

by MIKE CURRAN

The National League pennant race promises to be a battle right to the wire with no less than seven teams involved.

The Nationals have copped 8 of the last 12 October Classics and last year outdrew the American League by four million fans. The all-time National League attendance record of 13½ million will again be broken and there is an outside chance that all 10 teams will hit seven figures. The pennant race itself is completely unpredictable.

With Koufax and Drysdale safely under contract, the Los Angels Dodgers are a threat to repeat as N.L. champs.

and will be used against left-handed pitching. The Pittsburgh Pirates, third place finishers a year ago after losing 24 of their first 33 games, are counting on the hitting of Clemente, Stargell, and Clendenon plus the hurling of Veale, Law, and Schwall to lead them to their first flag since 1960. McBean and Face give the Bucs a formidable bullpen. Two young pitchers, Luke Walker and Woody Fryman, were very impressive this spring.

If O'Toole and Jay had been normal last year the Cincinnati Redlegs would have won the bach. Quick change artists over the winter, the Philadelphia Phillies acquired White, Groat, Uecker, Brandt, Linz, Clemens, and Knowles in off-season deals. The pitching staff is led by Bunning and Short, while Callison and Allen lead the offensive attack. The Phillies have four rookie pitchers in Knowles, Grant Jackson, Ferguson Jenkins, and Gene Verbanic.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who fell from first to seventh a year ago, are trying to get on the comeback trail. The Redbirds are strong behind the plate and in the outfield, but are hurting in the infield and on the mound. Tim McCarver is one of the better young catchers in the league, and Johnson, Flood, and Brock give the Cards the fastest outfield in baseball. The infield of Kernek, Javier, Bucher, and Smith isn't scaring anyone and the mound corps has only one dependable hurler, Gibson. First basemen George Kernek and southpaw Larry Jaster are the top future prospects.

Leo "The Lip" Durocher takes the reins of the Chicago Cubs with the hopes of pulling them from the second division for the first time in twenty years. Three men who could help him are Williams, Santo, and Banks, but beyond this group Leo has to help himself. Ernie Broglio, once a big winner with the Cardinals, bids for a come-back with the Bruins. Jackson and Ellsworth are the only other reliable chuckers. Byron Brown, a slugging outfielder, and Bill Hands, a fastballer from the P.C.L., are the first-year men who figure prominently in the Cubs' plans.

The Astro-dome will have plenty of green this year, both on the bench and on the infield. Manager Grady Hatton's Houston Astros are the youngest team in the majors despite an ancient pitching staff led by Robin Roberts, in quest of his 300th win. Sonny Jackson, a speedster from Washington, D.C., will open at shortstop. He is the preseason favorite to cop the National League rookie-of-the-year award.

Another successful season at the gate is in the offing for the New York Mets as they try to improve their 1965 showing under new mentor Wes Westrum. Stuart, a natural Met, was stolen from the Phillies last February. He combines with Hunt, McMillan, and Boyer to give the Mets an offensively solid infield. Defensively, the latter three are standouts, while the temperamental Stuart is better known to many as "Stonefingers." Westrum will probably platoon his outfielders while "Pork Chops" Grote and "Choo Choo" Coleman will share the catching chores. The only sure thing about the Mets' pitching is that Fisher will start on opening day—whenever that should be. McGraw, who survived Venezuela, are the brightest pitching prospects.

S.F. ace hurler Juan Marichal

Boteze ended the futile rally by striking out Howie Neal and Ross.

Now that Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale are in the Dodger fold, L.A. is a threat to repeat as N.L. champs.

gies Dodgers are a threat to repeat as N.L. champs. The pitching of this duo will be augmented by Osteen, Perranoski, and Miller. The speed of Wills and Willie Davis may be equal to the pennant winning task, but recent Dodger history shows that the World Champions are unable to come up with the great effort in successive seasons. The top rookie is Don Sutton, a 21-year old righthander who compiled a 23-7 record last year in the minors.

Led by the ageless Mays, who figures to surpass Ott, Williams, and Fox in lifetime homers, the San Francisco Giants have a good shot at all the marbles. The acquisition of McDaniel and Gibson will strengthen a mound staff that was third last year in ERA. The Candlestick residents will also be helped by the return of Cepeda, while catcher Bob Barton is the top freshman flag. If they return to form they will give the Reds the top starting five in the league while teaming with Maloney, Ellis, and Pappas. Deron Johnson, the majors' RBI leader, Rose, and Pinson will provide the offensive punch. Two rookies, Tommy Helms and Dick Simpson, will be in the starting lineup, and both have the tools to become stars.

A brand new city, a brand new park, and a brand new experience — playing before people I await the new edition Atlanta Braves. If there is one thing the Braves have it is power. Last year six men clobbered 20 or more homers for the club, and this season Menke and Thomas, each capable of that feat, add to the already potent attack. Cloninger and Blasingame are the best of the mound staff. The only rookies who figure in the Braves' picture are hurlers

Trio of Attackmen Lifts Crosse Outlook

by TOM FITZGERALD

A lacrosse team can't win without putting the ball in the net. And, for the most part, it's up to the attackmen to do the putting. The attackman must know how to shoot, but he must also know when to shoot and when to set up a teammate.

UMass' chief forward line—it is on the field the better part of each game—is an experienced, capable threesome. It is also an odd one, with a right-hander playing the left-handed feeder position, an unusually short crease man, and an excellent, if sometimes inconsistent, shooter.

Senior Jim O'Donnell is the feeder and has learned to pass and shoot left-handed, a feat that Coach Dick Garber calls "amazing". Jim played at midfield last year, and Garber says that "He has taken a tough assignment in moving from midfield to attack. As a matter of fact, I was thinking of moving him back to midfield, but he's worked so hard at attack that I don't know who else we'd put there. We're counting heavily on his ability to control the ball as both a feeder and a scorer."

The coach adds, "He has made the greatest improvement of any of our attackmen. His position, by the way, would ordinarily draw the opponent's best man defensively, because most teams operate on the theory that if you stop that feeder, you control the other team's offense."

O'Donnell, who competed in swimming at Holyoke High and in basketball at Holyoke Community, first met lacrosse in skills class during his sophomore year. He made the first middle line last year and reached the high point of his season with a goal against Brown, which he considers the toughest team he has faced.

"O.D." rates Dick Brown as the most talented of his teammates over two years: "He sort of impressed everybody. I'd say it was his competitive spirit that inspired the rest of the guys."

A brother of TEP, the 5'11", 170 pound O'Donnell is majoring in Physical Education. His plans for the future include "grad school, hopefully."

Although only 5'7, "Big Howie" Goffman, a junior, is the crease attackman, playing a position that, according to Coach Garber, is normally occupied by a person 6'3" and over. "We have two basic problems with Howie," says Garber, "spotting him when he's loose on the crease and getting a pair of sweat pants that'll fit him."

"Howie has been effective despite his size because of his stick-work. He's got good hustle, and he's a hard rider, when the other team has position of the ball."

Goffman comes from Randallstown, Md.—that's lacrosse country—and has played the sport since ninth grade. Although not particularly quick, he can handle the hickory and has given a good deal of help on the finer points of this game to his less experienced teammates.

With 200-pound defensemen leaning on him, he has to know how to get off a quick shot. As Coach Garber says, "He takes an awful physical beating during the course of a game. But he has the ability to bounce right back."

Goffman tied Kevin O'Brien for the team leadership in goals last year with 12. A large source of satisfaction for him was his three-goal performance against

TONY ARNERI

Siena. "It was my first game as a starter and the first of the season," he comments, "so it felt pretty good."

Like O'Donnell, his brother at TEP, Goffman calls Dick Brown the best man on the team for the past two years. As far as the best team, he says, "I imagine either Brown or Dartmouth last year."

"I'll probably go into the Army," says Goffman, a Business Administration major, in discussing his post-graduate plans.

Now in his second year of lacrosse, junior Tony Arneri, says Garber, "has one of the hardest shots in New England and is a fellow whom I've always thought had great potential. We have designed some offensive plays, when we have an extra man and when we're even, to set him up."

At times, however, Garber has been concerned with Tony's attitude and uneven showings, brilliant one day, lackluster the next. "Actually," Garber says, "we're counting on him to be more than a scorer, we're counting on him to be a lacrosse player, which involves defense, hustle, and team play."

"One of the adjustments he has to make is to take advantage of the opportunities when they appear and to bide his time when they don't. Once he makes his adjustment he'll be even more effective a scorer."

Arneri, who stands 5'10" and weighs 195, should improve on last year's 10-one assist performance. He shot three consecutive goals in the Friday night ex-

Trackmen Open Outdoor Slate

by TERRY CARPENTER

The homeless Yankee Conference Track Champions begin their 11th outdoor season under Coach William Footrick tomorrow at Boston College in a relay carnival. All running events in the meet except the steeplechase and the 440-yd. intermediate hurdles will be relays, and all field events will be decided by the total distance or total height of three competitors from each school.

RUNNING for the Redmen will be John Medeiros, Jay Hall, Ted Davis, and Stan Flint in the 480-yd. shuttle hurdles relay with Steve St. Clair, Greg Bowman, Billy Thoms, and Terry Carpenter in the four-mile relay. Bob Moroney and Damian Gaffney will run the 440-yd. intermediate hurdles; Medeiros, Doug Sloane, Art Larvey, and Steve Burrell will run in both the 440- and 880-yd. relays; and Carpenter will go in the steeplechase. In the other relays (sprint and distance medley, mile and 2-mile relays) Coach Footrick will have to shuffle his runners around to get the most rested men in there.

GOING in the field events will be Bob Karagosian, Court Bassett, and Tony Divver in the hammer; Bob Delue in the javeline; Medeiros, Larvey, and Billy Tindall in the broad jump; Medeiros, Tindall, and John Lisack in the high jump; Medeiros, Tindall, and Prouty or Lisack in the triple jump; and Bob Murray, Lizotte, and Waterman in the pole vault.

Opponents Garner 3 Hits in 2 Games

Redmen Win Two With Smith, Boteze

One-hitter by Smitty
In 2-0 Win Over Amherst

by DAVE JARNES

UMass opened its season on a successful note by downing crosstown rival Amherst College 2-0 behind the strong one-hit pitching of Bill Smith.

Captain Terry Swanson and exciting sophomore Hagan Andersen provided most of the U-Mass offense as they accounted for both runs and four of the Redmen's 7 hits. Hagan opened the first inning by lining a sharp single to left on the first pitch. Frank Stewart walked and Swanson drove Andy in with a hit to left. This proved to be all the Lordennmen needed, but the same Andersen-Swanson combo clicked again in the third. Hagan led off by bombing a double to deep left and with two out Terry drove him in with a bloop double to short right.

Amherst pitcher Dick Ball settled down after a rocky start and slammed the door on the Redmen the rest of the way. John Passmore, star quarterback on the Lord Jeff's football team, mopped up in the eighth inning. Ball was greatly aided by his errorless teammates who made several sparkling plays in the field. Leftfielder Wayne Donner robbed Hagan Andersen of a third hit by spearing his line drive and Jim Babyak was thrown out on a fine play by shortstop Joe Kelly.

SMITTY HAD complete control of the game throughout and allowed only one runner to reach second. He made his only real bad pitch of the game when he hung a high changeup which John Lindley promptly lined up the middle. A control pitcher who is not overpowering, Smith is most effective when he keeps the ball down low, and he certainly did just that against the Jetts while striking out five and walking only two. Smith's teammates gave him good support in the field although they committed two inconsequential errors. Jeff Whitney and Anderson were the culprits.

Coach Lorden had a great deal of praise for the superlative hurling of Smith and the fine play of his team. The veteran mentor, however, was not too pleased with the rather meager offense of his batters. It should be pointed out that the game was played in near freezing temperatures, making it extremely difficult for the batters to get good grips on their bats. The weather was so cold that heavy woolen parkas, which are worn by the football team, were worn by the UMass players on the bench.

Smith's performance is particularly heartening. After having a fine 1965 season, there had been some concern about Smitty's performance on the southern tour. Bill's masterpiece against Amherst dispelled any fears that might have arisen.

Bill Smith, shown above, and Carl Boteze turned in superb performances as the Redmen defeated Amherst and Boston U.

Lacrosse Loses

by TOM FITZGERALD

"A day of frustration" was the way Coach Dick Garber sums up the UMass lacrosse team's 13-3 loss to Wesleyan Wednesday afternoon on the Wesleyan campus in Middletown, Conn.

"No team should score 13 goals against us," the mentor said. But Wesleyan, which was 11-3 last year and is strong again this year, handcuffed the Redmen's defense and tallied two goals in the first quarter, five in the second, two in the third, and four in the fourth.

At 2:00 after the first canto, it was still anybody's game. Wesleyan threw in two more in the second period, however, and after Jim O'Donnell scored on a solo dodge, the winners shot three more goals to turn the tilt into a rout.

O'Donnell scored again in the third quarter, and Dick Pulsifer chalked one up in the fourth. But the team was tense and suffered from frequent mental lapses.

The defeat even the squad's record at 1-1. A non-league contest is slated for Friday night, when the Redmen will face the Back Bay Lacrosse Club on the intramural field, with the opening face-off at 7.

Smith shows fine form in his masterpiece against Amherst.

As TKE Buries KS, 11-0

by DAVE JARNES

A no-hitter and a stirring last-ditch rally by the defending campus champions got the 1966 softball season off to an auspicious start.

TKE, THE DEFENDING IFC champs, humbled KS, 11-0, behind the no-hit pitching of Ron Merrill. Meanwhile, the Moody Blues rallied for five runs in the seventh to beat the strong Courtesy Taxies, 9-8. The mark of a champion is its ability to come from behind and the Moody Blues, who upset TKE last year for the all-campus title, showed their determination not to relinquish their crown.

The Hampshire Hardnoses came through with a big win by nipping the potent Untouchables, 3-2, while establishing themselves as strong contenders for the Independent title. Another close independent battle saw the Zeros score two runs in the bottom of the seventh to beat PKN, 9-8.

THE GREENOUGH GRANTS put on an awesome display of power while bombing the Barracudas, 10-1. Dudley Sanford struck out 8 and gave up only 3 hits while his teammates were pounding Baker's pitching for 13 safeties.

The defending dorm champion Chadbourne Maroons cruised to a 6-2 triumph over the Buffaloes behind Leary's 3 hits. A three run rally in the bottom of the sixth helped the Lemons nip the Bruins, 10-9 after the Bruins had scored twice in the top of the sixth.

CHET ZABEK'S FINE pitching enabled the Webster Panthers to hold off the Webster Rams in an 8-6 battle. The Rams spotted the Panthers a 7-0 lead after two innings as a result of some sloppy infield play and could never quite catch up.

Two runs in the bottom of the sixth gave Eddie Rubin's Webster Hawks a 14-13 thriller over the Grayson Aces. The Hawks pounded out 18 hits in this slugfest. In another north league game the Hemlocks edged the Phallics 7-5.

The Landscapers won both their games this week, clobbering the Knights 19-5 and winning a close one against the Land Architecture, 10-9. The Land Architecture lost another one run game to the Forestry Club, 7-6, as a 4 run rally in the last of the sixth fell one run shy.

Voluntary Signouts

Women's Affairs Urges Parietals; No Curfews

by GORDON DAVIDSON, News Editor

The Woman's Affairs Committee voted yesterday to recommend that curfews be abolished and sign out sheets be made voluntary for all university women except first semester freshmen.

OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS include the establishment of parietals Sundays and Saturdays, the abolition of weekend sign-out cards, and extensions of the hours for men callers in the women's dormitories.

Jacquelyn Hall, Co-Chairman of the woman's Affairs Committee, stated that the recommendations are a response to the petitions which have been circulated in the dorms, and meetings between the Women's Affairs Committee and residents.

"75% TO 80% of all the girls in the dorms signed the petitions which asked for the abolition of curfews and voluntary sign-out sheets. We went around to every dorm, and girls came up with good, concrete reasons for every one of these changes."

The recommendations will go to the Senate Wednesday, and if approved, will be sent to the administration for passage.

"In the past the administration has always followed the recommendations of the committee," added Miss Hall.

The recommendations are in the form of a complete revision of the handbook of women's regulations, and include the following major revisions of policy:

CURFEWS

Recommended that curfews be abolished for all women except first semester freshmen girls who will have a 10:30 curfew during the week for the 1st four weeks, and a 12:00 week nights after the first four weeks, and a 1:00 p.m. weekend for the entire semester. There will be no curfews for freshmen on Homecoming and Military ball weekends. Freshman women over 21 will be exempt from this curfew.

SIGN OUT SHEETS

All signing out will be on a voluntary basis except for first semester freshmen, who will be required to sign out. There will be only one sign out card for the infirmary, home, library and overnights, to be used on a voluntary basis. Again first semester freshmen will be required to use this card.

PARIETALS

Parietals are recommended for every Sunday afternoon from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., on Saturdays and holidays. The hours for the Saturday parietals will be left to the majority vote of the individual dorms, thus allowing dorm autonomy.

LATE MINUTES

Violations of freshmen curfews will require the accumulation of 15 late minutes before the loss of a Friday night, and 20 minutes before the loss of a Saturday.

OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

It was also recommended that the hours for receiving men callers in the dorms be extended from 6:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. Recommended in addition, women should be allowed to have female guests in their rooms at any time by signing a guest sheet.

Other recommendations include abolition of housekeeping inspection by counselors or housemothers, but not university officials.

Dues will be computed by the treasurer of each dorm, and the floor treasurers and the total should be divided by the numbers of girls in the dorm, including the counselors, to determine each girl's dues.

IT WAS also recommended that an approval be sought from

Summer Publishing Offers Money, Experience

by PETER HENDRICKSON, Senior Reporter

A new facet to collegiate journalism is being continued this summer at the University. The Collegian will be published twice a week during the Summer School session by administration employees.

MRS. MARY HUDZIKIEWICZ, University Program Advisor, said that three undergraduates were hired to be "almost members of the working part of the administration" as they were last summer. The staff includes editors Tom Donovan, Ellen Levine and Eric Wish.

"But," she was quick to add, "their freedom is almost guaranteed. They are only under the pressure of advice from the administration. We just suggest what they may cover. There are too many fingers in the pot to coerce them into a particular course of action."

STUDENT STAFFERS are given no remuneration during spring and fall semesters, when the paper is funded by a Student Senate-administered tax. The summer activities program is under administrative supervision.

Mrs. Hudzikiewicz said that the three students are paid so that they can afford to return to school in the fall without losing the opportunity to earn money from summer jobs. The twice-weekly paper is published at a cost of $4,500 from a total summer student activities budget of approximately $28,000. As with editorial freedom, the summer staff of the Collegian have fiscal autonomy within the total appropriation.

Summer staffers of the Collegian will use the same name, according to Mrs. Hudzikiewicz, and must solicit advertising to pay for part of the paper's costs.

"THE AIM of the paper is to inform—the same as during the regular year. The students are completely free to report on anything. Of course they should display discretion," she said.

"Students experiment with different roles in college but they should be more careful with the newspaper. It's more than merely carrying a placard or uttering an inflammatory statement. It has more permanence," she said.

She recommended that an advisor be available for the students to consult when touchy situations arise. He should not be a 'yes' or 'no' man, but should be an administrator whose opinion is respected, she said.

"I hope that the summer editors will strive to improve this summer's Collegian and make it a regular activity for the freshmen who

Brooke Accepts Invitation To Speak to Class of '69

Edward W. Brooke, Attorney General of Massachusetts and Republican candidate for senator of this state has accepted an invitation from the Class of 1969 to speak in the SU Ballroom 4 p.m. Friday, April 22.

BROOKE is currently the 35th Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Previously he was appointed by Gov. Volpe to the office of Chairman of the Finance Commission of Boston from April, 1961 to September, 1962.

Among other honors he was a recipient of "One of Ten Outstanding Young Men of Greater Boston," award from the Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1952.

AFTER finishing school in the Washington, D. C. public school system Brooke attended Howard University, graduating in 1941. He then spent five years of active service in the U. S. army, receiving a Bronze Star. In 1950 he took his Master of Law degree from Boston University.

The Attorney General is currently a Trustee of Boston University, and director of the Republican Club of Massachusetts. He is the author of "The Challenge of Change" published in April, 1966.

Atty. Gen. Edward Brooke

The Serendipity Singers, a group of seven men and two women who specialize in doing just about anything well, appeared at the Curry Hicks Cage last Saturday night. The program featured jazz, folk, and satirical music, plus comedy highlights.

WEEK IN REVIEW

by PAMELA METAKAS, Staff Reporter
THE NATION

It has been announced that national elections for a So. Vietnamese 'constituent assembly' will be held on Aug. 14. Informed U.S. sources are hoping Premier Nguyen Cao Ky can keep office until the elections. If Ky does not, there could be either disruption with a new government or cabinet changes which would cause an upset in rural pacification programs in the War. The ruling junta of Premier Ky has agreed to resign after elections if the people wish it. But he pointed out "I will fight any government that will not secure the people's happiness and fight the Communists."

BOMBING RAIDS by B52s were increased this week both north and south of the border. The raids were concentrated in the 1st Corps area, known for its opposition to Ky's military junta. This area includes the border province of Quang Tri, 110 miles from Danang. Approximately 16 Vietcong were killed in border clashes at the time.

Pres. Johnson returned home this week after a short Mexican trip. The trip was the first the President made to a foreign capital since he took office. He was greeted in Mexico City by a huge crowd that lined the 9-mile route from the airport to Los Pinos, the residence of Mexican President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

IN A 'GREAT SOCIETY' speech on Friday, the President, commenting on the Alliance for Progress, said, "I am proud to report to the Mexican people and to all of Latin America that our common effort is proving itself with specific results. Our dreams are becoming realities."

THE STATE

A SMALL GROUP of labor officials began collecting 60,000 signatures in Massachusetts to get an anti-sales tax referendum on the fall election ballot. Pres. of the Mass. State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, revealed plans for the county campaign at an all-day meeting at Council headquarters this week. Atty. Gen. Edward Brooke is expected to deliver the official petition format today. This will be the official beginning of the campaign.

Both state and national warnings against the unauthorized use of LSD have increased this past week. Two incidents this month have prompted these increased warnings. One was the admission of a 5-year old girl to a Brooklyn hospital with convulsions after she swallowed LSD left in the refrigerator by an 18-year old uncle. The other was the knife-slaying of a 30-year old man's mother-in-law after flying on LSD for three days.

THE USE OF ACID by college students has become so widespread that the new head of the Food and Drug Administration warned 2,000 colleges and universities of its dangers. On campuses there have been terrifying effects when acid heads have encountered irreversible psychotic reactions after taking the acid 'ride.'

THE CAMPUS

Dean of Women Helen Curtis announced that women's evaluation sheets have been eliminated. In the past these dossiers were submitted to the Office of the Dean of Women when a student left a residence hall. The elimination of the sheets was a direct result of one of the University Reform Committee's bringing of the problem to the attention of the entire campus community.

IT HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED that a three-week Summer Workshop Course in Technical Writing will be offered from July 24-Aug. 13 at the University facilities on Nantucket Island. Those participating will earn three graduate or undergraduate credits.

Over 70 Mt. Holyoke students and faculty members participated in a three-day fast to protest the U.S. government's use of herbicides on the rice fields in Vietnam. The group agreed that, "For already starving people to be denied food is no less a crime than poisoning food they already have."

THE UNIVERSITY Precisionettes performed in the National Cherry Blossom Festival parade and competition in Washington (Apr. 14-17). Under the direction of Susan Wanczyk, commander, and Bernard Cabral, drillmaster, the girls will also perform in the Spring Military Review on May 20th.

A professional pantomime team, the Yakims, performed on campus Friday and Saturday as part of the DVP. Their act utilizes mime as both a serious and a comic mode of expression.

IN SENATE elections last week, John Greenquist was elected President, Tim Cunningham, Vice President, Bert Friedman, Treasurer and Fran Boronski, Secretary. The last two offices were uncontested.

Milton Mayer, visiting lecturer in English at UM has refused to pay his 1965 federal income tax. He is part of a group of 360 professors, scientists, writers, doctors and entertainers who refuse to pay on the grounds that U.S. forces in Vietnam are 'clearly being used in violation of the U.S. Constitution, international law and the U.N. Charter.'

WOMEN'S AFFAIRS . . .

the Fire Marshall's office for the use of hair dryers in individual rooms.

It was recommended that these rules should be applied to the summer sessions and vacations as well.

MISS HALL added, "we have made these rules on the assumption that college students are responsible, and that this is what the majority of women want."

"The administration has stated that the students make their own rules. If the administration does not accept these recommendations, we will resubmit them. We cannot compromise on what the students want."

Few students appeared last night for the sophomore class meeting in Mahar auditorium. Topics discussed were Winter Carnival and University Reform. Students expressed a desire for more adequate representation of their views concerning class projects and student affairs.

Alpha Lambda Delta Initiates 28

Alpha LambdaDelta, the freshmen women's honor society, initiated 28 new members who have attained a 3.5 cumulative average. Initiation was held in the Council Chambers of the Student Union, followed by a tea in the Colonial Lounge, April 17.

are starting their careers. The selected editors have shown me they do intend to innovate this summer with special depth stories on the swing-shift freshmen.

THEIR AIM should be similar to that of the regular school year. Of course, we expect them to support the Fine Arts Festival but they should treat that copy with no special attention. They still must make their own news judgment," she said.

Editors of the regular Collegian are selected by the staff members with no control by the administration except as they are represented on the Publishing Board. The summer people submitted applications for the job.

Mrs. Hudzikiewicz said: "I wanted to see what their thinking was on the summer paper. There was not enough news last summer. But they were the staff that put the summer project on its feet."

"EXPERIENCE was also considered. We did not interview the candidates but told them we would if there was any doubt in our minds about who could best do the job," she reported.

SUG Permission Required For All Selling Within Union

In recognition of the need to clarify the selling and sampling policy of the Student Union, the following policy was passed by the Student Union Board of Governors:

"NO SELLING or sampling will be permitted within the Student Union without requesting permission in writing from the Student Union Board of Governors at least thirty days in advance of the event."

"A committee will recommend action on requests for selling and sampling in the Union. In the event of an emergency whereby a request cannot be placed before the Board for resolution 30 days prior to the event, the said committee shall make an immediate decision, to be reviewed by the Board in entirety at the next meeting."

THE GENERAL INTEREST of the campus community will be taken into consideration when the Board reviews requests for selling or sampling in the Union. While the Board recognizes the need for organizations to make money, it also wishes to prevent the Union from becoming a mass market place.

Room Phones To Be Installed

by MARJIE FLANDERS
Staff Reporter

Residents of the Southwest Complex, Orchard Hill dorms, and Brooks and Baker Houses can plan to have individual room telephones next fall according to Kenneth W. Johnson, University Treasurer.

HOPEFULLY, Brett and Gorman Houses will be included. However, this is doubtful since the University has some wiring which must be done first.

As soon as funds become available, the entire campus will be under this Centrex system.

UNDER THIS SYSTEM, each room will be assigned a different telephone number. The cost will be $25 dollars a year. Monthly bills will be sent to cover any additional charges.

The number will be listed by rooms in a directory which will be distributed by the University.

A TOTAL OF 3,214 telephones have been ordered for next fall. "And not a single Princess phone," remarked Assistant Dean of Students Robert Brooks.

Because of this increased service load on the part of the University, Amherst College, and the Town of Amherst, a special Number Five Relay Station is under construction. Being an automatic recording device, the telephone system will be more efficient.

MANY OTHER SCHOOLS are presently using the Centrex system successfully. Because of the lower rates available to the University, the installation here has been made possible.

Student complaints about the small number of house phones, and their abuse of them are two of the reasons for the Centrex system.

It is also hoped that with this system corridor noise will be reduced.

"MOST IMPORTANT", according to John C. Welles, Director of Housing, "We'd like to be able to talk to the students." Presently, there is a great lack of communication between students, faculty and administration.

Welles pointed out that it would be especially difficult to "communicate up twenty-two stories."

There are many additional features which these individual telephones will offer. Next year it will be possible to dial a tape for a language lab or a play.

The University of Indiana experimented with dialing registration and room assignments, and the University of Wisconsin tried dialing course selections.

WITH THE INSTALLATION of this new telephone system, the University is taking another step to improve both the educational and social opportunities of the students.

Reform Crusade On; Ideas Liven Meeting

Emily Dickinson's battles for women's rights continue to lead the crusade against dorm regulations which they believe to be unjust.

Thursday night, about forty-five excited girls sprawled about their main lounge to present their views to a representative of the Women's Affairs Committee.

DISCUSSION CENTERED around women's curfew rules. Voluntary sign-out for upperclassmen, the elimination of housemothers' signature on weekend off-campus leaves, and most important, the repeal of curfews were among their main proposals.

Realizing the need for a gradual orientation to campus life, the girls suggested that an 11:00 curfew on week-day nights, a 12:00 curfew on Sunday nights, and a 1:00 curfew on Friday and Saturday nights should be enforced for both men and women Frosh.

INSTEAD OF MAKING the Frosh who are late for curfew stay in on Friday or Saturday nights, the group suggested their punishment should be beneficial to the dorm.

Injecting a humorous note into the tense atmosphere, Sharon Lowenstein commented, "Can you imagine two hundred girls busily vacuuming their dorm carpets?"

Another point of discussion concerned housemother evaluation. After considering the facts that counselor evaluation of students has been recently done away with and that a housemother has many responsibilities and a certain position of dignity, the group proposed not to institute housemother evaluations by dorm residents.

CONCERNING PARIETALS, it was suggested that women be allowed to have male visitors Sunday afternoons, and males be permitted to have female guests in their rooms on Friday and Saturday nights until 1:00.

The girls thought that guests to the University should be able to visit during the week as well as over the weekend-end, and that they be allowed to sleep in a room even if there is no room available.

They were afraid that such a condition might be considered a fire hazard until one young lady reported that certain boys' dorms have a stock of spare mattresses solely for the purpose of accommodating guests.

WITH RESOLUTE PROPOSALS and steady advances, the second meeting of Emily Dickinson's reform committee brought forth ideas that the Women's Affairs representative remarked, "were unlike any the committee had been previously called upon to consider."

Commentary
Volpe Asks Free Tuition For Vietnam Veterans

In two special messages to the General Court, Gov. Volpe Thursday called for free tuition at state schools for veterans of the war in Vietnam and for Massachusetts participation in the Interstate Compact for Education.

The compact, Volpe said, is an outgrowth of work of the national governors' conference. Joining it so far have been 16 states, including New Hampshire and Rhode Island. Volpe expects there will be 30 states in the compact by the end of the year.

Each state joining the compact has seven members: the governor, a state senator, state representative, and four gubernatorial appointees. Anticipated cost to Massachusetts would be $13,500, under a formula which takes into account population and income levels of the states.

The Volpe message stated, "The Interstate Compact for Education would establish cooperation on a nationwide basis among executive, legislative, professional, educational and lay leaders at the state and local levels. It would also provide a forum for the discussion, development and recommendation of alternative proposals pertinent to public policy decisions affecting education. In addition, it would provide a clearing house of information on matters relating to educational problems and how the various states are meeting them."

The compact message said that state Commissioner of Education Owen B. Kiernan had recommended that Massachusetts join the compact.

In the message to have the state give free tuition to state colleges and universities for veterans of Vietnam, Volpe observed that several thousand young men of Massachusetts "are presently serving with courage and distinction in the unfamiliar terrain of Vietnam. Their sacrifices for their state and nation must be recognized."

"These younger citizens have been asked to leave their homes and families, to interrupt their careers and education. They face a period of great readjustment upon their return from Vietnam, or those returning veterans who would continue their education, this period can be most trying. These men and women will be older than their fellow students."

They will stand at a relative disadvantage in competing for scholarships against younger students as a result of their necessary absence from academic life. Many will have assumed the responsibility of supporting a family, or undertaken other such financial obligations. These factors materially reduce a veteran's educational opportunity.

"The commonwealth should do all in its power to afford each veteran at least the some opportunity of obtaining an education as he held prior to entering the armed services," he said. He proposed the state pay tuition to state colleges and other institutions of higher learning, to be available for a maximum of four years, claimed within eight years after release from active duty.

Author, Traveler To Discuss China

Tuesday, April 1, at 8 p.m. in the Union, DVP will be sponsoring Felix Greene, once on the staff of the B.B.C., now residing in California. He has travelled to China several times to study developments there and to gather data for his books, "A Curtain of Ignorance" and "Awakened China." He is also the only American-based correspondent who has been to China more than once since the Revolution.

UPON RETURNING to the Chinese Mainland in 1963, Mr. Greene found many startling changes. "What is happening in China today," he says, "is one of the great historical facts of our contemporary world and the public is appallingly—and dangerously — misinformed about it."

TRAVELING on his British passport, Felix Greene covered over 15,000 miles by plane, train, jeep and even by camel. After four months he returned with more than twelve hours of uncensored film. This film entitled "China" received the coveted Award of Merit at the 1965 Edinburgh International Film Festival and represents the most complete coverage of life in China that is available anywhere in the West.

Wednesday, April 20, this epic film will be presented in the Student Union Ballroom at 8:00 p.m. In the words of The Daily Mail, "without taking sides or stressing the political angle, Mr. Greene's penetrating eye shows a dauntless and fanatically ambitious country, which happens to be communist, adapting its ancient civilization to modern need."

In conjunction with Felix Greene's lecture on "What's New in China?" on Tuesday, April 19, and the film "China" on the 20th, there will also be a lecture given by Frederick Nossal, a specialist in foreign affairs on the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe and Mail, and the first correspondent of a western newspaper to open an office in the Chinese Communist capital of Peking. Mr. Nossal will be speaking on "What's New in China?" on Sunday, April 24 at 8:00 in Mahar Auditorium.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

A Time To Be Born

by CHET WEINERMAN, Editorial Chairman

It's April.

It's beautiful.

Life offers so much in April. And life is for a college student. It will never be the same after college. Never quite the same perspective; never quite the same freedom from society's restrictions; never the chance to drift as much.

Go out on the grass and lie down. Look into the water; try to see a glimmering reflection. Look up at the sky; seek to find the highest ideal. Look at the grass; see God. Think of a friend and feel trust. Think of all the people you know, all the books you're read. Talk to Conscience—have a long conversation. What might have been, what one second the other way might have done to make it all so very different for you, for your brother, for peace.

Forget classes for the day. Don't think about a cum or alcohol or cigarettes or sex or money.

Introspect. Evaluate. Count blessings and scorn apathy. Thank the dreamers and curse the pushers and Hatchers. Give to yourself, instead of constantly grabbing and pulling and taking. Then you will be giving to all mankind, because you are mankind. And what is Life's purpose? It's thinking about and interacting with mankind—constructively, positively.

Think every day, because I, Mankind, need help. So desperately.

Please?

Summer Collegian

How Free is Free?

by PETE HENDRICKSON

The administration has filled a vacuum by creating a newspaper called the Summer Collegian. Strangely, this praiseworthy action calls attention to several weaknesses in the summer activities program.

When the Student Senate goes on summer vacation the administration takes over the newspaper for the Summer School students who, treated as transients, are with no government answerable to them.

This is not to say that they are not taxed. The Board of Trustees recently approved a $4 per semester tax for the summer semesters—a $3 increase made necessary by the withdrawal of a $10,000 University subsidy for the widely acclaimed Fine Arts Festival.

The RSO Activities Office hires three undergraduate employees to publish the summer newspaper. Last summer it became four pages; twice weekly after a few years of weekly mimeo publication. Choosing the staff is not exactly a scientific process. The students are hired primarily on the basis of neatness and acceptability of an application requiring no specific information.

Moreover, no personal interviews are required and the Collegian is not consulted about the applicants' qualifications.

The Collegian's slogan, "A Free and Responsible Press," could become a mockery if pressure were exerted by the employer. The Collegian hopes that the administration will not consider the paper its publicity organ for sponsoring the Fine Arts Festival.

Yet the administration must justify the tax increase through good attendance at the events.

It is in the self-interest of the student body to request representative summer Student Government to administer tax funds so that the newspaper may be truly free by being truly responsible for its actions.

Letters To The Editor

Corruption?

Fellow Sophomores:

This week in the mail, you received a letter headed with a similar greeting. I would like to call something that is very important to your attention.

This letter was printed with our money and mailed at our expense. In fact it was done entirely at our expense—and it was a political gimmick!!!

The superficial purpose of the letter, to call a class meeting, was a clever and expensive ruse. It was used to attract more votes to the present class officers who are standing for reelection next week in the primary.

I call the reason for the letter superficial because:

1. What is the good of holding a class meeting that will be conducted by officers that may not be in office to carry out recommendations.
2. Notices informing us of the meeting were posted in the dormitories (at our expense), so the letter was unnecessary.

I personally condemn the officers involved for this flagrant misuse of our money. I condemn Mr. Keough for using the same tactic that he condemned his opponent in the last election for using.

This letter was used to try to wrangle a few extra votes in the forthcoming primary. It is an irresponsible and underhanded way of ending this term of office. I sincerely hope that it does not begin a new term.

REFERENDUM ON CAMPUS DRINKING—
THURSDAY, APRIL 21.

Help!

To the Editor:

"A university is a community dedicated to helping man acquire and extend knowledge and put it responsibly and maturely to use." This is the purpose of the university as the College of Arts and Sciences states in the University Catalog. This definition implies that the university should also extend its knowledge and put acquired knowledge to wise and mature use.

To help extend the knowledge of the student and the whole university community, the Art Department of the College of Arts and Sciences carefully studied and proposed the Bachelor of Fine Arts Program to the administration of their college and The Administration.

The B.F.A. Program as proposed by the Art Department would train professional artists in various fields and thus add much to the university community and society as a whole.

The B.F.A. Program has been turned down by The Administration, and inquiry as to a sound reason for this action has not been gotten by myself, a student, and by the members of the Art Department. The reasons given to students and to faculty for the rejection of the B.F.A. Program for the Fall 1966 semester have been nebulous, spurious, and in fact, contradictory.

It seems to me that the Administration is not using its knowledge "responsibly and maturely" when it leads people truly interested in extending knowledge on a wild goose chase from one dean to another in hopes that they will soon become tangled in the red tape of bureaucracy and not be heard from again.

The voice of the students on this campus is becoming stronger as time goes on and I hope it will not be lessened by the summer recess, as the administration hopes. I think a concrete basis for students to question the motives of the administration and their workings is the rejection of the B.F.A. Program and lack of good reasons for such action.

Brotherhood

To the Editor:

(Re: An editorial by Joyce Harvey, "System Defended")

In the past few weeks a great deal has been said against fraternities, and everyone knows, especially the Greeks, that these calumnious remarks are nothing more than the frenetic outbursts of vindictive non-Greeks and pinks who make it their business to hate all great American institutions. Why does a freshman or sophomore join a fraternity? For brotherhood, of course. And brotherhood means much more than friendship: brothers can watch TV together, play football, worship the sacred coat of arms, recite the house creed, and laugh at stag films with genuine brotherly togetherness.

A fraternity is known for its great campus leaders: no outsider is ever allowed in leadership positions unless he has first proven himself to be a good Greek, or at least a Greek. A fraternity is known for its athletes: an athlete is much too clever to live in a dorm. If he has academic problems, he knows that the fraternity will provide the strict scholastic atmosphere necessary to assure him good grades.

Contrary to popular belief, the fraternity does not look for a special type of person as a member. Only the clean-cut, popular and fun-loving, easy going, American boy, however, really deserves to be honored. He must be an individual, though. An individual brave enough to stop thinking for himself and join the collective goals of the Greek system.

There are no dangerous initiation stunts, as everyone seems to believe. Hell-Night is simply Game-Night when playful little boys get together and make pledges do such fun things as running naked down the streets of Amherst, gulping down the 'barf drink' until they vomit, and wallowing joyfully in animal manure. Even the blistering sores that pledges get from paddling heal after a while. When the pledges are required to clean up the house—or at least rake leaves—the brothers are always there to make things a challenge.

There is more to fraternity life than drinking. A fraternity is a place where a brother can meet his date, who would like to participate in—if only for a moment—the fraternal spirit. The social functions, such as parties and exchanges, are ways in which the brothers seek to meet new social partners and broaden the outlook of the typically inhibited UMass co-ed.

Living in a fraternity, then, is something more than the academic and social experience. It is this indescribable quality, brotherhood. And it is more. It is an opportunity to extend fraternal activities beyond graduation into the business world, where, as everyone knows, all good frat-men go.

All Cheat

A survey at Ferris State College, Big Rapids, Mich., found nearly half of the respondents admitting they had cheated in some way in the course of their college careers.

THE SURVEY, conducted by a marketing research class, revealed that scholastic dishonesty—including such acts as copying during an exam, purchasing exams, or lying about absence—was most pronounced among upperclassmen (42 per cent), and especially among seniors (51 per cent).

Respondents holding a 3.0 or higher grade point average displayed the least tendency for cheating, while the 2.0 to 2.5 group was found most prone to cheat.

ROOMMATES REVISITED

This morning's mail brought a letter from a student at a prominent Western university (Princeton). "Dear Sir," he writes. "In a recent column you said it was possible to get along with your roommate if you try hard enough. Well, I'd like to see anyone get along with my roommate! Mervis Trunz (for that is his name) practices the ocarina all night long, keeps an alligator, wears knee-cymbals, and collects airplane tires. I have tried everything I can with Mervis Trunz, but nothing works. I am desperate. (signed) Desperate."

Have you, dear Desperate, really tried everything? Have you, for example, tried a measure so simple, so obvious, that it is easy to overlook? I mean, of course, have you offered to share your Personna® Super Stainless Steel Blades with Mervis Trunz?

To have a friend, dear Desperate, you must be a friend. And what could be more friendly than sharing the bounty of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades? Who, upon enjoying the luxury of Personna, the nickless, scrapeless, tugless, hackless, scratchless, matchless comfort of Personna, the ease and breeze, the power and glory, the truth and beauty of Personna—who, I say, after such jollies could harden his heart against his neighbor? Nobody, that's who—not even Mervis Trunz—especially not today with the new Personna Super Blade bringing us new highs in speed, comfort, and durability. And here is still a further bonus: Personna is available both in Double Edge style and Injector style.

No, dear Desperate, your problem with Mervis Trunz is far from insoluble. In fact, as roommate problems go, it is pretty small potatoes. Compare it, for example, to the classic case of Basil Metabolism and E. Pluribus Ewbank.

Basil and E. Pluribus, roommates at a prominent Eastern university (Oregon) were at an impassable impasse. Basil could study only late at night, and E. Pluribus could not stay awake past nine p.m. If Basil kept the lights on, the room was too bright for E. Pluribus to sleep. If E. Pluribus turned the lights off, the room was too dark for Basil to study. What to do?

Well sir, these two intelligent American kids found an answer. They got a miner's cap for Basil! Thus, he had enough light to study by, and still the room was dark enough for E. Pluribus to sleep.

It must be admitted, however, that this ingenious solution had some unexpected sequelae. Basil got so enchanted with his miner's cap that he switched his major from 18th Century poetry to mining and metallurgy. Shortly after graduation he had what appeared to be a great stroke of luck: while out prospecting, he discovered what is without question the world's largest feldspar mine. This might have made Basil very rich except that nobody, alas, has yet discovered a use for feldspar. Today Basil, a broken man, squeezes out a meagre living as a stalagmite in Ausable Chasm.

Nor has E. Pluribus fared conspicuously better. Once Basil got the miner's cap, E. Pluribus was able to catch up on his long-lost sleep. He woke after nine days, refreshed and vigorous—more vigorous, alas, than he realized. It was the afternoon of the Dean's tea. E. Pluribus stood in line with his classmates, waiting to shake the Dean's hand. At last his turn came, and E. Pluribus, full of strength and health, gave the Dean a firm handshake—so firm, indeed, that all five of the Dean's knuckles were permanently fused.

The Dean sued for a million dollars and, of course, won. Today E. Pluribus, a broken man, is paying off his debt by walking the Dean's cat every afternoon for ten cents an hour.

We, the makers of Personna Blades and the sponsors of this column, will not attempt to expertize about roommates. But we will tell you about a great shaving-mate to Personna—Burma Shave®! It soaks rings around any other lather; it comes in regular and menthol.

GIANTS, INDIANS LEAD MAJORS

by MIKE CURRAN

And so the baseball season is underway. After a week, several notable events have taken place. The San Francisco Giants and the Cleveland Indians are on top thanks to favorable early-season schedules. The Pirates and Tigers are right at their heels.

The Mets blew their long-awaited opener, but have shocked the country by winning their next two.

Sandy Koufax, knocked out of the box Wednesday night by the Houston Astros, came back to beat the Chicago Cubs yesterday afternoon.

The New York Yankees took it on the chin, losing 5 of their first 6 games and losing their shortstop Ruben Amaro for two months.

The Robinson boys, Frank and Brooks, got off to a good start. Each has three home runs.

Jim Lefebvre, the Los Angeles Dodger second baseman, who was the 1965 rookie-of-the-year, is trying hard to prevent a case of the sophomore jinx. He is leading the majors in home runs and RBI's while battling close to 500.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: Carl Yastrzemski on the banquet circuit last winter, "Where would the Red Sox be without Tony Conigliaro and myself?"

Newcomer Frank Robinson adds power to the Oriole attack.

Frosh Prep for Opener

by TIM MURPHY

Dick Bergquist, veteran mentor of frosh baseball, is using the trial and error method to decide the starting line-up for Wednesday's initial encounter, a home game against Amherst on the varsity diamond, beginning at 3 p.m.

Outside activity has been limited to daily practices last week and a few intra-squad games over the week end. Bergquist's decision on a starting line-up is thus a difficult one.

He notes, however, that his outfield will almost certainly consist of Larry Snook in left field, Al Seibert in center, and Tony Chinappi in right. Chinappi, originally a backstop, was injured in preseason drills and forced into the outfield where he has landed a starting berth.

"Of course our shortstop will be Joe DiSarcina," the coach added, "but picking a third baseman is another story." John Mitsakos appears to have the edge, but Clinton's Clark Henebry is still very much in the battle. Another third baseman, Al Craig, "because of his excellent versatility" will be moved either to first base or to second for the season's opener.

"Rub-a-dub-dub three men in a tub" best describes the state of affairs around first base, and should Craig start at second, the job of tending the bag on the right side of the infield will fall to either Mike Murphy, Lonnie Lehrer, or Brian Sandy. All appear to be of the same caliber.

Bergquist plans to split the game between right handers Rich Rappoli and Craig with the starter to be named at game time. Catching also will be split with Harry Lewis and Fran Bozek each flashing the signs for half the game.

Offensively, Chinappi is the only left handed swinger slated to appear in the game. So Coach Bergquist will have eight right handers wielding the wood with whatever line-up he should decide upon.

A freshman coach's lot is not an easy one but Bergquist is counting on Rappoli, DiSarcina, Mitsakos, et al to ease his burden considerably in the forthcoming baseball season.

Lennon to Lead Swim Team

by RALPH O. DWORMAN

The Varsity Swim Team held its annual Banquet at the Williams House last Wednesday night. Dick Lennon was elected Captain of next year's squad. The 5'10", 180 lb. junior is a Physical Education major and a counselor of Wheeler House. Dick, known to teammates as C. C. for his Cheshire Cat grin, tops off twelve years of competition in the sport.

BEFORE entering UMass, Dick swam for the Huntington School and the Lynn Boys' Club in A.A.U. competition, where he established several age-group records. He is currently the Varsity record-holder in the 200 yard Breaststroke and a member of the record breaking team in the 400 yd. Medley and 400 yd. Freestyle Relays this season.

During the season, Dick has swum to many first places. He is one of the team's leading point men. Besides his regular events, the 200 yd. Breaststroke and the 200 yd. Individual Medley, Coach Rogers can depend on Dick to fill in either of the two 400 yd. Relays when needed. His swimming prowess will be well used in next year's dual meets.

Also at the banquet Wednesday, Co-Captain Dick Daniels, '66, was awarded the Most Valuable Swimmer trophy for the second consecutive season. Dick has been one of the best Freestylers in UMass swimming, and he richly deserved the honor. Dick has been a fine worker and a credit to his team and coach. He will be sorely missed next year. Dick has majored in history and will accept a commission in the U. S. Army in June.

ASSISTANT COACH Little Joe Yeskewicz ended the evening's fun with a discussion of his theory of the role of the mind, body, and spirit in swimming. He expressed his thanks to the team for their generous support and hard work in "bringing home" the season.

Crewmen Victorious

by DEE SMITH

Rowing very well and much improved since last Saturday's races, the UM crews earned two first and one second place in the Harborow Regatta, held in Middletown, Conn.

In the first race, the UM JV's were able to take an early lead which they held for the entire race despite a strong challenge in the final quarter mile by both Wesleyan and Clark. In the next race the UM Freshmen were able to come from behind to defeat Wesleyan by nearly three lengths. In the UM Freshman boat were five oarsmen who had just competed in the JV race.

In the Varsity race, there were crews entered by Clark, Wesleyan, U. Mass. and W.P.I. After falling back to fourth place, the UM crew was able to come from behind to finish second. Clark finished first with nearly a length of open water between the UM crew and nearly 5 and 6 lengths ahead of the WPI and Wesleyan crews.

UM, UConn Here Tues.

In what may be the biggest game of the season for both teams, UMass will host UConn here tomorrow at 3 p.m. UConn, which won the Yankee Conference last year after beating Vermont in a playoff game, sports the same glossy 9-0 record as UMass. Carl Boteze, fresh from a 2 hit, 15 strikeout performance against BU, is expected to get the starting assignment. This year UMass is playing its home games at the old freshman baseball diamond which is located adjacent to the intramural field on the side furthest from Boyden.

Lacrosse at MIT

by TOM FITZGERALD

Last year, the MIT snakebeaters handled UMass by a 12-2 score. MIT has 14 lettermen back, so the Redmen had best beware as they travel to Cambridge tomorrow for a Patriots' Day clash with the Engineers at 3 p.m.

Under Coach Ben Martin, lacrosse boss at MIT for over two decades, the Engineers had a 7-8 mark a year ago. This year's squad is well-balanced, with veterans at all positions.

Junior Steve Schroeder, who led the team in scoring as an attackman last year with 19 goals and 14 assists and was elected to the second team All New England, has been moved to inside attack. Co-captain Pete Kirkwood, who joins Schroeder on

Lakers Win

A disputed goaltending call against Bill Russell helped the Los Angeles Lakers to tie the Celtics at the end of regulation play, and the Lakers went on to beat Boston 131-127. Elgin Baylor and Jerry West combined for over 70 points. The Lakers received an unexpected bonus from rookie Gail Goodrich's 20 points. The Celtics took a early 18 point lead, but personal fouls forced coach Red Auerbach to bench several of his stars.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

A spring cleaning of dormitory rooms at Ohio State University turned up only 40 traffic signs stolen by students.

"The problem was much worse 10 years ago," reflected a local traffic engineer. "They seem to be more interested in carrying signs these days than in stealing them."

the attack, was the top dog two years ago and had 16 goals and 15 assists last year.

Senior Loren Wood and junior Art Von Waldburg stand out at midfield, while the defense relies on close defensemen Ralph Schmidt and Co-captain Bill Kosinar and alternating goalies Bob MacDonald and Garland Taylor.

The Redmen will again be without the services of Captain Dave Jarret. Jarret, who missed the Siena game because of a bone chip in his right ankle, saw limited action in last week's loss to Wesleyan. Luck seems to have deserted Jarret this year, for just as he returned to action, he suffered a sprained left ankle.

UMass has more than one source of incentive for the MIT game, besides trying to get back on the winning trail, the team will hope to be at its best for the TV camera. The game will be taped and televised Thursday night on Channel 24, Hartford.

UMass Hurlers Fan 20; Coast Guard Falls, 11-1

by GLENN BRIERE

Dazzling pitching by a pair of sophomore hurlers and a formidable show of muscle gave the UMass baseball team an easy 11-1 victory over the Coast Guard Academy, Saturday at Amherst Southpaws John Canty and Dave Katz combined for an amazing total of 20 strikeouts as the Redmen took their third straight win.

What the game amounted to was a warmup for tomorrow's big game, when Yankee Conference power UConn visits UM for one of the most crucial contests of the year.

The UMass hitting drew a good deal of admiration from the fans. Hagan Andersen, Jim Babyak, and Terry Swanson each hit home runs, and Andersen went 4 for 5 to raise his season's batting average to a sizzling .500. Swanson drove in four runs, and Frank Stewart added two hits in four at bats. The Redmen pounded out a total of 13 hits.

It was the third brilliant pitching performance in three games. Canty, in his first varsity start, gave up one unearned run on four hits, struck out 13 and walked two in six innings. Katz, also in his first varsity game, did a great relief job, striking out seven in three innings and giving up just one hit. In 27 innings thus far, UM pitching has allowed two unearned runs and only eight hits.

Canty started the game with a slight control problem, but his curve began to break over and he settled down despite a first inning triple by Coast Guard's Don Polk. The three-bagger came when rightfielder Roy Lasky lost a short fly in the sun. But Canty got Dick Houk to ground out and end the inning.

The Redmen immediately jumped on Cadet pitcher Mike Edwards in the bottom of the first when Hagan Andersen lined the first pitch into the gully in left field for a homer. Stewart followed with a hard hit double to left center, and Jim Babyak walked to put men on first and second with no outs.

Terry Swanson then hit a double play ball to second, but Dick Wittschiede booted it to load the bases. Ross Pitkin hit another grounder to the second baseman, who handled it this time, tagged Swanson in the base path, and threw to home. The throw was in time, but Stewart slid into the catcher, knocked the ball away, and two runs scored to give UM a 3-0 lead. The fourth run came in the third when Babyak blasted a homer to deep center field.

Coast Guard scored its only tally of the afternoon in the fourth inning when Polk walked and Houk hit a DP ball to third. Andersen threw to Stewart at second, but in making the pivot Frank dropped it and all hands were safe. A grounder to the pitcher moved the runners to second and third, and Dave DuBois squeezed the run in with a bunt up the first base line.

Lightning struck in the bottom of the fourth when UM picked up five runs to wrap it up. Canty walked with one out, followed by Andersen's third hit. The throw came into third and Hagan moved to second base. Stewart then singled to center to bring them in and make the score 6-1. After a wild pick-off attempt and a walk, Terry Swanson drove a three-run homer to center.

After a single by pinch hitter Alex Vyce, pitcher Edwards was yanked and Milton Rose took over. Lasky popped out to second, but John Peacock lashed out a single to center, moving to second on the ensuing throw. With men on second and third, catcher Jim Kuczynski drove a towering fly to deep center. Centerfielder Polk, wary of the ditch into which he almost fell on Babyak's homer, caught it on the end of his glove to end the inning.

The Redmen finished off the scoring in the fifth. Successive singles by Canty and Andersen led off the inning. Babyak skied to center, with Canty moving to third. The speedy Andersen then took off for second, but the throw went on into the outfield and Canty scored. Andersen capped it off by sending Hagan home with a single.

Coach Earl Lorden indicated that he will go with his mound aces, Carl Boteze and Bill Smith, in tomorrow's UConn game. Ken Rowe and Don Gagner are slated for Wednesday's contest against Holy Cross, leaving the rest of the pitching staff fresh for the next nine games, all in the Yankee Conference. "That will tell the story of the conference," Lorden said. "If we can hit the way we have been, then we'll stay up there in the race." The coach noted that it looks like a wide open race.

8 Run Rally Gives Cherrys 12-11 Win

by DAVE JARNES

Thursday's limited schedule in softball completed an exciting opening week which was highlighted by many tight games and stirring last inning comebacks.

Typical of these rallies was staged by the Mills Cherrys. Mills went into the bottom of the sixth trailing the Colts 11-4 but came up with 8 big runs to pull the game out of the fire.

This type of winning spirit has kept the Cherrys in first place in their efforts to win the President's Clup, emblematic of overall supremacy amongst the dormitories.

The Homeward Bounders went into the last of the sixth with a comfortable ten to nothing lead but had to hold on for dear life to squeak out a narrow 10-9 win as the Trojans put on a furious last ditch effort. In a rather sloppily played game, the Pi Spots made fewer errors than the Arnold Air Society and were able to win 11-10.

The Comanches whopped the Bengals 17-1 in the only real romp of the night. Rounding out Thursday's softball action, the Good Guys defeated the AEP Pledges 7-4 and the Redmen beat the Birch 9-4.

Thursday's soccer was marked by a sparsity of goals. TEP and ZN played to scoreless ties with LCA and QTV while Rick Parthum's score enabled SPE to edge TC 1-0.

Entries for the mixed doubles tennis tournament are due on April 25 and play starts on May 2.

Peace on Earth Is Central Theme of Conference Here

by GENA COREA and JAN KNUTSON, News Staff

Address and reactions characterized the two day interdenominational conference, Peace on Earth: Moral and Technological Implications, held in the Council chambers on the 18th and 19th.

THE FIRST speaker on the eighteenth was Msgr. Thomas Devine, the President of Our Lady of the Elms College, Chicopee, who said that "God gave man a dominion over the earth but not a natural dominion." Rather this dominion has to be established gradually. In man's attempts to establish control over his environment there is the danger that a rigid division of labor will develop. The only way to protect against "inrichable dignity of each individual is a technological society."

MR. WILLIAM PUTNAM, a retired geologist, presently with Springfield television was the second speaker. It is the view of Mr. Putnam that "man ruins nature when he tries to get around it."

Mr. Putnam also expressed the feeling that there has been no sudden upsurge in the problems created by technological society on the part of youths. On the contrary, youths have always been basically idealistic, throughout all time.

In concluding, Mr. Putnam said that people lose their youthful ideas gradually and replace these with a concern for security as they get older.

THE FINAL speaker was Rabbi Samuel Dresner of Temple Beth El in Springfield. Rabbi Dresner spoke about the ages of man. The first age was that of the birth of man and the second taught man how to live. The third and present age is the atomic age, the age that teaches men how to die.

The Rabbi, continuing, said that technology has brought about sexual freedom, badly used leisure time, the undermining of the family structure, living for pleasure, and the creation of weapons capable of destroying mankind.

In short, Rabbi Dresner said that technology has brought on a new age, "the age that now sees the possibility of the death of man", a possibility that will be realized if people do not become aware of the problems of society and strive to eradicate them.

THE REACTION speakers were followed by a twenty minute question period from the floor.

With a light veined plea to buy his book and "keep my kids in shoes", Rev. Myron Bloy began his address at the Peace on Earth Conference yesterday. Speaking on "The Moral Implications of the New Technology" in the senate council chambers, Rev. Bloy outlined the effects of technology in modern society.

Technology freed man from an exclusive concern with survival. It also freed him from some of his rigid beliefs and customs.

BLOY EXPLAINED from behind the podium and his dark-rimmed glasses. "Our former prudential ethic of sex, which threatened transgressors with infection, detection and conception, is dying. Technology provides drugs to cure venereal disease, cars to lessen the chance of detection and pills to prevent conception."

Technology loosened the tight family unit. Functions of the family have been taken over by schools, hospitals and the little league.

PARENTS CAN no longer filter the influences on their children. "Now," Bloy explained, "the whole raw world is televised into the home."

Because of technology, the traditional culture is falling. Modern men identify themselves more and more with William James' pragmatist. According to Bloy, "He is a man of action. Appeals to ideological loyalists are less and less effective."

The speaker noted that while many tend to focus on its destructive aspect, technology can portend a great step forward for man.

The change in the family structure and in our attitude toward sex is progressive, Bloy said. "The prudential sex ethic was based on fear and made moral morons of us all. And the family, which was tyrannical, now lets children explore ideas other than those of the parents."

Laymen's Committee Urged for Medical School Construction

Leading Massachusetts architects were preparing a plan Sunday that would take architectural selection on state projects "out of politics."

The move follows criticism of McCarthy over the naming of architects for the new state medical school in Worcester and the Pittsfield mental health center.

THE ARCHITECTS' PLAN was described for The Globe by John W. Peirce of Topsfield, chairman of a special committee of the Massachusetts State Assn. of Architects.

It would set up a blue-ribbon panel consisting of laymen. The panel, appointed by the governor, would then prepare a list of three to five acceptable architects for each state project.

The administration commissioner would have to select one of the names on the list. He could not pick another firm, as McCarthy did for the medical school and the mental health center.

Architects who serve on the panel would be ineligible for state contracts.

PEIRCE SAID HIS committee and Reps. Francis W. Hatch (R-Beverly) and Michael Dukakis (D-Brookline), have been promised a meeting with Gov. Volpe within 10 days.

He attacked the present method of selection, in which McCarthy has complete authority to choose an architect.

"ALL TOO FREQUENTLY," Peirce said, "architects are chosen for public buildings without any regard for competence. Political influence shouldn't be allowed to play a part."

The Globe revealed last week that McCarthy had rejected expert recommendations for an architect for the University of Massachusetts Medical School and had attempted to reject similar recommendations for the mental health center.

IN THE MEDICAL SCHOOL case, McCarthy ended up by naming three firms to share the job, an arrangement that was criticized Sunday by Benjamin Thompson, chairman of the Harvard architecture department, as being like "assigning a committee to write a poem."

Several state senators have also charged that having three firms share the work will cost the state $500,000 extra. Total cost of the medical school is estimated at $50 million.

McCarthy has denied that the arrangement will cost more.

In the case of the mental health center, McCarthy named S. S. Eisenberg & Co. of Boston as architects Feb. 9 before a local selection board had even submitted recommendations.

PITTSFIELD CITIZENS complained to Gov. Volpe, and the Eisenberg firm withdrew from the job. As matters stand, the Pittsfield screening committee will be able to submit a list of several firms to McCarthy, much as normally planned.

Donald Oakes of Lenox, president of the Berkshire Mental Health Assn., said that the dispute may have been just the result of a misunderstanding, although the Berkshire group had been reporting regularly to Volpe at the time that McCarthy attempted to name an architect without their approval.

"Now that we're starting out fresh again," he said, "we hope we can get an architect satisfactory to everyone."

Selection of architects for the medical school will be designated by a special state Senate committee Thursday.

After rejecting the trustees' first choice, McCarthy named Ritchie Associates of Chestnut Hill—not named by the trustees—and Campbell, Aldrich, and Nulty of Boston as architects, then added Ellerbe & Co. of Minnesota as consultants.

This "troika" arrangement was criticized Sunday by Thompson, winner of numerous architectural prizes.

The Animals, a popular rock and roll group, which will appear at the Greek Weekend Sunday afternoon concert are the fifth ranked group in the world. One of their best hits was "House of the Rising Sun".

Highwaymen and Animals Featured For Greek Week

The Animals and The Highwaymen are combining to produce one of the greatest Greek week concerts at UMass on Sunday, May 15 in the Cage.

THE ANIMALS, the fifth ranked group in the world, are coming to UMass directly from a world-wide tour including Japan, England, Sweden, and Australia. Their long list of million sellers includes, "House of the Rising Sun," "Get Out of This Place," and "It's My Life."

The Animals had their beginning in the form of a trio, formed in October of 1962 by Alan Price with Chas Chandler (bass guitar) and John Steel (drums).

They played around Newcastle's jazz clubs, were joined by vocalist Eric Burdon, and completed by the addition of Hilton Valentine (lead guitar). However, in May of 1965, Dave Rowberry (organist) replaced Alan Price, bringing us up to the group's present line-up.

The Animals are now hailed as the most authentic British rhythm and blues group.

THE HIGHWAYMEN round out the concert and combine with the Animals to produce the first Folk-Rock concert at UMass.

The Highwaymen are a folk group and among their long list of hits are "Michael," and "Cottonfields." They not only sing but have their own comedy routine. They are coming to UMass from a 28 college tour.

THE GREEK WEEK Queen finalists have been selected. They are: Priscilla Ponte, Iota Gamma Upsilon; Sandy Holm, Chi Omega; Margo Marsten, Iota Gamma Upsilon; Kathy Zarlingo, Chi Omega; and Marilyn Snyder, Sigma Delta Tau. The queen will be chosen at the Greek Ball, Friday, May 13.

The new officers of IFC, Robert Hillson, TC, president, Robert McNeil Jr., administrative vice president, LCA, Charles Carswell, BKP, executive vice president, Danny Grecco, TEP, secretary, and Herb Lach, KS, treasurer, are all working to make this the finest Greek Week.

Pre-Med Student Explains Genetics Honors Project

by PAM METAXAS,
Staff Reporter

The older a father is, the more female offspring he produces. This is one of the major conclusions reached in the study of drosophila (fruit flies) by Stevens Franks, a pre-med student engaged in a Senior Honors project at the University of Massachusetts.

The Sharon native explained his project, entitled The Effects of Paternal Age of the Sex Ratio and Drosophila, as concerning the study of genetics. The chairman of his project, Dr. Arthur Mange, who is assistant professor of zoology, has worked on similar projects before.

"I was interested in genetics but, as for the specific project I am working on, I had no knowledge," Stevens said. In the first experiment conducted at his home base, 326 Morrill, he said, "I studied to see what would happen if the father got older

1) There are different parasites in the blood. And there are some present in females that produce other females more

2) When sperm is formed, half the cells may have an inhibitor present that acts to make that sperm impotent. Therefore, the number of females increases. The Y chromosomes (male) disappear and the X chromosomes (female) increase over a period of time.

3) Sometimes it may be the acidity of the food.

Stevens, whose straight brown hair falls across his high forehead, enjoys talking about his project. He illustrates every sentence with either a graph, a vial or a sweep of the hand across the laboratory. His large brown eyes and thinly drawn mouth work together as he speaks.

"I really can't control the results, that's why it's a good project," he added seriously. "It involves more experimental."

Steven is serious about his education and respects his teachers, especially those in the science (biological) departments. He frequently brings their opinions or their projects into the conversation. He has studied under many science teachers, taking physics, chemistry, zoology, genetics, histology, comparative anatomy, embryology and invertebrate anatomy.

He once said he isn't sure what kind of doctor he wants to be. After thinking a few minutes, his eyes lowered, he said, "I have some leanings but I haven't decided yet. . . . My idea of a doctor always has been a general practitioner," he added as his face glowed with the thought of his medical future. He hopes to enter Tufts Medical School this fall.

Well-mannered and anxious to speak about his project as well as his opinions, Stevens believed that anything as important as knowledge should never have to be justified. This opinion emerged as he was discussing the psychology and sociology courses he has taken. "I'm always surprised when I walk in a psychology or sociology class and they justify it."

A man of definite opinions, Stevens also sees the differences between departments and, more important, between people and tries to judge them fairly. Brushing a lock of hair off his forehead, he added a minute later, "But maybe judge them (the social sciences) too hard."

Although he has not yet completely finished his project, he emphasized that one of his major conclusions will be that over half the offspring produced were females and that paternal age seems to have this very definite effect on the offspring of drosophila.

Holding a vial in his hand with drosophila larva to illustrate his point, Steve Franks added that it is not unusual to use drosophila for laboratory experiments. They are especially easy to observe and experiment with because of their rapid rate of reproduction, he concluded.

STEVEN FRANKS

and the females stayed the same age." The female drosophila, always 1-4 days old, were placed two at a time with one male drosophila in the vial. The females were constantly changed to keep their age constant. In a small laboratory room lined with wooden shelves laden with vials of drosophila, of food and of water, he calculated the sex ratio (number of offspring divided by the total population) with the help of a steel gray adding and subtracting machine, one of several instruments he is using for his project.

The original drosophila for the project were purchased by Dr. Mange—a pure strain called the Canton S. strain that "wouldn't produce mutations" during experiments. Although there have been contradictory results, Stevens postulated that the sex ratio (.5121) indicated that half or more of the offspring were females.

"Contradictory results seemed to point to other factors. I made these graphs and Dr. Mange found that he wouldn't get males hatching early and females hatching out later. My idea was that the age of the food had something to do with it," he said, "so varied the food components" in the four types—aged, control, difference in corn meal and difference in yeast. However, Stevens emphasized "most of the experiments pointed out that as the father gets older the number of females increase." He added that several theories have been proposed for this result.

The lively musical comedy will be seen in Bowker Auditorium on two weekends—Friday and Saturday, April 22 and 23 and Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 28, 29 and 30.

Written by Otto Harvach and Vincent Youmans, the play centers around the adventures of millionaire Bible printer Jimmy

Smith, his three Flapper friends, and the plight of Nanette, a sheltered young girl eager to "get out into the world."

WILLIAM SEGAL, UMass graduate student, is stage director of the production and senior Paul Bartsch is in charge of musical direction. Rick Kaplan, also a senior, is the choreographer.

Leading players, all undergraduates of the University, are Laurel Demers of Holyoke as Nanette; Jon Hutton of Arlington as Billy; John Gilbert of Reading as Tom; and Karen Connolly of Cheshire, Conn., as Pauline the maid.

Seats for all performances are reserved. Tickets may be obtained from the Ticket Office, Student Union, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and will be available at the door.

Debate Set For Van Meter

Tonight in the lounge of Van Meter House, the three candidates for the office of Sophomore open debate and forum on the ore Class President will conduct issues of the coming election.

DICK WOOD, Al Saggese and Bob Keough will debate the role of the class officers, executive councils and University reform within the realm of student government.

The debate is planned for 7:30 P.M. and is open to all interested Sophomores. Here is an excellent opportunity to judge the candidates in preparation for the election on Thursday, April 21.

CURFEW PETITION: All interested undergraduate women who have not signed the curfew petition and would like to, or have any questions on it; there will be a table set up in the Student Union lobby Tuesday to Friday, April 19 to 22 with petitions.

'Peace on Earth' Conference...

ALSO, with the age of technology, man has developed a deepening awareness of other human beings. Through television, telephones, automobiles, etc., the communication between men is improving. We become more concerned with real suffering and with the social problems of man.

After seeing the Vietnamese on television and recognizing that they are men, not monsters, many people begin to do some soul-searching about war. As Rev. Bloy put it, "Television has made the enemy our neighbor."

AFTER pointing out the progressive results of technology, Rev. Bloy emphasized that "freedom and awareness of others doesn't necessarily lead to a new age of brotherly love. Men can destroy this coming age if they don't commit themselves to it."

This, according to Bloy, presents a problem because it is hard to take a point of view in the technological age. The old norms that did help us in making decisions, have fallen apart.

REV. BLOY concluded his address by stating that the wish for brotherhood should not be based on a commitment to an ideal, but on the fact that every man is born into brotherhood.

Every man depends on his fellow man. When this fact is recognized, mankind can continue its growth toward humanity.

THOMPSON TOLD THE Globe "it makes no sense" for McCarthy to order three firms to collaborate on the project, especially since none of them had worked in combination before.

"If a combination of firms takes a project," he said, "it should be because they feel comfortable working that way, not because a political official orders them to work together."

"It's a Challenge"*UM Grad in VISTA Project

Mary Sullivan, a recent UMass graduate, is shown renovating the "demonstration home" she rents in South Phila. along with four other VISTA Volunteers. The idea behind this project is to show what can be done with maximum effort.

Mary Sullivan, 22, of 78 Dwinell St., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sullivan of West Roxbury, Mass., joined VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) shortly after her graduation last June from the University of Massachusetts where she majored in Psychology.

"ACTUALLY a VISTA poster caught my eye at the college placement office," she said. Miss Sullivan who trained for six weeks at Temple University in Philadelphia and was assigned with 10 other Volunteers to St. Martha's Settlement House in South Philadelphia, which has been in existence for 50 years.

She and four VISTA Volunteers rented a dilapidated abandoned house for $60 two blocks from the Settlement House. Their first project was to renovate their house as a "demonstration home" to show what can be done with the maximum of elbow grease.

THE HOUSE had been vacant for two years. "The only way we identified the kitchen sink by the kitchen sink which was lying in the middle of the floor," she recalls. "We worked from the top floor down, cleaning, painting, scrubbing, sanding and varnishing the floors. We even hung wallpaper. It turned out fine," she added in surprise. "One of the VISTA Volunteers had watched her father paper a room. That was the only training she had."

"Our acceptance in the neighborhood was good," she said. "Our neighbors are friendly. They pitched in and helped us fix up the house. It really was an education for all of us. They even contributed old furniture for us to use."

As a VISTA Volunteer, Miss Sullivan supervises five Neighborhood Youth Corps Workers who are underprivileged youths from the ages of 16-21. "The idea is to give them a chance to work after school to earn money, acquire skills and develop good job attitudes."

There are 2 girls and 3 boys in her group. They have fixed up the basement of the Settlement House as a teen club. The boys paint, clean and do the heavy work and under Miss Sullivan's supervision the girls have learned to sew and make curtains.

She also has a Golden Age Club for those over 65. There are 22 in the group and they meet with her every Tuesday afternoon. "We play bingo, show movies and make trips together," she said. "The women are currently working on a special project making plastic aprons for the children in the nearby nursery school."

"We're planning a spring picnic with the nursery school... sort of a joint venture". I have the use of a Volkswagen bus and we all pile in," continued Miss Sullivan.

EVENINGS she tutors grade school children at the Settlement House in Math and reading. "You are really not limited in what you can do," said Miss Sullivan of her wide range of activities. "That's why I like my VISTA assignment so well."

"As I'm talking to you," she said during a recent interview, "I'm waiting for a batch of cookies to come out of the oven. They're for my Golden Age Club meeting today. As soon as they're baked I'm going over to the library and check out books for the children I tutor. I've discovered a wealth of free films over there too and I use them with my different groups."

MISS SULLIVAN and the other VISTA Volunteers have embarked on a survey to find out exactly how many people are in the community and what their needs and problems are so that, "we can work with them on solutions," said Miss Sullivan.

Her year as a VISTA Volunteer ends this June and she plans to return to Boston to do social work. "That's one of the reasons I joined VISTA," she said. "In college you do a lot of talking about things you believe in. This was my chance to do something rather than just talk about it."

"MY JOB isn't a nine to five job. Sometimes it's a 24 hour a day job but I love it," she said. "If I didn't do anything more than just live in this house and talk with the people in the neighborhood who continually drop by and tell me about their problems and help them solve them it would still be worth it."

"They are so completely different from people I have ever met before. The walls that they have built up around themselves are unbelievable. They need understanding and help. They live in their own little world—their own neighborhood. They are amazed that we have come to live and work with them."

"It's been fun along with the hard work," she continued summing up her days as a VISTA Volunteer. "It's a challenge. There's so much to be done."

Candidate Night Set; Rally Seeks Students

Have you ever voted for a candidate strictly on the basis of an attractive campaign sign? Through the efforts of the Student Government Association Committee of the Student Senate each member of every class will now be given an opportunity to meet and talk with candidates for every class office before the elections.

A CLASS ELECTION Rally will be held on Sunday, April 24, from 7 to 10:30 p.m., in the Student Union Ballroom.

Each class will be given one hour in which candidates for office will each be allotted a certain amount of time to campaign for office. Each candidate will be allowed to speak and to have one supporter speak for him. Questions will be entertained from the audience, followed by a period in which the supporters of a candidate may stage a demonstration.

The rallies for freshman, sophomore and junior candidates will be held at different times:

Class of 1969 7:00-8:00

Class of 1968 8:15-9:15

Class of 1967 9:30-10:30

ALL STUDENTS are urged to attend this unprecedented rally, which will allow all students to demonstrate an interest in effective class government.

ROTC Grenadiers Plan Busy Spring Schedule

The University of Massachusetts Army ROTC Drill Team known as the Grenadiers, were formed three years ago from what was formerly the Bay State Rifle Team. They have become an elite unit in the Army ROTC Brigade at the University.

Besides performing as a drill team the unit serves as a representative at other activities including last fall's Homecoming Parade, the Pittsfield Halloween Parade, and the Northampton Veteran's Day Parade.

Also the team has participated in honor guards for visiting guests and has sent a ceremonial firing squad to Greenfield. The Spring schedule includes appearances at several drill meets and the Annual Spring Military Review.

The team this year is commanded by Cadet Maj. John W. Hardy, who is assisted by Drill Sgt. William D. Vannah, Operations NCO Alfred Medeiros, and Supply NCO Ronald Christensen.

Spring Swing To Feature Beat Of Splendelles

Has that second set of hour exams left you weary? Have you felt isolated from the campus community lately?

THEN LIVE UP, dance into the Student Union on Friday, April 22 at 8 o'clock. The Splendelles will pack the wild beat at the SPRING SWING that is guaranteed to get you back into the groove. With those lazy Spring days just around the corner you can't afford to miss it!

All this fun for only fifty cents and a college I.D.

Critique Seeks In Crowd

Critique wishes to remind all those who received letters from us this week that a meeting will be held on Thursday evening, April 21, in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union at 6:30 P. M.

This orientation program has been organized for all those who have indicated during their summer orientation an interest in working on a student publication. However, the meeting is open to all those who are interested in student communications.

Critique, a fiscally autonomous RSO organization, strives at providing an active medium for evaluation of the curriculum. Because we are independent we are more dependent on student support—join us!

2 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

SAM SPARC SPEAKS OUT

Animal Farm '68

It was time for the annual elections on Animal Farm and there were three choice candidates vying for the top prize of "Animal of the Year". The three candidates were, the incumbent Booby the pig, his main challenger Ritchie the fox, and the last minute entry of Alcky the ox.

Last year, in a surprise move, Booby the pig overthrew Johnnie the chameleon, as "Animal of the Year." Booby was Johnnie's right hand animal last year, but he turned against him with the help of all of Johnnie's other right hand animals. Johnnie didn't even make the primaries last year because of Booby's vicious attacks.

"He is a corrupt politician," Booby charged. "He wasted the farm's money by hiring a group of trained seals from Bermuda when our own domestic seals would have been just as good, and much less expensive. But the most important reason that proves beyond a doubt that Johnnie is a corrupt politician is that Johnnie sent out a newsletter to every animal on the farm right before the election. This reeks with politics, and if elected, I promise I will never waste the farm's money by sending out a newsletter right before election, solely to enhance my chances for re-election."

But that was last year and many changes had taken place during Booby's reign. He had stacked the animal advisory board with ninety-five of his own hand-picked sheep until now it was merely a rubber stamp for Booby's whims. When one of the few remaining white sheep protested that as a corrupt political move, Booby kicked him off the advisory board and replaced him with eleven more of his grateful animal friends.

"This is good because it is much more efficient," Booby assured the animals. And who could argue? In fact, he did bring the Beach Canaries to the farm, for which he was quick to take complete credit.

Other more subtle changes were taking place. His picture was everywhere on the farm, and when his picture wasn't omnipresent, he squealed until it was. Also, his hat size increased three sizes.

For a while Booby hadn't campaigned too much, but soon his campaign gained momentum. His first move was to send out a newsletter to everyone on the farm right before elections. However, one bold sheep reminded Booby of his campaign promise of last year. "You said you would never waste the farm's money by sending out a newsletter right before elections, solely to enhance your chances for re-election," the sheep blurted.

Booby flared. That is a lie. What I said was that I would never send a letter right before election unless it was necessary." Booby smiled and all the black sheep bashed in approval.

Until a few weeks ago nobody on the farm even knew Ritchie the fox existed. He was chosen to run by six of the smallest rats on the farm in a smoke-filled room in the barn. But suddenly here he was telling everyone how interested he was in the welfare of the farm. Sound fishy? Well it wasn't, because Ritchie has an issue. He was working for total farm reform as a charter member of the Farm Reform Committee. (It should be noted that Booby has suddenly acquired an interest in this Committee). Somehow Ritchie managed to get his picture in the last three issues of the farm paper, The Animalian, for work on this committee. And so Ritchie the fox milked the farm reform committee for all it was worth.

And last, but not least, there was Alcky the ox. Alcky's last minute entry into the campaign, was imported from Greece because of the tremendous success that Grecian animals had in getting elected to farm offices. He was a likeable enough ox, but he certainly had had no experience in farm affairs.

I suppose you're wondering what the voters decided. It is rumored that all the animals out of protest wrote in Sam Sparc for President.

That's If

by DeWITT SMITH, Day Editor

A few weeks ago, the administration took action.

Yes, seriously. And the result, banning bars in fraternities, was met at the time with some signs of irritation on the part of the student body. Of course, these signs, until now, have amounted to just so much hot air, but then, isn't that in keeping with the traditional UMie stereotype? That of an apathetic clod.

It's easy to talk, to whine, snivel, and complain, but it's somewhat more difficult to act. Unfortunately, only through action will anything ever be accomplished. Tomorrow, there will be an opportunity to act, an opportunity, if anyone is interested, to remove the university restrictions on alcoholic beverages. This opportunity will come in the form of a voting referendum and will appear on all the ballots in tomorrow's class elections. Everyone, if interested and not too busy with important matters, may vote. If enough students aren't too busy, maybe something will be accomplished. In fact, if enough students will make the time, spend the energy, and find the strength to struggle to the Student Union, pick up a pencil and make their mark, something will be done.

That's if.

Letters To The Editor

The Men

To The Editor:

In view of the recently increasing assaults on male students with long hair by various groups of narrow-minded hawks, I feel it necessary to express my opinions on the reasons behind these acts. The cause goes beyond mere ignorance and insecurity.

The appalling fact is that there are male students who are in such doubt of their masculinity, or in such fear of losing it, that they must assert their "manliness" by physically and verbally attacking any long-haired man they see. But in the final analysis, these boys do not even impress sorority sisters, the other campus group which has hitherto been forced to bear the brunt of their hollow sexual exhibitionism.

Kathy Nolan '68

Arts Ignored

To the Editor:

A state university is responsible to that state and to society to produce capable, qualified, professional people for employment in any given field. The Art Department of this University, in recognition of its responsibilities has proposed a Bachelor of Fine Arts program, to be initiated in the fall of 1966, which would train the University arts majors to compete with graduates of professional art schools.

Acceptance to graduate school for anyone except art majors is based upon marks of one type or another. For an art major this acceptance depends upon the work that he has produced in his undergraduate years. The B.F.A. would provide the time and opportunity for an art major to produce and collect a reasonable amount of work so that a fair appraisal could be made of his work, and talent.

In preparing this program the Art Department made thorough time-consuming study of all the existing art programs, both B.A. and B.F.A., in art schools and colleges across the nation. Their results were molded into a program, combining extensive technical training in all fields of art and a liberal education.

A similar type program could be initiated in the fields of English, Drama and Music. Such programs have the obvious advantage of having a professional program within a liberal arts atmosphere, thus really creating a liberal education. This does not mean however that the regular B.A. degree will be done away with, but that there will be a variety in the choice of programs so that they will fit the needs of many students.

This program was rejected by the Administration last week. They would, they said, perhaps consider such a program for the following year. By delaying action on a B.F.A. program, students now enrolled as art majors would have considerable difficulty in adjusting their present curriculum to fit into such a technical program. These students would also have to take unnecessary requirements which would not be credited to them under a B.F.A. program.

When questioned about their decision, the Administration stated that the program would not be feasible because it should require additional space, and that the Art Department did not consider this problem in their proposal. In truth, however, the proposal specifically states that the only adjustment which would have to be made in order to start the program in the fall, would be the addition of some supplies. When confronted with further inquiry, Dean Wagner, stated the B.F.A. program could not be considered for the coming year because the proposal, which was submitted on February 27, was not submitted early enough to be properly examined, and that it should have been in by February 1. It seems strange that the whole Department of Art was led to believe that they were working on a March 1. deadline, and that certain members of The Administration who had full knowledge of the program and had EVEN given advice on certain sections of it, did not correct this error. Further questioning by both students and members of the Art Department resulted in equally confusing and contradictory answers. When countered with specific statements the Administration has either refused to comment or referred the inquirer to another office.

Rights, Right

This letter is a reply to a letter entitled "Corruption," written by a Michael D. McKinley '68.

As the President of the Class of 1968, I wish to answer Mr. McKinley's charge that the letter was a "clever and expensive ruse" to attract more votes next week in the primary. Let me mention a few facts which Mr. McKinley obviously didn't take the time to find out. The reasons that necessitated a class meeting to be called at this time were:

- 1) The Class Budget must be submitted to the Student Senate this week.
- 2) The Winter Carnival '67 Budget alone will be over $40,000.
- 3) A referendum for the consumption and possession of alcoholic beverages by students 21 years of age and older will be on the ballot April 21.
- 4) Eileen Blanchette, the chairman of the Student Senate Committee for Student Activities, requested time to speak to the class about the apathetic attitude of class members toward campus organizations.
- 5) The forum for this meeting is April 29.
- 6) The class officers, who are playing a vital role in University Reform wish to hear the class views on this problem, so close to all of us.
- 7) The Executive Council of the Class of 1968 passed a motion in the fall Semester of 1965 to send out a class letter each semester in order to inform the class members of the activities of the class during the past semester.

With these facts before him, Mr. McKinley obviously wouldn't have felt that the reasons for the class meeting and the class letter were superficial. Members of the Class of 1968 have a right to know how their money is being spent. They have a right to know what their officers and Executive Council Members are doing for the class. They have a right to air their views on Winter Carnival '67. They have a right to express their views on University Reform. Their RIGHTS were honored through the class letter and the class meeting.

It is tragic that Mr. McKinley did not check the facts. When and if Mr. McKinley wishes to criticize or embarrass the class' actions, I ask him to be intelligent and responsible enough to investigate the facts.

President, Class of 1968
Robert P. Keough

EUGENE KEMBLE

by AAFI GHAYYUR

The residents of Amherst and surrounding areas will have the opportunity to see exotic dances and listen to melodious songs as well as music from different countries on Sat., April 23, at 8:00 P.M. in Bartlett Auditorium when they view the Variety Show organized by the UMass International Club.

Student artists from the four colleges will perform this show and will also put on a few skits. Among others, Phillipino, Indonesian, Pakistani, Indian, Malaysian, African and American dances, and songs will be presented. Soesmon Kartono, a UMass graduate student from Indonesia and Robert Darling have been appointed chairman and deputy chairman of the International Variety Show sub-committee.

"It is one of our big events," remarked Alladin Hashim, club president "of the year and we hope it will help bring people of all parts of the world closer and develop better international understanding."

Tickets which will be available at the gate cost 75 cents.

COEDS TO SPEAK ON PHILIPPINES

Two Mount Holyoke coeds will be giving a talk (with color slides) on the Philippines during the regular weekly International Club coffee hour on Wednesday, April 20, at 5:30 p.m. in the Governor's Lounge, S.U. All are invited.

The two girls, Carol Jean Meadows and Eugenia Kemble who are senior Philosophy of Religion and Political Science majors respectively spent the ac-

- Hitching into town with five girlfriends and being picked up by three boys.
- Pulling an all-nighter for an hour exam and then sleeping through it because you forgot to pull out that obnoxious little switch in the alarm clock.
- Having a best friend who won't sign you out for curfew.
- The show-off playing Chopsticks and Heart and Soul in the Colonial Lounge who thinks he's Liberace.
- The time you woke up at 5:30 to see the sun rise with your romantic boyfriend who overslept.

Metawampee Award Open To Nomination

The fourth annual Metawampee Award, in memory of the late Albert P. Madeira will be awarded to a member of the University faculty at Student Leaders' Night, Thursday, May 3, 1966.

THE AWARD IS the most distinguished honor bestowed upon a faculty member by the student body each year.

Based on OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE ACADEMIC AND EXTRACURRICULAR LIFE ON CAMPUS, the Metawampee Award consists of a plaque and a stipend, the amount of which is to be announced.

Nomination forms have been distributed on campus and seniors are asked to particularly consider their candidates' total contributions to both academic and extracurricular activities.

NOMINATIONS may be submitted in the collection box at the Student Union Lobby counter where more nomination forms may be secured.

In 1963, the first Metawampee Award recipient was Dr. Albert P. Madeira. Dr. H. Leland Varley received the award in 1964 and Dr. Joseph S. Marcus in 1965.

The 1966 recipient can be determined as selectively and wisely only if a large percentage of seniors submit nominations immediately.

Nomination papers are available for class of '67 to the Student Union Governing Board in the RSO office.

Award-Winning Movie To Be Seen in Union

Tonight in the Student Union Ballroom at 8:00 p.m. in conjunction with last night's talk by Felix Greene, will be his award-winning film "China", presenting the most complete coverage of life in China available anywhere in the west.

AS THE London Observer put it, "This is China as one camera saw it, slums and splendor alike, and the result, however edited, rings basically true."

On Sunday, April 24, there will be a lecture "What's New in Peking," given in Mahar Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. by the noted journalist Frederick Nossal. Mr. Nossal's work with various newspapers for almost twenty years has taken him all over the world and given him a vast acquaintance and understanding of international affairs.

In 1950 he traveled across Europe freelancing, then worked on the Toronto Globe and Mail in 1952 and 1953, returning to London in 1953 to cover the Coronation for the Australian Press.

In 1959 he opened a bureau of the Globe and Mail in Peking but the following year, due to a refusal by Chinese Communists to extend his visa, the newspaper had to continue its operation from Hong Kong.

AT PRESENT Mr. Nossal is living in Toronto as a member of the Globe and Mail editorial staff specializing in foreign affairs. His speech Sunday night should provide greater insight to the problems facing China today.

Robert Moses to Speak; Topic: Faith and Works

New York City planner Robert Moses will give a public lecture at the University of Massachusetts tonight, on the topic "Faith, Plans and Works."

THE TALK, at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium, is co-sponsored by the UMass department of landscape architecture and the New England Park Association.

MOSES WAS New York City Parks Commissioner from 1934 to 1966, New York City Planning Commissioner from 1942 to 1966 and has in addition been chairman of the Triborough Bridge Authority, New York City Construction Coordinator, president of the Long Island State Park Commission, chairman of the New York State Council on Parks, chairman of the Jones Beach and Bethpage Park Authorities and president of the New York World's Fair.

HIS PIONEER WORK in the development of New York waterfront parks and parkways was studied by UMass landscape architecture graduate students in their recent design project for the Connecticut River waterfront in the Greater Springfield area. Moses' lecture appearances is an outgrowth of that project.

CROSSEMEN ...

a solo dash on the goal by MIT's Bob Wyatt.

Arneri, who had quite a day led off the scoring after 6:37 of the second period with a tally on the first of O'Donnell's two assists. Midfielder Dick Pulsifer tossed in an unassisted goal just 18 seconds later, to produce a 2-0 lead at the break.

The win was the second in three official games for the Redmen, who will face the Tufts Jumbos, under former Redman Jack Noble, Saturday at 2 p.m. on the intramural field.

In the freshman tilt, UMass also came out with the winning hand, 6-0. The top cards were Kevin O'Connor, with two goals, Tov Voisin, Steve Anderson, Paul Mushovic, and Don Agnoli, with one apiece.

Coach Frank Shields singled out goalie Mark Schlossberg ("his second shutout in as many games") and defenseman Kevin Collins for their outstanding contributions.

Racqueteers Bow to Military

by DAVE HANSON

In their initial outing of the season, the Varsity tennis team lost to a strong Army team at West Point, 6-1. The Army team, sporting a 3-2 record in their previous outings were too much for the Redmen to contend with as they rolled to easy victories in the first, second, fourth and sixth singles.

Gerry Johnson, a junior playing in the number three position dropped a three-hour match to Greg Bowers of the military by scores of 7-9, 6-4, and 7-5. Standout for UMass a three-set (1-6, 6-4, 6-2) victory over Doug Westerland.

Harvey Mednicov, expected to excel this year, showed little encouragement for Coach Steve Kosakowski as he succumbed 6-1, 6-1, to Army's number one, Bill Conway.

Andy Meagher, Capt. Roger Harper, and Steve Cohen performed well in losing efforts.

In the doubles competition,

Mednicov and Meagher hung on in the first set but could not come through in the clutch as they fell in two sets to Conway and Campbell of West Point, 8-6, 6-1.

The number two and three doubles, strongpoints for UMass, were called on account of rain.

SPE, BKP, Taxis, AEP, TKE Win On Diamond

by DAVE JARNES

Monday's softball games were highlighted by a come from behind effort by the Courtesy Taxis. The Taxis trailed the Untouchables 8-5 when they came up with 6 big runs in the top of the fifth behind lusty hitting of Don Tudryn and Billy Klaes. A strong defense enabled them to keep the Untouchables from scoring again as the Taxis won 11-8.

AEP let loose its frustrations on hapless ASP as they murdered the Alpha Sig's 23-9. Parnell (4 hits) and Freedman (5 hits) led P's attack. AEP has now outscored its opponents 33-10 in its two wins.

Defending fraternity champ TKE had some troubles with ambitious PMD but managed to hang on for a 6-4 decision. SPE upended PSD 8-1 as Goose Sagesse sparkled at first base while BKB annihilated ATG 18-0 by scoring 11 runs in the first inning.

In the only other softball game the defending campus titleists, the Moody Blues, rolled over PKN.

Turning to soccer, 3 goals in the first minute and a half of the second gave the Barracudas a 3-0 win over the Bruins. In other contests, the Trojans and Colts were deadlocked at 1-1 while the Maples and Pines played to scoreless ties with the Oaks and Hi-Lo's.

Redmen Whip UConn, 7-2

Babyak, Kuz Homer as UM Wins Battle of Unbeaten

by GLENN BRIERE

Home runs by Jim Kuczynski and Jim Babyak and the steady pitching of Carl Boteze enabled the Redmen to overcome several lapses in the field and defeat arch-rival UConn, 7-2, at the Pasture in Amherst yesterday.

"It was a fine win," said Coach Earl Lorden, and indeed it was. By defeating last year's Yankee Conference champion, UMass has established itself as the team to beat this year. The victory also kept the team's unbeaten string intact at 4-0 on the regular season and 10-0 overall. It was the first loss for UConn this spring, both in regular season and pre-season play.

A large Patriot's Day crowd saw the Redmen pull out in the fifth inning to take the lead for good. Boteze, a junior right-hander, got off to a slightly shaky start, but he came on strong to record his second victory in as many games. Carl gave up two runs on eight hits, walked three and struck out 10. The two UConn runs were the first earned runs off UMass pitching in four games.

The UMass defense committed four errors, but none of them played a part in the Connecticut scoring. The homers were a continuation of the tremendous power shown by the Redmen this season. UMass now has a total of six circuit clouts. Hagan Andersen continued his hot streak with two hits in three at bats to raise his average to .529. But the real batting stars were Kuczynski and Babyak, who each hit two-run homers. Babyak drove in three runs.

UMass immediately began to work on Huskie pitcher Russ Rotko in the bottom of the first. Andersen led off with a single to left, and Frank Stewart smashed a line drive to first. But first baseman Ron Bugbee flagged it down and stepped on first for a double play. Jim Babyak then lined a single to center, and with a 2-0 count on Terry Swanson, stole second. Swanson walked to put men on first and second, but Ross Piken popped out to the third baseman to end the rally.

Boteze found the going slightly rough in the top of the second when UConn's Bob Shaefer and Ed Carroll smashed successive singles to center with two outs. A passed ball allowed the runners to move up, and Carl ran the count to 3 and 2 on batter Rotko. But a weak grounder to Stewart at second ended the inning.

Roy Lasky, after insisting that he was hit by a pitch, belted a line single to right to open the bottom of the second. John Peacock forced him at second, and catcher Jim Kuczynski came up. Kuz had run into some hard luck Saturday with several hits taken away from him. He got what was due to him yesterday when he hit a two-run homer to left center, putting the Redmen ahead 2-0.

The Huskies threatened again in the fourth when Shaefer walked, stole second and went on to third as a result of a bad throw. Once again, however, Boteze came through in the clutch by fanning Ed Carroll.

UConn picked up its two runs in the fifth. With one out, Tom Proctor beat out an infield hit, followed by another infield hit by George Greer. A wild pitch by Boteze caught the UMass infield asleep, and the runners moved up with little trouble. Ron Bugbee then drove them in with a bloop double to right, tying the score at 2-2.

The Redmen moved out in front to stay in the bottom of the fifth. Boteze led off with a single to left, and Hagan Andersen laid down a sacrifice bunt. The throw to first was wild, and Hagan was on. Stewart loaded the bases with a perfect bunt up the third base line, and Babyak walked to force in the go-ahead run. Terry Swanson followed with a single to left, bringing in two runs and giving the Redmen a 5-2 lead.

A real rhabarb developed when the next batter, Ross Piken, hit a ground ball to Proctor at second. He fielded the ball and tried to tag Swanson out in the base path, but Terry ran into him and flattened him. The umpire, much to Terry's dismay, called interference on him, claiming that Swanson ran into the fielder before he fielded the ball. It resulted in the first out of the inning, leaving men on first and third. Muttered ALREADY TAGGED—Jim Babyak seems to have avoided tag by UConn catcher Ed Carroll, but the Redmen shortstop has already been wiped out. Action came in fifth inning when Babyak attempted to score on Roy Lasky's fly to centerfielder George Greer.

Terry as he returned to the bench. "What the hell am I, a roadrunner?" Roy Lasky followed with a fly ball to center, and Babyak was tagged out trying to score in a close play.

UConn threatened once more in the seventh as a result of errors by Stewart and Babyak. With the bases loaded and two outs, Boteze got Mike Gerish to fly out to right.

A brisk wind which started to blow out toward center late in the game was a factor in Babyak's tape measure job in the seventh. Hagan Andersen singled to right, and one out later Babyak blasted a towering fly to left center. All the UConn centerfielder could do was watch it fly over the fence. It was later estimated that the homer went over 450 feet. This blast ended the game's scoring at 7-2.

Coach Earl Lorden said that Ross Piken will start today's Holy Cross contest, with Bill Smith scheduled for Friday's game against Vermont. The Catamounts will come to Amherst this weekend for two Yankee Conference games. After Holy Cross, UMass will play nine straight conference battles, all of them crucial to their hopes of taking the title.

Crossemen Raid MIT, 6-1, With Delayed Ambush

by TOM FITZGERALD

With the UMass lead cut to 2-1 and MIT threatening with a man advantage early in the last quarter, the situation looked bleak for the Redmen in yesterday's lacrosse war with the Engineers at Cambridge.

But UMass struck for four goals within eight minutes to hit the road with an important Taylor Division victory under its belt. The 6-1 decision was achieved before the TV camera and will be shown soon on two educational television stations, Channel 24, Hartford (Thursday at 9 p.m.), and Channel 2, Boston.

The busy fourth period opened with UMass down a man, through an expulsion foul levied against defenseman Don Rana. MIT's All-New England Steve Schroeder fired an unassisted goal from 30 feet out after only 22 seconds of the quarter.

With five minutes elapsed, Redmen Kevin O'Brien and Charlie Avakian were controlling the ball in the MIT zone when Obie took a shot from 40 feet away. The ball hit the upper left corner of the net cleanly, giving UMass a 3-1 bulge and a little breathing room. Avakian was credited with an assist.

At the 8:24 mark, Tony Arneri took advantage of an MIT penalty and converted a pass from O'Brien to make it 4-1. Four minutes later, Bob Murphy pulled the play of the day, sweeping a pass from Dick Kent into the net from in front. Arneri pushed the game further into the bag with a wide-angle shot at 13:00 off an assist by Jim O'Donnell.

The first quarter saw UMass controlling the game in the Engineer's end of the field. MIT goalie Bob MacDonald thwarted the Redmen on several occasions, most notably on a body save of an Arneri bullet and a pick-up of a shot into the dirt by Howie Goffman.

UMass net-minder Bill Sinclair stole some of the thunder for himself with nifty stops against Schroeder and Pete Kirkwood, two talented scorers, during the second quarter. Sinclair was helped at one point just before the half when defenseman Brad Stokes broke up

Regs Changes Pass Senate, Move to Committee

by CAROL LEVOSKY, Staff Reporter

The changes in Women's Regulations proposed by the Women's Affairs Committee were unanimously passed by the Student Senate Wednesday night.

Only one amendment was added, which stated that "all failures to sign out overnight will be treated alike regardless of destination."

THE RECOMMENDATIONS, which are included in a completely revised handbook of women's regulations, now go to the Student Life Committee, headed by Dr. Mark Noffsinger.

The committee, which includes Deans Helen Curtis, Isabelle Gonon, William Burkhardt, and William Barnard will consider the proposals on Friday, and recommend their acceptance or rejection by William F. Field, Dean of Students.

In a further development on the reform scene, the Reform Committee today presented Dean Helen Curtis with a petition asking for the abolition of curfews. The petition contained approximately 2300 names and constituted about 70% of all the women housed in university facilities.

After the petition is forwarded to the Dean of Students' Office, all recommendations for action upon it are to be sent to that office for consideration.

ALTHOUGH SEVERAL comments on the recommendations have been attributed to her, Dean Curtis said that she has "made no comments to anyone."

Dr. Noffsinger, in a Collegian interview, praised the reform activities.

"I see the concern of the student as a very healthy thing. It doesn't frighten me a bit."

COMMENTING ON POSSIBLE interference by the trustees Noffsinger stated, "I have no reason to suppose that the Dean of Students' hands are tied. I hope this reform is treated as the healthy thing it is by the trustees."

Noffsinger feels the committee has an important role. "The Student Life Committee has the power to recommend, a power which I consider to be considerable. The committee has not formed any opinions yet, and will not, until the meeting Friday."

"I HAVE MADE my position on curfews clear in my letter to the Collegian of March 1, 1966."

In that issue of the paper, Dr. Noffsinger stated that he is in favor of the curfew system for he feels "they lend a significant order to a community of scholars devoted to an academic pursuit."

In addition to approving the recommendation of Women's Affairs, they also took this action:

THE UNIVERSITY Reform Committee was granted $277 which will be spent in three areas—another conference, this time on dorm autonomy, more coffee hours in the women's residence halls, and a trip to Harvard to discuss similar reform problems.

Ex-Senate president Dacey squelched opposition to the Harvard trip assuring the beneficial aspect of the trip with, "It's not a question of may; it's a question of unequivocal, irrevocable fact."

"I think the University Reform Committee is the best thing that ever happened to this university."

Senator Gaudet (Webster) pointed out that the Senate sponsors representatives from the Collegian and Index for publication conferences and should help the entire university.

THE SECOND PART of the bill gave $56 to Impact, a conference to promote freshman and sophomore interest in RSO activities especially in publications and student government.

The Senate passed two budgets for the year 1966-67, before closing the meeting. The Astronomy Club will work on a budget of $674 and the Sport Parachute Club on a budget of $2614 "to provide money for more people to join."

Counseling Day Prelude

Students, Faculty to Converse

The University will hold a Student-Faculty night next Tuesday as a supplement to Counseling Day, Wedn sday, May 4.

The various majors are planning a spectrum of programs for the evening, in order to give students and faculty an opportunity to exchange views outside of the classroom situation.

ANY STUDENT who desires an opportunity to discuss aspects of his program for next year in advance of Counseling Day with a faculty representative from his major will be able to do so.

Announcements of times and places for the meetings will be made in classes and posted on bulletin boards, and Monday's Collegian will carry a complete directory.

These meetings of faculty and students are a part of the program of the university to reduce the anonymity inherent in large universities.

THE GOVERNMENT department has added a slight variation to the program by having faculty remain in their offices and receive concerned visitors in their respective offices.

Students who complain about lecture classes of 500 will finally be able to abolish doubts that their lecture is really human and not merely a recording device.

DEAN HAROLD SCHUMER has stated that, "Since the student is unable to identify with the university as a whole, he may at least be able to identify more closely with the department."

China Expert to Speak

FREDERICK NOSSAL, who was the first newspaper correspondent of a western paper to open a Peking office, will speak on "What's New in Peking" at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium, this Sunday.

Nossal has vast background on Communist China and has written a book Dateline Peking, published in 1962. It has since been edited into seven different languages.

As far eastern correspondent for the Globe and Mail between 1960-62 he visited Japan, Malaya, Laos, South Vietnam, Thailand and Singapore. A month after the big refugee exodus from China into Hong Kong in 1962 he travelled home to Canada via Burma and India.

Nossal is currently serving as a member of the Globe and Mail's editorial staff where he serves as a specialist in foreign affairs.

Nossal's recent assignments have taken him to the Afro-Asian conference in Algiers, where he arrived a day after the coup against Ben Bella, to Cairo, the United Nations, and to the Indo-Pakistani conflict last September.

Campus Primary Sees Referendum Sweep

by CAROLYN LEVOSKY

In the busiest primary election ever held on the UMass campus Thursday it is estimated that over thirty per cent of the student body voted.

Almost three thousand out of the nine thousand eligible to vote, came out to vote "yes" on the referendum on alcoholic beverages favoring the abolishment of University rules on the consumption of alcoholic beverages.

Although this did not meet minimum requirements for the referendum turn out, it showed clearly University sentiment on the controversy.

The major upset in the primary elections came in the class of '68 presidential race when Dick Wood polled more votes than the incumbent Bobby Keough.

The incumbents for vice-president, Jeff Powers, and treasurer, Shelley Forbess, remained ahead in the race.

After a recount Steve Krinsky defeated Mary Lehrer in the final '68 senator at large election.

The results of the '69 presidential race between Doug Greene and Wayne Thomas showed close rivalry, whereas the vice presidential race between Thomas Mitchell and Debbie Nicholls left Mitchell far ahead.

Final elections will be held on April 28.

Trustees Vote Rent Raises; All Residences Affected

by CIF SNICKERS, Day Editor

In an announcement to the University News Service late yesterday afternoon, the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees made known their vote to increase room rent rates in all 47 student residence halls, effective in September '66.

Residence halls being increased from $100 to $150 per semester include: Baker, Brooks, Butterfield, Chadbourne, Crabtree, Dwight, Greenough, Hamlin, Hills North and South, Johnson, Knowlton, Leach, Lewis, Mary Lyon, Mills, Thatcher, Van Meter North and South, and Wheeler.

Houses with rent raises from $150 to $175 per semester include: Brett, Dickinson, Emerson, Field, Gorman, Grayson, James Melville, Thoreau, and Webster. As was announced earlier by the Housing Office, the Tower residence halls will also cost $175 per semester.

The rate increases will bring UMass into line with other New England state universities, but will still be lower than most private institutions.

The rent increases are due primarily to increased construction and maintenance costs. During the years when crowded conditions forced the University to have three people in some rooms, there was added income.

But with the five new 22-story residence units to be opened in the fall semester, tripling will no longer be necessary, and the added income will be lost.

President Lederle, in commenting on the new rates said, "We delayed raising the rents as long as possible, but operating and maintenance costs for labor, materials and supplies have been rising."

"Construction costs in the Amherst area have been increasing at a rate of 6 per cent annually, and are expected to increase more in the near future. We could delay the rent increase no longer."

"If costs continue to increase, we will probably have to adjust rates again in the near future."

"I have instructed our financial aid officers to make certain that no student is forced to leave school because he cannot meet the increased cost. Highest priority will be given to upper class students who have prepared budgets based on current rates."

Lederle explained that while four years ago operating and maintenance costs were about $72 per student, this year they have risen to $100 per student.

Dean of Students William Field commented that the increases will make possible renovation of existing residence halls that has been stalled by a lack of funds.

"With this new source of income," he said, "we will be able to continue the upgrading of residence halls with greatly increased efficiency."

FINANCE APPLICATIONS EXTENDED

A special applications procedure for financial aid will be established beginning Monday, it was announced yesterday by Dean of Students William F. Field.

Initiation of the special procedure is to provide for those students who were caught unprepared by the raise in room rent.

"Those students who have already made application for financial aid will be taken care of automatically as the allotments will be adjusted accordingly," Field said.

"These special applications will be for those who have not applied for any financial aid and for whom the increased room rates would prove too great a financial burden."

Field noted that the special applications will be obtainable for at least a week, to give all those affected an adequate opportunity to reconsider their financial needs for the coming year.

Student Life Committee Formed

The administrative study committee on Student Life, 1966, appointed by William F. Field, Dean of Students, as announced in the March 11, 1966 Collegian, announces its agenda items for its next two meetings as follows: Regulations, 1966-67

April 29 Men's and Women's Regulations, 1966-67

Written statements from any member(s) of the University community—students, faculty, or staff—with the express purpose of considering them in its study. Statements should be addressed to Dr. Mark G. Noffsinger, Chairman, Committee on Student Life, 1966, Student Union.

Further agenda items will be regularly announced in the Collegian.

The Committee will be meeting weekly throughout the next calendar year and will be holding open meetings from time to time for those individuals and groups who wish to attend.

The Committee is essentially a study committee charged with making recommendations to the Dean of Students who has assured the Committee of his support.

IN HIS charge to the Committee, the Dean of Students wrote: "The need for consistent agreement in stance among the key offices relating to organized student life and the projection of common guides to the process by which change can be evolved, and a reasonably unified interpretation of the expectation that such progress can be accomplished, is vitally necessary.

I will, of course, provide whatever support and assistance the chairman may require, for I fully realize the vital importance of this role as well as the natural hazards and barriers to successful fulfillment."

The Committee is drafting a statement of philosophy as a guide toward testing all subsequent recommendations.

ITEMS ON past agendas have included: rules and regulations, channels for immediate and future action, residence halls evaluations by counselors, and the campus alcohol policy.

The Committee has no panacea for all ills; it does pledge its continued support to the ongoing University effort to provide the same open-minded inquiry outside the classroom that it cherishes within its classrooms.

Journalist Criticizes U. S.-China Relations

by JANE ROLAND, Staff Reporter

"We are as ignorant about the Chinese as they are about us." This is the way Felix Greene, an English journalist living in California, states that he feels education about China is extremely important.

Throughout his speech last Wednesday, Greene stressed two main ideas: that Americans must regard the Chinese as people, and that we must realize China is not fooling around in world affairs—that the U.S. may be on a collision course with a nation of 750 million people.

Greene, whose most recent trip to Red China was four months ago, spoke at the Student Union to an audience of about 400 as part of an extended symposium on Red China presented by the Distinguished Visitors Program of the University.

Greene explained that one of the reasons he keeps his British citizenship is because of the passport.

"When the United States passport reads, as does the British one, that it is good for every place in the world, then I'll be the first in line at the U. S. citizenship office."

The grey-haired, balding man said that it is very important to break the stereotype image Americans have of China and her people, and that Americans must stop considering China on a solely political level.

"If you were to go to China, you would immediately be struck by her vitality and buoyancy. I'm not sure this has anything to do with the Communist regime—people have talked of the resilience of the people since before the Revolution."

"The way the people move and talk reflects a high-energy society, which is quickly noticed," said Greene.

"Communication is easy," he said. "People move easily with each other—they're not stilted or reluctant to talk to strangers."

Greene felt that three current strains dominate the thinking of the Chinese: the mood of relaxation, the "defection" of the Soviet Union, and the Vietnamese war.

"The Chinese consider the war a very important and pivotal war."

"They feel that it validates Mao's theory that it is not the amount of weapons but the spirit of the people which will win—if people are united in opposition, weaponry will not bring results," the poised speaker said from the podium.

"They feel that the United States is unsophisticated to try to get a solution by arms to what is a political problem. They say that the U. S. is fighting the kind of war every American military man has advised against."

According to Greene, there are three conditions that would probably cause the Chinese to confront the U. S. with its civilian militia, which is able to mobilize 100 million members in three to four hours.

"If their nuclear installations were bombed, if we gave any indication of moving troops north of the 17th parallel, or if the Viet Cong appeared to be losing, allowing the U. S. to dictate a military settlement, then Chinese troops would confront us."

"It seems as though we are on a collision course, that we could find ourselves in a land war with China."

Speaking with his strong British accent, Greene continued: "China is run by a small Communist party—two per cent of the population. It is very selective and needs people to dedicate themselves completely to the party."

"There is, however, no sense of being under police surveillance. China is not a place where you can be pushed or where there is fear. Arguments are always won by reason."

"It is, as the London Times called it, a government of endless conversation."

Debate Team Captures Trophy

The UMass Debate team brought home a trophy for third place from the fifth annual C. W. Post Debate Tournament last weekend.

The affirmative team of Elaine Pysz and Anne Dalton, both sophomores, won three debates and lost but one. The negative team of John Putnum, sophomore, and Jim Allen, senior, went undefeated, winning four straight debates.

Soon the trophy will be placed in the Debate Trophy Case, in Bartlett Hall. Despite fine efforts and records all the season, this was the first trophy brought home by UMass debaters this year.

Reform Committee Proposes New Action

On Monday night, April 18, 1966, the University Reform Committee met in the Colonial Lounge to discuss women's curfews, requirements, to elect officers, select a committee to draw up a constitution and a student Bill of Rights and to send delegates to a CROC meeting at Harvard.

THE RETURNS on the URC petitions concerning women's curfews and Dean Curtis' poll were announced. 70% of the women on campus voted to abolish curfews.

The results of Dean Curtis' poll also indicated that students are not in favor of the present curfew and parietals regulations.

The Students' Party under the auspices of the Psychology Dept. announced that they would take another more accurate poll of student opinion.

THE SUBJECT of course requirements will be taken up at coffee hours to be held in dormitory lounges. The URC sub-committee on requirements met today (Friday) with Provost Tippo to discuss the University College, the residential program, required courses, and the B. A. F. program.

The results of the meeting will be announced in Monday's Collegian. The possibility of student representation on the College of Arts and Sciences' curriculum committee was also considered.

Dick Kobayaski asked that all students interested in independent study form a committee to investigate and publicize the facts on the existing study program.

The URC elected at this meeting Peter Goodman, Judy Mostek, and Helen Sullinger respectively as temporary chairman, secretary and treasurer. The URC also formed a committee to draw up a constitution and a student Bill of Rights.

HELEN SULLINGER informed the URC of a multi-collegiate conference sponsored by The Commission for Reform on Campus to be held this Sunday at Harvard University.

The URC voted to ask for funds from the Student Senate to send delegates to the conference. The Senate approved the request and a bus will leave at 7:45 a.m. from the Student Union and at 8 a.m. from the Newman Center, on Sunday, April 24.

Those who have not signed up may contact Ken Hardy at 104 Mills House. There are a limited number of seats still available. The delegates will consist of Senate members as well as representatives of the URC, and any other interested students.

Today is the final deadline for material for the upcoming issue of Caesura. There is still time for creative individuals to submit original work to the Caesura Desk, Franklin Room, Student Union.

GSS Sponsors Panel

by BARBARA PROKO,

"Birth Defects and the March of Dimes" was the theme of a panel discussion conducted Wednesday evening, April 20, at the Public Health Building Auditorium.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA, women's service sorority, sponsored the meeting as part of its 1965-66 March of Dimes project.

"Birth defects are not a popular subject, even though one baby is born with a defect every two minutes," according to Dr. Virginia Apgar, Director of the Division of Congenital Malformations of the March of Dimes Foundation.

"Each year 250,000 babies are affected," she continued. "Exactly how many Americans are living with birth defects is not known. More than 5.5 million have diabetes, the commonest affliction."

DR. APGAR, who has delivered 17,000 babies, cited environment and heredity as the basic reasons for birth defects. Environmental factors include air conditions, cosmic rays, and insecticides.

Research is the most important part of birth defect programs, the doctor believes.

"Social mores," Dr. Apgar said, "restrict human research greatly. Animal experiments have little relation to human defects."

PUBLIC EDUCATION is necessary and significant in combating birth defects. Mrs. Arthur S. Hotch, the State Volunteer Advisor to the March of Dimes program, listed parents-to-be and teenagers as the most important groups to inform of good health habits.

James M. Connolly, a National Trustee, explained the role of the March of Dimes Foundation as that of "an independent committee raising funds and doing empirical research."

Draft Book Published; Explains Deferment Tests

On April 7 Bantam Books published for national mass market paperback distribution How To Score High On Your Selective Service Draft Deferment Test, a $1 paperback with 500 sample questions and answers and test-taking techniques for students preparing for the college qualification tests soon to be offered by the Selective Service System.

THE 192-PAGE book was prepared by Jeremy Martin and a staff of Aptitude Test Experts on the basis of information provided by the Selective Service solely to help the student perform at the maximum level of his natural ability and training.

The authors had prepared a similar handbook in 1951, around the time of the Korean War when the Selective Service last offered this series of tests to students.

Bantam approached the authors to revise and update the handbook immediately after the Selective Service announced on March 17 that it would again offer the college qualification tests to high school and college students applying for a 2-S deferment.

WITHIN THREE weeks the new Bantam Extra was off the press, and will be available to students at their local paperback outlets approximately one month before the first scheduled exam.

The Selective Service has scheduled the 1966 exams for May 14, 21, and June 3 at 1,200 test centers throughout the U.S. There may also be later exams scheduled in the fall.

THE TESTS are optional and can be taken only once. The scores may be used as a criterion by local draft boards judging a student's merit for deferment. According to the Selective Service, the tests provide a single standard against which all students in all colleges may be measured.

Science Research Associates, who developed and will administer the test, report that the 3½ hour exam will cover 150 questions in four categories — reading comprehension, vocabulary, usage, arithmetic reasoning and data interpretation by analyzing figures on a chart.

The Bantam book, called "a short personal tutoring course" by the authors, prepares students on all these phases of the test by giving 500 sample questions and answers, an intensive verbal and mathematical review techniques on test-taking and a warm-up practice examination.

How To Score High On Your Selective Service Draft Deferment Test is the latest in the Bantam Extra Series, timely books of immediate interest made available to the public as swiftly as possible at their regular paperback outlets. Other Bantam Extras have been: Report Of The Warren Commission, The Witnesses, Churchill: In Memoriam, The Pope's Journey To The United States, Farouk, and The Candy Murder Case.

Marching Band Holds Drum-Major Tryouts

DRUM MAJOR TRYOUTS for the 1966 football season of the University Marching Band will be held on Sat., April 30th.

William McCann, Assistant Conductor of Bands at Kent State University and former drum major of the University of Michigan Marching Band, will direct the instruction sessions on Friday night, April 29th, and Saturday morning.

Interested men should obtain an application-form at the band staff office in Old Chapel.

THE ART OF PROCRASTINATION HITS THE COLLEGE CAMPUSES AGAIN

What is the "art" of procrastination?

The Mount Mirror of Mount St. Scholastica College, Atchison, Kentucky, explains it this way: The setting is a college library and you are a student. Your comps are in a week and you haven't begun to study. You have four big papers to write before you can even think about studying for the test. The time is ripe. The hour is at hand. And it's spring.

YOU LOOK AT the stack of references in front of you. You open a book, pick up your pen and place it on the blank paper. Then you look out the window. And you keep looking out the window for a long time. An almost evil smile comes to your face. From whence has come the inspiration? But you have made the decision. You will waste the whole afternoon!

You put the cap on your pen—the pen that will not again see the light of this day. Then you plau, not detailed planning, but enough to keep the afternoon from having no direction whatsoever.

YOU PICK UP your books and walk into the magazine section of the library. On the way, you sardonically convince that appreciative friend, who has even more to do than you do, to go with you.

Together, you leaf through magazines, keeping in mind not to read anything assigned for class. Magazines such as Horizon, Holiday, Travel are good. They seem to have little to do with you, now.

Then, if the weather is agreeable, go outside. Find some place you'd like to be and sit there. Or better yet, just amble or ramble or mingle or wander, whichever you and the weather are in the mood for.

SAY IT IS a warm spring day and you and your friend decide to ramble. Now rambling, too, is an art. To truly ramble you must have no fixed goal whatsoever in mind. You just walk slowly, or skip slowly, and look at things, turning a corner occasionally.

At some time during your ramble, you will find yourself back where you started. This probably means you are through rambling for the day.

The next thing to do is sit down and rest. You are no doubt very tired. Go some quiet place nearby and get some liquid refreshment.

THEN TELL someone what you did. If you happen to have sadistic tendencies, tell someone who was working all afternoon but didn't get anything done. These are the people less apt to respond to the tales of your escapades with cutting remarks.

Then comes the worst part of procrastination — the hangover. But remember, it is an art. The only trouble is that all artists, except those who were born rich, have to do other work for a living. The artists of procrastination are not well-paid people.

UMass AFROTC Boasts Successful NCO Academy

ONE OF THE MAJOR PROBLEMS hindering the functioning of a R.O.T.C. unit in the past has been the gap in relations existing between basic and advanced cadets. During the past semester the 370th AFROTC Cadet Wing here at the University saw a major advancement made toward closing this gap with the establishment of an NCO Academy under the sponsorship and direction of the Allan B. Bunce Squadron of the Arnold Air Society. A first for the Cadet Wing and Arnold Air, the NCO Academy has achieved much since its conception.

According to Cadet Major Gordon C. Mallar, Jr., the original director of the Academy, the primary aim of the program has been and will continue to be to give to as many cadets as much information in the shortest period of time as possible.

AMONG THE GOALS established by the program for both Freshman and Sophomore cadets were: increased experience and practice in basic drill; better knowledge of the AFROTC program as a whole; esprit de corps; and a stronger pride on the part of the cadets for both their uniform and their Cadet Wing.

The program in general has been considered highly successful by its initiators with the completion of 52 cadets during its first semester. These Academy graduates have proven to be a key source for both Wing and drill positions in the R.O.T.C. program and will also prove beneficial in the next two years as Cadet Officers because of their increased knowledge of the AFROTC program.

AS RESULTS HAVE SHOWN, the NCO Academy will become a permanent part of both the Cadet Wing and Arnold Air Society activities. At the present, under the direction of Cadet 2Lt. Theodore R. Severn, the Academy has approximately 65 enrollees.

The program itself has been slightly altered to facilitate operation of the Academy during the present semester. Among the changes is an extension of the program from five to eight weeks with greater emphasis being placed upon the range of material being covered and upon closer contact between the NCO Academy advisors and the basic cadets.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

A Question of Apathy

by GREGG STRATTNER, Editorial Staff

Apathy is many things to many people. It may be a class discussion which never really becomes a discussion because half the class is asleep, or it may be an intramural basketball game lost by forfeit because nobody 'felt like' coming for the game. It may be poor attendance at a guest lecture on foreign affairs because the student had to look after his own affairs, or it may be a much needed reform movement which succeeds in enlisting the active support of only 50 students out of 12,000.

Apathy is not an easy word to define, much less to understand. Many students resent the label, "apathetic," and rationalize by stating coolly that they are here for an education, which they unfortunately equate with getting good marks. They implicitly assume that not to be apathetic is to suffer gradewise. Active participation in extra-curricular activities does take time, but is it time that would otherwise be spent studying? For some students it would, but for a great many it would not.

The student who overindulges in extra-curricular activities is just as bad as the student who doesn't indulge at all. Just like everything else, there is a happy and desirable medium. The number of activities that you take part in, therefore, doesn't separate you from the "sleepers." It's how you participate. Are you actively engaged or are you seldom or never seen and heard?

Apathy is generally regarded as a lack of interest, excitement, passion, and feelings. We should recognize that one very basic function of a university education is to stimulate thought, to replace this apathy with a desire to know, to question, and to ponder. Yet, how many students graduate never having thought about anything? How many will have been content to memorize mathematical formulas, chemical equations, Monarch Review Books on Plato, French grammar, or the circulation system in a frog?

These four years of college life will be the last opportunity for many people to develop the rudiments of intellectual curiosity and analysis. It will decide to a great extent whether or not they will live or merely "exist" for the rest of their lives. Many will add to the mental mortality rate and never "live".

Apathy is, in the final analysis, one of those curious maladies that students don't like to talk about, maybe because it's already been talked about so much. Do they hear the hue and cry too often, or not often enough? Whatever the reason is, ignoring its existence won't make it cease to exist... YOU CAN WAKE UP NOW.

Stockbridge: Conclusion

Too Much to Ask?

by BOB GORMAN

Although Stockbridge has had its troubles, the students of Stockbridge all show an exceptional pride and honor in attending Stockbridge. There is a very fine school spirit.

The student-faculty relationship is worthy of praise. Since the students have a very high regard for Dean Jeffrey, director of Stockbridge, this respect is carried throughout the school body.

Regrettably, there has been the minority of students and faculty who have hurt Stockbridge students. However this same faculty which cause the trouble are the same ones who do not really know what Stockbridge is.

Also, Stockbridge was not as mysterious and bothered as it presently is. During the first twenty-five years of its establishment, Stockbridge was very important to the campus. However, since the Second World War pointed out the need for scientists, agriculture has lost much of its prestige.

It is about time to realize that the students across the street from the Student Union are studying one of the nations most important fields, agriculture. For example, being human, most people tend to eat three meals of agricultural products per day.

There is one important fact that has been overlooked, though. That is that many Stockbridge students look down on themselves. One cause of this may be that during the opening convocation these students are told that they may, at times, be looked down upon. Therefore, some students begin their school year with a negative attitude and often consider themselves inferior.

Stockbridge students are not inferior. Most of these students and the rest of the campus realize this. However, the troubles which have occurred tend to make some students feel looked down on.

These students ask no special treatment. They only want the same opportunities as anyone else on campus. They only want what they deserve. Is this too much to ask?

(Editor's note—The writer would like to thank everyone who assisted in this writing. Also, any comments which you have would be appreciated.)

Vote for Your Favorite

Out of all of the profs that you've had here there must have been at least one who impressed you. You might even have liked one. Now is the time to let your feelings be made known.

"The Distinguished Teacher Award Committee for 1966 is currently seeking nomination for this year's award to be given at the Fall semester opening convocation."

The only limitation on nomination is that the professor being considered must exhibit those traits generally considered to be consistent with the tag "good teacher."

Please submit your nomination (with reason) in the ballot box that will be located in the lobby of the Student Union before April 29.

Letters To The Editor

More Reform

To the Editor:

It is a refreshing and hopeful sight to see the activities which are now taking place on campus in regards to University reform. The prime movers of most of this—the University Reform Committee, the Student Senate, and the Students' Party—cannot be regarded as the sole movers; we must all work together if we are to succeed.

The student sentiment which now exists here has probably never before been witnessed by the University. Now is the time to work together, on a basic level, to make those changes which we feel are necessary. But let us always keep in mind, on a higher and more important level, the broader question which is so basic to any reform movement. What parts do we as students play in shaping our own lives—both educational and social? It is this question that must be answered before we can succeed.

A few token changes will not solve the problem itself. In Loco Parentis must end; we must be treated as responsible adults if we are to act as responsible adults. We can all participate in making this University a better place and therefore making ourselves better individuals.

Steve Krinsky

The Men--Again

To the Editor:

In the Collegian of Apr. 20, 1966, Miss Kathy Nolan expressed her condemnation of those who ridicule the long-haired "men" on campus. I am not writing to condone these physical and verbal assaults. If these males wish to assume that long hair and dirt is a means of expressing their true individualism, let them live under that false assumption.

What I do take exception to in Miss Nolan's letter is her statement that the assaulters do not impress sorority sisters, the implication being that the long-hairs are the ones that do impress them. If outlandish and effeminate appearance are what impress sorority girls, then, in my opinion, these girls possess abominable taste, and are not worth impressing. I have always thought this to be true, anyway, but now I am convinced of it.

Since I have a crew-cut, bathe often, and dress neatly, I guess I will just have to be satisfied with non-sorority girls; that is, girls of good taste.

James E. Poulin '66

Too Tired?

To the Editor:

I am sick of hearing about "the good days" of high school, and I am tired of the constant complaint that students are no more than walking IBM cards on this huge, impersonal campus. It's really time now to stop blaming the campus for being big and start investigating how we can grow with it.

We have not done a good job so far. For instance, on this "huge" campus, only ten percent of the entire student body participates in any RSO activity. We hear about the Greeks who are in a minority, and are supposed to be dying out, but with such small student support in all activities, this problem does not stop with the Greeks.

If you are part of the ninety percent who doesn't do much, keep reading. As a former member of your ranks, I can understand several reasons which may make you hesitant about running down to the Student Union and offering yourself, body, soul, and mind, to the activity of your choice.

The idea that the campus is too big is a natural one, but it is true only if you try to be a member of the whole campus at large. Joining an activity gives one a feeling of individual satisfaction, and more than this, a new base from which to start meeting people, finding out what students are doing about the campus situation, etc.

"Too much studying," you say? This is true. However, statistics show, and people will tell you that the busier they are the more they get done. In an average test of this type, the group labeled "Activity Oriented" ranked second with an average of 3.1. So there is a happy medium.

The next problem is them, the ones who "run everything." Only their friends get in, so why fight the machine? This argument, as well as the other two, is as old and out of date as "the good old days."

The fact is, they have a problem too—you. You are a part of the tired word on campus, Apathy, which they are constantly fighting against.

Take a stand today. Either fight to stamp out campus organizations, or join the Forces of Good and stamp out Apathy. They will be glad to meet you.

Eileen Blanchette

Infirmary Blues

To the Editor:

Today an incident occurred, concerning the Infirmary, which made us stop and think for a moment. A friend of ours was admitted to the Infirmary with severe back pain. After she had been placed in bed and told that she would not be permitted to move from there, she asked if her parents would be notified. The answer shot back at her was that it was up to her to inform her parents. The absurdity of this statement is quite obvious.

Any responsible medical institution would take it upon themselves to notify those concerned. We realize that the Infirmary cannot contact parents for trivialities, but is a back injury a triviality?

Religion in the Classroom

How It's Done and Where

(Editor's note: This is the second of a series of three guest editorials by Paul Sanders of the English faculty.)

If it were necessary to be spelled out, the 1963 Supreme Court decree that invalidated devotional exercises in public schools specifically allows the study of religion as part of general education. It is in any case difficult to see how teaching about religion could be in principle unconstitutional. The First Amendment may separate "church" and "state"; it cannot separate religion and life. Its goal is a fairly modest one: to serve as guide in specific cases, not to offer a Procrustean ready-made answer to cases in general. Indeed might well ask whether he is being denied the First

A taxpayer professing religion Amendment's guarantee of the "free exercise thereof" when his state university teaches just about everything under the sun except religion. To him education without religion is not cake without icing; it's bread without yeast.

Fortunately we do not have to turn to see how other state universities are doing the job. The issue. We can simply. There are three major patterns.

I. INTERDEPARTMENTAL PROGRAM OF RELIGIOUS STUDIES

The University of Michigan, since its inception a pace-setter for public universities, has offered an interdepartmental program of religious studies since 1948. It believes religion to be so complex a part of human existence as to require a multi-disciplined approach. It is a discipline as to preclude its presentation except where it is accepted by all that study, not prescription is the aim. Both ends it feels are best achieved through an interdepartmental program.

The program is quite definite. It is administered by a committee, appointed by the Dean, composed of members from the College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, all but one of whom teach courses in the various departments that inevitably deal also with religion. The committee makes recommendations to the College faculty on general policy, new courses, and, in consultation with appropriate departments, new faculty appointments. It supervises the actual working of the program. It also brings to the campus for regular figures in the field of religion. University lectures outstanding

The concentration in religious studies is built from courses in various departments and requires in addition intensive work in one of those departments. Prerequisites are introductory courses in philosophy, psychology, and sociology, plus the prerequisites of the specific department chosen as adjunct. The concentration requires 35 hours: 18 in courses under the program, 17 in the adjunct department.

Among the courses listed under the program are such as the following: Anthropology ("Primitive Religion"); Classical Studies ("Greek Religion"); "New Testament"; "Early Christian Art and Archaeology"; English ("Anglo-American Studies"; "Far Eastern Philosophy"; "Buddhist Art"); History ("European Intellectual History"; "Church and State in America"); Near Eastern Studies ("Biblical Hebrew"; "Old Testament"; "Islamic Philosophy"); Philosophy ("Ethics"; "Philosophy of Religion"); Psychology ("Psychology and Religion"); and Sociology ("Religion and Society").

Such interdepartmental programs are found elsewhere also. Indiana University's program partly resembles this one, partly the Cooperative Program described next: for it includes the work of a separate School of Religion. But Indiana is just now moving toward inaugurating a regular Department of the sort to be described last. Pennsylvania State University began with an interdepartmental program ed over some 10 years toward a that has been intentionally head-separate Department.

The interdepartmental approach is useful. It exhibits the many facets of religious study and actualizes the synthesis that religion (at least Judaism and Christianity) itself talks about, frequently at a safe distance. It can be introduced with less administrative fuss than some other programs.

It has, I believe, two serious drawbacks. (Perhaps they are theoretical and practical sides of one.) There is no recognition that religion exists as an academic discipline in its own right, a humanistic study as much as literature or philosophy, with its own proper subject matter and method. There is no faculty whose academic competence is in theology rather than philosophy, in church history rather than social or intellectual history, Bible rather than Near Eastern, or classical, or Jacobean English literature. This comes close to denying the study of religion its own integrity. Admittedly the line is drawn most finely just here; but so also is the test of both competence and confidence.

II. COOPERATIVE PROGRAM OF RELIGIOUS STUDIES

The classic example of this second pattern is the School of Religion at the State University of Iowa, established in 1927. The School of Religion is a legal corporation independent of the University, supported largely by voluntary gifts, and run by its own Board of Trustees. (It exhibits the usual three-fold spectrum: Catholic, Protestant, Jew.) It functions as a department of religion for the College of Liberal Arts of the University.

The head of the School of Religion is a department chairman of the College and is himself paid by the University, which also takes care of administrative expense. The faculty of religion are chosen and paid by the corporation. They have faculty rank in the University.

The program offers a full complement of studies, undergraduate and graduate, ranging from an introductory "Religion in Human Culture" to seminars in Contemporary Theology. There are the usual courses in Biblical studies, history of various religions, church historical studies, historical and confessional theology, as well as Hebrew, Greek, Arabic, and other necessary languages, and even "Life Problems"—sex, marriage and family taught in this case from a Catholic viewpoint. (At least this frequently found in universities are sometimes incorrectly said to be "objective.")

Other state universities that use such a program as this to meet their obligation to teach religion are Kansas, Montana, Missouri, and Tennessee. Less formally structured variations operate at Alabama, Idaho, Illinois, North Dakota, and Texas, among others.

There is, it seems to some, an important advantage in this program which is at the same time to others a serious drawback. Staffing and curriculum remain in the hands of the School of Religion. The religious groups sometimes prefer this: courses are taught by persons of the faith. (Students, of course, elect what they choose.) But should a University recognize work done through an agency it does not control? Or, put another way: if it can recognize work in religion done through such an agency, then it can offer such work itself as a regular part of its university curriculum.

The third pattern, "Department of Religious Studies," will be dealt with in the third and final article of this series—Ed.)

Letters To The Editor

Collegians for Brooke Seek Support

To the Editor:

As students at the University of Massachusetts and, for most of us, future citizens and voters of this Commonwealth, we share a special responsibility. It is incumbent upon us, as the enlightened leadership of tomorrow, to take an active role in the policy decisions which will affect us all. We must act in accordance with our beliefs and personal values, but to be heard we must act together through political channels. We have all seen the results which organized effort has brought about at the campus level in the Reform Movement.

The candidacy of Attorney

General Edward Brooke for the United States Senate affords us the opportunity to express our beliefs in a larger forum: the state and the nation. Ed Brooke is possessed of the forward-looking attitude which is a must to cope with the complexities of domestic and international decisions. He has served the state faithfully and effectively for two terms as Attorney General.

We as students in the coming months can fill a role of vital importance to our state. A student organization, "Collegians for Brooke" is now in the formative stages at the University, and will soon be holding an organizational meeting. Actual participation in a political campaign provides experience and insight which can be obtained in no other manner. Watch for notices in the Collegian of our first meeting.

Attorney General Brooke will be speaking at the Student Union on Friday, April 22 at 4 p.m. today at the invitation of the Class of '69. I strongly urge any interested students and faculty members to attend in order to become better acquainted with the goals of this dynamic candidate.

Metawampe: It's No Big Thing!

To the editor:

It is no secret that the statue of Metawampe is more the campus goat than its symbol. No amount of landscaping can improve the sobriety, of his present position. His peanut size gives the impression not of a small statue, but of a large trophy won for archery.

It is doubtful whether an increase in stature would gain it more respect. In reality, it would be better to melt down his oft-anointed form to mollify his despisers and cast a giant fender or other good work of art, or perhaps a huge dollar bill, or 'frat' pin, or better yet a mammoth, illuminated, golden c—. You know, something that would have the respect of the student: a goal—something that says it for all of us . . .

In the Operetta Guild production of No, No, Nanette, which begins its run tonight in Bowker Theater, Nanette is played by Laurel Demers and her fiancé Tom by John Gilbert.

"No, No, Nanette" New Operetta Guild Production

The Operetta Guild's first performance of "No, No, Nanette," will be presented tonight in Bowker Theater at 8:15 p.m. The play is a musical which takes place in New York and Atlantic Cities of the roaring twenties. This fun show gave birth to two standard pop songs "Tea for Two" and "I Want to be Happy."

The plot revolves around a wealthy Bible publisher, James Smith played by Richard Eber who is attempting to keep three separate but simultaneous "affairs" secret from his wife.

In order to terminate these relationships he engages his lawyer, Billy Early, who promptly becomes embroiled with the three questionable ladies (played by Linda Cotney, Pamela Perlick, and Margaret Franson).

In the meantime Sue and Lucille, the wives of James Smith and his Lawyer, catch on and begin counteraction to trap their errant husbands. In so doing they unwittingly involve Mr. Smith's innocent young ward, Nanette (Laurel Demers) who is engaged to a prudish young man named Tom (John Gilbert).

William Segal, assistant director of "Boyfriend", a previous Guild hit, directs this effervescent show. Paul Kaplan has cleverly arranged the choreography. Paul Bartsch brings his long list of musical credits to the musical direction of the show.

The show starts at 8:15 in Bowker Theater April 22, 23 and 28, 29 and 30. All seats are reserved. Tickets may be obtained at the Student Union Ticket Office.

Sail Away to Adventure

On July 1st, the Brigantine Romance will embark on a two month expedition under sail to Alacapulco, Cocos Islands, the Galapagos and Panama. The cruise is open to college students who like their summer field work generously mixed with adventure.

Adventure like stalking a wild boar with a camera, harpooning a devil ray or swimming underwater with a herd of bull sea lions. The Galapagos have fascinated scientists, sailors, and sportsmen alike since Charles Darwin landed there in 1836.

Under her handsome 1850 rig, the Romance is a modern Danish trading vessel, and one of the newest sailing cruise ships. She was re-rigged in 1965 by Alan Villiers, renowned mariner and writer, for her role in the multi-million dollar movie version of James Mitchener's "Hawaii." She sailed half way around the world on location.

Architect Tells of Nuremberg Trials

by PAMELA METAXAS
Staff Reporter

"I was apparently called-in because the problem did involve some considerations of housing conditions," began Mr. Christopher Kantaranis, Greek Naval architect for the Nuremberg Trial Courtroom in a speech last Thursday night before the Orthodox Club.

KANTARANIS explained he was one of a committee-of-three in OSS to decide the location and the physical structures of the courtroom of the trials. The committee decided the trials be held in Nuremberg instead of Munich as originally planned. They discovered the famed Hitler-arena did not even exist in Munich. It was nothing but a Hollywood set.

He pointed out that a trial of this sort—a military war crimes trial for those who had committed WWII atrocities—was a new concept. Before this combat and death had been on a man-to-man basis. But since the Jewish war crimes, "a man was just another statistic."

THE TRIAL, a part of international law, pointed to having delegates from each district. In considering this (The committee) realized an arena would have been necessary to house 30,000 delegates from every part of Germany.

Kantaranis said this idea was approached since "everyone knew that the whole German nation was guilty of something" and since they had in a way, "condoned and encouraged" the mass murders at the time.

He emphasized that his desire was "to accommodate a brand-new type of trial without starting a lynching scene." This would include microphones, translators and reporters.

THE TWO-YEAR trial which began in 1945 was finally held in one building decided by the committee, the old Justice building in Nuremberg. Kantaranis concluded by saying that because of the international type of trial, the judges included Russians, English, French and Americans.

REVELLERS SPONSOR CARTOON SHOW

(Editor's note: There will be a 25c reduction in admission price for anyone who brings this article with him to the following event.)

Reminiscent of the cartoon shows that used to amuse countless kids on Saturday morning television, the Revellers will be sponsoring a Saturday afternoon cartoon show tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. and a night show at 7:30 p.m. in the S. U. Ballroom.

Cartoons will include such well-known characters as Elmer Fudd and Porky Pig. There will also be movies of Charlie Chaplin, W. C. Fields, Tha Keystone Kops, and Laurel and Hardy.

Redmen to Have New Song

As the UMass Redmen charge down the field next Fall, they'll hear the familiar melody of the Fight Song, but the words will be quite different. By virtue of a bill proposed by Student Senators Keven Downes '67 and Larry Marcus '68 At Large, the words to the UMass Fight Song are to be rewritten and a campus-wide contest has been launched for this purpose.

STUDENTS ARE urged to submit their lyrics. The winning lyrics will be accompanied by the name when in print.

In addition to this prestige a $20 gift certificate to either of two Amherst stores will be given to the talented lyricist.

JUDGING THE ENTRIES on dignity, grammatical structure, originality and overall composition will be Richard du Bois, John Jenkins, Robert Tucker, Keven Downes, and Senator Boronski '68, co-chairmen, Public Relations Committee. Deadline for entries is May 13 and the judges reserve the right to reject any or all entries.

Sparc was visibly shaken by the loss, and had this to say when asked to comment: "Ough Wood that I had the Key to my shortcomings."

JMass Prof Writes Book On Politics

The changing political picture of six key midwestern states is explored in Midwest Politics, new book by Dr. John H. Fenn, Commonwealth Professor of Government at the University of Massachusetts.

The 265-page book, according to publisher Holt, Rinehart and Winston of New York City, is an absorbing study of the unique and frequently zany phenomenon that is American politics.

Using six key midwestern states as his research base, Dr. Fenn analyzes the factors that create different political systems and considers the direction of change for the future of two-party politics generally.

THE DESCRIPTIVE-comparative approach employed by the author provides insight into the emergence of issue-oriented politics in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, and sets forth reasons for the decline of job-oriented politics observed in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois.

A native of Canton, Ohio, Dr. Fenn received B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Kentucky and a Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Before joining the UMass faculty in 1959, he was political science instructor at Tulane University, an assistant professor at Michigan State University and head of the management service department of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies in Tennessee.

He has contributed articles on the American political scene to Harper's and other magazines and is the author of two books: Politics in the Border States and "The Catholic Vote."

UM Fraternity Park Nears Reality As Expansion Continues

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

The $6 million Fraternity Park is approaching reality with definite commitments expected from at least 10 fraternities and sororities by the middle of May according to Robert W. Gailey, chairman of the steering committee for Fraternity-sorority Park.

Gailey said that the committee needs at least 10 definite commitments for the E. Pleasant St. Park to get off the ground. He said that he will announce the price of each site at a Tuesday night meeting of the houses that have shown an interest.

The advisor said that it will cost each fraternity and sorority about $250,000 to buy the 1½ acre sites and construct a house. A total of 23-25 sites brings the projected cost to around $6 million, he said.

Each house that chooses to build will be able to choose its own architect who will work under the general architectural guidelines to be set by David Carlson, a Springfield architect. Carlson has been designated coordinating architect for the soon-to-be-formed corporation.

Atty. William Dwyer of Northampton is drawing up the corporate papers for the fraternities and sororities to form a Fraternity-Sorority Park Corporation. Gailey will be President of the corporation which should be a legal entity by the middle of May.

Director of the site planning will be Mr. Per Nylen, a Northampton landscape architect. He has received the preliminary site-test reports from Gordon Ainsworth Associates of So. Deerfield.

The park will be located across the street from University College according to William F. Field, dean of students, who said, "There is no reason the college should not be located in the site previously reserved for the Medical School."

Gailey said that three to five houses should be on the way within a year and a half. "We should see eight to 10 within three to five years," he said. The chairman is hopeful that all 23 to 25 sites will be filled within eight to 10 years.

The site on the east side of East Pleasant St. is about one mile from the Student Union and comprises 55 acres of wooded, rolling land. Gailey said that 20 acres will be left for recreation and preservation of the "natural beauty of the area."

Plans have gone smoothly since the March 8 zoning approval by the Amherst Town Meeting Members but it has been difficult to communicate effectively with key members of individual sororities and fraternity corporations," Gailey reported.

"Few people realize the impact that the park will have on University life. A community of about 1,500 men and women will be right across the street from a University College with a different housing concept," Gailey said.

Gailey referred to an article in the Triad, the national magazine of Acadia fraternity, saying that University Park may be setting a precedent for the nation. The article pointed out that fraternity rows are growing not dying as has been reported in some national publications.

According to Triad, the number of established chapters has more than doubled since 1940 with approximately four new members initiated for every member who dies.

The Fraternity Park is but one area of University expansion. Dean Field said that I.M. Pei, architect for University College, has expressed an interest in the orchard area to the north of the present Orchard Hill complex. "His associates, Kellogg and Pershing Wong, did examine the site and the project is now in the feasibility study stage," the dean reported.

In a whirlwind telephone interview the dean said, "Fraternity Parks looks good... The Administration Building is going as planned, in fact I walked through my future office just the other day... They're moving in the mattresses in the first high-rise and T-2 will be polished off shortly... The Lo-rise footings are being poured and the bare, brick frames should be ready by next fall so that the men can work inside during the winter."

The Continuing Education Center, however, is in questionable straits. State funds were not forthcoming for the $8.5 million supplement to the Student Union. University authorities are hopeful that the University of Massachusetts Building Authority will take over the project.

Field said that the building could be financed through the existing Student Union Governing Board with the additional $5 student fee next year. "We would also get state and federal funds for that portion of the building used for continuing education and operational fees would help absorb part of the cost," he reported.

The Board of Trustees were to vote today on whether or not to recommend action to the building authority. President John W. Lederle said that there was no opposition from the board but that definite word on the vote would not be forthcoming until today. Field expressed hope that groundbreaking would take place "in about 12 months."

Room Choosing Days Announced

Jack Wells, Director of Housing, has announced the following procedures for room choosing for the Fall 1966 semester: STUDENTS NOW LIVING ON CAMPUS WHO ARE NOT SENIORS OR 21 YEARS OLD BY OCTOBER 1, 1966, WILL BE REQUIRED TO LIVE IN UNIVERSITY RESIDENCE HALLS. (This new ruling will in no way affect the University's fraternities).

Those students who desire to move to the Orchard Hill Residential College must make an appointment with the faculty preceptor and/or the head of residence of the residence of their choice.

It is requested that in all room choosing, students be prepared with two or three alternate choices in the event that a first choice has already been reserved by someone else.

A necessary part of changing campus address will be obtaining a "change of address" card from the head of residence in the present house of residence.

SDS Planning Vietnam "Test"

Students for a Democratic Society is planning a nationwide distribution of literature and a "counter draft test" on each of the three dates the Selective Service System has chosen for its examination for college students.

SDS National Secretary, Paul Booth estimated that two-and-one-half million students will take the Selective Service examination "because they don't want to go to Vietnam." The results from the tests will be used by local draft boards to help determine college deferments.

CHIEF AMONG the material SDS hopes to distribute at all the test sites is a two-page "examination" on the war in Vietnam. The leaflet will contain factual questions about the war; answers will be included at the bottom of the second page, Booth said.

On another matter, Booth said the promised FBI investigation of his organization seems to be underway.

Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach had told a Chicago news conference last October that SDS was among groups figuring in a Justice Department investigation into the anti-draft movement. The SDS report had been strictly legal—"counseling and giving information on conscientious objection," Booth asserted.

THE ONLY PLACES Booth would identify as areas where inquiries about SDS had been made by federal agents were Wesleyan Univ. in Middletown, Conn., and Yale Univ.

At Wesleyan, Stanley Idzerda, dean of the college, said an FBI agent had asked him two weeks ago for the names of all students in the college's SDS chapter and had been refused such data. Idzerda said the college kept no such lists and "we consider the student's activity his own affair."

"It is unfortunate," he added, "that a climate of suspicion can be created by such activities that might lead students to be more circumspect than the situation requires. Things like this can be a danger to a free and open community if men change their behavior because of it."

WESLEYAN was the scene last month of protest against the war, including an eight-day fast that was held in conjunction with those of several other New England colleges.

After the college's semi-weekly newspaper, the Argus, headlined the investigation last Friday, Idzerda received another contact from the FBI on Saturday. This time, he said, an agent contacted there had been a "misunderstanding" and asserted there was no

Let our IBM 7090 Computer (the world's most perfect boy/girl matcher) select 5 ideal dates for you—right from your campus area. (Now a gal can really choose the kind of guy she wants, not just wait and hope he comes along!)

Just send us the coupon below... we'll send you the Operation Match Quantitative Personality Projection Test Questionnaire.

Answer the questions about yourself, what you're like, and what you like. Return the questionnaire with $3.00. Then we put our 7090's memory bank to work. It reads out the qualifications of every member of the opposite sex in your college area, and programs 5 or more ideal dates for you. You receive names, addresses, and phone numbers. Guys call the gals. You're just a telephone apart.

Also, your card is kept continuously active. You receive as many dates as the 7090 finds matches. The sooner you apply, the more dates you may get.

Let the 7090 take the blinds off blind dating. Get modern. Get electronic. Get set quick with your ideal dates.

Cast Announced for 'A View from the Bridge'

The University of Massachusetts Theatre has announced the cast for its fifth and final production of the 1965-66 academic season, A View from the Bridge, by Arthur Miller.

IN THE LEAD role of the self-deluded longshoreman, Eddie Carbone, is Phil Fisher. Phil is making his second appearance in a University Theatre production, having played Antonio in The Merchant of Venice. He has worked professionally at the Alley Theatre in Houston, Texas.

Gina Cantor will play Beatrice, Eddie's wife. Mrs. Cantor was seen in the Readers Theatre production Six Times Four, and has had off Broadway experience.

The subject of the emotional involvement is Eddie's niece, Catherine, a young, rather naive girl who is torn between her love for Rodolpho and her devotion to Eddie, portrayed by Rita Crosby whose experience includes work with the ANTA players in Springfield.

THE CONFLICT in the drama begins when two of Beatrice's cousins, Marco and Rodolpho are smuggled into the United States from Sicily. The illegal immigrants hope to find work on the Brooklyn piers. Marco, the older of the two brothers, strong and reticent, is acted by Phil Mallet, a graduate student in theatre, who was also seen in

The Merchant as Gratiano and in Six Times Four.

RODOLPHO, the young romantic Italian, is played by Peter Stelzer who has been seen in a variety of roles at the University, most notable of which was his Launcelot Gobbo, in The Merchant of Venice.

Ken Bordner, who leaves the University this year to teach theatre at Concordia College will act as Alfieri, the lawyer, whose role it is to act as liaison between the audience and the action of the play.

LESLIE TITCOMB and Pat Freni who have been in several other University Theatre productions this past year will portray the two longshoremen, Louis and Mike.

Dan Weir and Joanne Drexler will play the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Lipari.

Robert Collins and Don Hunsberger will be the two immigration officers while Frank Klaffer and Jim Sargent have the roles of two other "submarines." Petro Silva will play Tony.

A View from the Bridge will be presented arena style in the Student Union Ballroom, May 5, 6, 7, at 8:15 P.M. Tickets will be on sale in the Student Union on April 25.

Precisionettes Place Sixth

The Precisionettes have just returned from the National Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C., which began on April 11 and continued until April 17.

The team left for Washington Thursday and competed early Friday morning in the Inter-collegiate ROTC Drill Team Championship meet held in the National Guard Armory. This was the first competition for the team of thirty-five girls, and they placed 6th in the nation among returning teams in the women's portion of the event.

COLLEGIATE drill teams come from across the nation to compete for the coveted Cherry Blossom Trophies and the national title.

Saturday morning in the Parade of Princesses, the Precisionettes were welcomed by a crowd of 200,000 as they marched down Constitution Avenue in the last and most gala event of the Festival.

After the parade, they took a complete tour of the Washington D.C., and Arlington areas and saw many of the nation's famous monuments.

THE COMPETITION proved to be a good experience for the girls, for they observed the different techniques and styles which can be used by a precision drill team.

After their performance in this year's Spring Review, they are already planning to add many variations to their style of marching and are hoping to come home from Washington next year with the first place trophy.

Hampshire College V-President Appointed

Charles R. Longworth has been appointed vice-president of Hampshire College by the Hampshire trustees. The appointment was announced by Franklin Patterson, who was recently named president of the institution.

In the new post, Longworth will have responsibilities for administration, planning, business affairs and financial development of the new college, which is being formed with the academic support of Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges, and the University of Massachusetts.

From 1960-65 Mr. Longworth served as assistant to the president of Amherst College, Calvin H. Plimpton, with responsibility for Amherst's program of financial development. In July, 1965 he assumed the chairmanship of the Hampshire College Educational Trust, which completed the basic organizational tasks involved in starting Hampshire College, and has since been dissolved.

Draft-Avoiding Taught

A campaign designed to teach college students how to avoid the draft was begun openly recently at Ohio State University.

THE CAMPAIGN was undertaken by three groups that denounced the war in Viet Nam in a lengthy statement tied in with the conscientious objector move.

In a paid advertisement in the university's student newspaper, the three groups said in part:

"If you are of draft age the Selective Service Law provides exemption from combat training or duty for all military duty for some conscientious objectors. If you are 'conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form,' and are interested in learning more about alternatives and civilian service, come to a discussion April 10."

THE ADVERTISEMENT appeared on behalf of groups calling themselves the Student Religious Liberals, the Young Friends and the Young Friends of Peace.

Ohio Selective Service officials said they would study the advertisement before commenting on its contents. One official noted that it takes more than a mere declaration of being a conscientious objector to avoid induction. He added that the normal procedure calls for an inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation into the individual's background.

N. Y. Architect Robert Moses Speaks to UMass Students

by FREDERICK R. PILON

An aging Robert Moses spent a "long, pleasant, somewhat chilly New England spring evening" at Mahar Auditorium Wednesday.

After a hectic beginning, Moses delivered his speech in a slow steady voice, offered advice and warnings and finally in the question session displayed the fiery character that national magazines have so fully publicized.

The famous New York City Planner and recipient of 19 honorary degrees walked head-first into typical University planning. Mahar Auditorium was being used for a Spanish 108 hour exam. It was scheduled to end at 7:30, the time Moses was to begin his speech.

Hundreds of people milled around the small lobby of Mahar, some having waited a full hour to hear Moses speak.

Moses' speech was so well-prepared that the audience could read right along with him from copies provided the 200 attending. He constantly emphasized that his listeners should beware of "secret formulas, prescriptions, recipes and equations" which profess to solve all the problems and diseases of modern urban society.

For those pursuing academic excellence, Moses cautioned them not to let their education become too obtrusive.

Moses harshly condemned the communication media. He said that "almost no radio or television program is completely spontaneous and unrehearsed" and that "the only way to avoid misquotation is to meet your interlocutor on a wind-swept barrier beach."

Speaking of the future, Moses said, "You will have to give your attention more and more to slowing down population growth, the trend to the cities and concentration of voting strength in crowds and to encourage sane and sensible education, the cultivation of leisure, the care of the old and reconciling automation with employment."

Moses also believes that the present society is shifting back to more traditional values and attitudes, "such as modesty, good manners and Mrs. Wharton." He didn't identify Mrs. Wharton.

In concluding, Moses urged all to follow the advice of Browning and to "boldly greet the unseen with a cheer."

Moses displayed his real nature when the questioning period began. The audience, however, was somewhat limited since Moses agreed to answer only written questions accepted by his aide.

After reading each question, Moses slowly crumpled each slip of paper up and threw it on a table, where it stayed. In response to a question concerning his handling of the World's Fair, Moses broke into his first genuine smile of the evening. "You can hardly expect an objective answer to that question. I stopped beating my wife a long time ago," he said. The response from outside of New York was 30 to 1 in favor of the World's Fair, he added.

Asked what he thought of the conflict of interest laws, Moses called them "rubbish." An honest man in government, he exclaimed, knows where the line is between what he can and cannot do. Overheard after the lecture: "I wish he had spent the whole time answering questions."

'Chutists to Fall at Orange Meet

by BOB MACOMBER

The Intercollegiate Sport Parachute Jumping Meet will be held on Saturday, May 7, 1966, at Orange Airport in Orange, Massachusetts. Competition starts at 9 a.m. and should provide an interesting and exciting display.

Judging will be based on the best accuracy of three jumps from 3500 feet in the air into a 25 meter circle in the target area on the ground. Both static line and free fall jumps will be executed.

In 1964, competing against such stiff opposition as West Point, M.I.T., B.U., Northeastern, Univ. of Brunswick and Univ. of Montana, the UMass team placed first and third and brought home seven of the eight trophies.

That summer, on request from Governor Peabody, the UMass team brought an exhibit to the New England Pavilion at the New York's World Fair. In 1965 the team was again honored by winning second place, bowing only to the crack West Point team.

First Start, First Win

Frosh Rake Amherst, 8-2

by TIM MURPHY

Icy temperatures and forbidding skies failed to subdue the efforts of the UMass freshmen baseball team Wednesday. The Little Redmen made excellent use of nine base hits and 11 walks to pound out an impressive 8-2 verdict over an outclassed Amherst nine in their initial encounter of the season.

A slim gathering witnessed the fine pitching effort of Waltham's Norm Elliott who twirled three innings of perfect ball en route to victory. Elliott fanned eight Jeff swingers, walked only one, and surrendered but three hits, two of which failed to leave the infield.

After threatening in the first two innings, UMass broke the scoring ice in the third as Joe DiSarcina blooped one to right to start the inning. Al Craig then grounded to short to force DiSarcina at second. Second baseman Tom Kelley's throw to first went awry and Craig took second on the miscue. Tony Chinappi's sacrifice fly to deep center-field chased Craig home after he advanced to third base on a passed ball.

In the fourth inning, Larry Snook had the dubious honor of making both the first and third outs. Sandwiched between the outs, however, were four hits and four big runs.

Lonnie Lehrer, the six-foot-five first sacker, walked on a full count and was followed by catcher Hal Lewis, who beat out a bunt and was awarded second base on an overthrow by the third baseman. With runners then on second and third, Elliott grounded to short, forcing his mates to stay put as he was thrown out.

DiSarcina again slapped the ball, this time to left field, as both Lehrer and Lewis scampered home with the third and fourth runs. Craig and Chinappi followed with shots to center and right respectively to put the Redmen on top by 4-0. Consecutive walks to John Mitsakos and Al Seibert forced in another tally before Amherst chucker Terry Cashmore settled down to retire Snook.

Elliott appeared to be well on the road to an easy victory when, in the fifth, a walk and a scratch single to the right side put runners on first and second. A ground ball to third resulted in a force out and with two down runners were perched at the corners.

Elliott bore down to strike out pinch-hitter Dick Popejoy, but the final pitch was dropped by Lewis, who heaved the ball into right field in trying to nip Pope-joy at first. When the dust cleared, two Amherst runs had crossed the plate, but Popejoy was out at second base on a bullet throw to DiSarcina from Chinappi in short right.

Craig walked to lead off the sixth, and after Chinappi skied to short left, Mitsakos hopped on a fast ball and drove the spheroid to deep left-center field. Craig scored but Mitsakos was cut down on a perfect peg to second base.

After Elliott had set down the Amherst squad in the seventh, the Redmen raked Bob Corey, the second Jeff hurler, for two more counters. After a walk to Snook, Lehrer connected for the longest clout of the afternoon and rode the ball ten feet over the pursuing Amherst center-fielder. Long Lonnie legged it to third before being flagged down by Bergquist. After Lewis drew a walk, pitcher Elliott worked Corey to a two and one count before knocking Lehrer in for the Redmen's eighth and final score with a sacrifice fly to left field.

The confident Elliott set the Amherst wood wielders down on seven pitches to ice his impressive verdict. The strong armed hurler walked only one batter and surrendered but a single earned run in his nine inning stint. He kept the Lord Jeff batters on their toes all afternoon and reinforced his point by wild-pitching once and hitting second baseman Kelley in the fourth inning.

Crusader Nine Crushes Redmen, 11-2, Snapping 10-Game Victory Skein

The glittering 10-game winning streak of the Redmen came to an abrupt end Wednesday afternoon as Holy Cross took advantage of seven walks to gain an 11-2 victory at frigid Fritton Field in Worcester in a game that was halted by darkness.

The Crusaders won their second straight, after an opening-game loss at Amherst College, by combining three Redmen hurlers for 12 hits in addition to the seven free rides to first base. Junior righthander Elliot Klein survived a shaky first inning and turned the previously flaming Redmen into icicles to match the raw afternoon.

UMass started with a flourish that indicated another victory. Hagan Anderson drew a leadoff walk and all hands were safe ley, but Kelley made a great backhanded stab against the fence for the defensive play of the game. Ken Rowe followed with a line single to center but that was all for UMass in the inning.

Rowe lost his control in the bottom of the second, and three walks sandwiched around an infield hit loaded the bases. Sophomore Don Gagner took over and whiffed Avis. However, a wild pitch and a single to center by Murtaugh brought in three runs to make it 7-2.

In the third a double off the third base bag by Lee and a single to right by Kelly made it 8-2. Avis atoned for his two strikeouts with a long two-run homer over the center field fence in the fourth. Holy Cross got its final run in the sixth on Gagner's only walk and a long double to left by Murtaugh.

when Andy beat the throw to second on Frak Stewart's sacrifice bunt. Jim Babysak lined the first of his three singles to center to score Anderson and the runners moved up when centerfielder Tom Kelley bobbled the ball.

Terry Swanson singled to right for another run but Klein escaped by getting Alex Vyce on an infield popup, striking out Roy Lasky and eliminating John Peacock on a grounder to first.

The Crusaders came right back with four runs. Kelly dropped a perfect bunt single, and UMass starter Ross Piken then threw eight consecutive balls to John Kerry and Jack McCarthy to load the bases. Tony Kopec hit a wrong-field Texas Leaguer to score the first run. Piken proceeded to strike out Jack Avis but walked Dan Murtaugh on a 3-2 pitch to force Kerry in. Kevin Foster hit a sacrifice fly to right and Jim Lee bounced a single to left for the third and fourth runs. Ken Rowe relieved Piken and got Klein on a force out to end the inning.

The Redmen tried to fight back in the top of the second. Jim Kuzynski hit a tremendous shot up the left center field al-

Crossemen Entertain Tufts Saturday in Important Tilt

by TOM FITZGERALD

Former UMass All-New England defenseman Jack Noble returns to Amherst tomorrow as coach of the Tufts lacrosse team, which will face-off against the Redmen at 2 p.m. on the intramural field.

"The next three games, Tufts, Holy Cross, and Amherst," says Redman boss Dick Garber, "should make or break our season." A psychological lift seems to be of tremendous importance to this year's squad.

The Redmen are fresh from a significant 6-1 triumph over MIT Tuesday in Cambridge. It was a 2-1 game early in the final quarter, but UMass awoke with a start and zipped four goals by the Engineer netminder in rapid succession. As Coach Garber put it, "I think we proved something to ourselves—that we can beat a really good team."

For the home forces, the line-up will probably team Dick Howe, Kevin O'Brien, and Charlie Avakian on the first midfield, Martie Kalikow, Bob Murphy, and Dick Kent on the second, and Dick Pulsifer, Dave Kelley, and Len Caldeira on the third. At attack will be Howie Goffman, Jim O'Donnell, Tony Arrieri, and converted defenseman Fran Guidara.

Fred Foley, Brad Stokes, Don Rana, and Walt Alessi will probably share the defensive chores, with Billy Sinclair starting in the goal.

Kelley has been troubled by a pulled thigh muscle, but if fit for action, he will probably guard Tufts' 220-pound midfielder Roger Farrar. Farrar combines with Co-captain Larry Frost and Larry Sarkozy on the first middle unit.

Other veterans in the Tufts midfield corps are last year's top scorer, Bob Faraci, Dean Nicholson, and Bob Hatch. Steve Linzer is the man to watch on the attack, while Co-captain Jim Palmberg is heralded as one of the best defensemen in New England.

Junior goalie Steve Florin, who played against UMass last year but was sidelined by an appendectomy late in the season, is back in the nets for the Jumbos.

Tufts chalked up a 6-5 report last year and defeated the Redmen at Medford in a 7-6 squeaker.

"Growing and Dynamic"

Brooke Lauds UMass Progress

by MARJIE FLANDER, Staff Reporter

Opening his address last Friday, Edward W. Brooke, Attorney General of Massachusetts, commented that his appearance at UM reminded him of the dean who was presented a bowl of cherries in alcohol.

Though pleased with the gift, he was more grateful for "the spirit in which it was given" alluding to the current controversy on campus.

BROOKE then apologized for monopolizing a beautiful spring day and assured his audience that he was not here to exact his fees as a lawyer.

He commended that the University, growing and dynamic, is becoming one of the greatest institutions, not only in the state, but in the entire country.

IN ANSWER to a question about the severe cut in the University's budget, Brooke responded that he "would like to see more money allocated for education," but there is just a certain amount of money available.

He went on to say that UM must realize that there are other places where money must go, adding that if the tax bill should be repealed, there would be serious fiscal difficulties.

DISCUSSING his concern for the situation in Vietnam, Brooke made a plea for the young men of '65 and '66 who have had their heroism questioned.

He explained that when he was called to war on Pearl Harbor Day, that he wanted to go. There was no question in his mind, for the issues were clear, as they had been with World War I and even the Korean War.

IN REFERENCE to the burning of the draft cards, Brooke declared that he is a strong believer in the right to protest and dissent, but he can not condone breaking the law.

Although solutions are not final or total, according to Brooke, the President is doing, in his judgement, what is in the best interest of the people of the U.S. and of the South Vietnamese.

When asked if Red China were not in the backyard of Vietnam, whether we would still risk our men and money there, Brooke replied, "I would like to believe that we would."

QUESTIONED about his proposal of a negative income tax, the Attorney General answered that he did not propose it, he merely stated it.

Counteracting that it sounds like charity Brooke said that welfare gives much more and is so "designed to keep people on it."

Continuing, Brooke commented that he is a firm believer of self help and that the federal government should do for the people only what they cannot do for themselves.

Amazed upon hearing that he had been criticized, in a student poll, for not taking a stand on civil rights, Brooke assured 'Mr. Gallup' that he is a strong believer in civil rights.

DEFENDING his position, he explained that when he took the oath of office, he became Attorney General for all the people. Thus, it is not his place to lead picket lines.

Referring to his ruling on the school boycott issue, Brooke explained that it is illegal to keep a child out of school, and, therefore, he could not rule what he personally felt, but rather what was legally right for all.

Brooke also discussed the serious problem of the diminishing two party system.

HE STRESSED the importance of this system, stating that it alleviates dangers in government. Then he added that "no political party has a monopoly on corruption."

In his book, The Challenge of Change, Brooke makes an appeal to the intellectual, the minority groups, and to young people to join the Republican party.

In conclusion, Brooke declared, "I'm not a civil rights leader, I'm a politician, and when I return to the University next time, I hope to be a U. S. Senator."

The Dolphins, a Boston trio, will perform for HER Weekend. Their concert will be presented on the South Terrace of the Student Union, at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 29. The group will sing folk, pop, rock, and spirituals.

During the intermission, The King off Her Weekend will be crowned. This is the crowning retribution for the girl's domination of campus royalty during the year.

Also included in the Friday evening's activities is the movie "Good Neighbor Sam." The film will be shown outside, on the East Terrace of the Student Union. All weekend events are sponsored by the Student Union Program Council, and thus are free to the students.

UMass Granted Funds To Aid Underprivileged

The University of Massachusetts Wednesday announced details of two Upward Bound projects that will apply a total of $271,996 in federal antipoverty funds to aid 200 disadvantaged high school students in two areas of Massachusetts.

The U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity has granted $152,918 to UMass in Amherst to help 100 students from four western counties and $119,078 to UM-Boston to work with 100 students from Boston.

THE TWO GRANTS are part of a nationwide Upward Bound program aimed at boosting the college potential of selected economically-deprived high school students.

Both projects will begin with an eight-week summer session at UM facilities and continue with a follow-up program through the 1966-67 school year. The federal grants will pay all student expenses and in addition provide a $10 per week stipend for each student as long as the student remains in the program.

The Upward Bound project at Amherst is an outgrowth of planning in the general area of education for the economically deprived that began at UM in 1963. The current Upward Bound plans were formulated by a School of Education team that includes James S. White, Director, and Alvin E. Winder and David L. Angus.

THE AMHERST PROJECT will begin immediately to recruit 100 students in Grades 9 and 10 according to the following population quotas: Berkshire Co., 20; Franklin Co., 10; Hampshire Co., 15; Chicopee, 12; Holyoke, 11; Springfield, 32.

Recruitment will be through the community action agency in those communities that have them and through school systems, local and community organizations and individuals.

FAMILY INCOME level and the academic potential of the individual student will be the major criteria.

On July 1 those selected will begin an eight-week in-residence educational program at the Amherst campus. Students will be housed and fed at University facilities and will have access to University health services.

THE CURRICULUM will focus on English, math-science, social studies, small-group counseling, cultural enrichment, recreation and physical education. The summer staff for the project will include 12 teachers, 10 resident student counselors, three group counselors, five recreational and cultural leaders and five others—a total of 20 including the director and office staff.

AT UMASS-BOSTON, 100 students from Grade 10 and 11 in Boston schools will be recruited through the Thompson Island Upward Bound program, the Action for Boston Community Development (ABCD), other community agencies and individuals.

Atlantic City Beckons

Beauties "Shy" from Contest

My God! There is no reason why we can't turn out a Miss Massachusetts finalist from this campus."

This is the feeling of Simon Keochakian, one of the coordinators of the Miss University contest.

THE CAMPUS competition is one of the local contests presently underway to select finalists for the Miss Massachusetts finals in July and eventually for the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

However, with only eight applicants registered it would seem that the campus beauties disagree with Keochakian.

RON MARBLE of the Revelers, co-sponsors of the contest with the Amherst JC's, believes that the talent requirement of the contest is "scaring them away."

The judging, which will be held in Bowker Friday, May 6, will be based on bathing suit, evening gown, and talent competition. According to Keochakian, however, the talent competition is of least concern at this stage of the competition.

"All she needs right now is the ability to participate," he explained. "The Miss Massachusetts Pageant Committee will coach our candidate for the finals... considerable effort will be made to develop her natural talents."

BESIDES trophies, charms and recognition, the winner of the campus competition will be giving a $200 scholarship. 2nd place will receive $100 and 3rd place $50.

Keochakian pointed out that the National Miss America Pageant Committee is interested in the UM contest since it is the first campus pageant to be held in this state and possibly the first in New England.

"THE NATIONAL committee is interested in improving competition from the northern states," he explained and continued by noting that many of the previous Miss America winners are college students at southern universities.

"It seems that college students have a better chance," Keochakian said. "She is reasonably brighter, has a broader base of experience and she has probably developed the necessary poise."

Presently there are eight coeds entered in the competition. Keochakian is hoping to have a least 12 by May 6.

THE TALENT requirement is a maximum of three minutes with a broad range of subjects to choose from, including a talk on the candidates future plans.

Keochakian has seen some of the other local competitions and feels that "our coeds can match any of them."

Competition is open to anyone of female nature and a list of rules covering the contest is available in last Friday's Collegian.

Fame, Glory and...

The Miss University competition set for May 6 is only a part of the American institution known as the Miss America Pageant.

THE CAMPUS competition offers not only fame and glory for starry-eyed winners but a host of material rewards as well.

The winner of the Miss University contest will receive a $200 scholarship and 10 hours of free sessions at the John Robert Powers School of Modeling in preparation for the Miss Massachusetts finals.

To the winner of the Miss Mass. finals goes: $1,000, use of a '66 Oldsmobile for a year, $500 from Tony Co., $1,000 Mink stole, $300 chest of jewels, $300 wrist watch, and a few other smaller items.

THESE ARE some of the benefits which some UM coed has an opportunity to win. Competition is presently scarce, but an unidentified coed expert feels that UM women will soon overcome their 'shyness' and provide the University with the best possible choices for an Atlantic City finalist.

WEEK IN REVIEW

by PAMELA METAXAS, Staff Reporter
THE NATION

At a news conference last week Pres. Johnson urged the American people to be patient and support the government's policies in Vietnam. He claimed the period ahead was one of "testing."

The announcement came at a time when the Vietnamese war had become more serious on several fronts.

He commented: "We think the Vietnamese people are going through a trying period. It affects all of us. It is going to be increasingly difficult as we carry on this effort so far from home. This is going to test all of us."

MEANWHILE the latest Viet Cong attack was staged in Saigon last week when the Cong attacked a national police headquarters using small arms fire and hand grenades. The attack occurred soon after U.S. Marines had caused the enemy 522 dead in a battle near Quang Ngai City.

At a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing last week, Defense Sec. Robert McNamara denied there is a bomb shortage in Vietnam. The denial came after heated accusations from Rep. Gerald Ford of Mich. McNamara said: "All this baloney—and it's only that—about lack of bomb production is completely misleading."

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME went into effect at 2 a.m. Sunday morning. Clocks were turned ahead one hour.

SATURDAY The Journal-American and Sun published their last separate afternoon editions. There are plans to continue publishing under a merger with the morning Herald Tribune if a labor dispute with that paper can be ironed out.

Meanwhile New York once again faces a partial newspaper strike—the third in less than 4 years. The reason for the possible strike is that 10 unions are dissatisfied with the proposed merger plans with the Tribune. Two thousand jobs are at stake if the strike is carried through. The strike time was set for 4 p.m. Sunday unless negotiations succeed before then.

THE STATE

PETER VOLPE, the governor's brother, has become connected in the controversy for the selection of architects for the UM Med School.

Last week the governor admitted that his brother, head of the family's construction business, had something to do with the choice of Ritchie Assoc. for the Med School. Beacon Hill sources feel this development could be damaging to the Volpe administration and the party.

Sen. Oliver F. Ames said last week: "If he (Peter Volpe) is still in the private construction business with no understanding with the public that he is also being asked for opinions about public projects, then there is something highly questionable about the whole affair."

THE CAMPUS

THE WOMAN'S Affairs Committee last week voted to recommend the abolition of curfews and the establishment of voluntary sign-out sheets. They also recommended the establishment of parties on Sundays and Saturdays, the abolishment of weekend sign-out cards and the extension of hours for men callers in women's dorms. This recommendation was passed unanimously by the Student Senate.

NEXT FALL the residents of SW, Orchard Hill, Brooks and Baker can have individual room phones if they want them, it was announced last week by Kenneth W. Johnson, UM Treasurer. The cost will be $25 a year plus monthly bills for any extra charge. It is hoped that soon the entire campus will be under the Centrex System where each room is assigned a different phone number and the number is listed in a special directory. The system is presently in use at several large universities and is quite successful.

THE GREEK WEEK Concert will feature the Animals and the Highwaymen. The Animals coming on the 15th of May have just returned from an international tour of Japan, England, Sweden and Australia. They are placed fifth in rock 'n' roll groups in the world.

OVER 30% of the student body voted last week in the primary elections. Yet despite the fact that almost three thousand voted yes on the referendum favoring the abolishing of UM rules on the consumption of alcoholic beverages, this did not meet the minimum referendum requirement, which will be held again this Thursday.

THE BOARD of Trustees announced a raise in room rates as of Sept. '66. Several residence halls now $100 will be $150 and those $150 will be $175. Pres. Lederle remarked on the raise: "We delayed raising the rents as long as possible but operating and maintenance costs for labor, materials and supplies have been rising."

A UM PROF., Dr. John H. Fenton, Commonwealth Prof. of government has written a book on the politics in six key midwestern states. Mich. Wis., Minn., Ohio, Ind., and Ill. The title of the book is Midwest Politics.

Home runs by Jim Kuczynski and Jim Babyak and the steady pitching of Carl Boteze enabled the Redmen to overcome several lapses in the field and defeat arch-rival UConn, 7-2 at the Pasture in Amherst last Tuesday.

MISS UNIVERSITY contest, sponsored by the Revelers and the Amherst J.C.'s, is to be held on May 6 at Bowker. All applicants must be high school grads, single, and possess poise, personality, intelligence, and charm.

Richard Lennon has been chosen to be captain of next year's Varsity Swim Team.

The Operetta Guild's performances of No, No, Nanette got underway last Friday and Saturday nights to enthusiastic audiences at Bowker. Performances will continue April 28-30 for HER weekend-enjoyment.

THE $6 MILLION Fraternity Park is approaching reality with definite commitments expected from at least 10 fraternities and sororities by the middle of May according to Robert W. Gailey, chairman of the steering committee.

The Precisionettes have returned from the National Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C.

MEETINGS ANNOUNCED

Opportunity to Meet Faculty

Student-faculty night will be held Tuesday, April 26.

These programs are a supplement to and not a replacement for Counseling Day. General questions can be discussed in connection with the student's program of study without reference to scheduling difficulties. In some cases special emphasis is given to honors programs for next year and questions about honors programs are appropriate in all cases.

A student does not have to spend the whole evening with his own group but may visit another department for advice concerning the choice of elective courses.

All sessions begin at 7:30 P.M.

ANTHROPOLOGY — Machmer Hall, Room W32.

Discussion of changes in the anthropology program for next year, opportunities for graduate study, and student programs involving research and/or individual study.

ART — Bartlett Hall, Rooms 209, 219, 221, and 225.

A visiting artist has been invited to talk about his work.

BOTANY — Morrill Hall, Room 212.

A general pre-counseling session.

CHEMISTRY — Geassman Laboratory 151, 152, and Peters Auditorium.

A discussion and critique of the undergraduate program.

CLASSICS (see French).

ECONOMICS — Hasbrouck Laboratory Rooms 113, 111, 109.

General pre-counseling session.

ENGLISH — Student Union Ballroom.

Small group discussions.

FRENCH — Faculty offices in Bartlett Hall.

General pre-counseling session.

GEOLOGY — Morrill Hall, Room 159.

An informal discussion of the ways in which the department might better serve the needs of the undergraduate.

GERMAN — Student Union, Council Chamber B.

Explanation of next fall's course offerings, discussion of study abroad, information about Honors work.

GOVERNMENT — Faculty offices in Machmer Hall. A general pre-counseling session.

HISTORY — Memorial Hall, Reception Room.

Professor Cary will discuss job opportunities and advanced study.

Senior Honors candidates to talk with Professor Bernhard; and a general pre-counseling session.

JOURNALISTIC STUDIES — See English.

MATHEMATICS — Farley Club House.

A general pre-counseling session with emphasis on the social side and changes in the program for next year.

MICROBIOLOGY — Morrill Hall, Section IV, North Wing, Room 202.

A general pre-counseling session.

Volpe Defends Architects of Med School

Gov. John A. Volpe made a point-by-point defense of the way architects were selected for the University of Massachusetts Medical School.

HE DENOUNCED what he called "a series of false, reckless and totally irresponsible statements" made about the issue.

Volpe's defense of his commissioner of administration, John J. McCarthy, was prompted by reports that university trustees were unhappy with the selection of architects and implications that political considerations played a part in the choice.

The governor told a news conference that the architects chosen will provide "an outstanding team" and that no politics was involved in the selection of Ritchie Associates of Boston.

VOLPE'S STATEMENT came shortly before a special Senate committee was due to begin an investigation of the entire question of architects for state buildings.

Donald Ritchie of Ritchie Associates made a $500 contribution to Volpe's 1964 campaign, but the governor said he was not aware of the contribution when the architectural contract was awarded.

"The contribution was $500," Volpe said, "and it wouldn't seem to me to be a political payoff at all."

THE RITCHIE FIRM was not among the top choices of the university trustees in their list of architects for the $50 million school to be built in Worcester.

But McCarthy named Ritchie as one of three firms to collaborate on the medical school project.

Volpe said Ritchie Associates is experienced in hospital design and has handled more than 130 major hospital projects.

THE GOVERNOR told newsmen the Volpe Construction Co. which he heads, several years ago built the Norwood Hospital, designed by Ritchie Associates.

Columbia Dean to Speak Of Values in Decisions

Dr. Clarence C. Walton, dean of the School of General Studies at Columbia University, will speak on "Values in Administrative Decisions" Tuesday, April 26, at 4 p.m. in SBA 120.

The talk is the last of three in the school's spring colloquia and is open to the public without charge.

Dr. Walton is a magna cum laude graduate of the University of Scranton with an M.A. degree from Syracuse University and a Ph.D. from Catholic University.

He is co-author of two books, "Conceptual Foundations of Business" and "Corporations on Trial: The Electrical Cases."

Goodell Library Receives ILO Publications

A collection of all material published by the International Labor Organization (ILO) since its founding in 1919 has been acquired by Goodell Library and the Labor Relations and Research Cen. at the University of Massachusetts.

ILO is the oldest specialized agency of the UN; the UM collection of approximately 1,500 volumes covers every aspect of its efforts on behalf of higher labor and living standards for working people throughout the world.

A collection of articles by Dan Wakefield, a leading U.S. freelance reporter who lectures at the University of Massachusetts/Boston, has been published by the New American Library.

The book is "Between the Lines: A Reporter's Personal Journey Through Public Events," a collection of articles written over the last decade and connected by "between the lines" commentary that Wakefield calls a mixture of "autobiography, confession and criticism."

According to the New York Times, Wakefield is "acknowledged to be one of the country's most sensitive independent commentator-reporters." He is the author of two books—"Island in the City," an account of Puerto Rican Harlem published in 1959, and "Revolt in the South," a collection of his reports on the civil rights movement published in 1961. He is also the editor of "The Addict," a 1964 anthology on narcotics.

He was a Nieman Journalism Fellow at Harvard University in 1963-64 and is now working on a novel. He lives in Cambridge and has been a visiting lecturer in creative writing at UMass-Boston since September of 1965.

Former Musical Hornblower Is Now Scientific Glassblower

From blowing a horn to blowing glass is the unusual but successful career pattern of Gordon Good, head of the glass shop in Goessmann Laboratory at the University of Massachusetts.

As a scientific glassblower, Good's job is fabricating special, often very complex lab equipment that can't be bought ready-made. It's a skill that only a handful of schools in the world teach. Most glassblowers learn it the way Good did—through a long apprenticeship.

GOOD SWITCHED from horn blowing to glassblowing during World War II. At the time, he was studying trombone and baritone and bass horn at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, where one of his friends was a student named Al Hirt.

Hirt, today one of America's most popular trumpet stylists, was a class ahead of Good, but they had rooms across the hall from each other and used to get together and play serenades out their third floor window to girls in the dormitory across the street.

A job in a TNT factory ended Good's musical career and started him as a glassblower. While waiting to go into the service, Good took a job as a lab technician at the Trojan Powder Co. in Sandusky, Ohio, and was apprenticed to a laboratory glassblower.

By the time he went into the Army Air Force a year and a half later, Good had learned enough about glassblowing and liked it well enough to want to make a career of it.

AFTER SERVICE as a World War II B-17 radioman and gunner, Good took a laboratory glassblower's job in 1945 with the Monsanto Company. He stayed with them for almost two decades, first in Dayton, Ohio and later at their research center in Creve Coeur, near St. Louis, Mo., before leaving the firm to come to UMass in July of 1964.

His glass shop at UMass is a university-wide facility maintained by the Office of Research Services in the Graduate School. The glass shop is used for the most part by faculty and graduate students working on research projects under federal grants or contracts.

Good puts together a variety of special equipment, about 70 percent of it for the chemistry department.

He may be called on to fabricate a six-foot high complex of tubing, special fittings and vessels or at the other extreme fit a tiny cell or platinum wire into a small glass container.

He has built units with two-stage mercury condensation pumps for creating a controlled vacuum, sublimation units, special equipment for distillation and extraction, and units for absorption studies, density and viscometry, and crystallization research.

THE UMASS glass shop has an annealing oven, a glassblowing lathe, a glass cutoff saw and other special machines; most work, however, is done with hand tools like carbon reaming tools, tungsten carbon-edged cutting knives, forceps, a tungsten needle, calipers and asbestos tape.

Burners or torches in a variety of forms are used in almost all glass work. They burn a gas-oxygen mixture and produce a flame of about 2500 degrees centigrade.

Most laboratory glassblowing operations require the use of both hands and the application of air pressure, some times directly, more often through a mouth tube. The pressure is applied on the inside of the vessel as the hands gently rotate it. This keeps the heat-softened glass from collapsing while it is being shaped, joined or bent.

"The basic technique in glassblowing is rotation," Good said, "usually done with two hands and coordinated with air pressure."

Dr. Irving P. Rothberg corrects galley proofs for the 13,000-circulation publication of "Hispania".

UMass Professor Revises "Hispania"

Hispania, quarterly journal of the 11,000-member American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese, has been given a new format by its editor, Dr. Irving P. Rothberg, Assoc. Prof. of Romance languages at the University of Massachusetts.

Shown correcting galley proofs for the 13,000 circulation publication is Dr. Rothberg, who was elected early this year to a three-year term as editor.

Dr. Rothberg has made type changes and redesigned the cover. He directs a staff of associate editors at colleges and universities throughout the country who contribute to the quarterly, published in Appleton, Wisconsin.

Residence Hall Control To Be Discussed

The University Reform Committee will hold a conference on student government in the residence halls this Saturday in Bartlett Aud. starting at 10 a.m. The speakers will include Tim Cunningham, Vice-President of the Student Senate, a professor yet unnamed, and Mary Hudzikiewicz, University Program Advisor.

Cunningham will speak on problems students face in running their own residence halls and what has to be in the future.

The professor will speak on how students run their own lives in other places, and what benefits the student derives from being treated as an adult.

Mrs. Hudzikiewicz will speak on the ways students can go about setting up student government in their own residence halls.

Following each speaker comments may be made by representatives of the Dean of Men's office and the Dean of Women's office.

Workshops on student control of their own residences will be held in the afternoon in Bartlett starting at 1 p.m.

All interested persons are welcome to attend and contribute.

JUDICIARY SELECTIONS

LACK OF APPLICANTS has forced judiciary selections to be held again on Sun., May 1 from 1 p.m. throughout the remainder of the day in the Student Union.

IN AREA 1 (Orchard, Butterfield, Baker, Greenough and Chadbourne) the positions to be filled call for one freshman and two sophomores.

IN AREA 2 (all the rest of the Men's Residence Halls) the positions to be filled call for one freshman, three sophomores, and two juniors.

APPLICATIONS are available in the RSO office and should be returned to the RSO office by 5 p.m., Friday, April 29.

APPLICANTS once appointed to an Area Judiciary stay on it as long as they continue to live in that residential area.

NORMALLY, only three positions are filled each year, however this year more positions must be filled because some of the incumbents are moving out of their residential areas.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Too Much to Ask?

by JIM THOMPSON
Editorial Staff

It is not too much to ask that half the residents of this campus exercise their rights to vote on any issue. But it seems that the referendum concerning alcoholic beverages should especially draw the students down to our Union to vote, it is an issue so vital to all the students at our university.

Last Thursday the turnout for the vote was some three thousand students, but this was not enough. This Thursday we definitely need 4800 students to vote on our referendum. Of course on the last student vote, there was the drawing card of the freshman-sophomore primary elections. Because of the freshman-sophomore final elections, there will again be a large number of voters from these two classes in our Union again on Thursday, April 28th. However, as was proven by the last vote, this will not be enough.

We need to have the juniors and seniors to vote on this referendum just as much as any other class. As on last Thursday, there will be a ballot box for the upperclassmen in the lobby. And this time the upperclassmen must take out the few seconds from their day to vote on this extremely important issue.

What this amounts to is a second chance for the student body. We cannot allow it to slip by us again. We must act, and act this Thursday, April 28th, by casting our ballots on the alcoholic beverages referendum. It is not too much to ask!

Deadline for our CANDIDATES FORUM is 6 P.M. today

Letters to the EditorHis Lordship,
Mr. Spare

London, England
August, 1939

TO HIS LORDSHIP THE PRIME MINISTER

My dearest Mr. Spare:

Your perceptive article on war which was offered in the University of Massachusetts Collegian on 11 April 1966 was one of the best written pieces of truthful criticism I have seen in some time.

Amidst all this talk of war with Germany, we must above all else keep calm. Adolph Hitler is just as honorable a man as myself or Josef Stalin, and can be trusted to keep his non-aggression agreements. The more excitable among us would have us believe that he is about to invade France, but we realize that there is no chance of this. He agreed to refrain from aggression just several short months ago when I signed the Munich Pact with him.

We must remember that above all else our motive is peace—peace at all costs. We can ill afford to blunder into another war like the last.

I am certain that our agreements with Chancellor Hitler will be kept, and remind you that there shall be peace in our time.

Most respectfully yours,
Neville Chamberlane

Opportunity Knocks

—Let It In—

by CHET WEINERMAN, Editorial Chairman

The University of Massachusetts is being watched by the entire nation for the first time in its history. Oh, we've been noticed before—our new buildings, Bowl team, or unexperimental experiments—but never really watched closely. Michigan, Wisconsin, Kansas, and the University of California are observed closely, are talked about, are imitated.

But now we can initiate.

Now we can lead.

Now we can show the way to progress.

Dean Curtis and Dean Field: you have been thrust into a tumultuous controversy. As you try and think of ways to compromise, satiate irate parents, and satisfy trustees, you may lose perspective on a very important fact: you will be making history in the field of education. This is a very difficult concept to bear in mind at the moment.

You are in a very enviable position. Whatever the final decision may be, it will be carried by UPI, AP, and NBC, carried from Boston to Berkeley. Educators will be discussing and debating the progressive advances of the University of Massachusetts and its daring experiment in freedom for mature students. By your decision, you may advance the thinking of an entire nation; this is an enviable position.

Dean Curtis, you have always said that the rules are democratically made by the students; this, you say, has always been and continues to be the policy of the University. Well, over 70% of the girls on campus want no curfew (as evidenced by the petition on your desk). The Women's Affairs Committee has recommended the same desire, and the Student Senate has overwhelmingly ratified this recommendation. Now it is democratically in your hands. If truth and confidence are to reign, is there a choice as to what course must be taken?

Do not be afraid to take this course. You will gain for yourselves and for the University national respect. You will pave the way for advances in education. But most important, students graduating from this University will graduate more mature, more responsible adults, more able to live in a complex world. And after all, is this not the main function of a university, of the University of Massachusetts. And is not your function to implement this philosophy of education into reality?

The students have acted sanely. This rare opportunity rests with you. It knocks on the door so loudly, so clearly. For the good of the youth whom you so ably serve, let it in.

Anyone Care to Challenge This?

To the Editor:

Randolph Fennington Forbes-Craigee III charges Michael Parker of using incorrect information concerning the averages of the Fraternities and the overall campus.

I would now like to charge Mr. Forbes-Craigee with the same thing. To be absolutely correct I will use the averages taken from page ten of the March 14, 1966 issue of the Collegian. The Fraternity average was 2.101 and the average of men on campus was 2.165. As can be seen, this is only a .064 difference. (Nowhere near the .2 difference you get with Mr. Forbes-Craigee's averages, is it?)

Also, when comparing the averages of the overall campus (men and women) to the Greek system one should add the average of the Sororities so as to have the entire Greek system being compared. When this is done it will be seen that the Greek system has a better average than the overall campus.

Anyone care to (or dare to) challenge this?

IMPACTby JIM FOUUDY
Managing Editor

IMPACT, defined as an important meeting to promote activity on campus today will be held Saturday. Its purpose is to present information to students about various campus activities. However, while IMPACT is a positive program it is unfortunately based on a negative aspect of our campus.

The fact that students with expressed interest in writing or student government have to be INVITED to see what our publications and Student Senate have to offer goes beyond the description of apathy. It seems that for four years too many UMass students just curl up with their books and die.

But college is not a place to die. This is not four years out from your life; it is your life. It is the time and place to enjoy the potentials of youth, a time to develop an awareness and perspective of the world and a time to experiment and make mistakes.

The University has become a shelter for students who exempt themselves from participation and responsibility because of their academic pursuits. This is not to denounce the students "raison d'être" for attending UMass but extra-curricular activities also provide an educational service while giving a person the sense of responsibility which is so necessary for leadership.

If you have been selected to attend IMPACT, stop and consider the amount of time you waste goofing around the dorm, Hatching it, or just plain shooting the breeze. Now consider if any of this time can be used contributing to your campus community as well as to your own personal improvement.

We think it can.

Letters to the EditorGrades Are Dangerous

To the editor:

Though I sadly suspect that the majority of students on this campus would feel unsure of what they were if grades were abolished, any efforts by the Student Reform Party to begin gradeless courses for any group of students, should be encouraged.

Norman Cousins in the April 23 Saturday Review writes, "The teacher doesn't exist and the computer has yet to be devised that can peer deeply enough into the mind of every student to calibrate precisely what is happening to him in the process of learning. To be sure, some teachers can make a reasonably good guess; but when the determination involves which youngsters are to go off to fight in Vietnam or elsewhere and which youngsters are to be allowed to continue their education without interruption, even the best guesswork isn't good enough."

As an English 112 instructor who has to decide whether the "C" expression or the "B" content of a student paper should determine the grade I put in the IBM card this May, I am ready to conclude that grades are misleading. As an English 112 instructor who must determine whether the hours spent by a "D" student rewriting his "poorly" constructed sentences warrant my raising his grade to a "C" which might keep him out of Vietnam, I am ready to conclude that grades are dangerous.

Sincerely,
Evelyn Stein

'No, No, Nanette' Brings Back Life In The 1920's

by MIKE GOULD
and Sue Shafran

The curtain rose, and in a setting of greens and pink, traditional furniture, and palm bushes, the Operetta Guild's production of No, No, Nanette got under way.

Characters were typical 1920 dress, ladies in chemise shifts complete with beads and men in double-breasted suits with wide lapel. The flapping-20's atmosphere was in the air from the very beginning of this lively musical.

Otto Harbach and Frank Mandel's book is a tale of two husbands, Jimmy Smith and Billy Early, who get involved extramaritally with three dames. The wives of the leading men quickly become aware of their husbands' activities, and things become complicated in a hurry. Pretty young Nanette also has her problems with the opposite sex in the person of handsome Tom Trainer. A musical comedy it is, however, and, everything is roses and violets for husbands, wives and lovers at the end.

MISS GORDON OUTSTANDING
An excellent performance was presented by Carol Gordon, in the role of Lucille Early, wife of lawyer Billy. Carol's rendition of "You Can Dance With Any Girl" was a highpoint of the show.

Nanette and Tom were portrayed by comely Laurel Demers and handsome John Gilbert. This pair got the biggest hand of the evening when they sang and danced with great skill to the tune of "Tea For Two."

The rogue husbands were well played by Richard Eber and John Bulson. Linda DeCost was the conservative wife of Billy the wealthy Bible vendor. Linda's voice was especially pleasing to the air.

A fine performance was given by Karen Connolly in the role of the Smith's Hazel-like maid. Karen's fresh humor was a welcome relief from the oftentimes trite efforts of the other characters.

The three seductive girlfriends, Betty from Boston, Winnie from Washington, and Flora from Frisco, were played with effective realism by Linda Lu Cotney, Pamela Perlick and Margaret Franson. This trio was at its best when it tortured troubled Billy with "I Want To Be Happy."

The ensemble of singers and dancers sparkled in colorful 1920-ish costumes. Especially eye-catching was the beach scene at Atlantic City which saw the guys and gals in matching bathing suits.

No, No, Nanette will be presented this coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Under the direction of William Segal and Paul Bartsch, this sprightly musical makes for a most enjoyable evening.

Crossmen Bow to Tufts

by TOM FITZGERALD

It looked like it was in the bag. The Redmen had a 6-5 lead with seconds to play and were ready to savor victory. But thanks to the heroics of Bob Faraci, Larry Frost, and Frank Brown, the snakebeaters from Tufts came out on the top side of a 7-6 score in Saturday's overtime thriller at the lacrosse field.

Faraci tied the count with his second goal at 14:54 of the last quarter. Frost threw the assisting pass on the tying goal and did likewise on Brown's winning tally with 1:20 gone in the first overtime.

In lacrosse, two overtime sessions are played after a tie during regulation time, but three slashing penalties, called against the Redmen in their efforts to get possession of the ball, destroyed any hope UMass had of salvaging a tie in the extra session.

The Redmen had rolled to a 4-0 lead during the first quarter against Tufts. Howie Goffman led off with a goal off an assist by Jim O'Donnell after the first seven minutes.

Captain Dave Jarrett, still hobbled by an ankle injury, relayed a feed from Charlie Avaki-an into the net a little over two minutes later. Goffman scored again on an unassisted shot at 9:33.

With three minutes remaining in the canto, O'Donnell circled around the Tufts net and beat Blue goalie Steve Florin with a short left-handed shot.

The Jumbos turned the tide in the second quarter. Faraci tapped in a rebound after only 28 seconds. Halfway through the period, Roger Farrar tossed a centering pass to Dick Dietrich, who flipped the ball past UMass goalie Bob Lawson.

Dean Nicholson narrowed the gap to 4-3 with two minutes to go in the half, and Farrar evened the count with a 30-footer after eight minutes of the second half. The Redmen, however, regained the lead five minutes later when Dick Howe pushed the sphere into the goal during a wild scramble at the goal mouth.

UMass took advantage of two penalties called on Tufts Coach Jack Noble for his hot dispute with the officials late in the third quarter. Martie Kalikow dodged several Tufts defenders and fired into the net as he crossed the goal from the left side.

The Redmen thus carried a 6-4 edge into the fourth period, but when Frost tallied midway through the session, his goal was a bad omen of things to come for UMass.

Mixed Doubles Tennis

by DAVE JARNES

Thursday's rain forced postponement of all but 3 softball games. The Gorman Maples continued unbeaten as they came up with 5 runs in the sixth to snap a 3-3 tie and beat the Pines 8-3. A solid 15 hit attack and a 6 run sixth paced the Wheeler Trojans to a 14-8 slugfest over the Elms. Corinda led the victors with 4 hits while Shaller and Crowles contributed 3 safeties apiece.

In the only other softball game played the Trojans (not to be confused with the Wheeler Trojans) dropped an 8-6 decision to the AEP Pledges. A 7 run second proved decisive in this game which was played in a downpour.

Turning to soccer, Gerald Cellilli's spectacular 4 goal performance led the Green Berets to a 5-0 romp over the Chowhounds. Two second half goals by Molesky and Murphy enabled PSK to come from behind and nip TKE 2-1.

Pete Celi's goal proved to be the clincher in LCA's 3-1 win over TC and Rick Scagland's tally was all that SPE needed to beat QTV 1-0.

REMEMBER, TODAY IS THE LAST DAY FOR ENTRIES IN THE MIXED DOUBLES TENNIS TOURNAMENT. THE INTRAMURAL OFFICE IS OPEN UNTIL 5 P.M.

Horseshoe tournament entries are due April 28.

Trackmen Wallop Tufts

by TERRY CARPENTER

Winning 12 of 17 events and sweeping five events, the UMass track team easily topped Tufts, 96-53 Saturday.

Senior John Medeiros started the meet off with a 218" long jump. Bob Karagosian flipped the hammer 151'10" for a one foot victory over Tufts' Cowen. Bob Delue won the javelin by almost 30 feet with a throw of 183'7". Art Larvey, trying the triple jump for the first time in a meet, won the event at 42'6". Bob Moroney and John Medeiros placed 1-2 in the high jump at 5'8" and Co-capt. Bob Murray and Dave Lizotte did likewise in the pole vault at 12'.

In the running events the Redmen got going with a victory in the 440 yd. relay, a new event in college meets. Terry Carpenter won the mile in 4:30 and Steve St. Clair was third. John Andersen captured the 440 easily and fast finishing Bill Thoms just missed getting 2nd place. Andy's time was 52 flat.

Soph Steve Burrell lived up to pre-season expectation with a 9.8 100 to lower the school mark by a tenth. Medeiros, just mastering the hurdles, clipped 3 tenths off the school record with a 15.2 clocking in the 120 highs.

Greg Bowman blazed to a fine 1:58.9 victory in the half-mile. Steve Burrell and John Andersen placed 2nd and 3rd in the 220. Dave Walkwitz finished 2nd in the gruelling 440 yd. intermediate hurdles while Demain Gaffney and Jay Hall tied for 3rd. Terry Carpenter and Sam Berry finished 2nd and 3rd in the 2-mile.

On Wednesday, the Yankee Conference Track Champions face their most formidable opponent of the season in Springfield College. The field events start at 3:00 with the running events getting underway at 3:30.

PIRATES, GIANTS, INDIANS, ON TOP

by MIKE CURRAN

After the first full week of play the undefeated Cleveland Indians lead the American League, and the Pirates and Giants are tied for the top in the National League.

The batting leaders are Charlie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals and Fred Whitfield of the Cleveland Indians. Felipe Alou, Atlanta outfielder, has hit safely in all 12 of the Braves' games. Jose Pagan, light-hitting Pirate shortstop, has driven in four game-winning runs for the Bucs in just one week.

Willie Mays leads the Majors with 6 home runs. Willie tied the immortal Mel Ott for the National League life-time homer mark of 511 with yesterday's blow off Houston's Jim Owens.

The New York Yankees are really taking it on the nose. They've dropped their last six games and are now in the cellar with a 1-8 record.

Sandy Koufax pitched a complete game Friday afternoon, but the Los Angeles Dodgers are still having trouble scoring runs. In the weekend series against the Cubs they were blanked in two of the three games.

Pete Richert, Senator southpaw, struck out seven Tigers in a row yesterday while dropping a 4-0 decision to Bill Monboquette.

Dick Stuart, better known as the Ancient Mariner, ("he stoppeth one of three") will be lost to the Mets for at least a month due to a severe muscle pull. During his absence the Mets have had a 1-5 record. Get well quick, Dick.

Golfers Win Twice

by DAVE JARNES

UMass opened its golf season by beating Vermont 5-2 and losing to Amherst 4-3. A double victory had been expected by the Redmen and Coach Gladchuk's only comment was, "We got beat in more ways than one."

However, despite the general sub-standard performances turned in by the Redmen, Ed Polchepek's fine 71 round drew special praise from his coach. Ed, a baseball player last year is described by Mr. Gladchuk as "one of these deadpan guys who says nothing but just goes out and shoots a whale of a game."

The golfers defeated Dart-

REDMEN SWEEP UVM

Smith Chalks Up 4-2 Victory; Babyak Shines at Shortstop

by DAVE JARNES

A combination of clutch pitching by Bill Smith and some outstanding glove work by shortstop Jim Babyak gave UMass a well-deserved 4-2 win in the opener of the weekend series with Vermont.

The Redmen have been quite adept at scoring in the first inning this year, and Friday's game was no exception as they jumped on pitcher John McCord for two tallies in the opening frame.

Sophomore Hagan Andersen opened with an infield hit and was forced at second by Frank Stewart. Jim Babyak reached on an error and Terry Swanson walked to load the bases. Ross Piken then poked a line single to right to drive in Stewart and Babyak.

UVM bounced right back to knot the count at 2-2 in the 2nd. Bob Aldrich reached on an error when Frank Stewart couldn't hold on to his pop after a long chase, and John Packard followed with a double to put runners on second and third. Dave Wayne rescued Aldrich and Packard with a line shot to left.

At this point pitcher Smith bore down and shut out the Catamounts for the rest of the game.

UMass scored what proved to be the deciding run in the third when Babyak walked, stole second and came home on a single by John Peacock. The Redmen added an insurance run in the fifth as Ross Piken doubled deep to right and scored on a single by Roy Lasky.

Friday's win was a typical Bill Smith performance. Smitty, who relies on control and the changing of speeds rather than overpowering stuff, was touched for nine scattered hits and failed to strike out a single man. Bill had near-perfect control, however, as he walked only one man and kept the Vermont hitters off balance with an effective changeup.

Vermont's pitcher John McCord pitched a fine game in his own right. The lanky right-hander gave UMass' righthanded batters fits with his sidearm sinkers but the southpaw swingers had little trouble with his deliveries as portside.

Swingers Stewart, Piken, Peacock and Lasky tagged him for six of UMass' nine runs.

Along with Smith, Babyak has to rate as a star of the game with his great fielding plays. Jimmy saved two runs in the sixth when he made a fantastic leaping, bobbing grab of a line drive off the bat of Don Fitts.

Babyak made a similar play in the third when he speared Bruce Lombard's hot shot. As if these plays weren't enough, next year's basketball captain threw out Bill Leete with a great stop and a bullet throw from deep in the shortstop hole and handled six other chances flawlessly.

JIM BABYAK played spectacularly in the field on Friday and drove in the winning run on Saturday.

Terry Swanson tripped and scored the tying run in the 8th inning Saturday.

Stewart, Swanson, Babyak Deliver; Boteze Wins 5-4

by GLENN BRIERE

Four runs in the last three innings gave the UMass baseball team a thrilling 5-4 victory over Vermont at Amherst Saturday to sweep the weekend series. Jim Babyak's hit in the last of the ninth drove in the winning run in a game that was marked by seven Redmen errors, most of them early in the game.

As the game moved into the bottom of the seventh, the outlook was not bright for the Redmen. Vermont was leading, 4-1, and pitcher Carl Boteze was not at his sharpest. With one out UMass began to come alive as John Peacock walked, and Jim Kuczynski doubled to center to put runners on second and third. Boteze came up, to help his cause, but he hit a check-swing bouncer to the pitcher for the second out.

Hagan Andersen then walked to load the bases, and Frank Stewart came up. Frank had gone 0 for 3, striking out twice, but this time he laced a two-strike hit to center, scoring Peacock and Kuz to make the score 4-3.

Vermont went scoreless in the top of the eighth, and Terry Swanson led off for UMass in the bottom half of the inning. Swanson broke his first bat on a foul, but he must have picked a good one for his second as he bombed a triple deep to left. Jeff Whitney grounded out, with Swanson remaining on third. Alex Vyce then laid down a perfect bunt up the third base line, and Terry scored the tying run on the squeeze. As the contest progressed into the ninth, it was a brand-new ball game.

Once again the Catamounts failed to score, and the Redmen made their bid to win it in the last of the ninth. Boteze led off with a double up the left line, and Andersen sacrificed him over to third. Stewart then grounded out to the first baseman, and it was up to Jim Babyak to knock in the winning run. He did exactly that, sending a liner over the left fielder's head to bring in the clincher.

Vermont drew first blood in the game with a run in the top of the first on a double by Bobby Cronin, an infield out, and a sacrifice fly to left by Don Pitts. UMass came back in the bottom of the first when, when two outs, Babyak went to second on a wild throw by third baseman Bill Leete. Swanson drove him in with a single to right and the score was tied, 1-1.

The Catamounts picked up an unearned run in the second as a result of some miserable fielding by the Redmen. With one out, Babyak threw away a grounder by Bruce Lombard which went for two bases. Catcher Jim Kuczynski tried to pick him off but nobody was there to take the throw, and Lombard moved to third. Leete wiffed, but Boteze walked pitcher Len Shefflott. Bob Cronin, who was something of a nemesis for Carl, drove a single to right scoring Lombard. Roy Lasky bobbled it, and the runners moved to second and third. Dave Wayne ended the inning by fouling out to Peacock.

Bo finally got some stuff on his pitches in the third, fourth and fifth frames, striking out five and allowing no hits. But Vermont struck again in the sixth inning with two outs.

Bill Lette singled to left, and Shefflott drove a fly to left which went off Ross Piken's glove for a double, scoring Leete. Cronin got his third hit to put men on first and third. Wayne then lined a single to left, scoring Shefflott, and when Piken fumbled it Cronin rounded third for the plate. But Babyak took the relay from Ross and cut Cronin down at home to end the inning. Boteze had little trouble with the Catamounts thereafter, picking up his third win in three starts.

UMass is now 3-0 in YanCon play, and the chief threat seems

CHINA SYMPOSIUM TO END WITH PANEL DISCUSSION

On Thursday, April 28 at 8 p.m. the DVP China symposium will come to a close with a panel discussion moderated by Dr. Stanfield of the Sociology department.

The discussion will center around the topic "a close look at the Chinese enigma". Panel members will include Dr. Ezra Vogel, Mr. William Griffith, and Alice Langley Hsieh.

PROF. VOGEL who earned his master's and doctor's degrees at Harvard and subsequently taught there, published a book in 1963 entitled Japan's New Middle Class, after two years spent on research in the far east.

Vogel has devoted much of his time recently to a study of Communist China and is also a research associate in the Harvard East Asian Research Center as well as a faculty member in the department of Social Relations.

WILLIAM E. GRIFFITH is director of the International Communist Project at the M. I. T. Center of International Studies, Prof. of Soviet Diplomacy at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts Univ., and lectures in Political Science at M.I.T.

He is a frequent contributor to political journals, most of his articles dealing with Communist affairs. He has written one book, Albania and the Sino-Soviet Rift.

MRS. HSIEH, who served in the State Department and as a Foreign Service Officer for 10 years is a senior staff member of the RAND Corporation and currently is conducting political science courses at Mt. Holyoke and UMass.

Prof. Hsieh acted as consultant to RAND from 1955-58 and in 1959 was appointed to the senior staff of the Social Science Department where she analyzes Communist China's external political and military policies.

THE CHINA panel will be the sixth and final in a series of programs co-ordinated by DVP to bring the China story and problems closer to the University community.

Student Groups Attend Reform Conference

On Sunday, April 24, a delegation of students representing the UMass Reform Committee and members of the Student Senate traveled to Harvard University for a multi-college reform conference sponsored by the Committee for Revolution on Campus (CROC).

THE ALL DAY conference was held in Phillips Brooks House on the Harvard campus. Harvard, Yale, Wellesley, Goddard College were represented. More delegates represented UMass than any other college present.

At 10:30 a general meeting was held to orient all present to the schedule for the day. The day was divided into three parts. The morning session was devoted to voicing problems, the afternoon session was used to discuss solutions, the evening session which was to be used to propose programs of action was incorporated into the afternoon meeting.

FOLLOWING the orientation, three smaller groups took up the first items on the agenda. One of the three groups discussed the problem of the function of the university. They concluded that the functions of the university are to teach and carry on research.

The teaching process was broken down into two types of learning: technical proficiency and the development of a total person down into two types of comprehensiveness. Research was also divided into and research which makes radical critiques of society.

THE LEARNING process it has decided today favors the grinding out of technically competent students to become members of the existing society. The university is responsible to supply society with people that can fill the technical needs of an expanding community.

The idea of educating a person so that they will have the basic tools to develop a comprehensiveness and the ability to tackle problems was the other method of learning, which most of the delegates favored.

A LIVING example of such a type of learning was presented by the representatives of Goddard College. Goddard works under a system of independent study and work-study programs. After one semester a student begins his independent study in close connection with faculty members.

The second group saw the student and his representation as a that the present structure of the university makes it difficult for personal small groups to organize and function. The majority of students fall into the 17-21 age group, when people are at the height of their creative ability. These people are suppressed by the university and the group reporting agreed that it is time to get these people back into the world and society. The reform of social regulations was one solution to this problem.

THE THIRD and final group discussed the student, faculty, and administration split as a

UMass Faces Possible Cut in Enrollment

UMass may admit fewer students than planned this fall because of a proposed budget cut.

Dr. John W. Lederle, university president, said Sunday enrollment will likely increase at a slower rate than anticipated unless $7.8 million is restored to the project budget.

LEDERLE said the university requested $34 million in operating funds for the next fiscal year but Gov. John A. Volpe submitted only a $26.2 million university budget to the legislature.

"Unless a good deal of this money is returned, it means we cannot do a quality educational job. It may even envision taking less enrollment than we had planned," he said.

Lederle said he thought the budget submitted by Volpe may have been "put together in haste by the governor at a time when he didn't know whether there would be a tax bill or not.

FIRE IN SW COMPLEX

A fire last night at 6:00 P.M. in Thoreau House, Southwest Complex, was caused by a cigarette thrown into a wastepaper basket.

Fire Chief John Doherty said the fire in room 210 spread from the basket to several orange crates nearby. Sandra Baudreau and Linda Harnich, occupants of the room escaped serious injury. One of the girls suffered slight first degree burns on one hand. Damage to the room was negligible.

Tom Hofmann, one of two UMass students who helped extinguish the fire said the flames were about two feet high, and that there had been considerable smoke.

Yahoo Staff Proposes New Editorial Board

by GORDON DAVIDSON,
News Editor

A new constitution which would place final authority and responsibility for publication in an editorial board, has been drafted by the members of the Yahoo staff.

The constitution would replace the Editor-in-Chief, who presently makes all final decisions on material for Yahoo, with a board of co-equal editors headed by a chairman to serve as representative of the magazine.

THE PLAN is presently being discussed by the entire staff, but no action has yet been taken.

According to members of the staff, it is hoped that this board will distribute the work load more suitably so that the Editor is not overburdened. It is also hoped that it will promote cooperation and the exchange of ideas between the staff members and the editorial board.

MANY MEMBERS of the staff feel that there has been too little intercommunication within the staff, and between the staff and the editors.

YAHOO HAS a current campaign under way to recruit new staff members, in order to create a broader based organization, and elicit new ideas.

Where Next?

Student mobs took over the sprawling campus of the University of Mexico Tuesday. The University rector was made a prisoner in his own office and the students said he later resigned. The rebellious students—from the university's law school—said they would keep the rector a prisoner until they are certain the resignation is legally binding.

UMass Coed Wins Beauty Contest; Will Enter 'Miss Massachusetts' Pageant

Last Sunday night, Miss Susan Verrill, a senior English major at the University of Massachusetts, was crowned Miss Franklin County at the Miss Franklin County Scholarship Pageant held at Greenfield High School.

The statuesque blond from Turners Falls was chosen from thirteen girls. The judges rated her highly in all divisions including the talent division in which she presented a vocal selection from "The Sound of Music."

SHE WAS PRESENTED a three hundred dollar scholarship, which she plans to use for a graduate program in education; and she was given the right to enter the Miss Massachusetts contest next September.

Miss Verrill had not planned to enter the contest, but when urged by friends she registered as the thirteenth contestant.

SHE HAD never entered any beauty contests at the University of Massachusetts, but had won contests elsewhere, including Winter Carnival Queen at Greenfield Community College (where she attended school for two years before transferring to UMass).

Her previous winnings have consisted of a trip to Bermuda and a ten-class course at The John Robert Powers School in Springfield, Mass.

China Symposium Continues

Journalist Notes China Poverty

by CHARLES MITCHELL

"In China, one is impressed by the continuing use of the human body as a beast of burden. China today is a country of tremendous poverty in the national sense."

This was part of an address, "What's New in Peking", given Sunday night in Mahar Aud. by Frederick Nossal, foreign affairs expert for the Toronto Globe and Mail and former correspondent in Communist China.

THE ADDRESS was part of the University Distinguished Visitors Program's expanded symposium on Red China. Felix Greene, also a correspondent, delivered a lecture and showed his film on China earlier in the program.

"Felix Greene's film does not portray the real China as I saw it," stated Nossal. "The China of Felix Greene is too plump, too pretty and too happy. The faces of the people there are mostly drawn, unsmiling and worried, as they are throughout Asia."

EXPRESSING satisfaction at being able to state his opinions here, especially since Greene already had, Nossal gave his impressions of China.

"There is no physical pressure or torture, but a mental pressure which to our way of thinking is just as bad," the journalist went on. "Thought control does exist, but will not go on forever, and probably will not last very much longer," he pointed out to indicate the stability and popularity of the regime.

NOSSAL had to leave China when the government refused to renew his visa in 1960. The official reason was for "unspecified inaccuracies in reporting". He said the Chinese wanted to hear only the good reports. He had been in Red China for eight months.

"Food there for the tourists and foreigners is excellent," he said. "For the average person and the government, however, food is and will be a tremendous problem."

Nossal stated that the government recognizes that it will rise or fall on this issue, since in China, as in much of Asia, success is a measure "by a full belly". However, he said, the basic stability of the regime was indicated by the fact that even during the famine of 1960-62, the people didn't revolt.

"IT WILL take at least 25 years to straighten out the food situation," he went on. To do this, stress is put on fertilizer purchases and production as part of an eight-point farm system that includes mechanization.

"Chinese trade with non-Communist countries is rising sharply and trade with Communist countries is falling," he said. "Food purchases are a part of this, and China has given the Canadian economy a tremendous shot in the arm. This wouldn't be forgotten," he said emphatically.

In U.S.-China relations, Nossal stated, it is premature to expect rapid improvement, but both countries have much to offer each other. He thought China would not remain as strict a society.

HE BELIEVES that Communism is just a stage in under-developed countries, just as dictatorships have been. "Their stress on education is self-defeating," he said, "because an educated man and especially his children will not be satisfied with the ready-made answers of the current regimes."

In Nossal's opinion, a war between the U. S. and China would be an accident.

"CHINA'S policy, despite their aggressiveness, is internal development and war doesn't mix with this," he explained. He feels that the Chinese will fight only if the Communist government itself feels threatened, as it did in the Korean conflict. Thus, war could result if the U.S. bombed Chinese cities and its nuclear installations or even Hanoi, he said. The Chinese need North Vietnam as a buffer state against U.S. influence in Asia.

The last program of the China Symposium will be a panel discussion tomorrow night at 8 in Mahar Auditorium.

WMUA Airs New Programs; Gears to Responsible Coverage

Responsibility, the keynote of WMUA's programming policy, is again spotlighted on Wednesday, April 27 from 10 to 11:30 when the station will present a taped broadcast of Professor Lowenstein's lecture on British policy.

This lecture, which is mandatory for many Government 100 students, is also highly recommended for Government 150 students as well as all history and government majors. Throughout the week, WMUA will present a wide variety of shows and subjects.

BEGINNING on Wednesday the 27th from 9 to 10 o'clock and thereafter, WMUA will offer a new program, "Topics," which will also bring you editorials, interviews, and a host of other entertaining features.

Tom Donovan, Cliff Snickers, Jim Foudy, and Peter Hendrickson will be the reporters bringing you this new and exciting program. In conjunction with this effort, Jim Foudy and Gordon Davidson will be doing special Collegian newscasts on the 11 o'clock news on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Sundays.

These special news reports will contain news from the Collegian with special emphasis on campus affairs.

ON THURSDAY, April 27, from 9:30 to 10 o'clock, the British comedy hit, "The Goon Show," starring the inimitable

Peter Sellers with Spike Milligan and Harry Secombe, will be presented. And, on Sunday, May 1, from 7:30 to 11 o'clock, "The World of Opera" will feature "Madame Butterfly" with Leontyne Price and Richard Tucker (Erich Leinsdorf, conducting).

A live broadcast of the panel discussion from Mahar Auditorium will be given at 8 o'clock on Thursday, the 28th. This discussion, entitled, "A Close Look at the Chinese Enigma," will be moderated by Dr. Robert E. Stanfield, with William Griffith, Egra Vogel and Alice Langley Hsieh, and will concentrate on the aspects of ideology, sociology, and militarism which dominate China today.

Chemistry Honors Student Breaks Stereotyped Image

MARTIN KULIG

by MAUREEN SHEA

Tall, blond and handsome, Martin Kulig completely shatters the common stereotype of a chem major—let alone a senior working on an Honors project.

His mustard colored sweater, pin-stripe shirt and continental tailored slacks, worn by a man with an athletic figure, just do not seem to fit in with the drab brown desks, black work benches and rows of bottles, tubes and jars in the chem lab where he works. To research "The Dimerization of Phenylcyclopropane" (Kulig's), scientist's discipline keeps his playboy half in tow!

KULIG explains that dimerization of phenylcyclopropane is reacting that chemical with acid to form a single molecule twice the size of the original. "It's kind of like two magnets that have a piece of wood between them—take away the wood and the two snap together to form one big magnet. In my experiment, the acid acts as a catalyst and the molecules snap together just as the magnets do," he said, simplifying it so it would be more comprehensible for the "liberal arts student".

Punctuating his textbook-like sentences with a pen he was holding, he recalled his summer of research: "I had to find out off of the different ways to make 'phenyl' and then choose the best way for my purposes. I spent most of my lab hours testing formulas since I have to make it in large quantities with minimum effort and maximum purity."

HE STRESSED purity as a decisive factor in the success or failure of the project. Kulig used the records of students who worked on the project in the past but because he found them of little help he has been forced to innovate.

After countless attempts at making this stuff I became more annoyed than discouraged," he laughed, "mostly at my own carelessness!" Once, for example, a fire in the lab was caused by an overheated reaction. His eyes dancing, Kulig remarked that the "reaction wasn't the only thing that was overheated." Reflecting, he mentioned that it is not failure that bothers him because failure, for the most part, brings some new knowledge. It is the loss of time that

State House Advocates Birth Control Bill

For the first time in its history the State House of Representatives took a positive step toward changing the state's century old law against artificial or chemical birth control.

THE FIRST vote took place

Wednesday and supported the change 137-89.

The measure would permit a physician to administer or prescribe drugs or articles and it would let a registered pharmacist sell them on a doctor's prescription.

TODAY THE HOUSE will be asked to reconsider the vote by which it passed the measure to be engrossed Thursday by a substantial margin. There again may be extended debate on the reconsideration motion by Rep. William A. Carey (D-Boston), but because the margin for passage has been well over 40 votes consistently, it is expected to be rejected.

This would send the birth control bill, which now carries amendments to insure that the planned family information may only be obtained by married persons, to the Senate, and that branch is already making preparations for its anticipated appearance on its calendar for the session of Tuesday or Wednesday.

H. E. R. Weekend Promise: Something for Everyone

There is something for everyone on HER Sat. and Sun. Game time begins at 10 a.m. with a full schedule of badminton, wiffle ball, and volley ball games, lasting until 4 p.m. At the same time the Couple's Bowling Tournament will be taking place in the Student Union alleys. With the reduced bowling rates a large turnout of campus keggers is expected.

BEGINNING at 3:30 a Fashion Show will be put on at the South Terrace. Fashions from Ann August and Margaret Neilson will highlight the spring sports clothes show. Ten models plus the five finalists for Greek Queen will model the clothes.

The annual picnic will be held at the bonfirepit, beginning at 5 p.m. and lasting until 7. Members of the College Folk Group will be there to entertain and organize a hootenany. There will be a charge of fifty cents per person for the picnic.

The picnic will be followed by a dance on the South Terrace, featuring the New Fugitives, a Northeastern and B.U. favorite. Watch for a fireworks display during the intermission!

TWO EVENTS have been planned for your entertainment on Sunday, May 1. At 2:30 in the Ballroom the first in a series of Intercollegiate Sings is to be held. Groups from many colleges will compete for the silver bowls offered as prizes to the finest singers. Sunday evening at 6:30 the Steve Naimen Quintet, composed of four UMass and one Boston Conservatory student, will present a wide repertoire with emphasis on down to earth jazz.

There is a complete schedule of activities to keep you girls and your dates active, so come on out and enjoy yourselves. Remember, it's for HER.

Dr. Purvis, Dean of Ed. Announces Retirement

DR. ALBERT W. PURVIS

Dr. Albert W. Purvis, Dean of the University of Massachusetts School of Education since its establishment in 1956, today announced that he will retire in September, 1967.

WHEN Dean Purvis joined the UMass faculty Feb. 20, 1936, he was the only full-time teacher of education in a department that had one office and one classroom. Today he heads a School of Education that has its own ultra-modern building, 40 faculty, 700 undergraduates and over 1300 graduate students and a total of funded research projects that will reach the $1 million mark next year.

A native of Gagetown, New Brunswick, Can., Dean Purvis received his A.B. degree from the University of New Brunswick and was a teacher-principal in New Brunswick schools for six years. He received an Ed. M. degree from Harvard University in 1936 and an Ed.D. from the same institution in 1937.

UNDER his direction, the new School of Education building and Marks Meadow School were completed and occupied in September, 1961. The $2.2 million elementary school has observation galleries with one-way windows and a closed-circuit TV system for student observation of classroom teaching. Dean Purvis terms Marks Meadow "superior to any other similar facility in the country."

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Locomote

In the last issue of the Collegian there was a group of editorials appearing on this page which attempted to show the students as well as the faculty and administration that there is a chance to make history with our University Reform. The chances which are being offered to the student have evolved over the past few months into something that has become a major issue for every member of this institution.

Thus far we have seen major action taken in the area of women's curfews, and now the opportunity presents itself to take major issue with one of the most burning questions to come up within the last few years: SHOULD THE UNIVERSITY STUDENT OF LEGAL AGE BE TREATED WITH THE RESPECT DUE HIM AS AN ADULT WHERE THE USE OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES IS CONCERNED.

The choice as to whether the student has earned this trust lies not only with the faculty and administration but with the student himself. He must show that he takes an interest in his own affairs or else be drowned in his own apathy. He must cast that ballot in order to be heard. And the chance to cast that ballot comes tomorrow in our Union.

Tomorrow is your chance to be heard. Tomorrow is your chance to have a say in an issue which can dramatically effect every person connected with this institution. The editorial staff wishes that you grab at that chance and not let it go by unnoticed.

Your life as a student and as a member of society will be effected by the outcome of this referendum. You owe it to yourself to vote tomorrow in the Student Union lobby.

Letters To The Editor

Stop Stalling

To the Editor:

This Friday, April 29, 1966, the Student Life Committee will theoretically decide either to support or reject the petition for the abolition of curfews which was recently submitted by the Women's Affairs Committee. I am hopeful that this decision will, in fact, be reached by this date.

Procrastination in making a firm decision on the curfew issue would be extremely advantageous to the members of the Student Life Committee: less than a month remains before the student body will be plunged into the distraction of final examinations.

It would certainly be a very clever ruse on the part of these reluctant decision-makers if they waited just long enough for the ordeal of finals to approach and distract the students from their currently - vigorous campaign to change the curfew system. The issue of curfew abolition could then slide into next year, and (as the administration is undoubtedly praying at this moment) the students by next year might lose much of their South-College-shaking enthusiasm to continue the battle.

I would be very disappointed if the Student Life Committee failed to reach a decision immediately.

I would much rather see the Committee make an open statement on Friday, April 29, 1966, in regard to their definite decision on the curfew issue, and thus completely refute my allegation that they are stalling for time.

Kenneth R. Mosakowski

Watch the Door

To the Editor:

The draft constitution for a proposed communications board will be brought before the Student Senate tonight. The proposed board would open the door to faculty and administration control of the Collegian, Yahoo, Critique, Caesura, and the other communications media. These are the student voice, run by Student funds. They must remain under complete student control. It is vital that the proposed board be defeated.

Joe Ross

Decide

To the Editor:

The petitions demanding the abolition of women's curfews, signed by over 70% of the undergraduate women on this campus, were placed in the hands of the Dean of Women, Friday, April 22. The parallel recommendations of the Women's Affairs Committee were passed overwhelmingly by the Student Senate on Wednesday, April 20. The stated deadline for women's rules changes was April 23.

However, administration procrastination has begun.

Suddenly, the decision-making process, once so clear, has become a vague mist. Student demands appear to be a "hot potato" which no dean's office wishes to handle. Students cannot be mere spectators to an administrative civil war. They have to much at stake in this decision. They cannot be expected to stand idly by while the administration attempts to outwait them.

The decision on next year's women's regulations must be made and made public soon!

Where Does the Money Go

To the Editor::

Where does all the money go?

The maintenance department at the University of Massachusetts is costing the student as well as the taxpayer a lot of time and money.

For example, at Hills South dormitory a hole in the wall was re-plastered for a 'modest' sum of $50! A knob on our intercom was replaced for $11.50. Six tiles for the ceiling on the first floor cost approximately $1000. This is $16.30 apiece. One wonders whether they are made of gold. To replace two square inches of glass for our mailboxes costs $3. A new leg on a sofa cost $24. That's a lot of money for a piece of leg.

What economy! No wonder we now have a sales tax and room rents go up this coming semester. Besides outrageous prices the service seems to have rather interesting flaws.

One waits a week or more to have a broken window repaired; a month for a shower to work properly; and sometimes even a semester to have the heater fixed. Mostly it then works fine during summer school. With delays like that it is little wonder that the infirmary is overcrowded with students suffering from colds or third degree burns, inflicted when one turns on a defective shower.

Instead of raising rents, how about reducing repair costs?

President of Hills South,
Joe D.

TALKS ON HAWAII

Sally Gerry, a senior History major at UMass will deliver a talk with color slides on Hawaii at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 27 during the regular coffee hour of the club in the Governor's Lounge, S.U.

Sally, who attended the University of Hawaii during the summer, 1964, traveled extensively in the area. The slides she will show however were taken by Dr. Vendien of the Women's Physical Education Department.

VARIETY SHOW

One of the major events of the club—the international variety show—which was held last Saturday was as great a success as expected.

The colorful show consisted of about thirty acts. The performances included an Indonesian classical dance by a Smith girl, (Martha Stoneback), different days of shaking hands in various countries (Alladin and Hatan), interpretation of a modern Indian dance (Claude and Yada) and a Philippine bamboo dance (Medi and Nancy).

Chinese, German, Arab, Japanese, Pakistani and Malaysian songs and music were also featured. The show ended with a big national dress parade representing about twenty countries and a coffee hour.

Robert Darling acted as master of ceremonies and Soesmono Cartono as director of the show

You, Too, Can Rot!

Got an urge to vent your spleen?

Society and lots of stupid people get you down? Then Yahoo could be just the thing for you. You could dip your pen in poison and write satire or draw satirical cartoons for us.

Socrates recommended himself to the citizens of Athens as a gadfly on a horse's rump, whose biting criticism kept Athens (the horse's rump) awake. Now we're not calling anyone a gadfly, or the University a horse's rump, but we do hope we're helping to keep the University awake and painfully aware of itself.

Now you don't have to be a satirist to fill Yahoo's bill. All you really need is an interest in humor, social criticism or magazine production. We need all types of creative people in Yahoo, as well as the just plain interested, and just plain good workers.

A lot of our material consists of just plain funny (we hope) jokes and cartoons. In fact, staff cartoonists with artistic talent combined with people with little artistic talent, but who have ideas can form one of the most effective forces on the staff.

If you think you fulfill any of the above qualifications, a group of people will be glad to greet you Thursday night, April 30, at 6:30. We hope will fill your bill.

The Editors and Staff of Yahoo

'Critique' Wants Help

Four score and seven years ago Critique was not an established magazine on this campus. Today we are; and we are providing a service which is vitally needed by both the students and faculty.

We present an active medium by which the course offerings of the various departments are reviewed critically and by which an attempt is made to make all responsible for a better educational community.

Critique will be sold in the Student Union and at various establishments in Amherst on May 2, 3, and 4, in time for students to read the course evaluations before Counseling Day, May 4.

Students: you now have the opportunity to use the evaluations which have been a year in the making; don't let this chance go by! Critique's efforts are directed to members of this academic community. Make use of them!

As one of your class officers the treasurer must represent the class and help define its policy. At present this is not being done. This condition will not change unless a new officer is installed, who regards his position as that of a student leader. If you want an officer I ask you to vote for me.

Tomorrow a very important election will take place for the members of the Class of 1968. I urge you to vote for the candi-

The most important qualities that a secretary should possess are leadership and cooperation with the officers, the executive council and the class. I'm a transfer student from the University of Denver and was Vice President of my class there. With my background and present sophomore executive experience, I feel I am qualified to serve our class.

As your present treasurer, I would like to offer my services to you again next year. I am well acquainted with the student government and experienced with the responsibilities of a treasurer. I deem it a privi-

DESPITE setbacks which cause a delay of as much as two weeks, Marty chuckled confidently and said that the only time he would "sweat" would be when it came time to write the paper—"I'm not a very good speller," he quipped. Reams of paper and test tubes on his desk indicated that he expresses himself easily with calibrations and calculations.

Kulis refuses to confine his life to chemistry. He said he "loves" wild parties and finds time to relax in this fashion quite frequently. In the summer, he "hits the beach" as much as possible and loves the free atmosphere of the outdoors. For the past four years, the Gorman House intramural football team has had Marty as a player.

"IF YOU" work efficiently and are organized, you have the time to enjoy life—I'm interested and curious, but I'm not so dedicated that I forget there is an outside world and girls!" he chuckled. He has the wanderlust and is anxious to get out and "see and do the things that most people dream about."

major problem of the university. They concluded that the job of the administration is to keep the boat steady by creating, enforcing and expecting apathy on the part of the students and faculty. The split between the three branches of the university is also the responsibility of the administration.

Some solutions to this and other problems that were proposed involve the development of better communication throughout the campus. Informal seminars, courses on education, newsletters, better student government, and the improvement of existing communications systems on campus are all a part of the solution, the committee concluded.

The afternoon session of solutions and proposals centered around the problems on the UMass campus, since UMass held the majority and all present agreed that working on a concrete set of problems would be better than proposing solutions to more general problems.

"While the selection of architects wasn't exactly in accordance with the recommendations of the board of trustees, we're moving ahead vigorously at the moment and we hope that the present furor will quiet down because we were interested in getting the medical school built as soon as possible."

ON A related topic, Lederle said he did not "see any large measure of dissent at the moment" over the controversial selection of Worcester as the site of the medical school.

In another 9-8 game, TEP's rally fell one run shy of ZN. SAM was leading LCA 4-3 going into the last inning, but the roof fell in and Sammy got trounced 15-4.

A 21 hit attack paced SPE to a 20-3 romp over QTV. Miller (five hits) and Iwanowicz (four hits) were the big guns for Sig Ep. BKP just about ruined any hopes that TKE had of repeating as fraternity champions by edging them 3-2.

ATG upset PSK 9-8 with a seven run fourth and PSD blanked TC 10-0 behind the one-hit pitching of Shagoury.

Redmen Nine at URI In Crucial YanCon Tilt

by GLENN BRIERE

Rhode Island provides the opposition for the UMass baseball team this afternoon as the Redmen travel to Kingston hoping to keep their unbeaten Yankee Conference record intact. The Rams will have a lot to say about the YanCon race this week as they also face Maine for two games this weekend on the URI diamond.

UMASS IS currently leading the loop with a 3-0 record, but the Black Bears are close behind with a 2-0 mark. If both teams can get by Rhodey this week, the weekend series between UMass and Maine at Orono on May 6 and 7 will shape up as the story-teller of the Yankee Conference. In between that weekend and now, UMass has a home game against New Hampshire on Saturday and a game at Connecticut next Tuesday.

Rhode Island has a 1-0 conference record and a 2-3 overall mark. The Rams defeated Providence and New Hampshire in their last two outings.

COACH EARL LORDEN plans on using either Carl Boteze or sophomore Dave Katz in the starting role against Rhody. Boteze, the righthanded junior ace of Lorden's mound staff, has a record of 3-0, all complete game wins. In 27 innings, he has a healthy 1.67 earned run average while striking out 34. Katz, a lefthander, pitched three overpowering innings of relief against Coast Guard, allowing no runs and fanning seven.

Captain Terry Swanson leads the regulars with a .462 batting average, and he has driven in 10 runs to lead the conference. Shortstop Jim Babyak is batting .360 with two home runs and six RBI's in his quest for the YanCon triple crown. Third baseman Hagan Andersen is close behind with a .357 BA, followed by second baseman Frank Stewart at .296.

Whelchel, Morin, Meers, Pietz to Oppose Varsity

The University of Massachusetts Spring football practice schedule will conclude with the second Alumni-Varsity game Saturday May 7 at 3 p.m. in Alumni Stadium. The game will conclude the annual football coaches' clinic that will take place that morning and early afternoon.

Last year the Alumni battled the Varsity on equal terms before losing a 6-0 decision. This year's game promises to be just as exciting. The Alumni have lined up a potent squad that includes most of the seniors from the outstanding teams of 1963-64-65 that produced 23 wins against just three losses and two Yankee Conference championships.

Thirty-one former Redmen stars will take part in the game. They include nine standouts from last fall's squad—ends Bob Meers and Milt Morin, guard Larry Spidle, quarterback Dick Cain, line-backer and center Bernie Dallas, halfbacks Leo Biron and Richie Lewis and fullbacks Dave Kelley and Phil Vandersea.

The Alumni squad has members from every Massachusetts team since 1958. The largest group is the 1964 team that had 12 seniors, who led the Redmen to the Yankee Conference and New England championships and a berth in the NCAA-sponsored Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Florida. They include Don Hagberg, Peter Pietz, Art Driscoll, John Schroder, Ken Palm, Dick Bourdelais, Bob Burke, Clyde Meyerhoefer, Dick Kehoe, Joe Doyle, Jim Fassell and Jerry Whelchel.

The undefeated 1963 team is represented by Paul Graham, Bruce Jordan and Sam Tombarelli. The rest of the team has from 1962—Ken Kezer, Paul Majeski, Al Hedlund and Sam Lussier; 1961—John Bamberly; 1960—John Burgess; and 1958—Billy Maxwell.

The Alumni coaching staff will be headed by former Redmen line coach Chet Gladchuk. Gladchuk is currently varsity golf coach and Director of Intramurals at Massachusetts. Working with him will be John LaFontana '60, Bob oFote '62, and Noel Reebenacker '53.

Junior righty Bill Smith is the probable starter for Saturday's contest against UNH. Smitty has a record of 2-0, and has yet to allow an earned run after 18 innings.

Leaman Hurls No-hit Game

by DAVE JARNES

If Jack Leaman has as much success coaching the UMass basketball team as he does with his softball pitching, he'll have nothing to worry about this winter. Coach Leaman pitched a no-hitter as the Bombers blanked the Old Timers 3-0. Ricci of the Old Timers allowed only one hit.

The Greenough Grants have apparently ended the Chadbourne Maroons' reign as dorm champions with an easy 8-2 win.

In other east league games, strong finishes by the Buffaloes and Barracudas decided their respective games. The Buffaloes upset the Lemons 8-4 with a four run fifth and the Barracudas scored six times in the sixth to beat the Garfields 10-8.

The Webster Rams pounded out 20 hits and got a strong pitching performance from Mike Hamilton as they bombed the Grayson Phallics 21-3. Mike Paysan led the attack with four hits while Hamilton added three to help himself. Payson, Hamilton, and Ron Michaud all contributed for home runs.

An incredible 15 run fourth inning gave the Redwoods a 17-9 triumph over the floundering Hawks. Art Larvey got three hits for the Redwoods. The Hemlocks scored five runs in the first and went on to beat the Aces 9-6.

Turning to the fraternities, PMD very nearly pulled off a momentous upset, but AEP managed to squeak through with a 9-8 win. The lead saw-sawed throughout the game and a run by PI in the bottom of the sixth was the decider. Cotton's three hits represented the top offensive output of the game.

Arnieri Sparks Lacrosse Over H.C.

by TOM FITZGERALD

Holy Cross goalie Peter Benotti was second in the nation in saves last year. The UMass Redmen overwhelmed the Crusaders, 9-4, yesterday at the lacrosse field, and in doing so, gave Benotti a big helping hand toward this year's leadership in the stop department.

While UMass' sophomore netminder Bill Sinclair was tested on only a dozen occasions, the Redmen bounced 28 shots off Benotti, thanks to a rather porous Cross defense.

Tony Arnieri was the top gun on the firing squad with three goals and one assist. Jim O'Donnell and Bob Murphy threw in two-goal performances with Dick Pulsifer and Frank Guidara chipping in solo tallies.

Holy Cross sophomore John Vronis featured the opposition's offensive with a three-goal "hat trick," and Lou Nunez put the ball in the net once for the visitors.

Arnieri's initial counter came after only two minutes of action, but Vronis evened the score with a solo dash at the 12-minute mark of the first period. Murphy's tally, which followed an assist by Howie Goffman, and another by Arnieri shot UMass ahead, 3-1 early in the second period.

Vronis kept the boys from Worcester in the game with his second goal at 6:36, just 16 seconds after Arnieri's. The Redmen, however, ran off four consecutive goals to tuck the game away. The four included two by O'Donnell, Murphy's second of the game, and Arnieri's third. Charlie Avakian assisted on Tony's goal, which was the junior attackman's 10th of the season.

Fourth quarter scores by Pulsifer and Guidara were matched by shots off the sticks of Nunez and Vronis.

Campus Mourns Passing of Dennis DellaPiana

The campus was saddened this weekend by the death of senior Dennis Della Piana. Dennis, co-captain of this spring's varsity baseball team, died Friday after a long illness. He was a Physical Education major and a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity. Four senior members of the baseball team, Terry Swanson, Ross Piken, Jim Kuczynski and John Peacock, were pall bearers at the funeral Tuesday morning in Malden.

The varsity baseball team, members of Kappa Sigma fraternity, coaches Earl Lorden and Dick Bergquist and Monsignor David Power represented the University at the funeral.

University Security Head Censured For Photographing Demonstrators

The faculty senate committee at the University has leveled criticism at the University's security head for taking pictures of students demonstrating in a Vietnam teachout in Amherst last fall.

A REPORT submitted to the Senate last week by the Faculty Senate Committee on Student Affairs recommended no action in the matter.

UM Chief of Security Col. John Marchant said he had taken the pictures on his own time for personal reasons, and not for University records.

A PRIVATE citizen has the right to take photographs on his own time with his own equipment, the committee prefaced their conclusions.

It would be "intolerable", however, for a University employee in a position of authority, and while so acting, to photograph "students involved in lawful political activity," the committee report went on.

"IT IS DIFFICULT to distinguish between the two roles that an individual may have—a University employee acting in that capacity, or a private citizen acting in that capacity. We must rely on the individual to appreciate the implications of his act.

"No office at this University shall maintain records on the political activities or associations of students," the committee concluded.

THE FACULTY senate took up the incident as it relates to "the academic freedom of students" after Marchant was seen taking pictures at a Sunday afternoon teachout October 17.

A former professional military officer in intelligence work, Marchant came to the University in 1958 as a professor of air science. He took over in 1963 as head of campus security.

HE TOLD the senate Committee on Student Affairs at one of its meetings that he had taken the pictures at his own initiative, for his own motives.

Faculty Senate Admits Students for First Time

The UM Faculty Senate yesterday considered a report calling for increased student-faculty communication.

In keeping with the spirit of the report, 11 student leaders from the Student Senate and publications were admitted to the faculty proceedings to express their views.

The report, a product of a joint study committee of both Faculty and Student Senates, was presented to the Faculty Senate by Professor David Clay.

The proposals still to be voted on, concern:

Joint Study Report Examined At Student Senate Meeting

by CAROLYN LEVOSKY, Senate Reporter

Explanations of the Joint Study, swearing in of new Senators and resignation speeches by departing senators were the order of business in Wednesday night's marathon Student Senate meeting.

The greater part of the close-to-seven hour meeting was taken up explaining the rationale behind the Final Report of the Joint Study Committee made up of three members each from the Student and Faculty Senates.

ACCORDING to report and its sponsoring committee, the purpose was, "To investigate areas in which it is desirable to have increased Faculty-Student communication, and increased student participation in policy formation and to recommend ways of achieving these goals."

The Committee, proposing measures in four areas, made recommendations to admit students on such Faculty Senate Committees as: Academic Matters, Admissions and Records, Scholars ips, and the Athletic Council. Some of the proposed positions called for voting members and others for advisory positions.

STUDENT opposition to the proposal termed the low number of students sitting on these committees as "tokenism", but faculty representative, David Clay,

Chairman of the Committee, defended the low number saying it "opens the fundamental level of policy formation to students."

Clay added that now students will be able to inform fellow students of pending faculty decisions.

SEN. BOB CRIPPS, Mills, also a Committee member, reminded the students that the Faculty Senate itself initiated the movement to include students. He emphasized that the Faculty Senate wants no more students on Faculty Senate committees than does the Student

Media Leaders Fight Proposed Pub Board

Highlighting a six and one half hour long Senate meeting last night was a hassle between the chief officers of the campus communications media and the members of the Joint Study Committee over potential censorship powers granted to a proposed Student Publications Board.

DISCUSSION of the 18 member board, lasting nearly three hours, was centered around a document drawn up by the media heads in reaction to the proposed board's constitutional setup. The chief officers felt that the board's powers were too vague and would ultimately lead to non-student control of the individual media in addition to failing to fulfill the needs of these media.

The Joint Study Committee, made up of three Student Senators and three Faculty Senators, had proposed the Board with the hopes that it would "serve to encourage greater care in the exercise of the press' responsibilities without infringing upon its freedom."

ONE of the major exceptions taken by the media heads, however, was with a section of the proposal which outlined techniques by which the Board

Panel To Discuss Anti-War Movement

There will be a panel discussion for all those people who disagree with the present American policy in Vietnam and wonder what can be done about it.

THOSE PANELISTS who will be giving their opinions and ideas are Edward Moser and Milton Mayer of the English Department, Joseph Delagrotte of the History Department, and Fredrick Dicker, a History graduate student.

The panel, called "The Anti-War Movement: Which Way Now," is to be an informal one, welcoming suggestions and comments from the floor.

IT IS BEING presented by Young Independents, a member chapter of Students for a Democratic Society, and will be held at 7:30 on Monday, May 2, in the Council Chambers, SU.

SECURITY...

He said, however, that "If, as a private citizen, I felt that the picture would be of value to the Federal Government, I would have the right to turn them over. I don't see the intimidating factor if one is engaged in legal pursuit. If one is publicly demonstrating, he cannot object to publicly being photographed."

THE COMMITTEE on Student Affairs has been considering the incident since early November and last week released its final report on the matter.

The fundamental issue, their report said, was "the right of students to engage in lawful political activity and to do so without fear of intimidation."

FACULTY SENATE...

• Increase in the number of committees students may serve on.

• A proposed Fine Arts Council made up equally of faculty and students financed by a special fine arts fee on student bills.

• Increase in size of the student Affairs Committee with an equal balance between faculty and students.

• Proposed University Discipline Board composed of an equal number of faculty and students. This board, which will replace the present appeal board, will have no deans or members of student judiciary on it.

• Proposed Student Publications Board comprised of the editors of the eight publications media, four students and six faculty. The stated purpose of the Board is to advise on matters of editorial policy once stated and "proper" causes for conduct have been drawn up.

YESTERDAY'S meeting was the purpose of presenting the proposals to the faculty and to permit members of the joint study committee to explain and clarify points of the proposal and their positions.

The brunt of the discussion centered on the proposed communications board which members of various media are opposed to.

SUMMING up the case for the publication Peter Hendrickson of WMUA and former editor of the Collegian stated that the mass media are wary of the proposal explaining that "we want a board where we can sit down and discuss common problems affecting all of us... a board coming from us."

Professor Clay explained that there is no attempt being made to censor publications but rather an attempt to protect its freedom and maintain its responsibility.

A number of amendments

Tappings, Awards at Student Leaders' Nite

One of the most awaited events of the school year will soon be here. On Tuesday night, May 3, at Curry Hicks Cage, the Senior Class will again present the annual Student Leaders Night. The various honor and honorary groups, whose preparation for this event began months ago, will be present to perform tapplings which will again set off the annual performance of leaping and screaming.

KIP JOHNSON, chairman of the Metawampee Award Committee, will tap a member of the faculty to receive the coveted Metawampee award. The award is given to a teacher or administrator who has shown his dedication and service to the student body of the University by his outstanding advisory or educational assistance to them. This award was initiated three years ago and since has proven to be one of the most popular events of the evening.

Class President, Bernie Dallas, will present a welcoming address followed by guest speaker, Dr. Oswald Tippo. As Provost of the University, Dr. Tippo is well acquainted with the administration and the student body. The various scholarship announcements, Women's Interdormitory Awards, and Distinguished Senior Awards (the latter presented by President Lederle) will follow.

THE HIGHLIGHT of the evening begins with the tapping by Mortar Board and Adelpia—the honor groups; and Revelers, Campus Guides, Scrolls and Maroon Key—the honorary groups.

Between the leaping and screaming the drama and suspense and actually the seriousness and deep feeling for the event, the evening promises to be full of surprises. So you won't want to miss it—May 3, 7:00 p.m.

STUDENT SENATE...

Senate want faculty on Student Senate committees.

The second recommendation was establishment of a Fine Arts Council which, according to the report, would make very substantial improvements "in the range and variety of fine arts events on the campus."

THE FACULTY delegation composed of Dean Savereid, Mr. Clay and Dr. Wellman felt that "the general cultural environment on the campus is as much a matter of the Faculty's professional concern as are curricular issues."

The Council, if passed by both Senates, will be composed of an equal number of faculty and students and a new student fee of "not more than four dollars" to replace the present Student Activities Tax.

As a part of the third major recommendation, the committee proposed that R.S.O. be put under Student Senate jurisdiction while the Discipline Board and the Foreign Student Sub-committees be established as independent committees of the Faculty Senate.

THE DISCIPLINE Board would hear appeals from undergraduate students who have been involved in proceedings before a student judicial body, a University official, an academic honesty committee of one of the several schools or colleges, or have been made to the proposal by the student senate which will also be considered by the faculty when the proposals come up for a vote.

any other disciplinary board.

The committee called for a written code of "standards of conduct defined in advance and published through such means as a student handbook."

Members of the present Discipline Board, granted a voice under recent senate legislation, charged the proposal as "preposterous legalism," and claimed it would take volumes to record the cases which are all different.

THE HIGH POINT in the discussion came over the Student Publications Board. The Board would act in an advisory capacity. (Continued on page 5)

PUBLICATION BOARD...

could encourage more careful consideration of the editorial policies of the media. The Board would "make sure that problems of editorial policy (and other important matters) are discussed with at least one member of the Faculty."

After debate and conjecture of the censorship potential of the Board, a member of the Joint Study Committee explained his personal opinion of the central issue.

Student Senate Bob Cripps told the Senate and the media heads that the question was whether the students want a board of any kind or whether they want no board at all.

Cripps finished by admonishing that without a board of any kind, the media and students should prepare for a long, hard fight for freedom from censorship.

CRITIQUE Critiqued

Spring CRITIQUE Proves Helpful

by PETER HENDRICKSON,
Senior Reporter

Critique serves the dual purpose "of providing the students with accurate information about courses and of providing an accurate feed-back to the faculty and administration on the sources of their teaching methods."

The editors of Critique are to be commended on achieving their stated purposes with the publication that will go on sale Monday in time to be used for Wednesday's Counseling Day. For their benefit and the benefit of potential readers—a dual purpose—a critique of Critique is presented in the traditional format.

Marching Band Holds Tryouts

All students interested in joining the all-new 1966 UMass Marching Band should register for Music 181 on Counseling Day, May 4, at 4:40 p.m. Marching Band members receive credit toward graduation plus exemption for freshman and sophomores from phys. ed. during the football season. The marching unit of 150 will perform at all home games and will accompany the team to Dartmouth, Holy Cross, and URI.

Drum Major tryouts will be held tomorrow, Sat. Apr. 30, following the instruction sessions. Tonight, Twirling Tryouts will be held Tues., May 10. Information may be obtained at Old Chapel.

Students seeking additional information about the Marching Band should contact the Band Dept. in Old Chapel on Counseling Day.

LECTURES: The contributing staff writers have taken pains to segregate individual attitudes from the critiques. They have extracted and assimilated the pith of the critiques.

READINGS: The reports are brief and factual. They are grouped in the 48-page, fancy bound magazine in departmental order. The lay-out, though readable and clean, lacks typographical imagination. Recently elected Editor Arthur Cohen promises "vital revision next year with more controversy, more features, detailed and meaningful summaries, cartoons and a magazine-like format".

EXAMS: The editors thoughtfully included a sample questionnaire at the end of the magazine. Cohen said about 50 professors have thus far granted permission for the spring questionnaire. "About 200 were approached but they hardly ever jump to let us in. Some say we come to late in the course. Others say we're too early. I suspect some are afraid." Some faculty members let the students critique even if they don't wish

Hillel Plans Breakfast For Annual Parents' Day

The UMass Chapter of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation is holding its annual Parents' Day Breakfast and Service on Sunday, May 1, at 11 a.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. The breakfast is sponsored by the Springfield, Mass. Lodge of B'nai B'rith, and will have as guest speaker Rabbi Samuel H. Dresner, spiritual leader of Temple Beth El in Springfield.

Rabbi Dresner is a nationally known author and student of American Jewish life.

In addition to the address by Rabbi Dresner, the program will include greetings from Dean Field and the president of the Amherst Jewish Community; remarks by Professor Arthur Elkins, advisor to the organization, and installation of officers for the coming year with greetings from Regina Chase, president.

Also, Professor Sidney Wexler will present the Janet Gass Scholarship Award, and the Samuel Sherher Plaque will be presented to this year's outstanding Hillel member. Rabbi Louis Ruchames of the University will be host.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Letter from Viet Nam

Dear Student Body:

I am a young Marine serving in the Republic of South Vietnam. I've been serving for a little over two months.

During this short time I've been down here at Chu Lai, I've seen people sent out of their homelands, away from their people, their customs, and even their families. Their homes, which are no bigger than a normal-sized living room, must house families of ten sometimes.

Bloodshed! This is not a very nice subject to talk about but it has to be discussed. I've seen my buddies shot down from the ground they stand on. Their bodies mutilated from bullets, grenades, and body traps.

Yes, I am a marine, and proud of it. I am twenty years ago. I am from an old colonial state, yes, the one your college is in, about twenty-five miles from UMass. I'm from an average family and my parents have been happily married for twenty-one years. I am also interested in girls, sports, and music.

Democracy, as we call it, what does it mean? In the dictionary it reads "freedom." But is it so? Would you send your children over here to fight for it? Some of you might have someone special here, and they probably wrote and told you how it really is.

I'm not putting down democracy, but I'm trying to emphasize the point of doing something that has to be done. Think! How does it feel to be at home safe from all this, and to be able to do just about what you please, go anywhere you want, and be with your family and friends?

I have a little over eight months more to spend here. My second Christmas will have been spent over on this side of the world when you come back to begin the spring semester of 1967.

Letters from home are very, very scarce here. Sometimes guys wait two, three, and even four weeks for them. So I am appealing to the student body to write to these Marines I will personally do all I can to build up the morale of my fellow Marines, but I need your help . . . I cannot do it alone.

I would appreciate all the help you can give me.

F.P.O. San Francisco, Calif. 96602

Sincerely yours,

P.F.C. Joseph Bohaker

Senate President John Greenquist received this letter personally and would like all interested students to write. All students know how it feels not to get any mail while away at college; think for a moment how it must feel not getting any while away at war.

Letters To The Editor

The Positive Response

To the Editor:

Response to the petition concerning the abolition of women's curfews was positive because, among other reasons, it entailed merely the signing of a piece of paper. Initiation and circulation of the petition was effected by a small group of hard working students, the University Reform Committee.

We of the female student body who endorsed their efforts should be concerned with the forthcoming decision of the Student Life Committee.

If the administration accepts the petition as the democratic voice of a majority of the female student body and abolishes curfews, we owe a debt of thanks to the URC for their organization of the reform movement. If the demands of a passive student body, articulated by the URC are rejected, it will be the responsibility of the 70% of us who tacitly signed the petition to actively express our dissatisfaction.

If necessary, that will be a real test of the strength of reform endeavors on this campus outside of the URC itself.

He Gave His All

To the Editor:

While in an exam I had a new jacket stolen.

While in the shower I had my physical education uniform stolen.

While in the study lounge I had some cash pilfered from my room.

I am also wondering whether my watch was lost, or stolen. All these things have happened to me during this semester. Is it necessary that I guard my property every second of the day? Must everyone be suspect?

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters MUST be signed with your real name and address— withheld upon request.

All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Letters may also be left in the Collegian office between the hours of 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Free Shots?

To the Editor:

Do you need a physical for a summer job? Are you graduating and getting married? Going to grad school? Be sure to get it free at the infirmary. But if you happen to be one of the unlucky ones who is getting a permanent job and your employer will not provide a physical, forget the infirmary. In this case you are "severing yourself from the University (those going to grad school or graduating and getting married are not of course) and you are expected to go elsewhere to get one. Are second semester seniors so rich that they can afford to pay outside doctors, while students going to Europe — and not necessarily as part of a study program — can get their shots free at the infirmary?

I feel that, still being a University student and forcibly paying my health fee, I am entitled to the same services as my fellow students, and I do not feel that this policy of the infirmary is just.

To The Students:

To the Editor:

Last night in the Student Senate, the report and proposals of the Joint Study Committee of the Student and Faculty Senates were debated. The debate lasted for six hours and was for the most part six of the best, most informative, and most productive hours in the Senate this year.

I would like to briefly discuss these proposals and if possible some of the resulting aspects of their acceptance.

One of the proposals was to put students on various committees of the Faculty Senate, "thus acknowledging that in some areas, student experiences, opinions, and needs should be taken into consideration along with those of the Faculty." If this proposal is adopted, the students will have for the first time an established continuing line of communications with the Faculty Senate.

There was a further proposal for the establishment of an academic Hearing Committee "charged with reviewing the curricula of the various schools, colleges, and departments." Such review "will help both to check stagnation in requirements and approach and to check uncontrolled, ad hoc curricular growth as a response to adding new faculty members."

It was further proposed to open the Faculty Senate Meetings to representatives of the Student Body. The present policy of meetings closed to the students "causes unnecessary suspicion and illwill since the students wonder why none of them should be permitted to attend meetings at which issues which greatly concern them are debated."

The above proposals are not only desirable but necessary. I would urge all students to seek out their Senators and express their support for the aforementioned proposals.

THE NEXT MAJOR AREA of discussion was The Fine Arts Council. While this proposal is not the most desirable to any concerned interest, it is the best for all concerned. This year, Fine Arts was for the most part non-existent. This campus does not want nor should it tolerate a repeat performance. The proposals of the Joint Study Committee, if followed, will make it possible for the University to have the best Fine Arts program it has ever had. This is the objective and it is a good one.

I would like to now turn briefly to the proposals on the Discipline Board. These proposals, vigorously opposed by the members of the Judiciary that were present, are possibly extreme by the standards the University adheres to today. They are, however, proposals to safeguard the basic fundamental rights of the students. They have been too long in coming. The proposal provides a clear line of appeal; the assistance of an advisor; the right of the student to hear and question witnesses; and the codification and publication of all rules and punishments. This I feel is not too much to ask.

The final area of discussion, and the most vigorously debated, centered around the proposal for a Publishing Board. It was fought by the representatives of the Communications media and many Senators. Most of them insisted that the board was the first step along the road to censorship, faculty, and administrative control. I disagree most heartily. The board as it is set up is solely advisory. Its functions cannot be changed without the approval of the Student Senate. It is for the establishment and insurance of a FREE press.

Many Senators and Communications representatives want to either delete much of the board or completely kill it. About the most prevalent view considered on the floor was that if the Board was not accepted something more stringent would be rammed down the throats of the media. This has been a question in the past, is still a question, and probably will remain one in the future. I cannot say what the results of killing the proposed board will be.

However, let me say this: If we are to have a Publications Board, let it be the one proposed. Stop picking away at it. It is the most harmless I have seen.

This proposal is not what should be questioned. If there is any dispute it should not be over this particular board, but over the entire principle of having and Communications Board. This is the issue.

If the Communications media and the Student Senate decide they do not want ANY board, then there is the place to fight. State your case. Support it, each and every one of you. Work together and fight against it. And if and when you fight, put everything into it. Pull no punches. Give it a 100% effort. Get the Senate and the Students behind you.

I now call on the students. It is your duty, to yourselves, to those who follow you, and to the University, to find out what the issues are. Go to your Senator and express your opinions. It is about time that you were heard. This is a fundamental principle of freedom. Don't ignore it.

Students Learn to Teach Here

by ALBERT BELSKY

Three year old Cynthia Stone attends over two hours of classes at UMass four days a week. Her courses include introductory art, natural science, music, and basic math. According to her instructors, she is doing very well.

Child prodigy? A bachelor program in finger painting? No. Cynthia is one of 40 pre-school children enrolled in the UMass Laboratory Nursery School, which is part of the Human Development Area in the School of Home Economics, Skinner Hall.

Mainly children from faculty, student, and Amherst families, the pre-schoolers range from three to four years old. They meet four days a week, three in the morning and four in the afternoon. Each session is 2½ hours long, and each group is limited to 20 children.

A typical day at the nursery school gives the children ample time to play, learn, and discover. The first hour is spent in "free play." Toys, paints, and games are set up, and student teachers run a variety of small activities, displays, or "experiments." The children may choose whatever suits their fancy.

The second hour is for "group activity." According to Miss Ralphaella Banks, Director, the play periods provide a "balance between education and pure fun."

The last half-hour of the session is the snack period. The stories serve not only to entertain the youngsters, but also to give them an appreciation for books.

The last half-hour of the sessions is spent outside in the playground, and by the time it is over, the children have had a full pint-size day of activity.

The pre-schoolers probably do not realize, but their parents do, that their school is part of the UMass human Development Area.

School is just what its name implies, a practical experience in preschool child teaching for co-eds majoring in Child Development.

Mrs. Patty Williams, Nursery School assistant and Child Development major, said that the Child Development major has expanded at a fast rate in the past four years.

In 1962 only 10 girls were in the program. Today over 80 co-eds major in Child Development, and plans are under way to en-

The girls not only work with the youngsters but also plan the daily programs for classes and keep a log of their activities and projects.

Four regular staff members guide and advise the student-teachers until they are capable of running most programs by themselves.

Along with nursery school work, the Child Development majors take courses in preschool teaching methods, philosophy, roll more youngsters and expand the nursery school's facilities next semester.

The Child Development major prepares students to work with pre-school age children in a variety of situations.

"We are affiliated with the Merrill-Palmer Institute in Detroit, which specializes in the school for one school year to 'gain confidence and understanding in working and curriculum planning for children,' Miss Banks said.

and curriculum. Their studies in Human Development provide a strong background for advanced work in education, psychology, child development, social work, and sociology, according to the Information Statement.

So while Child Development is far from an easy major, it is highly rewarding. To quote Barbara Block, a junior and a student-teacher, "It's hard work, and a lot of hours, . . . and . . . I love it!"

His Life Became His Stage

The UMass French Corridors are sponsoring the French film, Senechal the Magnificent on Monday, May 2, at 8 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The story involves an actor, played by Fernandel, who has spent most of his life in secondary parts in small touring companies but discovers one day that he can achieve greater personal success by playing his stage characters in private life.

His impersonations include a king of the underworld, a French Legionnaire, and a Consul General.

The film has been proclaimed "The most diverting Fernandeleacy in quite a while . . . So sophisticated comedy with a raucous script," by the New York Post.

It is a film not to be missed.

Sig Ep Dumps TEP, 13-4

by DAVE JARNES

Sig Ep has really begun to assert itself as a fraternity power by blasting TEP, 13-4, behind the strong hitting of Al Saggese (three hits) and Rich Scagland (three hits). AEP also maintained its unblemished record blanking hapless Kappa Sigma, 13-0. In another whitewash ZN shut out winless SAM, 5-0.

In other fraternity games, LCA murdered TC, 24-7, as Coffin (four hits) and Ferranti (three hits) led the slaughter. P S D topped QTV, 15-9. PMD beat ATG, 13-2. TKE bounced back to topple PSK, 9-1, and BKP rolled over ASP, 9-2.

The Webster Rams combined a tight defense, a balanced 12-hit attack, and the strong pitching of Mike Hamilton to defeat the Hemlocks, 5-1. The Greenough Garfields scored seven runs in the first inning and went on to edge the Bruins, 12-9, and the Barracudas beat the Lemons by the same 12-9 score. Rounding out the dorm action, the Flaming A's defeated the Phallics, 13-8, and the Redwoods used a 23-hit attack to wallop the Aces, 22-1.

Two one-run games highlighted the independent slate. The Chem Club got only three hits and two runs, but Curcio held the Ghosts to one run and only one hit. Guinness scored the winning run for the Landscapers in a wild 12-11 game with the Forestry Club.

In soccer the Trojans shut out the Garfields, 2-0, while the Birch nipped the Chestnuts, 1-0.

Roy Lasky's lusty hitting has helped the Redmen to the YanCon lead.

STUDENT SENATE . . .

ity to help student editors who, "Are left to develop their own notions of freedom and of appropriate standards of responsibility as best they can." The report went on to say, "In the absence of careful attention to the requirements of freedom and responsibility, pernicious doctrines may creep in almost unnoticed. There is evidence that this process has begun here . . . while a large grant of freedom is thus necessary in order to provide proper learning conditions, simple non-interference with the staffs of publications does not guarantee that an opportunity for learning will be well used."

Senator Steve Smith, commutator, condemned the Board as "prepublication censorship." Senator Arnie Kaufman accused the administration, saying, "They're not jumping down our throats, they're sneaking up on us." "I want to know that when I pick up a Collegian, it's not a censored Collegian."

The Collegian, Critique, Yahoo, Index, Spectrum, Caesura and WMUA were violently opposed to the Board. Last year the Collegian fought off an attempt by the administration to have final say in publication.

SEN. DACEY warned that if the Senate doesn't pass this compromise (which is more beneficial than the past one), then "WE don't know if a different one will be rammed down our throats."

Roger Jones, Editor of Yahoo, said, "We just can't swallow it. Our powers of creativity are being abridged by powers on the board or off the board. What is to prevent an abuse by various and different means?"

IT WAS pointed out that student communications controls a lot of money which would come under the jurisdiction of the administration if this board becomes fact.

The Board presumably will include editors from the student communications but they will be outnumbered by administration appointees.

Senator Bob Cripps ended the meeting by advising the Senate to either accept the Board or fight to have a "completely free press?"

Medeiros, Andersen Set Records As Tracksters Fall to Springfield

Despite John Medeiros' 23' plus broad jump and John Andersen's sub 50 second 440, the Track Team bowed to an inspired Springfield team 84-65.

Senior John Medeiros, who has been assaulting the 23 foot mark all season and has often missed out because his take-off was far behind the mark, was not to be denied this time. He leaped 23' 4 1/2" to break a 40 year old school record. Billy Tindall jumped 22'8" and Art Larvey 22'6" for a UMass sweep in that event.

In other field events Bob Delue placed 2nd in the javelin with a 10'8" throw. Billy Tindall and John Lisack placed 2nd and 3rd in the high jump at 6'2" and 6'. Co-Capt. Bob Murray and Dave Lizotte placed 1-2 in the pole vault at 12'6" and 12'. Bob Karagiosian placed 2nd in the hammer with a throw of 156'9". Billy Tindall and John Medeiros placed 1-2 in the triple jump with Billy at 42'7" and John an inch behind. Springfield swept the shot and discus.

In the running events Springfield began to run up the score. Favorite Terry Carpenter took a back seat in the mile run and placed in 4:22. Steve St. Clair was third in 4:26. John Andersen was pressed most of the way in the quarter-mile but finished fast for a 49.9 and a school record. Bill Thoms took 3rd.

Ace sprinter Steve Burrell pulled a muscle in the 100 yd. dash and was lost for the meet. Art Larvey placed 2nd in the hundred with a 10 flat and 2nd in the 220 with a 21.7. Jay Hall was edged out in the 120 yd. high hurdles with a school record tying 15.2. Medeiros was 3rd.

Greg Bowman ran an excellent 1:55 half-mile to win going away. Steve St. Clair ran well after already running the mile to take 3rd in 1:59. Damian Gaffney ran 2nd in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles with his personal best of 57.4. Terry Carpenter was beaten by 2 fresh Springfield runners in the 2-mile, although he ran 9:45.

Frosh Lacrosse Unbeaten

by TOM FITZGERALD

A team that's making considerable noise on campus is Coach Frank Shields' freshman lacrosse squad, which has romped to four wins without a defeat thus far this season.

In recent tilts, the team whipped the Wesleyan Frosh, 5-2, Saturday and buried the Holy Cross Frosh, 9-1, Wednesday. Don Agnoli and Kevin O'Connor paced the Little Redmen against Wesleyan with two tallies each, while Gary Vassar added a goal.

Against Holy Cross, Vassar was high man with three goals, followed by Tom Voison and O'Connor with two apiece. Single scores were registered by Agnoli and Steve Anderson.

Saturday the group will host Sewanhaka High, a lacrosse powerhouse from Long Island.

Frosh Golfers Win Pair

by GARY MULLETT

In their opening match of the season, the UMass freshmen golfers defeated the Amherst frosh, 6-1, Wednesday afternoon at the Orchards Country Club in South Hadley.

Led by big Don Szeredy, the team boasts talent in Eric Leckberg, Gary Mullett, Jim Magee, Eric Mushovic, Ron Rose, Bob Bradley, John Ariansen, Rick Omerso, and Paul Johnson.

The squad's outlook is good, according to Coach Vlack, who says, "There are a couple of real good swingers on the team." Later in the week the Frosh took the measure of Leicester Jr. College. The losers had been undefeated ever since golf was initiated at Leicester three years ago.

Redmen Trounce Rhody, 7 - 0

by CHARLIE BRADSHAW
Sophomore left-hander Dave Katz made his first varsity start an impressive one as he led the Redmen to a 7-0 Yankee Conference victory over Rhode Island Wednesday at Kingston.

KATZ pitched six shut-out innings, walked just one, allowed three hits and struck out six. Carl Boteze mowed down the Rams the final three innings to protect Katz' win.

The Redmen rallied behind the stout pitching to unleash a 12-hit assault on three Rhody hurlers that featured four well-stroked triples. UMass now owns a one-game lead over Maine in the Conference race. The Redmen are 4-0 in the YC and 7-1 overall. Maine is a 2-0 in the Conference. The Black Bears are at Rhode Island for two games this weekend while the Redmen entertain New Hampshire here Saturday at 2 p.m.

Capt. Terry Swanson got the Redmen moving at Rhody by opening the second inning with a line-drive triple over the centerfielder's head. He scored on Roy Lasky's triple to left-center, and John Peacock's single brought in Lasky.

The Redmen drove out the Rams' Ed Deutsch in the third. Frank Stewart clubbed a triple off the left-center field fence and scored on a wild pitch. Jim Babyak then lined a single to center. Swanson slapped a hard grounder back to Deutsch, whose throw to second was too late. Ross Piken advanced the runners with a good sacrifice bunt.

Deutsch got Lasky to pop out but walked Peacock intentionally. Jim Kuczynski ruined the strategy with a line-drive single to left for two runs. Bill Steadman then relieved Deutsch. Katz reached on an infield single to load the bases but Hagan Andersen flied out to deep left to end the inning.

Stewart started the fourth inning with his second triple, this one over the right-fielder's head. He scored on Babyak's single to left.

UMass got its final run in the sixth. Babyak walked, stole second and scored on Piken's single to center.

Katz gave his only walk to Ralph Gizzi in the first inning. He allowed a Texas-League double to left by Ray Rainville with two out in the third, a wrong-field double that hit the chalk line in right field by Bob McKenney in the fifth, and a double to left by Gizzi in the sixth.

Boteze got two quick outs in the seventh and then walked McKenney and Bob Coppolino before getting pinch-hitter Larry Bernstein to bounce back to the mound. Carl struck out the side in the eighth and had an easy ninth.

REDMEN WAR WHOOPS: Babyak raised his average to .379. Swanson dropped to a team-leading .419. Andersen dropped to .333 but Stewart moved up to .323. As a team the Redmen are out-hitting the opposition .283 to .191. Katz, Bill Smith and soph John Canty have earned run averages of 0.00. Boteze is 1.49 and the team is 1.92. Smith will pitch Saturday's YC game against New Hampshire with Katz in reserve. Boteze will be ready for the Connecticut game Tuesday at Storrs.

In 35 total at-bats Babyak has been on base 20 times for a .571 percentage. Swanson is right behind at .529 with 18 times on in 34 total at-bats. Kuczynski hit the two longest drives at Rhody. Both were foul but cleared the left field fence with plenty to spare. The first was a towering drive that just went foul—by six inches according to the home plate umpire.

Student Life Report Approves Self-Curfews

The Administrative Committee on Student Life released its report on the recommendations it received from the Women's Affairs Committee, at a press conference Friday afternoon.

In the report submitted to the Dean of Men's Office, the Committee headed by Dr. Mark Noffsinger recommended the abolition of curfews and sign-out sheets for all university co-eds, and the establishment of one open house per month.

Dean Field, after studying the recommendations expressed his satisfaction with the report. "I am impressed with the report and in sympathy with its goals. My decision will be made with no unnecessary delay."

The following is the text of the Student Life Committee's recommendations:

These are the unanimous recommendations of the Committee, made in recognition of the educational value to students of their assuming the greatest possible responsibility for their total development.

1. We recommend that curfews at the University of Massachusetts should be those which a student imposes upon himself; we believe, however, that the University has the responsibility for providing its residents with security of person and property. Therefore, we recommend that doors of residences be locked at a specific hour each night and opened at a specific hour each morning; and that there be a person awake and on duty within each residence throughout the period the residence is locked.

2. We recommend that when a student leaves a residence, registering his destination and expected time of return shall be at the option of the student; we believe, however, that the University should make provision for such voluntary registration.

3. We recommend that there be no parietal hours at the University of Massachusetts. Any residence, however, may schedule an open house by a majority vote of all the residents each time an open house is proposed. When a residence votes to schedule an open house, it must be registered as a social event. Open house shall be limited to one per month on a weekend or holiday afternoon or evening.

4. We recommend that calling hours for the opposite sex in the designated public areas of each residence be determined by majority vote of its residents within the limits of the time the residence is open. This regulation applies only to daily calls and not to social functions. Hours for the latter must be registered with the Calendar Office.

5. We recommend that a resident may have an overnight guest of the same sex. The resident shall give to the floor counselor the written permission of the resident whose bed is to be used. The host or hostess will be in residence during the guest's stay. The host or hostess is responsible for the guest.

6. We recommend that each house government establish its own quiet hours, typing and music hours, and that it take responsibility for the standards which will govern the use and care of the kitchenette, in accordance with standards of the University Office of Environmental Health and Safety. We believe, however, that the University has the responsibility to clarify regulations governing the environmental health and safety of residences.

7. We recommend that no inspection of student rooms be initiated except under circumstances involving issues of University property, or environmental health and safety.

8. We recommend that each residence have a democratically elected house government to include provision for an executive, legislative, and with judicial function. We further recommend that the roles of the Head of Residence and student counselors in respect to house government be advisory.

9. We recommend that if and when any of the recommendations of this Committee are adopted by the University, that the University send a letter to the parents of all students stating the regulations, as adopted, in detail, and that it be signed by the appropriate University official.

10. We recommend that 5 students with full voting privileges be added to the Committee previously known as the Administrative Committee on Student Life, 1966.

11. A full and final implementation report covering these recommendations will be forwarded to the office of the Dean of Students as soon as it can be completed.

Members of the committee include: William W. Barnard, Assistant Dean of Men; James J. Burke, Assistant to the Dean of Men; Helen Curtis, Dean of Women; Isabelle Gonon, Assistant Dean of Women; and Mark G. Noffsinger, Coordinator of Student Activities.

Reform Panel Views Dorm Government

"Student government in dormitories" was the topic of a panel discussion sponsored by the University Reform Committee Saturday, April 30, in Bartlett Auditorium.

MEMBERS of the panel moderated by Peter Hendrickson included Tim Cunningham, Senate vice-president; Louis Greenbaum, Asst. professor, History; Mrs. Mary Hudzikewicz, University program advisor; James Burke, Asst. to the Dean of Men; and Prof. Varley Leland, Master, Orchard Complex.

Cunningham led off the discussion with recommendations for self-determination of policy by students. He stated that house mothers and counselors should be social and academic counselors, appointed by the guidance office rather than through the deans.

JAMES BURKE agreed with this point, and added that the confusion of house mothers roles is the result of lack of clearly defined duties.

Louis Greenbaum compared the American and European student. He feels the European student has more of an awareness of the cardinal process of learning.

"IF I HAD my way I would tear down the barriers between the classroom and the dormitory."

Mrs. Hudzikewicz outlined four types of student dormitories:

- Those which supply only room and board
- Those using the house mother system
- The residential college
- Living and learning system, which allows the students to determine their own framework for living

She also discussed the Senate bill S-24 and S-25 which would

Spring Banquet

BGS Holding Initiation

Beta Gamma Sigma will hold its annual Spring Initiation Banquet Monday, May 2. The national honorary fraternity for students and teachers of business administration, it has chapters only at those colleges whose programs have been accredited by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business.

THE PURPOSE of the society is to encourage and reward scholarship and accomplishment among students of business administration and to foster integrity in business conduct.

The initiation ceremony will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge for members and initiates only. At 5:15 p.m. all are invited to attend a reception for the newly inducted members. A banquet will follow at 6 p.m.

The evening will conclude with a panel discussion concerning the future of various fields in business, moderated by Dean Kirshen of the School of Business. Panel members will include Dr. Dennler of the Accounting Dept.; Dr. Claunch, Management; Dr. Ludtke, General Business and Finance; and Dr. Wolf representing the Marketing Department.

THE INITIATES INCLUDE Michael Berson, Donald Fisher,

Counseling Day

Wednesday, May 4, 1966 has been set aside as Counseling Day. No holiday, this day is designed to allow adviser and student adequate time for consultation and pre-registration for the next semester.

Thought and care on this date promote an effortless and speedy registration in the fall.

Many schools and departments are making special arrangements. Students are advised to check departmental bulletin boards for particulars prior to that date.

WEEK IN REVIEW

by PAM METAXAS, News Staff

THE NATION

AT A SITE near Hanoi, U. S. Air Force Phantom Pilots downed another MIG last weekend. According to informed sources, the MIG was the 11th shot down in heavy air fighting since last spring.

It has also been announced that American fighting forces in Vietnam now number close to 255,000. One group of these troops, the U.S. 1st Infantry Division, was involved in a Guerrilla Cong attack from neutralist Cambodia.

The division lashed back with machine gun fire across the Rach Beng Go River but did not cross to avoid an international incident.

IN THE UPCOMING Alabama primaries, negroes have been encouraged by Dr. Martin Luther King to vote as a block for negro candidates and for Richmond Flowers for governor over Mrs. George Wallace.

Mrs. Wallace is running because her husband's term has ended. It is expected that if she wins, she will be following the policies of her husband, a firm segregationist.

AFTER FOUR YEARS of waiting and discussions, the New York Central and the Pennsylvania Railroad have merged to form the Pennsylvania New York Central Transportation Co.

The merger makes the railroad the largest in the country with 19,000 miles of track and assets totaling $4-billion.

IN A MEETING at Elysee Palace last week U Thant, Sec. Gen. of the U. N. and Pres. de Gaulle of France agreed that there is no chance for peace moves to end the Vietnam war at this time.

This agreement reflected a pessimism on the part of the two men who have offered themselves as mediators in the Southeast Asian conflict in the past.

THE STATE

AT A 2,500 MIT student beach party in Ipswich, near Crane Beach, the 28 security guards brought by the students themselves didn't have to contend with any incidents.

The Ipswich police later said they had nothing but praise for the students and their behavior at the huge day and night affair.

THE CAMPUS

THE UNIVERSITY announced that the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity has granted $112,918 to the University to aid 100 students from 4 western counties. Another $119,078 has been granted to UM-Boston to aid 100 students from that area.

THE UNIVERSITY was granted federal anti-poverty funds to aid 200 disadvantaged high school students who would be unable to attend college without assistance.

THE YAHOO STAFF has drafted a new constitution placing final authority and responsibility for printed matter in an editorial board comprised solely of staff members.

A CUT in the UMass budget submitted to the State Legislature by Gov. Volpe may result in a drop in the number of students admitted to the University this Fall.

THE FACULTY SENATE, in an effort to promote increased student-faculty relations admitted student leaders from the Student Senate and student publications to the meeting held last Thursday.

THE CAMPUS-WIDE search for a Miss University continues. And so far, the quality of contestants will make judging difficult but enjoyable.

REFORM PANEL . . .

allow all dormitories the option of registering as RSO organizations, and setting up governments within each dormitory.

PROF. LELAND stated that each dormitory should be able to join the student government, but at their own volition.

One of the counselors attending the meeting stated that it was unfortunate that counselors have to enforce rules made outside the dormitory.

JOIN THE "GRETSCH SET" For the Authentic Sound of the Times

The Gretsch Folk Guitar is the hands-down favorite on campus and at folk festivals. For Gretsch gives you the rich, resonant bass and the clear singing highs that only come from the work of skilled guitar makers.

At Gretsch we work with aged woods carefully chosen for mellow resonance. Seasoned rosewood is used for fingerboards, molded to specially contoured Action-flo necks to make fingering fast and easy.

Sunday Morning False Alarm Wakens Arnold Girls

by PAT PETOW
Staff Reporter

Dozens of Arnold girls later recalled how they turned off their alarm clocks early Sunday morning. However, as they soon discovered, it was not their clocks but the dormitory fire alarm system which had rudely awakened them at about 2:45. Realizing that she was listening to the fire warning, housemother Mrs. Georgie Bostder said she immediately telephoned the Amherst Fire Department, which responded minutes later. (A call is a necessary second step since the system is not connected to the Fire Department, the housemother added.)

No fire was found by the firemen.

RESIDENTS made "a very orderly exit," according to Mrs. Bostder, who praised the counselors for "a marvellous job in getting the girls out. After standing out in the light rain for close to a half hour, the girls were invited to shelter in Hamlin House next door. But, just at that moment, the firemen permitted Arnold to be reoccupied.

Although the girls found their way outside easily, at least one girl, remaining in bed, slept through it all. Her counselor had gone home and the corridor had to rouse itself. The buzzer-noise which seemed unbearable to those awake was less responsible for getting girls up and out than the counselors and roommates. (This reporter had to be awakened.)

DORMITORY - FIRE-CHIEF, counselor Mary Ann O'Connor reported that she called a second floor fire alarm box to attention of firemen. It appeared to her that the glass had been tampered with, not broken nor shattered, setting off the alarm.

Describing the call as "unnecessary" rather than a fire alarm, Amherst Fire Chief Doherty said Sunday afternoon that his investigators had not yet pinpointed the cause of the alarm. Miss O'Connor told the Collegian that when she inspected the dorm about seven a.m. Sunday, she found a third floor fire warning box broken, with glass shattered on the floor.

CHIEF DOHERTY concluded that this box was smashed after the early morning alarm went off since his men had found all the boxes, "break stations," intact in their original investigation.

While the firemen had searched for signs of fire, Miss O'Connor and campus police, she reported, turned the steam room emergency switch off, ending the persistent buzzing. She surmised that turning the system off prevented an alarm from being sounded when the third floor box was broken, if that did take place afterwards.

When she found the system still off at seven, Miss O'Connor explained that she called the fire department who helped her turn it on and replace the broken glass.

THREE GIRLS on the second floor, in rooms near each other said that just previous to the alarm they heard a girl outside their rooms say to another, "I'll meet you outside in ten minutes." Connecting the two events afterwards, the girls suggested that the alarm was tripped. But Chief Doherty indicated that if he thought that the probable cause was that of being a false alarm, he would turn the case over to University Fire and Safety Officer, Edmund Goetzl. He had no plans of this nature Sunday afternoon.

MRS. BOSTDER expressed a fear that, besides the unnecessary inconvenience which was experienced, a result of the unexplained alarm might be an apathetic reaction to another alarm.

WMUA Airs Lectures

In a continuing effort to be truly attuned to the need for an informative and educational programming policy, WMUA presents throughout the week a wide variety of provocative and interesting programs.

ON MONDAY, May 2, at 9:30 p.m., Omnibus 216 will feature the distinguished and timely CBC Massey Lectures, whose focus this week will be "The Real World of Democracy." This lecture, by Dr. C.B. Macpherson, deals with the Communist variant as the second non-liberal democracy.

Tuesday, in the second installment of Omnibus 216 at 9:30, the BBC Playhouse's fine production of "Find Another Mug," by Dennis Spooner, will be offered.

COUNSELING DAY, usually a time of both anxiety and frustration, will be one of relaxation for WMUA listeners when the station will program music of the "easy-listening" variety from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and, on the A Go-Go Show which follows immediately, the best of the pop music genre will be featured.

Later in the evening, the world of campus affairs will be spotlighted as WMUA gives full coverage to the Student Senate Meeting and the issues which face our representatives.

THE THURSDAY segment of Omnibus 216 shifts the perspective from campus news to international affairs when this noteworthy program, which is currently presenting a series of lectures on the "Peaceful Uses of Space," features a stimulating discussion of the "Manned Space Flight: Programs, Progress, Prospects," by Dr. George E. Mueller of the NASA.

Sunday, at 7:30 p.m., WMUA presents its Special 30th Anniversary Tribute to Rudolph Serkin, the famed Bohemian-born pianist whose sensitive musical interpretations have won him acclaim as a leading chamber-music player.

Univ. Theatre Planning 'Arena' Production

Under the direction of Harry B. Mahnken, Arthur Miller's A View from the Bridge will be presented by the University Theatre.

Taking place in the Student Union Ballroom, the production is set up in arena style, allowing the audience to surround the stage on three sides.

The play revolves around Eddie Carbone, a longshoreman, his wife Beatrice, and his teenage niece Catherine whom he believes he has come to love as a daughter.

The play, told as a lawyer's recollection, involves two illegal immigrants from Italy, one of whom falls in love with Catherine.

Violently against her marriage, Eddie believes his opposition is motivated by his dislike for the boy and the suspicion that he is homosexual. In reality, however, it is due to his own too-intense love for his niece.

Miller seems to have an intimate knowledge of people, their living habits, their principles, and their ideas which he vividly expresses in this tragedy.

A View From the Bridge originally opened as a one-act play at the Coronet Theatre in New York in 1955. After receiving poor reviews, it was quickly expanded to a full length play, enjoying many long runs.

According to Miller, he wrote the play as one act originally because he simply did not know how to pull the curtain down before the end. Apparently, in the revision, he found a place.

Miller was born in New York in 1915, attended the University of Michigan, and worked for the WPA Federal Theatre gathering material for a war film. He is the author of a novel, several short stories, and many plays, five of which have appeared on Broadway.

Mahnken, the University Theatre director, received his B.A. at Geneva College, M.F.A., at Carnegie Institute of Technology, and his Ph.D., in progress, at Michigan State University.

According to Brooks Atkinson, New York drama critic, "Its (View) very bareness, its absolutely unanswering path, its exposed skeleton . . . was its wisdom and even its charm . . ."

The University Theatre production will take place on May 5, 6, 7, and 8th. The tickets, $1.50, $1.00 for students, are on sale in the Student Union Ticket Office.

Twirlers Tryout

The University Marching Band will hold twirling tryouts Tuesday, May 10th, at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom for the 1966 football season.

THE MAIN EMPHASIS will be on smooth, fast twirling and good showmanship. Applicants should be prepared to present a comprehensive two- to three-minute routine with both single and double batons.

In addition, each applicant will be asked to present a routine lasting the length of a standard march.

THE JUDGING COMMITTEE will recommend a feature twirler and an alternate to the Conductor of Bands.

Women in any class who are interested in these positions should obtain an application form and a general information sheet at the Bands Office, Old Chapel, by Monday, May 9th, at 5 p.m.

God Makes The News Weeklies

Editor's Note: The following editorial is reprinted from The Nation, April 18, 1966.

In flaming red type against a black background Time (April 8) asks on the cover: "Is God Dead?" It is the first cover in Time's history to use no illustration.

In Look (April 19) the noted theologian, John C. Bennett, writes "In Defense of God," and is featured on the cover. Newsweek (April 11) also discusses God's demise, just ahead of the obituaries of six mortals.

Although it has obtained so much precious space in the most topical of publications, the "Death of God" controversy is not nearly as widespread as it is made out to be.

Time points out that according to a Harris poll last year, 97 per cent of the American people say they believe in God. They attach different meanings to the word, but the proportion of avowed atheists is small.

It was to be expected that the concept of God, whether naive or sophisticated, would be transformed in the kind of age we live in.

To illustrate, Time reproduces Raphael's concept of God, which show an elderly bearded gentleman in a black robe flying over an earth which by the scale of the trees in the picture, seems to be about a mile in diameter.

This representation of God could scarcely be expected to survive the Sputniks, or, for that matter, the airplane. Centuries earlier, in fact, philosophers like Spinoza had abandoned the Judaic God, who was represented as really nothing but an old man sitting barefoot on a throne up in the sky.

Gabriel Vahanian's The Death of God grew out of an article that appeared in The Nation (Dec. 12, 1959), but we prefer to leave the theological aspects to the theologians. What interests us in the mass media's fascination with the subject, transitory as that may prove to be.

We suspect that the "Death of God," in addition to its attractions as somewhat sensational journalistic subject matter, has the tactical merit of diverting public attention from the genuine ferment going on in the churches on such issues as community organizations, ghettos, slums, civil rights and, above all, peace and the war in Vietnam.

What this activity seems to indicate is that many ministers, and the young ones especially, feel that the Church should be increasingly concerned with the patent evils and horrors of the world about us.

To many ecclesiastics this is a most unwelcome development. Harvey Cox, in "The New Christian Soldiers" (The Nation, October 11, 1965), quotes Bishop Thomas J. Toolen of Birmingham and Mobile, who told the priests and nuns who were marching in Selma to go home and tend to "God's business."

They refused; they felt they were attending to His business right there in Selma. It is this attitude — from The Nation's viewpoint wholly admirable — that might well be discussed at Easter, and throughout the year.

Among people like these priests and nuns, God is not dead. They are proving it not by talking about Him but by expressing in action what is in their hearts. And has God ever been anywhere else?

Critique Hits Campus

The third edition of Critique is being sold today and will be on sale Tuesday and Wednesday in preparation for Counseling Day, May 4.

It evaluates 67 courses, the bulk of which are from the School of Arts and Sciences with a heavy concentration in the department of History.

However, this magazine should be of help to everybody no matter what their major. The History courses critiqued range from the basic course, History 100, to nine upper level courses.

The upper level courses include History 202 (Early Middle Ages 200-1100) with Professor Ware, and History of Modern Germany with Professor Gordon.

In the Psychology Department, which is not treated so extensively as the History Department, five courses are evaluated, the beginning lab course, Psych. 106 and four major's courses.

Although the other departments are not treated as thoroughly as these there is an adequate sampling from most of the departments.

In the School of Business Administration seven courses are done which include four Accounting courses, two General Business courses and a Statistics course. Four education courses from the School of Education are also included in this issue.

Critique will also give away copies of its last edition—for as long as they last—to everyone who buys a copy of this semester's Critique.

Festival to Commemorate Israeli Independence

The Student Zionist Organization and Hillel are celebrating the 18th anniversary of Israel with an ISRAELI FESTIVAL, May 5, 6, 7, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, 9:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.

There will be an art, photography, and film display in the Student Union corridor and cloakroom.

May 6 after Friday evening services, 8:00 in the Commonwealth Room, there will be an open coffee hour.

Saturday night 8:00 in Farley Lodge the festival will conclude with a CAFE SHALOM. For 25¢ the public is invited to drink l'chaim (with grape juice) and indulge in Israeli-Middle Eastern foods and entertainment.

DVP Offers Martin; To Speak on Africa

On Wednesday, May 4, Dr. William H. Martin, former Dean of Faculty at Hampton Institute in Virginia, will be speaking at Bartlett Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on some of the problems confronting Africa today. Dr. Martin was appointed Education Adviser in the Department of State's Bureau of African Affairs and has worked in the Agency for International Development in planning, programming, coordinating and directing U.S. Education programs in Africa.

In 1960, with the President of Hampton, Jerome Holland, Dr. Martin conducted a survey of the need for rural training in Sierra Leone. The study was made under the auspices of the International Cooperative Administration, and, following the survey, awarded a contract from AID to develop a rural training school which was started in October of 1962 in Kenema, a town in Southwestern Province of Sierra Leone.

"...And There Was Light"

by JACQUELYN HALL,
Chairman, Women's Affairs Committee

The stand which the Administration has taken on residence regulations is admirable, but more than that it is enlightened. The channels of communication between students and the administration are now open. However, students shouldn't regard this as victory, but rather as the result of concentrated effort of the total university community for the betterment of UMass. The recommendations of the Student Life 1966 Committee have been reached only through much deliberation by administrators, Women's and Men's Affairs Committees, faculty, the Student Senate, and interested students.

Change is not to be feared, nor is it to be regarded as a battleground. It is the means through which a community adapts, in a responsible way, to modern society. Because the channels of student-administrative communication have been closed for so long and because this University has, in general, tentatively clung to the status quo, these changes may seem major, or even radical. However, in any situation where constant improvements and adaptations have not been made, any change seems great, because it must correct a backlog of out-moded regulations.

How the new regulations will be interpreted by other schools and universities will depend upon the manner in which University students respond to them. By eliminating required curfews, student responsibility is not decreased but vastly increased. UMass is not an extension of high school, nor is it an island, isolated from society.

The proposals from the Women's Affairs Committee and the recommendations of the Student Life Committee have been made on the assumption that University students are mature and responsible enough to establish their own standards and values, socially as well as academically. The student body must uphold this assumption as the University moves forward, dependent upon student and administrative cooperation.

On behalf of the Women's Affairs Committee, I would like to thank Residence Hall House Councils, the University Reform Committee, Women's Judiciary and Dr. Mark G. Noffsinger, Chairman of Student Life 1966, for their invaluable assistance. I can only hope that the final decision is as enlightened as the recommendations of the Committee on Student Life 1966.

Marsh Gas or Martians?

by GREGORY P. STRATTNER, Editorial Staff

Rising up slowly from behind two tall pines was a brilliant, roundish object. It made no sound. It moved toward them like a leaf fluttering from a tree wobbling and yawing as it did so. The entire area was bathed in brilliant red light...

John G. Fuller, a columnist for Saturday Review, so described the eerie encounter of a New Hampshire State Trooper and an ex-Air Force serviceman with an Unidentified Flying Object in Exeter, N.H. on the evening of Sept. 3, 1965. Their encounter was only one of hundreds later reported.

For more than 16 years reports of UFO's sighted from Maine to New Mexico have been registered with state and local police officials, Army, Navy, and Air Force Authorities, and numerous offices of the FBI. Authorities have understandably taken these reports with a grain of salt, but have they taken the whole shaker too?

The Air Force, which is officially responsible for running down and checking out every UFO report in the country, has compiled an amazing list of freak causes over the past two decades. They include among others: "soap suds wafted to the winds, a kite on a 1,200 - ft. string, and a stray weather balloon during a solar eclipse." When the answer is not to be found in obvious physical circumstances, it is attributed to such fleeting phenomena as hallucinations, temperature inversions, or marsh gas...

Air Force officials would apparently have people believe that Oklahoma State Police have chased "marsh gas" for 18 miles at speeds in excess of 110 m.p.h., that witnesses in New Mexico heard "temperature inversions" emit high-frequency humming noises, and that half the population of New Hampshire has access to train loads of LSD.

Superficial, ad-libbed explanations by the Air Force of phenomena which refuse to be explained in conventional terms are even less credible than the glib assumption that every UFO report received is true. Furthermore, out of the realms of testimony of thousands of witnesses who claim to have seen UFO's, there has emerged a remarkably consistent set of facts peculiar to the UFO phenomenon:

***Verifiable pictures have been taken of UFO's.

***Similarities of descriptions have been amazingly consistent.

***They have been reported by military personnel off the record, as well as police.

***At low altitude the UFO is reported to consist of yawing, kitelike motion, wobbling back and forth, changing direction on a dime.

***They can hover motionless for many minutes, then take off at incredible speeds and disappear in a matter of seconds.

***They cause violent reactions in dogs, cattle, and other animals.

***They are constantly reported in areas of highpower transmission lines.

***They disrupt lights, radios, TV, and car ignitions when they are within close range.

***They have shown no evidence of creating physical harm.

There is no substitute for a straight forward explanation. It may very well be that the Air Force, along with the rest of the World, will someday have to concede the existence of UFO's. The American people deserve to be honestly informed on any issues which may lead to such a concession.

Don't Fade Now!

To the editor:

The implications of the recommendations for women's regs distributed Friday by the Committee on Student Life are tremendous, both in terms of the technical aspects involved and what they say regarding student-administration relations.

First, the student body, working responsibly and through channels, has shown that it can make its desires known, and undertake measures intended to bring about desired changes. Jacky Hall and the Women's Affairs Committee, the Student Senate, Wren Farren and Jane Roland, and all the girls who worked on the petition (not to mention the girls who signed it), the Student Party and the University Reform Committee, all showed that a aroused student interest can be an extremely powerful element on campus. The Student Life Committee in its remarkable response showed that the administration can be very responsive to the student body, when it is shown how students feel.

The recommendations, if passed by Dean Field, as they definitely should be, go much farther than eliminating curfews. They outline a whole new system of dorm government, in which the individual dorms can be almost wholly autonomous and self-governing bodies, democratically run by their student residents.

It also raises hopes that the housemothers and counselors can be relieved of their more odious duties and responsibilities, and be placed in a much more satisfactory advisory capacity. There are so many things involved in that set of recommendations (of which not the least is the recommendation that 5 students be placed as full members of the Student Life Committee) that it would take many pages to discuss them all.

However, what is most important now is that Dean Field accept these recommendations, and do so as soon as possible, making his decision known early this week, so that the work of implementation may proceed apace.

Peter Goodman '66

University Reform Committee

"Thus it would be the greatest mistake to estimate the value of each member of a faculty by the printed work signed with his name. There is at the present day some tendency to fall into this error... The faculty should be a band of scholars, stimulating each other, and freely determining their various activities... The whole point of a university... is to bring the young under the intellectual influence of a board of imaginative scholars."

Alfred Whitehead

Poor Scheduling?

To the Editor:

The schedule has just come out for next year and it is almost the same as this year's. Can't something be done about spring vacation? We can't apply for summer jobs that early in the year and there is no other time to do it.

Janis Greenberg '69

Reform Committee Tackles Dorm Government

To the Editor:

Last Saturday the University Reform Committee sponsored a conference on dormitory government. The formal symposium held in the morning was broadcast by WMUA. But more fruitful than the symposium, in my opinion, was the informal workshop held in the afternoon. This workshop provided an opportunity for a full and frank discussion between students and Heads of Residence.

The Heads of Residence who were present (from Arnold, Mary Lyon, Brooks, Eugene Field, and Van Meter North) were very interesting women to talk to. While realizing that some Heads of Residence, in both men's and women's dorms, are not properly doing their jobs, these ladies felt that since they were not guilty of the various abuses of power which have been cited, they objected to being included in the stereotype.

All felt that perhaps better channels should exist for students to transmit their gripes to the Deans' offices.

A number of interesting facts also came out:

1. A Head of Residence in a women's dorm does not have the kind of arbitrary powers exercised by Heads of Residence in men's dorms. They cannot oust a girl from the dorm or fire a counselor. While their House Councils are not elected, the major decisions are made by the Council in fact as well as in theory. The women's Heads of Residence present were amazed at arbitrary action by men's Heads of Residence. One commented that she would resign if she were given such powers.

2. The Dean of Women's office has much higher standards in choosing Heads of Residence than the Dean of Men's office. Actual cases exist where women were rejected by the Dean of Women's office as unfit to be housemothers and were hired by the Dean of Men.

In men's dorms, housemothers have been known to arbitrarily expel people from the dorm, dictate to the House Council on social and disciplinary matters, come upstairs when men were indecent, fire elections for House Council, and fire counselors summarily. One housemother this year purchased a stereo with funds taken from house dues and funds collected by the counselors from the residents! Another is quoted as saying to a student, "This is my dorm, not yours!"

This conclusion is inescapable: The much-maligned women's rules are, in some areas, more liberal and democratic than those of the men. The Dean of Women deserves credit where credit is due.

It is significant that very few men's Heads of Residence saw fit to attend the program Saturday morning, and not a single one attended the workshop in the afternoon!

Now that the women's battle has been won, it is time for the men to begin. There are people in the Dean of Men's office who are willing to work with students to achieve changes. The women have proven that students' grievances are listened to and acted upon. An intolerable condition exists in many men's dorms on campus. The time has come to do something about it.

Religion In Classroom:

The Queen As Fellow Citizen

Editor's Note: This is the third and last in a series of guest editorials.

by PAUL SANDERS of the English Faculty

We already give credit for courses in religion taken through the Four College program. Why not admit into the parlor what is allowed on the side porch? I propose a Department of Religious Studies as an integral part of the University of Massachusetts. By far the largest number of state universities that teach religion follow this, the third pattern described in this series.

III. DEPARTMENT OF RELIGIOUS STUDIES

Sometimes a joint department of philosophy and religion, sometimes religion alone, such a department is organized within the Liberal Arts College (and Graduate School, on occasion) exactly as any other. Faculty persons chosen for their demonstrated competence in their respective areas are selected by their colleagues. The chairman has the same relation to the Dean and university president as any other. The curriculum is devised by the department and approved by the College faculty just as others are. Course offerings are listed in the catalog in the same way as all others.

Among universities with such departments are Florida, Georgia, Miami of Ohio, Michigan State, North Carolina, University of Oklahoma, Oregon State, University of Oregon, Douglass College of Rutgers, University of Virginia, and Western Michigan.

Is a course in religion better taught by an adherent of the faith? There are arguments both ways. The outsider may be thought more objective; the devotee will know the subject from the inside. A university cannot properly apply a religious test to prospective faculty members. A public university is prohibited from doing so.

One of the best departments is at Michigan State. Among the faculty, some of whom are on dual appointment with other departments, some full time in religious studies, are a Jewish rabbi and a Jesuit priest. There is no major, but religion may be chosen as one of three fields for a distributed major in social science. There are many related courses not brought under the Department itself: e.g., philosophy of religion, church music, English Bible as literature. The last report available to me shows 24 courses, with 1541 students enrolled, a ratio of one in thirteen students enrolled, a ratio of one in thirteen students eligible.

There is the expected course in world religions. (It is frequently thought possible to teach religions so long as they are not ones that anyone in our culture is likely to profess!) There is an important "Methods of Inquiry" course for beginners. There are also such courses as "The Life of Christ," "Jewish Institutions and Movements," "Eastern Orthodox Christianity," "The Protestant Reformation," and "Formation of the Creeds."

Perhaps the other best known Department of Religious Studies is at the University of North Carolina. A regular department within the Division of the Humanities, it enjoys the same standing as any other in the university. The latest figures I have show 22 courses in which are enrolled 935 students; that was one of every 7.5 eligible. Among the courses are "Christian Interpretations of History," "Relations between Science and Religion," and "Biblical Archaeology."

WHAT HERE?

We should have such a department. Not, obviously, because we have confused our role with that of organized religion, but because of our understanding of what a university is.

We cannot do everything and do it well. By multiplying programs, we run the risk that nothing is done as well as could be. We must not, however, use that fact as an excuse for not exploring all the time what further we can do, if not superlatively, at least acceptably, well.

Religion, I have tried to say, because it is so generally pertinent, has a claim, with some other fields of inquiry, to top priority. To ignore religion is to ensure that the whole process is lopsided. We can, I expect, forego the minor Slavic languages, for instance, or the history of the cinema, and still be a good university. Not to consider religious values and their influence within human culture is to weaken altogether our claim to be a university.

It is sometimes said that we already teach about religion in philosophy, in literature, in sociology, etc. And is it not the nature of religion to permeate all else, and so why is not this the best way to teach religion? It would be easy, however, to show that history as a discipline can be divided out among a dozen other departments. Certainly there are important relations between various disciplines and they should be studied more carefully, not less.

A separate faculty of religion allows for the study of religion by persons trained in the discipline, using methods appropriate to the matter, with the same freedom allowed all other studies. Interdisciplinary work would gain when the historian, the philosopher, or the psychologist meets on common ground a professor of religious studies who maintains the highest standards himself and invites the challenge and interest of his colleagues in his own special field.

The study of religion is carried on most ably when done most deliberately; when it takes place shoulder to shoulder, on the same footing, with all other recognized fields of inquiry; when its administration is like that of all other departments, the university having final responsibility for personnel, standards, course offerings, and credits.

The claim of theology to be Queen of the Sciences was undoubtedly born of imperialistic pride. But if the lady has not abdicated with much grace, she at least knows about the revolution. In retaliation she can, of course, be denied membership in the Republic of Letters; but I'm afraid that she cannot be expected to stay outside the pale. And if there is no queen now in Academe, there are nevertheless pretenders to the throne. The presence of a deposed sovereign doing her citizenly duties clothed in sackcloth might be a wholesome influence upon us all!

No, No, Nanette—

“...a must in musical comedy!”

By WENDY WAX

No, No, Nanette, a must for all who enjoy musical comedy, combines serious acting with obvious humor and effective stage settings.

These elements combine in a three-act production to capture the fun-loving spirit of the 1920's. Some of the humor, however, is not appreciated by the audience as it is quite outdated.

Act I begins with a lively dance number by the flappers and bachelors who prove that they can sing and dance! Pauline, the maid of the Smith family (played by Karen Connolly), delivers her lines with ease and adds humor by her facial expressions and comic gestures as well.

Billy and Lucille Early (played by John Bulson and Carol Gordon) are perhaps the strongest characters in the production. John Bulson, who assumed the role of Billy Early on one week's notice, does a remarkable job with the part. Carol Gordon, likewise, displays her singing talent and extremely subtle humor, which comes across effectively in places where the script might otherwise be lacking.

Nanette (played by Laurel Demers) and her fiancé, Tom Trainor (John Gilbert) appear in two musical numbers. Their stilted, unnatural movements are counteracted by their fine voices which combine in the love song, I'll Be Waiting For You.

Act III takes place in Atlantic City. Perhaps the most impressive part of the entire act is the opening scene. The audience views a human pyramid (composed of flappers and bachelors). Phyllis Lieberman maintains her inanimate position on top of a pyramid, displaying amazing muscular control, for approximately four minutes. (This alone makes the play worth seeing!!!)

Included in Act III are a variety of musical numbers including I Want To Be Happy which gives Jimmy Smith (Richard Eber) an opportunity to display his acting skill. He is now forced to explain his feelings for each of the three young ladies with whom he has been having three simultaneous "secret" affairs.

Betty, Winnie, and Flora (played respectively by Linda Lu Cotney, Pamela Perlick and Margaret Franson) Jimmy's secret paramours, are well suited for the characters they portray. Margaret Franson, especially, as "Flora from Frisco" delivers her lines very naturally and with a sophisticated air enhanced by her "bored with it all" facial gestures.

Act III moves more rapidly than the previous two acts, but is neither as humorous as Act II, nor as thought-provoking as Act I. Two musical numbers (Pauline, Jimmy and Billy) are the most outstanding parts of the act.

Credit here is due to the clever choreography of Charlotte Werlin, stage direction of Margaret Booth and musical direction of Paul Bartsch.

Livestock Classic Shown

Grinnell Arena was the scene of this year's Bay State Livestock Classic on Friday, April 29, and Saturday, April 30. This year's show was a combination of the former Bay State Dairy Classic and the Little International Livestock Show, two annual events that were first held thirty-one years ago.

The participants in the Classic were thirty-five Stockbridge students, most of whom are animal science majors.

The beef and dairy cattle, horses, sheep, and swine shown are owned by the University. These animals are used for teaching labs, research, and for off-campus groups in events sponsored by the Department of Animal Science.

One objective of the show is to improve communication and cooperation between this department and other departments and groups on campus.

One of the Show's special attractions was the "Parade of Farm Babies" for children. Another was the Coed Milking Contest in which girls previously inexperienced in this skill compete.

This year's final winners were: first place, Marion Cahill of Arnold House; second place, Mary Buck of Mary Lyon; third place, Dian Snyder of Mary Lyon; and fourth place, Judy Burrell of Van Meter.

The Livestock Classic was under the direction of Dr. Anthony Borton and Dr. Richard Foley.

Snakebeaters Fall To Lord Jeffs, 6-4

by TOM FITZGERALD

An Amherst shot that hit off a UMass defenseman and was swept over the stick of goalie Bill Sinclair into the Redman net was the decisive goal as the Lord Jeffs licked UMass, 6-4, Saturday on the Amherst lacrosse field.

The Redmen uncorked a total of 28 shots in the first half and appeared to be the aggressors throughout the afternoon. "We played 60 minutes of good lacrosse," said Coach Dick Garber, who had special praise for the performances of Sinclair, Kevin O'Brien, and Jim O'Donnell.

Amherst jumped the gun early in the first quarter, scoring while UM was down a man via a penalty. Tony Arneri, however, pushed UM back to level with an unassisted tally midway through the period. The count remained 1-1 the rest of the half.

Martie Kalikow's goal in the early stages of the third quarter gave UM a short-lived lead, but Amherst reeled off four straight goals, three of them on extra-man plays.

Then it was the Redmen's turn to deal. On a fast break, Dick Howe zipped a pass to O'Donnell, who shot it into the net with just over five minutes remaining. O'Brien converted a pass from Charlie Avakian shortly thereafter to tighten things up at 5-4.

With three minutes left, Amherst tried to freeze the ball, but the Redmen were able to take possession and set up a few good but unsuccessful shots. Amherst fired the insurance marker with a minute and a half left. The ball bounced off Walt Alessi and was poked over Sinclair's large stick and into the goal by an alert Jeff player.

Amherst chalked up its sixth victory in seven games. The UM record fell to 3-3. The Redmen face another stern test in Middlebury, which visits UMass Wednesday at 3:30 p.m.

INTRAMURALS: Miller, Cotton, Bat .833

by DAVE JARNES

The first two weeks of play in the softball leagues have produced several surprises and some outstanding individual performances.

The biggest surprises are in the fraternities. SPE is leading the A League with a 4-0 slate while pre-season favorite LCA and ZN are close behind at 3-1. AEP and BKP top the B league with 4-0 slates, while the defending IFC champion TKE is 3-1. Miller of Sig Ep and Cotton of AEP have phenomenal .833 batting averages.

The Greenough Grants stand alone as leaders of the East League with a 3-0 mark, thanks to their triumph over the defending dorm champion Chadbourne Maroons. The Patriots and Redmen are 2-0 in the South League while the Maples, Trojans, and Hi-lo's are still undefeated in the West. Topping the pack in the North League are the Panthers, Redwoods, and Flaming A's with 2-0 cards. Mike Hamilton leads all dorm hitters with a .750 average.

The campus champion Moody Blues are all alone at the top of the Eastern League at 3-0, while the rest of the independent leagues have co-leaders. The Good Guys, Pi Spots, and Homeward Bounders share the top spot in the International League, the Bytes and Bombers are tied for first in the American League, and the Landscapers and the Chem Club are pacesetters in the National League.

Golfers Split

by DAVE JARNES

Adverse weather conditions highlighted last week's golf matches for UMass as the Redmen lost to New Hampshire, 4-3, and beat Rhode Island by the same score.

The wind at New Hampshire was described by Coach Gladchuk as "near tornado force. The wind was so strong that the pins were actually bent over. Our boys are pretty small and they had a lot of trouble hitting into the wind, but then of course it was the same for both teams."

A clutch par on the 18th hole by Vin Puglea gave the Redmen their margin of victory at Kingston, R. I., in a match played in snow, rain, and sleet.

Track at UConn

The track team takes on an improved University of Connecticut tomorrow at Storrs. The Huskies, fresh off victories over URI and Columbia, will be trying to duplicate their upset victory of last year when they beat the Redmen by three points. Coach Footrick's squad, which performed creditably at Springfield, will be attempting to avert any further losses before they defend their Yankee Conference indoor crown.

Redmen Outslug UNH, 15-9; 5-0 Record Leads YanCon

Kuz Paces 18-Hit Attack; Hurlers Allow 17 Hits

by GLENN BRIERE

It was no day for pitchers. Scoring in every inning but one, the UMass baseball team won a 15-9 slugfest from New Hampshire Saturday at Amherst, preserving its unbeaten Yankee Conference record. Maine, regarded as the chief threat, split a doubleheader with Rhode Island Saturday.

The Redmen collected a total of 18 hits while the Wildcats pounded out 17. A total of 11 extra base clouts were hit. Bill Smith took his first beating of the season, but sophomore Dave Katz held New Hampshire in check for the last six innings to record his second win in a row. The five runs that Smith gave up were the first earned runs off him this spring.

There were many batting stars for the Redmen, but at the top of the list was catcher Jim Kuczynski, who went 4 for 5 including a homer, triple and four RBIs. Frank Stewart was 2 for 3 and drove in three runs, while Alex Vyce, Jim Babyak, Terry Swanson, Hagan Anderson, Ross Piken, Roy Lasky and Katz drove in the rest. Vyce also homered for the power-laden Redmen, one of six extra base hits by the locals. Under threatening skies, the game was played in a cold wind which made things uncomfortable for fans, pitchers and fielders alike. The only ones to benefit, it seemed, were the hitters.

New Hampshire went to work on Smitty in the first with two hits, but a strikeout with a man on third ended the inning. UMass scored three runs off Wildcat pitcher Keith Josselyn in the bottom of the first. Andersen singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Swanson's double to center. A triple by Ross Piken and a single by Roy Lasky made it 3-0.

UNH tied it up in the second, hitting Smith hard. Tom Steininger singled and was forced by Joe Bartlett. Successive smashes off Smitty's glove by Rick Doherty and Jack Colliander loaded the bases, and pitcher Josselyn cleared them with a long triple to left. Josselyn, however, was thrown out when he overran third.

The Redmen got three more in the bottom of the second. Kuczynski hit a line drive to left which Colin Sutherland misjudged, and the ball went over his head and through the wire fence in left for a home run. A walk to Andersen, followed by a triple by Stewart and a single by Babyak made the score 6-3.

Once again the Wildcats stormed back. Smith gave up a single and a walk, and Coach Earl Lorden finally replaced him with Katz. Dave also got off to a shaky start as Steininger brought in two runs with a triple to left center. Bartlett singled to drive him in, and Colliander hit a bloop double down the right field line, scoring Bartlett. Colliander was thrown out trying to reach third, but New Hampshire had the lead, 7-6.

For the third time in three innings UMass scored three runs. Lasky singled to left, Peacock walked, and a passed ball moved them to second and third. Kuz blooped a single to left to score Lasky, and Katz sacrificed the runners to second and third. Andersen drove in Peacock with a sacrifice fly, and Stewart singled to put the Redmen out in front, 9-7, this time for good.

A single by Swanson, a walk to Peacock and a triple by Kuz gave UMass an 11-7 lead.

Katz settled down and allowed runs in the fifth and the eighth, but the UMass Batmen were not through yet. Babyak drove in Stewart in the fifth with a single, and Katz squeezed in the thirteenth run in the sixth. The only inning in which the Redmen failed to score was the seventh.

Two more runs came in the eighth on Alex Vyce's first varsity homer and a sacrifice fly by Frank Stewart.

In other YC action, Maine absorbed its first conference loss to Rhode Island, 3-1, but came back in the nightcap of the twin bill to wallop the Rams, 16-0. UM is leading the loop with a 5-0 record, followed by Maine with a 3-1 mark. The decisive series will be next weekend when the Redmen travel to Orono for a crucial pair.

On Tuesday, UMass travels to UConn for a game with the always dangerous Huskies. Carl Boteze is scheduled to pitch.

Student Life to Determine Details

Lederle, Field Approve Rule Changes

by JAMES FOUUDY, Managing Editor
THE REPORT OF THE STUDENT LIFE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDING THE ABOLITION OF CURFEWS AND SIGN OUT SHEETS HAS BEEN ACCEPTED BY PRESIDENT JOHN LEDERLE AND DEAN OF STUDENTS WILLIAM FIELD.

DETAILS AND PRACTICAL APPLICATION OF THE NEW REGULATIONS FOR NEXT FALL WILL BE DETERMINED BY THE LIFE COMMITTEE.

Dean Field believes that the changes complement a growing concern with increasing student responsibility and places re-emphasis on individual student government.

HE STRESSED, however, that "a serious effort must be made to interpret these changes to others... it must be made clear that we are not abandoning responsibility."

As far as Dean Field knows, no other school has achieved changes like these in this manner.

The report which the dean announced to a stunned audience at Student Leaders Night states:

- that curfews at UMass be self imposed by students
- that sign out sheets be optional
- that there be no parietal hours but that a dorm may schedule an open house once a month
- that calling hours for the opposite sex be determined by a majority vote of a dorm's residents
- that a resident may have overnight guests of the same sex with the host assuming responsibility
- that dormitories establish their own regulations concerning quiet hours, typing and music hours, use of the kitchenette.
- that room inspection cease except in matters of health and safety
- that house governments be democratically elected providing for executive, legislative and judicial functions

• that five students with full voting privileges be appointed to the Student Life Committee Implementation of the changes is to be carried out by the Student Life Committee. Field commented that one of the most important aspects of the recommendations is that five students have been appointed to this Committee.

Thus, students will have a voice in the implementation of the new regulations. Possible no-curfew systems include the use of a night watchman, giving everyone in the dormitory a key, or having a sign-out key for those students, both men and women, who know they will be out after the doors are locked.

The reg changes are a result of months of work by the University Reform Committee and the Women's Affairs Committee of the Student Senate.

President Lederle was unavailable for comment but is reported pleased with the report.

Campus Honors Student Leaders

by MARGIE FLANDERS,
Staff Reporter

"Go out in the world and recognize a true man." This is the greatest lesson taught at a university, according to Bernard Dallas, in his welcoming address last night in the Cage at Student Leaders Night.

ACKNOWLEDGING the "reformers and decision makers" in the audience, Dr. Oswald Tippe, Provost, began his opening address.

Tippe enumerated on the differences between the present times and those of the 1930's. "Now there are sit-ins, bitch-ins, retroactive pills, and parietals... we had our own nuts, flagpole sitters and goldfish swallowers."

NOW, ACCORDING to Tippe, freshmen are told how smart they are. "The trouble is that they believe the drivel and look on the administration as dopes." In his day, freshmen were told they were dumb slob. "It was good for their souls."

In reference to the curfew issue, Tippe claimed that in his day no one worried about closing hours. By 10 p.m., after such hard days of work, they were ready to turn in.

QUESTIONING the women's demand for equality, Tippe remarked that he did not see women demanding the right to be drafted.

Tippe reminisced a "pretty backward, naive" honor system. "Who thinks about honor now?" he exclaimed, "it's privileges!"

In concluding, Tippe recounted his recent dream in which all the student demands had been fulfilled. In his "nightmare," students took over the entire University.

Using this setting, Tippe continued his discourse on the current administrative problems of the University.

FOLLOWING the opening address, scholarship announcements for Campus Chest, Panhellenic Council, and Interfraternity Council were made.

Houses were announced as having tied for the highest scholastic averages of Women's Residence Halls, both with a 2.6. The other Interdormitory awards will be announced in Collegian on May 16th.

Dr. John W. Lederle then presented the Distinguished Senior Awards. The following students received this honor:

THE METAWAMPEE Award, given to a faculty member who has shown great interest in the academic and extracurricular lives of students, was then presented to Dr. John H. Mitchell, Associate Professor of English.

An added attraction to the program was the appearance of the Musicals. They sang three songs, including "A Good Man is Hard to Find."

The much awaited tapping then began. Mary Ann McAdams, President of MORTAR BOARD, announced the names of the girls chosen on the basis of service, scholarship, and leadership. They are:

Claire Amiot, Marion Bliss, Bette Butler, Elizabeth Chambers, Rita Dreiblatt, Joan Golub, Karen Harrison, Elizabeth Johnson, Deborah Kalman, Wendy Mahon, Ellen Rosenblatt, Carole-Jean Smith, Nancy Smolen, Eileen White, Claudia Willis, Anne Yakovonis. Also, Lorna Sass, who is currently studying in Italy was chosen. She will be cabled the news of her selection Wednesday.

Med School Budget Cut to 1-6 of Request

The University, of Massachusetts Med. School budget request was cut from $600,798 to $120,000 by Gov. John Volpe yesterday.

UNIVERSITY reaction to the cuts paralleled the reaction to the governor's recent cut in the total university budget from $34,400,893 to $26,212,200.

One Medical School official said, "They (the Governor and assistants) still have a little one-room schoolhouse idea of this project."

"THEY MUST think they are putting up a high school," he continued, "where you go out one day and buy the equipment and hire the teachers. That's not what a medical school is all about."

A University spokesman said: "Key department heads have been eliminated from the budget request. And it's impossible to design the space (for classrooms, laboratories and offices) unless you have people who are available and who know what's going into that space, people who can develop the buildings to suit the curricula."

THE UNIVERSITY official noted that the budget request included $250,000 for library books and educational supplies. The Governor recommended $100,000.

"Some of these books are rare and hard to come by," he said, adding, "This is not something done overnight. It takes years and money to establish a library."

African Affairs Advisor To Speak on Africa Today

DR. WILLIAM H. MARTIN

On Wednesday, May 4, Dr. William H. Martin, Education Adviser for African Affairs, will be addressing students on pertinent issues concerning Africa today, in Bartlett Auditorium at 8:00 p.m.

DR. MARTIN earned his Bachelor's degrees in Science and Education at Wilberforce University in Ohio, then went on to receive a Master of Arts degree in 1933 and a Doctor of Philosophy in 1944, both from Ohio State University.

Prior to his former position of Dean of Faculty at the Hampton Institute in Virginia, he taught at colleges in Texas and Arizona. He was also the Director of the Division of Education at Langston University.

Dr. Martin is at present working with the Agency for International Development in planning, programming, coordinating, and directing the U.S. education program in Africa.

Men's Physical Education

Students with Physical Education equipment who are not enrolled in the program must return clothing to the issue window before May 16.

STUDENT LEADERS ...

House, was presented an honorary membership to Mortar Board.

THE ADELPHIA tapping, led by Edward Waterman, President, followed. These men were chosen on the basis of their contribution and leadership during their undergraduate careers:

Seniors — Bernie Dallas, Scott Friedland, Pete Hendrickson, Jim Allen, John Lawrence, Brian Silman, Dave Kelly, John Parnell.

Juniors: Bob Fleishner, Ken Hardy, Mel Fisher, Bob Label, Joel Hartstone, Jeff Forman, Herb Lach.

Faculty — Administration — Robert Doolan, Dr. Mark Noffsinger, Monsignor Power, Prof. Harold Carey, Coach Steve Kosakowski, Prof. David Porter.

ALTHOUGH, they could not tap her, the members of Adelpia presented a bouquet of flowers to Mrs. Mary Hudziek, the University program advisor.

REVELER President Ron Marble, happy to be relieved from the leak over his seat in the Cage, tapped the following future spirit leaders:

Men — Steve Bergstrom, Robert Sylvester, Gary Kaplan, Larry Martin, Alfred Sagesse, William Tennant, David Hunter, Steven Edwards, Gary Barnett.

Women — Linda Ferreira,

Betty Dadoly, Michelle Feldman, Nancy Horwitz, Nancy Donovan, Susan Finnerman, Jackie Hall, Edwina Kujala, Claudia Dembski, Jackie Muse, Phyllis McCarty, Liz Nuefeld, Ellen Burke, Karen Schmidt, Kathy Stefanik, Lorraine Contuzzi.

AKCON, the new University Guide Service, led by President Herb Loch, tapped the following fraternity juniors:

ROBERT TOBIN, MAROON KEY President, when about to tap those freshmen men with potential leadership qualities, compared their decision to that of the Academy Awards—"A lot of qualified people, but we can't choose all of them." Then these leaders were tapped:

Mark Chenoweth, Jay Wein, Eugene Fantl, George Plantinga.

THE FINAL tapping, led by Kathy Smith, SCROLL President, created much excitement. One Scroll even lost her shoe in the tumult. These girls were chosen as those members of the freshman class possessing leadership and scholastic qualities:

Because of the general excitement, screaming, leaping, and squealing, the tapping of the Scrolls ended the program. The restless and exuberant mob made it impossible to end with the scheduled "When Twilight's Shadows Deepen" and recession-al.

Banning of Women's Curfews: What Long-Range Effect?

Does It Mean a Change for the Libe?

by BARBARA PROKO

"I never really thought that there was any correlation between women's curfew and library hours. My hope is that operating hours would not be extended if curfew is abolished," Robert Agard, assistant librarian in reader services, said Monday in a Collegian interview.

AGARD EXPRESSED this viewpoint in reference to the Student Life Committee's self-curfew recommendation and its possible effects on facilities offered at Goodell Library.

Presently, the library provides total service until 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, and until 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The reserve level, with study hall facilities, is open until midnight except Friday and Saturday, when it is closed at 10 p.m.

"If any action becomes necessary, the change in policy will be made by Hugh Montgomery, University Librarian, who will, of course, consider any suggestions or requests that he receives," Agard said.

THE ASSISTANT librarian believes that Provost Tippo's opinion would be influential in the matter, since "any increase in working hours would naturally cost the University money."

The expense of operating Goodell Library now ranges from $3-$25 an hour. While this does not include maintenance, Agard points out that salaries of additional employees needed for extended hours would probably have to be paid from the library's operating budget.

This would necessitate an adjustment in the budget at the expense of another facility. Some fluid funds would prevent this from becoming serious, Agard said.

"ADJUSTMENTS are possible during the fiscal year. The budget is usually drawn up more than a year in advance by the university librarian, chief of technical processes, and chief of reader service processes; the assistant librarian coordinates it," Agard explained.

Hiring people to work after midnight might be a problem, the assistant librarian believes.

"In accordance with present curfew regulations, we don't hire women to work after 10 p.m. A plan to extend hours until 2 a.m., for example, would probably be carried out by hiring one to four male graduate students or older, mature undergrads.

"Some colleges provide all-night facilities by stationing a watchman outside the library, with students even checking out their own books," Agard explained. "This method wouldn't be feasible at UMass because of Goodell's complicated structure."

"Actually, the only service that the library offers now late at night is that of a study hall. Better studying conditions in the dorms would accomplish the same purpose at less expense," Agard concluded.

Chief Blasko Wants Them

by ALAN GRIGSBY

"I daresay I wouldn't send my daughter to UMass," was the personal opinion of Chief Red Blasko in an interview concerning the proposed change in curfews and their effect on the police department.

"If you were a dad, wouldn't you like the assurance that your daughter was safely in before two, three, or four a.m.?"

"Then again, we can ask, is a girl 17, 18, or 19 years old responsible? Some, I realize, are, some aren't."

CHIEF BLASKO, while injecting these feelings, said that if the curfew changes were approved, he would not attempt to change them.

He went on to state that many unforeseen problems could develop from the proposed curfew changes and might necessitate an increase in the force.

Instead of campus activity declining rapidly after curfew, noise, traffic, and other disturbances may carry on until three and four a.m. or later.

THE TRADITIONAL twelve o'clock traffic jam will be ended, but revved up motor cycle engines, cars and groups of students, he said, ought to make the women's dormitories noisy late into the night.

When asked about a possible increase in sex offenses he replied that the curfew, "... will lead us to all sorts of new problems we haven't yet been confronted with."

The chief continued to say that parents looking for their daughters in emergency situations will be hard pressed to find one who may be gone until four a.m. or Monday morning.

Interestingly enough, Blasko noted, girls get far more calls from their parents than boys and the changes in curfew would make this a bigger problem than it may seem.

TO MEET MANY of these changes the addition of another pair of patrolmen working a 10 p.m. - 6 a.m. shift to supplement the two pairs working 3 p.m. - 11 p.m. and 11 p.m. - 7 a.m. shifts, was deemed a good possibility by Blasko.

"It's bound to bring additional problems," he ended, "I don't know what they are, but we'll have them for sure."

The Chrysler Corporation Turbine Car will be on display at the South Terrace of the S.U. on May 4 and 5.

The display of the turbine car on campus is sponsored by the student chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. A film-lecture presentation on the turbine will be given in the Auditorium of the new Engineering East Building at 11:15 a.m. on Thursday, May 5. It is open to all faculty and students.

THE 15-MINUTE FILM describes the history and development of the turbine at Chrysler, covering the period from 1954 to the present.

Highlight of the turbine exhibit is the car itself. Also featured is a narrated display unit which explains the principle and operation of the turbine engine and compares it with the Chrysler HEMI-426 cubic-inch high performance engine. Included in the display are artists' renderings and a one-fourth scale, three-dimensional model depicting far-future styling concepts.

Annual Bloodmobile Visit Tue. Seeks Faculty, Staff Donors

Mrs. J. Henry Korson and Mrs. Harold Watts, the University Women co-chairmen of the annual Bloodmobile visit for the entire faculty and staff of the University of Massachusetts, are seeking donors for Tuesday, May 10 from 12:00 noon to 5:45 p.m. in the Recreation Room of Arnold House.

AMHERST residents may also participate in this Red Cross Blood Insurance Program and should contact either Mrs. Korson or Mrs. Watts for registration or further information.

THE FOLLOWING program aims to relieve the critical shortage of blood in Hampshire County. It enables the Red Cross to continue its present policy of free blood for all in need and yet obtain adequate amounts. This program is underwritten jointly by the Hampshire County Red Cross and the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, which work in cooperation and pool their donor information.

• By donating one pint of blood, either at one of the Red Cross Blood Donor Days held during the year in all part of the county, or by giving at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, the donor becomes a member of the Insurance Program. Anyone in normal health, between the ages of 18 and 59, may be a blood donor.

• Membership entitles the donor and his immediate family living under one roof, to any blood they may need during the next twelve months.

• Persons replacing blood for friends or relatives, either at the Cooley Dickinson Hospital or at any Blood Donor Day held in Hampshire County, automatically become members of the program, and are covered with their immediate families for one year.

• Members of the program and their families will receive free blood without having to replace it. Non-members are required to replace pint for pint as soon as possible.

• A member, upon hospitalization, would present his insurance card, showing that he and his family are entitled to blood.

'Upward Bound' Program Comes to University

The University of Massachusetts is seeking qualified high school teachers for its Upward Bound program at the Amherst campus this summer, according to James S. White, Upward Bound director.

Under the federal Upward Bound program that applies anti-poverty funds to boost the college potential of disadvantaged students, UMass will offer an eight-week program for 100 ninth and tenth graders from the four western counties.

The curriculum will stress English, math-science, social studies, small-group counseling, cultural enrichment, recreation and physical education.

For the summer session from July 1 to Aug. 30, the UMass project is now interviewing teachers of English, social studies, and math-science. Pay and housing will be provided by the University under the $152,918 federal Upward Bound grant. Teachers will be required in almost all cases to live on campus.

ACCORDING to Mr. White, the UMass project seeks teachers who either have had experience working with economically disadvantaged students or would welcome the challenge of such work.

Full recruitment information is available from Mr. White at the School of Education, UMass.

Book Store Gives Birth To Senior Honors Idea

by JANE ROLAND, News Staff

Because his father has a habit of browsing through old book stores and picking up strange books, Peter Goodman is on his way to becoming the world's authority on Eric Rucker Eddison.

Eddison is a relatively unknown author. Only one person, a friend of his, has ever done even a minor research paper on his works. For this reason Goodman selected Eddison for his Senior Honors Project. "I'm not compiling things. I hate research papers unless they're original." When it was mentioned that this type of paper was much harder than the ordinary, he nodded, and added, "A lot less dull, too."

PETER LIVES off campus in a typically disordered off-campus student room which he recently moved into. Remnants of the previous occupant lay strewn about—a broken mirror, a tie in the fireplace, curtain rods across a corner of the room.

Empty boxes from moving lay piled in one corner, suitcases and books in another. Searching through a carton of records, he selected one and began to play Haydn's 6th Symphony on his phono.

Then he settled on the edge of his bed, undoing the top laces of his boots. "My father always browses through old book stores," he explained. One day he came across Worm Ouroboros by Eddison, and it interested him enough to buy it. He gave it to me to read. At first I wasn't so interested, but I enjoyed it. When it came to the project, I was frustrated as to the man—who was he? I intended to do little research on the work, but now the biography is in the background and I'm concentrating on his work."

EDDISON'S WRITING is very romantic, highly descriptive and very specialized—"Most would call this guy absurd, charge it off as so much garbage, but I like it," said Goodman. As he talks, the influence of this author is evident, especially in long half-serious-half-comical harangues when Peter's speech develops the style of Eddison as much as is possible and still pass for modern language.

Peter and his roommate, Norm Lovitch, are good friends, quick to ad-lib skits and songs, fully enjoying themselves while doing so. Somehow the term 'anthropologist' came up, and, heads together, the two sang a barbershop quartet-folk song-made up rhyme. Each time one of these skits was finished, they'd both laugh, very pleased with themselves.

THE WORK on Eddison hasn't been very easy, Peter says. Since all he has to work with is a 19-48 research paper and a biographical entry in Who's Who in England, much of the work is in finding where to start. "I called up Dutton Publishers, because they'd published one of his works in 1952. It turned out that Worm Ouroboros was the favorite book of the late president of the company. I went to the office, but it was the day of their New Year's party, and there was no one around to talk to," he said, laughing at the memory.

"In his prefaces and in a book of memories dedicated to a college friend, Eddison mentioned his influences. That's what I'm working with. He mentioned that one of his major characters is like Spinoza, so I'm reading Spinoza. He loved the novels of George Meredith, so I'm reading him for influences.

He also said he was influenced by W.P. Kerr's Epic and Romance on Medieval literature, so I'm studying that. I'm reading Icelandic sagas to discover why he liked them, I have read the Greek poetess Sappho for influences, I plan on checking through 17th century drama for bits of songs which he incorporated into his works. What I'm doing is tracing his sources from the original, trying to get a synthesis."

HE PUSHED his glasses up on his nose, pulled the laces on his boots and then continued. "Eddison seemed like a real Col. Blimp type gung-ho Englishman. You know—by Jove sir, simply smashing." Peter added the last in a thick imitation English accent. "We was old-line Victorian; he was aware of the changes in the world since World War I, and he didn't like them.

He refused to acknowledge them and wanted to leave the world. He studied Icelandic literature; in fact, he translated a great saga, Egils Saga. He retreated into literature, creating his own individualistic Utopian world with strict class division based on deserving great men. His philosophies can be seen in his book.

THE WORM, one of his earliest, shows seeds of all his later writings, the philosophy, adventure, and so on. His later works are more philosophical, they're weakened by trying to be more than an adventure story."

In four years at UMass, Peter has belonged to the usual variety of clubs and groups, but has been a member of Young Independents for four years, and is now editorial assistant on Caesura.

THE IDEA of the paper Peter Goodman is doing reflects him as an individual wishing to assert his individuality in doing something that has not been done before and is not simply a research paper which synthesizes the work of others. It is taking a lot of work, but Peter looks forward to it because of his deep interest in the subject. After all, it is never an easy job becoming a world authority on anyone, even a relatively unknown.

Not In Vain

Dennis Della Piana — earnest student, gifted athlete, devout Catholic, beloved fraternity brother—died 10 short days ago after a long struggle with an incurable illness which pained, discomforted and eventually immobilized him in the last two years of his life. Many of you remember Dennis as the brilliant, young centerfielder on the 1964-65 Redmen baseball teams. His whippet-like grace afield and near-professional quickness at the plate are easily conjured up by even the most passive Redmen baseball fan.

Others of you picture a tall, lithe young man with distinctly Roman features, who, almost incurably it seemed, haunted the Newman Center searching for a place to study or a person with whom to chat. The conversation generally swung towards sports or perhaps the academic severity of the Physical Education Department (a topic he so dearly loved to expound upon and defend) or just general chatter concerning girls, studies, Civil Rights or whatever might have been your pleasure. Dennis was a good one to pass the time with for he listened more intently than he spoke and even your worst joke was always rewarded with a genuine smile and a hearty chuckle.

Still others remember an intensely religious young man who gave evidence of his deep faith by quiet example and not by discomforting display.

We, his fellow brothers at Kappa Sigma, remember this Dennis Della Piana. Yet, we also remember a Dennis Della Piana who, at the beginning of his fatal illness struggled valiantly to swallow soup. We remember a murky spring day, a baseball game at Boston University and a courageous Dennis Della Piana nearly collapsing after running out an infield grounder, signalling the end of a promising diamond career. We remember a Dennis Della Piana his left leg paralyzed, his breathing reduced to a chore, buying a new baseball glove and making plans to use it. We remember a cold March day one month ago, a bleak hospital room and a weak and aching Dennis Della Piana lay in bed, too weak to rise but not too weak to laugh and joke, plan for the future, ask after the health of others and not for a moment show concern for himself. We remember a Dennis Della Piana who in the hour of his death asked God to bless all those he would leave behind and then queried his brother-in-law as to what time the Celtics would go on.

One is most immediately struck by the futility of death for one as young and admirable as was Dennis. Yet, most assuredly Dennis' untimely death was rather anything but futile. His actions in the face of hopeless adversity should serve us all as an example of the power of faith and the strength of unwavering character in the hour of our darkest need. God bless you, Dennis.

Letters To The Editor

How High the Sky?

To the Editor:

The University has found the solution to the problem of filling the new towers — raise the rents of all dorms on campus.

The towers were nearing completion, and needed future tenants. To the majority of the students the board of $175 was too much to pay, so the University had to persuade them to move into the towers. The first attempt at this persuasion was the plan to reclassify certain dorms (make Hills into a girl's dorm, make Baker into a dorm for Stockbridge students, etc.). This caused quite a bit of friction on campus. Students wanted to remain where they were or with their friends.

Attempting to ease the friction, the men from the Housing Office said "O.K., you want to stay together? Tell you what we'll do—we'll move all the men in your dorm down to the towers and keep them (the men) as a unit. We'll reserve a couple of floors in the towers for them, fair enough?" The students still said no.

They drew up petitions and held meetings with housing officials (who were quite elusive answering questions) to show their objection to moving. The students won their battle and for awhile the campus was quiet.

Then the clincher came. The rents of all dorms were raised by vote of the Board of Trustees. The dorms that were $100 were raised to $150, an increase of 50%. The dorms that were $150 were raised to $175. The towers at $175 now appear more attractive.

Brett is now the same in price as the towers. There is certainly no comparison between the two, so why is Brett $175? We are told that the increase is needed for higher construction and maintenance costs. Construction?

The dorms hit with price raises are already built. Maintenance? Why not do something about the rising maintenance costs? For an example, think of the workers on campus. We've all seen them "working"—three rake leaves and three more just watch, four plant a large tree and ten watch (this occurred last week in front of Hills).

The price raise was the solution to fill the towers. The lines for reserving rooms are long. The towers are worth $175, but dorms like Gorman and Brett aren't. If the University utilized better management, the dorms could be offered at the "old" prices of $100, $150 and $175.

Gone

It's done.

The recommendations of the Student Life Committee report have been accepted in their entirety. The University of Massachusetts is maturing—it is growing beyond a 22 story dorm or a Hatch extension. The Student Life Committee, the University officials, the faculty, and a mature and active student body have indeed thrust the University forward into a position of national leadership in education.

IT IS UNQUESTIONABLY a bold and courageous step, a step that may be challenged. The pressure which can be brought to bear on decision-makers is always greater than who remain stagnant. But it is the decision makers who move ahead, who lead the others, and who can best justify their decisions—because they themselves made the decisions they live by.

The decision, made yesterday, is justifiable if college is justifiable, if true education is justifiable and if responsibility and trust are justifiable.

It's done—curfews and other archaic rules for women have been abolished. But in a much larger sense, it has just begun; we have begun to lead. And when one says "I go to the University of Massachusetts", it can be said with the pride that accompanies the knowledge that one is attending an institution of initiative and progress which is looked to with respect by other universities across the nation.

We have indeed begun and it is good. Let us continue, for then we will truly be a great university, constantly striving—and constantly moving forward.

Sam Sparc

Soon he would get his chance to become part of UMass's finest. He was applying for a position on the faculty. But before he officially became part of the faculty he had to pass an oral exam given by "the man" himself, President Jonathan.

Jonathan eyed the young man cautiously and bade him to sit down. "I have just a few routine questions. If you answer them satisfactorily, you may become a member of the esteemed UMass faculty. First of all, what are your views on attendance?"

The prospective teacher smiled. "I advocate a no-cut policy. Attendance must be mandatory. It is beyond me how some students think they can comprehend the material merely by reading two texts, five outside reading books, and weekly library assignment. I will deduct five points off the student's final grade for every class he cuts. If he cuts over six classes during the semester, he automatically fails the course even if he has A's in all his exams and quizzes."

Jonathan nodded in agreement. "And what do you think of requirements? For instance, should a psychology major be required to take four semesters of a language and four semesters of science and a semester of art or music?"

"Certainly" the young man asserted. "Compelling a psychology major to take four semesters of French and four semesters of science and a semester of music has many practical applications. For example, if the student in question goes to Paris and meets a girl who likes to sing about geological rock formations, they will have a common ground on which to begin a meaningful relationship."

"Right!" the man exclaimed. "Just two final questions. Do you feel the present grading systems allows enough leeway to fairly tell the difference between students by means of a letter grade? In other words, can you really differentiate between a "D" student and a "C" student?"

"Of course!" gasped the young man seemingly insulted. It's no problem at all to differentiate between a 69 and a 70 student. The first has shown a lack of interest, has little grasp of the subject matter, is slow to learn, and performs poorly in class; whereas the 70 student is solidly average. He does his homework regularly, has an adequate understanding of the material and participates often in class. There is a world of difference between a 69 and 70. I honestly think the present grading system to be a fair representation of the student's knowledge."

"Excellent," said Jonathan. "One last question. Do you agree with the present policy of making finals mandatory for everyone?"

The young man pondered a moment and then stated, "I think, that if a student has a 99 average or better, has not cut a class all semester; and brushes his teeth three times a day, I would consider exempting him from a final. However, I do agree with the final's policy in principle. A two hour test is a good yardstick for what a student has learned in four months. Except for the example of the student with a 99 average, I would force everyone to take the final, and I would count it at least 90% of the student's total grade."

The President was startled. "You say you might make an exemption to compulsory final taking?"

The teacher realized what he had said. "I didn't mean it," he cried. But it was too late.

"Get out of my office!" the President screamed. "And tell your friends at Berkeley that we will never hire any Commies like you for our faculty."

This Sport Is Almost Like Flying

by D. F. GIERAS

From Daedalus down to the present day, man has had the urge to soar in the sky. From wax, feathers, and cryptic spells, we have progressed to huge multi-engine jets that shuttle across the sky.

And from this love of the peace and quiet of the air, the sports of parachuting and skydiving have developed.

Because of technological innovations the once rough-and-tumble wartime parachuting has been refined and sophisticated to the point that now thousands of people yearly enjoy the sport. They return again and again to the exhilaration of free-fall in the quiet of the skies.

THE UMass SPORT PARACHUTING CLUB was organized late in the 1950's as one of the first attempts to bring parachuting to the collegiate setting.

In close proximity to Orange, Mass., one of the first sport parachuting centers, the UMass club has had the opportunity to train and operate out of one of the safest parachuting centers in the country.

Although small, the club has always attracted enough skilled and willing people to make it a constant threat on the competitive collegiate scene.

Recently, in the 1964 Intercollegiate Meet at Orange, the UMass teams took seven of the eight awards, including first place over-all (from Harvard University).

In the 1965 Meet, the UMass teams took a second place over all, beaten only by the cadets from West Point. At this meet, teams were entered from many New England colleges and from such far away places as the University of Montana and the University of Ontario.

LOOKING FORWARD TO NEXT SEASON, the club is sponsoring a membership drive that it hopes will attract anyone desiring to develop an interest in the sport of parachuting.

Under the auspices of the UMass Sport Parachuting Club and Parachutes Inc., a series of films dealing with parachuting and skydiving will be presented on Friday evening at 7:30 in Hasbrouck 20. On hand will be a representative of Parachutes Inc. and a member of the Parachute Club to answer any questions concerning the sport or the Club.

One of the films to be shown, "A Sport is Born", was a candidate for an Academy Award in the documentary class. The UMass Sports Parachuting Club invites all interested to "drop in".

An instructor from Parachutes, Inc. at Orange, Mass., adjusts a strap on the parachute of a student who is about to "take a jump."

ArtCarved settings hold a diamond so delicately, it's almost frightening.

We've even designed a diamond engagement ring to resemble the soft fragile petals of a new spring flower. So the diamond you show off to the world won't only be dazzling. But elegant too.

In the new ArtCarved collection, you can choose from slim, soaring, majestic designs. And without being frightened.

Because since we guarantee all the diamonds we set, we also guarantee they will stay right there.

part of the budget request is due to the fact that there is no physical facility to store the books, according to the University spokesman. The school is to be located in Worcester.

"We can put them here in Amherst," the spokesman said, however.

ANOTHER BUDGET chop involves a request for funds for hiring medical consultants "on a part-time basis." The University spokesman said that doctors in private practice and involved in teaching at medical schools cannot be expected to sign on with the University Medical School while it is being built and then return to private practice and teaching.

That is the reason why many consultants have to be hired on a part-time basis," he said.

A spokesman for the Volpe administration, Charles Sheppard, said, "In our judgment, if this budget the Medical School will be able to operate and do all the things necessary and proper for development of the Medical School."

Dr. Wellman Appointed For Danforth Fund

The Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Mo., has announced that Robert R. Wellman of the University of Massachusetts has been appointed to the Danforth Associate Program.

DR. WELLMAN is an associate professor in the School of Education. He and Mrs. Wellman are one of 1500 faculty couples at over 650 colleges and universities in the U.S. chosen by the Danforth Foundation in its effort to recognize and encourage good teaching and to assist in process.

As Danforth Associates, Dr. and Mrs. Wellman will be awarded a yearly stipend of $125 to use according to their own situations and opportunities in carrying out the aims of the program. A $100 book fund is also made available, and assistance in an amount up to $100 is available for attendance at learned society meetings.

the University of Massachusetts, said after the cuts were made known yesterday, "There is simply not enough money in that budget to move ahead."

ed to the old chestnut "Should old acquaintance be forgot?" with a resounding "yes," lined his third single of the afternoon off Chuck Pallenani, his former teammate at Somerville High.

Al Craig chipped in with a dribbler down the third base line after DiSarcina had pilfered second. The stage was then set for husky Tony Chinappi's booming drive to deep center which plated DiSarcina for the game-winner.

AIC drew first blood in the game in the fourth. Frank Capuano homered to start the inning and the combination of a base on balls, a wild pitch, a balk, and an error pushed across a second tally.

In the bottom of the same canto a walk to Chinappi, a John Mitsakos hit and a balk put Redmen on second and third. Seibert's fielder's-choice netted one run, and, after a walk to Larry Snook, Lehrer's grounder scored another. Pitcher Elliott aided his own cause with a deuce-producing single to right to put UMass up by two.

A wind blown misplayed triple to left scored the third AIC run in the seventh and a follow-up blast down the leftfield line hustled in the score tier. A nifty unassisted double play by third sacker Mitsakos lifted Elliott from further trouble in the inning. He speared a hot line drive and dove for the bag just nipping Nolan sliding back.

The home half of the eighth saw Mitsakos single to left field and take second on a balk. Seibert followed with a nubber to the left side of the infield and Mitsakos took third. Seibert's theft of second base upset AIC chucker Pallenani and he proceeded to wild-pitch Mitsakos home. Still shaken, he served Snook a fat pitch which came to rest in shallow left, as Seibert scored. After a force out at second, Elliott skied to center to end the inning.

The Little Redmen now stand at 2-1 while AIC's slate reads 2-2. The Holy Cross Frosh test the baseballers next, with today's contest scheduled for 3 p.m.

registering a wind-blown 10.3. Jay Hall gave Yankee Conference champ Copeland a good battle in the 120-high hurdles but was nipped at the tape. Medeiros was third. Bowman and Carpenter teamed up for a 1-2 in the half-mile in 2:00 flat.

Art and Steve Burrell did likewise in the 220 in 22.7. Don Walkwitz and Damian Gaffney took second and third in the 440-hurdles. Terry Carpenter won the 2-mile in 9:57 and Sam Berry took third. With the meet in the palm of their hands, hurdlers Hall, Gaffney, Bob Morony, and miler St. Clair ran the relay. They succumbed to an understandably stronger UConn team.

Moundsmen Sparkle

by DAVE JARNES

Pitchers held the spotlight in Monday's games as two hurlers tossed no-hitters and several others just missed.

Fastballer Kay Sanford walked only two batters and struck out seven as the Greenough Grants pummeled the Lemons, 15-0. Sanford's no-hitter virtually assures the Grants of first place in the East League.

Ron Merrill threw his second no-hitter of the season as TKE kept its title hopes alive by blasting ASP, 14-0. Freedman of AEP just missed the charmed circle as he allowed only one hit. AEP remained unbeaten by clobbering PSK, 13-0.

SAM had several beautiful girls wearing SAM sweatshirts cheer their boys on and this enthusiasm paid off as SAMMY won its first athletic contest of the year by nipping PSD, 6-4. KS came up with four runs in the fifth to edge ATG, 7-6, after suffering four straight losses.

TC pulled off a triple play but TEP won the game 7-2. SPE won a big one as they zipped ZN, 7-6. Dick Ferranti has a no-hitter going until the last inning when QTV came up with five runs, but he held on as LCA won, 9-6. Rounding out the fraternity schedule, BKP blanked PMD 7-0.

Chet Zabek's two-hitter paced the Panthers to a 3-0 win over the Aces while the Redwoods kept pace with the Panthers by mauling the Phallics, 15-4, as Wyman and Fannoney got three hits apiece. The rebounding Webster Rams won their third straight game after an opening loss to the Panthers, whipping the Flaming A's, 10-6, with some solid hitting.

Umpires are desperately needed for softball. Poor Chet Gladchuk had to officiate himself on Monday. Anyone who wants to make $1.25 per game is urged to sign up in the intramural office.

Here are 7 knotty problems facing the Air Force: can you help us solve one?

1. Repairs in space. If something goes wrong with a vehicle in orbit, how can it be fixed? Answers must be found, if large-scale space operations are to become a reality. For this and other assignments Air Force scientists and engineers will be called on to answer in the next few years, we need the best brains available.

2. Lunar landing. The exact composition of the lunar surface, as well as structural and propulsion characteristics of the space vehicle, enter into this problem. Important study remains to be done—and, as on Air Force officer, you could be the one to do it!

3. Life-support biology. The filling of metabolic needs over very extended periods of time in space is one of the most fascinating subjects that Air Force scientists are investigating. The results promise to have vital ramifications for our life on earth, as well as in outer space.

4. Space orientation. The orbital problems of a spacecraft, including its ability to maneuver over selected points on the earth, are of vital importance to the military utilization of space. There are plenty of assignments for young Air Force physicists in this area.

5. Synergetic plane changing. The ability of a spacecraft to change altitude can also be crucial to space operations. Where but in the Air Force could Sc.B's get the chance to work on such fascinating projects right at the start of their careers?

6. Space propulsion. As our space flights cover greater and greater distances, propulsion—more than anything else—will become the limiting factor. New fuels and new propulsion techniques must be found, if we are to keep on exploring the mysteries of space. And it may well be an Air Force scientist on his first assignment who makes the big breakthrough!

7. Pilot performance. Important tests must still be made to determine how the pilots of manned aerospacecraft will react to long periods away from the earth. Of course not every new Air Force officer becomes involved in research and development right away. But where the most exciting advances are taking place, young Air Force scientists, administrators, pilots, and engineers are on the scene.

Want to find out how you fit into the Air Force picture? Contact your nearest Air Force representative, or mail the coupon today.

Lacrossemen, Minus Jarret, Host Middlebury

by TOM FITZGERALD

Did the Indians ever have it so bad when they played the game? The UMass tribe of lacrosse players had a weekend bad enough to make Metawampe wince: Saturday the Redmen took their tomahawks across town to face Amherst and were ambushed by the Lord Jeffs, the margin being a pair of freak goals.

And it was learned that Captain Dave Jarret, who has had a bone chip in his ankle, will be lost for the season. Jarret, who was to center the first midfield this year, was forced to play on attack in the limited action he saw. The loss of a player of his playing caliber and inspirational leadership will hurt.

The Redmen hope to get on the victory trail as they host Middlebury College this afternoon at 3:30 on the lacrosse field across the street from the Boyden parking lot. Under Coach Joe Morrone, a former UMass three-sport star, the Panthers stand 3-5 but have fire power to reckon with.

In recent years, UMass holds a slight edge (7-6) in games with Middlebury but bowed last year, 9-5. That was one of 10 victories in 12 games for the Vermonters, who compiled the best record in the school's history.

Although the Panthers lost considerable talent at graduation, they do still have All-America prospect Fred Beams, a 5'10"-190 lb. midfielder who holds every Middlebury scoring record. With a shot designed to make defenders tremble, Beams earned a first team All-New England rank last year. He wears number 25 and should be the man to watch.

Playing with Beams on the first midfield will be two sophs, Pete Kirkpatrick (22) and Carter Jahncke (27). Nick Coach Garber and friends, joking above, will get down to the serious business of playing Middlebury this afternoon at 3:30.

VanNes (28) and Jim Allen (29), two footballers who earn praise from UMass Coach Dick Garber, team with veteran Jack Mettee (20) on the second line. The Panthers have an experienced goalie in Bayard Russ (35), but the attack and defense are unpredictable.

For the Redmen, Bill Sinclair will probably start in the goal, with Bob Lawson in reserve. On the defense will be the usual fearsome foursome, Don Rana, Brad Stokes, Fred Foley, and Walt Alessi.

The probable midfield units will include Dick Howe, Charlie Avakian, and Kevin O'Brien on the first line; Bob Murphy, Dick Kent, and Martie Kallikow on the second; and Dick Pulsifer, Dave Kelley, and Fred Molander on the third. Frank Guidara may miss the game because of illness; if so, O'Brien may play in his place on attack, along with Tony Arneri, Howie Goffman, and Jim O'Donnell.

Redmen Overwhelmed by UConn, But Remain YanCon Pacesetters

by GLENN BRIERE

It was just one of those days, as a barrage of hits by the UConn baseball team sent UMass down to its first Yankee Conference loss by the hard-to-believe score of 18-2 yesterday at Storrs, Conn.

There is a silver lining to every cloud, however, and the Redmen found this out by learning that Maine also lost, 4-3, to Vermont. Thus UMass remains a game ahead of the Black Bears in the race for the YC crown, with the big series coming up this weekend at Orono.

The Redmen were not the same team that beat the Huskies, 7-2, two weeks ago at Amherst. UConn scored five runs in the first, and there was no stopping them thereafter. The top Redman pitcher, Carl Boteze, was shelled for those five runs and was knocked out of the box after two-thirds of an inning. In all, Connecticut unleashed an 18-hit attack to win its fourth game against four losses.

For the second game in a row, a UMass starting pitcher was bombed in the early stages. Boteze was shaky from the outset, and UConn picked up its first run on a single by leadoff batter Bud Pepin and a double by Tom Proctor. Proctor moved to third when left fielder Ted Mareno bobbled his hit, and scored on George Greer's single. Carl picked up two outs, but after a walk to Tom Penders, Bob Shaefer hit a three-run homer over the right field wall to make it 5-0.

In the top of the second, Terry Swanson singled for the Redmen, and Alex Vyce put them on the scoreboard by lining a double up the alley in right. The score was 5-1, certainly within reach.

But the Huskies came back in the bottom of the second to ride out of sight. Another three run homer, this one by Greer, gave UConn an 8-1 lead. These runs came off reliever John Canty.

The afternoon grew increasingly bleak in the third when Connecticut got four more. Pepin drove in two with a single, and Proctor drove him in with another. Ken Rowe replaced Canty on the mound for UMass, and Greer hit a triple off him to make the score 12-1.

Catcher Ed Carroll hit a homer, the first of two, in the fourth. His second, a three-run clout in the sixth, increased UConn's lead to 16-1.

UMass got its second run in the eighth when Hagan Andersen tripled off the left field wall, barely missing a homer, and scored on a wild pitch by UConn reliever Russ Rotko. The Redmen then managed to load the bases on a walk, a double by Swanson, and a hit batsman. But the next two batters whiffed to end that rally.

Connecticut got its final two runs in the eighth on two hits.

The Redmen now stand 5-1 in the conference and 8-2 overall. Maine is one game behind at 4-2. The Black Bears barely beat Vermont on Monday, 3-2, with two runs in the bottom of the ninth. But the Catamounts, who have been good to UMass this season, came back to knock off the Pine Tree boys yesterday.

So despite their trouncing at the hands of UConn, the Redmen are right back where they started before yesterday's action. Carl Boteze and Bill Smith, the probable starters this weekend, will have to be much more effective than in their last two outings. But the Redmen are in the driver's seat, and the pressure is on Maine.

Bowman, Carpenter, Larvey Star As Tracksters Capture Huskies

Displaying explosive power in the running events and holding their own in the field events, the track team rolled to a 79-70 victory over UConn yesterday at Storrs. The meet was marked by three double winners from UMass and one from UConn. Greg Bowman won the 440 and half-mile, Terry Carpenter won the mile and two-mile, and Art Larvey, who wasn't even supposed to come to the meet because of exams, was pressed into duty and won the 100 and 220. Pete Matson of UConn won the high jump and triple jump.

John Medeiros began the meet with a clutch victory over Matson in the broad jump. John's winning distance was 22'7", tying the meet record.

Greg Bowman set the winning pace for the Redmen in the UConn meet yesterday with victories in the 440 and the half-mile.

by TIM MURPHY

With the seats of their pants still smarting from last week's 4-2, one-hit loss to the Rhode Island Rams, the Little Redmen parlayed clutch hitting and fielding to nail down a 7-6 decision over tenacious AIC at the Pasture yesterday.

Leading 6-4 going into the ninth frame, UMass was seemingly on the road to victory. But a bass on balls and a double planted runners on second and third with no outs for the up-surgent Yellow Jackets. Norm Elliott, owner of seven strikeouts through the first eight innings, bore down to get Tom Nolan swinging.

Big Jeff Burgess then drove the ball deep into center field to chase in two, but the heads-up relay team of Al Seibert-Joe DiSarcina-Al Craig nailed him as he puffed to the plate.

Not to be outdone, Coach Dick Berquist's yearlings came roaring back in their half of the inning. DiSarcina, who responded

STUDENT SENATE VOTES CHANGES; BUDGETS 'TIL 3:30

by CAROLYN LEVOSKY, Senate Reporter

"Are we all idiots? Close your mouth, open your ears, let's get something done."

These were Sen. Cass's words on the slow pace of last night's 3:30 a.m. Senate meeting which considered the report of the Joint Ad Hoc Study Committee of the Faculty and Student Senates.

The Senate defeated an amendment to the report calling for equal voting representation on the faculty athletic council and four voting members on the other faculty committees.

Arguments against increasing the proposed number on committees ranged from an invasion of Faculty Senate autonomy to proposals to include students on committees dealing only with social matters supported by Sen. Cass in these words, "We are apprentices, but adult apprentices who have the right to deal with our own social life."

In support of more coverage the Senate passed a recommendation to allow either the Collegian Editor-in-chief, the Managing Editor, or the News Editor to cover previously closed Faculty Senate meetings and report regularly.

Although Sen. Richard Dacey ('66-at-large) stressed, "It won't go," the Senate voted to recommend that the President of the Student Senate, the Chairman of the Student Senate Committee on Academic Affairs and four designated students chosen by the Student Senate from the student membership of Faculty Senate Committees be allowed to speak on the Faculty Senate floor if recognized by the chairman, and that students and interested parties be allowed to attend committee meetings.

Turning to the newly proposed Fine Arts Committee the Senate acted to insure that students will have the right to admission in favor of any individual who does not pay the fee which will be compulsory for students.

Sen. Lew Gurwitz proposed that the Senate send a letter to the scheduling office opposing this year's new policy that three finals on one day are no longer a conflict of schedule.

Sen. Joe Ross (Brett) agreed and urged the Senate to "stop this before it spreads. Someday we won't even be able to take courses that have finals at the same hour." This would mean that no conflicts will be rescheduled and that courses would have to be planned accordingly.

The referendum on alcoholic beverages was accepted by the Senate as indicative of student feeling on campus although it was twelve short of the needed number. It was noted that 94% voted 'yes' on the question while only a two thirds 'yes' vote was needed.

Election results were submitted by Larry Marcus ('69 Senator at large). The class officers of '68 and '69 were sworn in as well as the executive officers of the Senate.

The Crew team was appropriated $220 to transport three shells and twenty team members to Philadelphia where competition will be televised.

The Senate defeated a bill to loan the Flying Club $3,000 to purchase a Piper Tri-pacer and passed the University Band's Budget with the stipulation that the bands have their constitution ratified before next year.

Volpe Defends 80 Per Cent Cut in State Medical School Budget

Gov. Volpe's Wednesday press conference statements defending an 80 percent cut in the state medical school budget, were challenged on four points Wednesday by officials in Boston and in Washington.

• Volpe said a substantial portion of the budget cut came from funds for development of the medical school library. He challenged the belief of Dean Lamar Soutter that it takes three or four years to develop a medical school library. Volpe said this request should be put off a year or two.

The chief librarian at Johns Hopkins Medical School, Alfred Brandon, who has served as consultant in the development of three new medical school libraries, stresses the need to start at least four years in advance of the first class.

Brandon supported Soutter's position and told The Globe recent experience shows that those school that have "started library development only two or three years ahead of time are in trouble when classes start."

Brandon said he was hired as a consultant at the new University of Kentucky Medical School three years in advance of the first class. "This was not enough to do the job properly," he said.

Ralph T. Esterquist, director of the Francis Countway Medical Library at Harvard Medical School said: "You can't acquire books for a medical library overnight; it takes three to five years at best."

Esterquist said the experience at the University of Florida Medical School, Pennsylvania State Medical School, University of New Mexico Medical School, and other new or about-to-open schools "clearly show how important sufficient time is in proper development."

• Volpe defended his cutback in funds by saying that the medical school will have $90,000 left unspent from this year's budget. University officials say there is no $90,000 left unspent from this year's budget. Spokesmen in the treasurer's office said Wednesday: "There will be no unencumbered funds in the medical school account when the fiscal year ends."

• Volpe argued that funds for library development should come under capital expenditures and not out of appropriated revenues. He said this way the library will be eligible for Federal aid.

Spokesmen for the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington, who will provide the Federal library money, say the law specifically spells out the fact that books are not a capital expenditure.

HEW officials said the law, signed in Oct. 1965, provides money for construction of buildings and for equipping the building but says "books are not to be considered part of the equipment and are not eligible under this section."

There is some money available to help establish "regional medical libraries." Officials said that if the state medical school qualified, money might be available in this way. However, they said current acquisition "will in no way affect future Federal money either as to amount or probability of approval."

• Volpe said he had no knowledge of the university's displeasure with his budget until a week ago. He said the trustees have Turn to MED SCHOOL, p. 2

Tarsis to Speak on "Ferment in Russia"

On Thursday, May 12, in Bowker Aud. at 8:00 p.m., the Distinguished Visitors Program will present a lecture by Valery Tarsis, Russian writer and literary critic, recently granted asylum in the West.

TARSIS, a specialist in Western European literature, has had two books published in the West, Bluebottle and his recent work, Ward 7, inspired by Chekhov's Ward 6. This latest book of Tarsis is an expose of present-day conditions in mental hospitals under the Soviets.

When Chekhov was writing, the patients were at least mental cases; when Mr. Tarsis wrote his book, only one out of 6,000 inmates was, he reported, actually a mental case.

THE REST had been incarcerated because their writings or public utterances criticized the Soviet government, its restrictions upon creative endeavor, and its stifling of all progressive or imaginative activity among artists and the intelligentsia of Soviet Russia.

But it was Bluebottle, a thinly veiled attack on Russian communism, which brought about his arrest and sentence at Kashchenko Mental Hospital in Moscow. Thanks to pleas from distinguished literary people and constant pressure from newspapers on this side of the Iron Curtain, the writer was released in February 1963, after seven months of confinement.

WHEN WARD 7 was published in London, it was immediately hailed as a literary work of high order and widely discussed throughout the world. Although the book was sold under his real name, Tarsis remained free in Moscow, ironically protected by a Soviet law that forbids criminal prosecution of any person who has been declared insane.

Finally in February 1966 the Russian authorities saw their opportunity to rid themselves of this vocal dissenter when he applied for a travel visa. As the author explains it: "Those in authority thought it best to let me go in the hope that I would not return and I could be branded as a traitor."

HE DID REQUEST asylum from the British government, which was granted him; and promptly the Soviet government stripped him of his Russian citizenship.

But Mr. Tarsis says that Russia is seething with unrest; he hopes to return to Russia, when the forces of freedom have prevailed, to take his rightful place among the artistic community of his beloved country.

Africa Important Force, Says DVP Speaker

"Africa is emerging as an important force in the world scene. The successful growth of free, peaceful African states is crucial to the future peace of the western world," according to Dr. William H. Martin.

Speaking at the Distinguished Visitors Program May 4, the State Department's education advisor for African affairs said that Africa is working toward self-government and a better standard of living.

In this respect, it is obtaining in a short time what other areas took centuries to achieve.

"When the U.N. was founded in 1945, only four African nations were independent," Dr. Martin pointed out. "Thirty-three others have become free since then, and four others are expected to by 1967."

During this "era of rising expectations," Dr. Martin said, African leaders are under pressure to either respond to their people's demands or make room for other leaders.

"The Organization of African Unity has assumed great responsibility in politically modernizing and unifying the continent. Proof of this is OAU's work in the Congo and in the Ethiopia-Somalia border problem," the educational advisor for African affairs explained.

Economically, Africa has progressed from a low-base subsistence economy to one emphasizing money.

"The Liberian gross national product rose 5.3 per cent in a four-year period, and Nigerian agriculture increased 23 per cent in less than a decade," Dr. Martin said.

Editor Gets Motivated:

Reports on Turbine Test

Editor-in-Chief Donovan, behind the wheel of the Chrysler Corp. Turbine Car (top), test drives Chrysler's latest turbine-powered offering while a Chrysler driver whisks about in a turbine 1954 Plymouth Sport Coupe (above). "Way back when," was Chrysler's first attempt (successful) at powering a production-line automobile with a turbine engine.

by TOM DONOVAN, Editor-in-Chief

That's the kid driving that Chrysler Corp. Turbine Car down Route 116 last Wednesday.

That's right, Chrysler came to UMass and gave free rides in their Turbine Car to faculty, administration and students as part of a cross-country effort to test driver and public relations as well as to acquaint the public with the fruits of Chrysler's turbine research dating back to World War II days.

Driving the bronze two-door hardtop, one of fifty hand-crafted vehicles with bodies built by the Ghia people in Italy, isn't comparable to a great many other things except perhaps to driving an outstandingly luxurious, perfectly functioning automobile with incredibly smooth engine response and handling.

Oh, and one other thing. This car is designed to make a snob out of anyone.

After settling into the most comfortable seats one could imagine, the most distinctive characteristic is the feel and sound of the engine. The phrase "feel and sound" is deceptive. There is no feel to the engine. When you turn the key, the engine starts without even the vibration to produce a rattle in a glass of water.

The sound coming from the engine is both characteristic and pleasing. The two most prevalent comparisons are to a jet or a high-class vacuum cleaner. After driving the Turbine, I prefer comparing it to a jet. All that's missing is a set of wings and a pressurized cabin. This car has everything else including a turbine inlet temperature gauge (normally 1,700 F.) and a first stage turbine wheel rpm gauge (22,000 idle to 44,600 rpm maximum).

One of the major difficulties in the earlier Turbine cars which Chrysler engineered was engine lag. In the 1954 Plymouth using Chrysler's first-generation turbine, this meant stomping on the gas and waiting seven seconds for something to happen. In today's Turbine, engine lag has been cut to slightly over one second, identical in virtually every driving situation to a regular production piston automobile.

The amazing torque of this turbine can't be overlooked. With four people aboard, a full tank of diesel fuel (or kerosene, gasoline, and perfume) and a special body weighing an additional 600 pounds, the engine was fully as powerful and peppy as a sports car.

My thanks go to Chrysler for their Turbine Car and to representatives Dave Jolivet and Larry Wondro, who admitted that the only thing they haven't burned in the Turbine is good, 12-year-old Scotch.

Deans First, Architects Later
For U.M. Med School

Testimony will be offered Thursday to a select Senate committee purporting to show that there was an effort by the lame-duck Volpe administration in December, 1962, to appoint an architect to design the University of Massachusetts Medical School.

That was during Gov. Volpe's first administration, at a time when it had not been determined where the facility would be built or who would be appointed its dean.

The seven-member Senate committee investigating the office of Commr. of Administration and Finance John J. McCarthy is scheduled to hear eight witnesses when the hearings resume at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Among them will be S. Peter Volpe, brother of the governor and an officer in the John A. Volpe Construction Co., who volunteered to testify.

He did so after Gov. Volpe and Commr. McCarthy two weeks ago described him as an unpaid consultant in the selection of Ritchie Associates, one of a team of three architectural firms chosen to design the $50 million medical school.

The five Democratic members of the select committee met Tuesday and Wednesday to work out ground rules for the session Thursday expected to last seven or eight hours.

It was learned that the testimony relating to the attempt to choose an architect for the medical school in 1962 will be based on minutes of a meeting of the UMass trustee committee on buildings and grounds.

That meeting was convened at 12:30 p.m. Dec. 18, 1962, at the Student Union on the university's campus in Amherst.

The minutes disclose that on Dec. 12, 1962, the chairman of the trustee committee on buildings and grounds and other university officials had met with then Commr. of Administration and Finance Charles A. Gibbons at the request of the commissioner.

The minutes disclose further that prior to the Dec. 12 meeting it was made clear to the entire Commission on Administration and Finance that the university's trustees had reaffirmed their recommendation not to choose an architect for the medical school until its dean had been selected.

"At the meeting," the minutes reveal, "the commissioner on administration and finance indicated that there was a strong desire to appoint an architect for the medical school despite the board recommendation that no architect be appointed until a dean is selected, but that the question of selection of an architect for that school would be removed from the immediate agenda of the meeting.

"The chairman reported that he and Dr. Boyden had been requested by the commissioner to meet with the commissioner and the governor on Dec. 19, 1962.

"After general discussion, there was a consensus among the members of the committee that the position of the board should be fully reconfirmed, especially with respect to delaying the selection of architects for the medical school until such time as a dean of that school has been appointed."

Hatch and Self-Curfews

Maybe an All-Nighter

By RICHARD DANCA
News Staff

Extension of Hatch and Student Union hours as a result of elimination of women's curfews is a possibility that has not yet been officially considered by the Student Union Governing Board (SUG), according to Sheila McRevey, Student Union Program Advisor.

If the SUG Board were to act on changing SU hours, it would be through recommendations to Dean of Students William Field, as a representative of the President.

Miss McRevey said she feels the SU staff and SUG "wouldn't close their eyes to something the University needs."

She said in a Collegian interview that there are "many more" SUG Board meetings before summer vacation when the Board could initiate extensions.

She also said she feels no action will be taken before SUG "confers with individuals with knowledge of all the University."

If no action is taken before summer, SUG's power is transferred to the head of the Student Union, Dr. Mark Noffsinger.

Miss McRevey said Dr. Noffsinger has full power to make the changes, but would most likely poll the SUG Board members by mail before making a decision.

She also said "I would think that it wouldn't be likely that the Hatch would remain open all night, even if the hours were extended, because of the personnel problems it would create."

Symphony Band Presents
Annual Spring Concert

The University of Massachusetts Symphony Band, conducted by John A. Jenkins, will present its Spring Concert on Sunday, May 15, at 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. This concert has no admission charge and is open to the public.

THE FIRST HALF of the program will present Symphony No. 19 in Eb, Opus 45 by Nicholas Miskovsky. This four-movement work, composed in 1939 for the Moscow State Band, is of melodic and harmonic interest. It originally consisted of only the first movement, but Miskovsky was encouraged to add the last three movements by the great success of the work. The Symphony begins and ends vigorously and optimistically.

The second movement is a symphonic waltz, while the third movement is meditative and serene.

Included in the second part of the program will be Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral from Lohengrin by Richard Wagner and Jubilation, an Overture by Robert Ward. The overture, written by Ward during his service in World War II on Okinawa, reflects his preoccupation with jazz.

THE BAND also will play the Athletic Festival March written by Serge Prokofiev for the Goldman Band, and The Purple Carnival March composed by Harry L. Alfred and dedicated to the Northwestern University Band.

Theater Presents "View from the Bridge"

A scene from Arthur Miller's "A View From The Bridge," season's final production by the University Theatre that begins a four-day run Thursday, May 5. From left, Philip Fisher of Worcester as the longshoreman Eddie Carbone; Rita Crosby of Gill as his niece Catherine; Peter Stelzer of Longmeadow as Rodolpho, who loves Catherine. Performances will be at 8:15 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The University of Massachusetts Theatre will close its busiest and most successful season this weekend with a four-day run of Arthur Miller's A View From The Bridge.

DIRECTED by Harry Mahnken with set design by Dale Amlund, the powerful drama will be seen Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 6-8 at 8:15 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

The Miller play tells the tragic story of longshoreman Eddie Carbone, Eddie's wife Beatrice, his niece Catherine, and Beatrice's two immigrant cousins who find a safe harbor in Eddie's home after illegally entering this country.

One of the smuggled immigrants, Rodolpho, falls in love with Catherine, incurring the violent wrath of overly-suspicious and jealous Eddie. Eddie in turn meets scorn and an untimely death when he reports the two to the immigration authorities.

Philip Mallet, a grad student from Conway, plays Marco, the other immigrant.

A View From The Bridge first opened at the Coronet Theater in New York in 1955 as a one-act play. Its powerful, vivid story was well received and the play was expanded to full length. It has since enjoyed many long runs off Broadway, in this country and abroad. It was Arthur Miller's fifth play to reach the Broadway stage, joining the ranks of such greats as The Crucible, Death of a Salesman, and All My Sons.

THE UNIVERSITY THEATRE operates as a performing arts laboratory under the drama faculty of the UM Speech Dept. A View From The Bridge is the sixth production of this season. Earlier works included The Fantasties, a musical; the world premier of The Martyred, a play based on the novel by Richard Kim; and One-Way Pendulum, the first UM Master of Fine Arts Thesis production.

All seats for the play are reserved. Tickets are available from the Box Office, Student Union, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and will be on sale at the door.

Honors Student Locates Locke Philosophy in Steine

by EILEEN MANLEY

Ed. Note: This is another in a series of Collegian articles spotlighting University Honors students and their quest for academic excellence.

That the philosophy of John Locke was of particular influence in the 18th Century can easily be demonstrated in the works of Lawrence Sterne, an English novelist and clergyman.

So says Nancy Moulthrop, an English major at UMass, working on her Senior Honors project, "Locke and Sterne in Novels and Writing."

It's because of a long-time interest that I have had in the 18th Century, particularly in Sterne, that I chose the topic I did," Miss Moulthrop remarks with a smile. "I had read several of Sterne's works, including Tristram Shandy. I knew that, like many 18th Century authors, Sterne was greatly influenced by John Locke."

MISS MOULTHROP'S research starts by finding traces of Locke's philosophy in Sterne's novels. Then she refers back to Locke and locates the specific principle Sterne used.

"I am using Sterne's Tristram Shandy in particular," Miss Moulthrop adds. "I had read it once, but for my research I reread it."

Sterne's Tristram Shandy is a novel consisting of 10 books; when the author started on this work he proposed to publish two volumes a year.

According to busy Miss Moulthrop, a native of Becket, Tristram Shandy is a humorous account of the happenings between the members of family living at Shandy Hall in England. The main character is Tristram Shandy, whose grandfather gave his name to the family home.

MISS MOULTHROP continues: "Locke had many works I could use for reference, but I am concentrating on his Essay on Human Understanding. In this essay Locke discusses the source of people's ideas. He begins by saying 'There are no innate ideas... people get ideas from experience.' In the same essay, Locke emphasizes the intellect and human reason."

The ever-smiling, 21-year old Miss Moulthrop started her research last fall. However, she began thinking about it earlier, in the spring of '65, when she received a letter inviting her to participate in the program.

"SOON AFTER I received the letter from Prof. A. Elkins, director of the University Honors Program, I had an interview with Mr. Ernest Hofer, assistant head of the English department. I had to suggest to him topics I thought would be interesting," Miss Moulthrop said.

"As Prof. Alex Page, who is chairman of my research committee, was away in Europe last spring," she continued, "I myself, made the final decision as to my topic-subject, of course, to Mr. Page's approval."

From her research Miss Moulthrop has drawn several examples for comparison of the two works. One of them involves a definition of the conscience. From Sterne she quotes: "The mind knows its texture and fineness... conscience is nothing else than the mind knowing this... and making approbation and sanction upon our actions."

ACCORDING to Miss Moulthrop, this is related to Locke's idea that the conscience, working within the capability of one's mind, judges the "moral rectitude" or "degradation" of one's actions.

Another quotation from Sterne states: "Brisk trotting and slow organization, like wit and judgment, were two incompatible qualities." Miss Moulthrop relates this to Locke's theory that men with wit and prompt memory do not always have the best judgment and reason.

This soft-spoken girl will take an oral examination April 15 to defend her final research conclusions.

"FIRST, I must submit my findings and conclusions in written form," Miss Moulthrop explained. "I'll have to present this paper to each of the three members of my committee. They are Prof. Alex Page, English Department; Prof. Morris Golden, English department, and Prof. John Brentlinger, philosophy department. They are the ones who will examine me."

NANCY MOULTHROP

The function of this committee has been to advise the researcher and examine her conclusions. "They have been of great assistance," Miss Moulthrop asserted.

Besides the time spent on her research, Miss Moulthrop is also active in the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship and the National Council of Teachers of English. Upon graduation, she wants to teach English at the junior high or senior high school level.

WHEN she has spare time, she enjoys reading. "I'll read anything I hear is good," Miss Moulthrop laughed, "but I don't limit myself to novels or the best sellers. I think I became interested in English mainly because my father always encouraged the children to read."

This small, brown-haired, blue-eyed girl judges the Honors Program as "very beneficial, especially to the students' minds. I only wish I had more time to donate to it."

Golfers Whip HC

UMass won its fourth golf match in six decisions by toppling Holy Cross, 4-2. Bob Lawrence's 74 and Jim McDonald's 76 represented the best scores for the Redmen. Other winners were Joe DiDonato, Vin Puglia, and Ed Polchlopek. UM has already equalled last year's victory total and Coach Gladchuk is optimistic about his team's chances for victory in the Yankee Conference championships to be held at Portsmouth, N.H., this Friday.

Book Award

"The Great White Fleet" by Dr. Robert A. Hart, assistant professor of history at the University of Massachusetts, has won an award for the best 1965 book by an Indiana author.

The book was begun as a doctoral thesis while Dr. Hart was studying at Indiana University and was completed before he joined the UMass faculty a year ago.

It was published in Oct., 1965, by Little, Brown and Co. of Boston.

The book tells the story of America's first big bid for international prestige via the round the world cruise by 16 white battleships in the Teddy Roosevelt era.

He suggested that an African Common Market may be in sight, with the continent beginning to use its natural resources to the fullest.

Dr. Martin recognizes five basic problems confronting Africa in its development.

"Encouraging an attitude of self-determinism, and African solution of African problems are necessary," he believes. "Trade must support the increasing standard of living. Armament should not be beyond national need."

"Finally, other free world countries should be encouraged to fulfill their responsibilities toward Africa," Dr. Martin emphasized.

A Way Other Than Running?

By CHET WEINERMAN, Editorial Chairman

I'm taking golf in gym. It's not meant to be a tough course.

The rules are simple. One is given five balls at the beginning of class. After everyone has finished shooting, each person retrieves five balls, walks back, and prepares to shoot again. So simple.

At first things worked fine. But then something happened. I'm not sure exactly when, but the walk became a run, and for some reason those that continued to walk could find only four balls, then only three. Meanwhile, those who ran got better at the game; their five shots seemed to become six, then seven. Sometimes, there would be extra balls or two stuffed in left pockets. And even the total number of golf balls went down after each class. The runners wanted outside practice, too.

Lately I've noticed the runners are playing a much better game than the walkers—the few walkers who are left, that is.

I'm still walking to get the golf balls. My game isn't very good. I only get one or two shots now. I guess it's supposed to be a walking game, but if I'm ever going to improve at golf, I'm going to have to start to run, to start putting one or two in my pocket.

The temptation is so strong—except that I don't know if I'm quite ready to start running, and I wonder if the running and the proficiency are worth it all.

And I wonder if there is any way to get the golf balls and still not run.

The New G. I. Bill

UMass and GI Joe

By NANCY LEIBOVITZ, Editorial Staff

The new G. I. Bill recalls the days following the end of World War II. The late forties represented an exciting period in the history of growth and development at the University.

The year was 1946, when the soldiers of the nation turned student. Hundreds of veterans, streaming back from the war, flooded the UMass campus to take advantage of the educational opportunities offered by the first G. I. Bill. Now and varied housing units dotted the University grounds to absorb the great influx of students.

The first returning soldiers spent their nights in Ft. Devens and their days commuting to the UMass campus for classes. Those more fortunate G. I.s moved up to the University in the latter part of the year, where they found domicile in five barracks buildings christened Commonwealth Circle. Today Commonwealth Circle is a home for cars behind Draper Hall.

The remaining bachelor veterans were integrated among non-veterans in Butterfield, Greenough, Chadbourn and Thatcher dormitories.

The married veterans also lived in great luxury. Many took up domain in 2 trailer camps which stood on the present sites of Machmer Hall and the general maintenance building.

From 1946 to the early 1950's other G. I.s found housing in the Federal Circle complex, now a parking lot in front of the new administration building. Then in 1948, the County Circle Apartments were completed and by the late 40's, most of those couples housed in Federal Circle had migrated to the newer accommodations. One by one the Federal Circle buildings were demolished.

Graduation figures for the year 1950, illustrate clearly the great impact of the G. I. on UMass. 600 single veterans and 200 married veterans comprised over 70% of the 1,100 graduates.

The new G. I. Bill will not necessitate bringing back the trailer camps, but it will influence what is written in the future chapters of UMass history.

Reforms at Last

Can We Keep Them?

By JACK DEAN, Associate Editorial Chairman

By approving the recommendations of the Student Life Committee, President Lederle and Dean Field have demonstrated their faith in the student body as responsible adults. But students should in no way interpret this action to mean that the administration has become subservient to them. Such changes often breed overconfidence, and overconfidence on the part of the student body could easily result in the loss of that which has been accomplished through much hard work.

These reforms, attained by a progressive, forward-looking student body, were brought about by peaceful, sensible means in an adult manner. The University Reform Committee, the Women's Affairs Committee, and the Student Senate united to attain these goals with the support of the communications media and the student body in general. It is interesting to note that these results were achieved by these means rather than by demonstrations or by violence. The administration was obviously impressed with the sincerity of the students.

Yet if we now abuse these newly-acquired rights and responsibilities, doubts which filled the minds of the administration during the early stages of the reform movement will return. The next time students desire a change it will be twice as hard to articulate.

If we expect to hold on to these new freedoms and responsibilities for which we have strived for so long, and if we have the slightest idea of working for more reforms in the future, then we must continue to act as responsible adults.

Odyssey For a Degree

To the Editor:

Being a rather mild mannered individual, I have always attempted to live my life according to the principal of 'Live and let live'. However recent developments concerning my future, academically speaking of course, have forced me to speak out. Suscribing to the afore mentioned philosophy you may well understand that my plight must indeed be serious if it behooves me to take such drastic action as writing to this great publication. For in my four year battle to push back the frontiers of ignorance I have remained adamantly neutral concerning the burning issues of Greek vs. Independent, noise in the library, liquor in the dorms, sex 'round the pond, the I.B.M., as well as the bomb.

But alas, I find that my preoccupation with being UMass' answer to the Beatles' Nowhere Man has resulted in what could be termed at best a Pyrrhic victory. For just as Tantalus reached in vain for the fruit that hung above him, I now find that after three years of relative peace of mind, as well as having amassed 128 credits in my academic egg basket, I am not going to graduate on schedule this June.

Yes, I was one of those Seniors summoned to the Dean's office on the 18th of April after having received a form letter informing me that I would not graduate because I had not fulfilled the requirements of the College of Arts and Science. May I point out that the above mentioned letter in no way indicated in what area I was deficient. The letter simply advised me to contact the Dean's office if I had any questions. Needless to say, I did have a few burning inquiries to make, namely, what the hell was going on? After waiting my turn I was told that I had not fulfilled by foreign language requirement.

Now let me point out that I have studied the French language for 13 years, (8 years in elementary school, 4 years in Prep school, and 1 year of advanced French at another college.) Upon transferring to UMass, I presented the University with a letter from the college I had transferred from which outlined the French course I had taken at that institution. At that time I was assured that I had indeed fulfilled my foreign language requirement. At the risk of blowing my own horn allow me to point out that during my Freshman year in High School I took a course that approximates the University's French 107-108.

Well now, after explaining this to 8 or 9 different people and losing almost an entire day's worth of classes, I was finally assured that beyond the shadow of a doubt I was qualified to graduate this June. It is just one week later and I have received still another letter again stating that I will not be able to shake our President's hand in June.

During my odyssey for the elusive degree I was told that this action resulted because of faulty communications between South College and the Dean's office. I was also counseled to remain patient in dealing with such matters, after all we do have thousands of students.

But just as the student is urged to quit rationalizing his failures in the academic world by blaming them on the pressures of this modern age, I would like to respectively submit that those responsible for this gross bureaucratic inefficiency stop rationalizing their failure by blaming it on the size of the student body. In short, if some of those that inhabit South College are unable to make the transition we have made from an agricultural college to a "great institution of higher learning" where education is an "adventure" (no pun intended), would it be too much to ask that some solution be found?

I do not pretend to have the solution and do not feel that as a student it is incumbent upon me to find a solution. I do not believe that it is an unreasonable request to expect to graduate after having fulfilled all the requirements necessary for becoming UMass' answer to the Renaissance man. I also feel that it is not outrageous to receive this degree without having to chase back and forth between Bartlett Hall and South College.

If, however, my thoughts on the matter are the products of an overbearing and selfish mind, may I apologize to all concerned. May I suggest that if the appointees of Gov. Bradford are to remain in their various positions, we notify the Massachusetts Tourist Bureau so that guided tours may be provided through South College so that all the world may witness the great bastion of Elizabethan efficiency and office procedure.

Letters to the Editor

From Amherst College:
"Come on Over!"

To the Editor:

Some students at UMass may have read in the Amherst Student the comment by an unthinking Amherst alumnus about his potential daughter-in-law. I would like to let UMass know that Amherst students generally do not agree with this alumnus. We hope that UMass students, coeds especially, will not consider his remarks a reflection on Amherst College. The more people I get to know well, the more fun I have, (and if you want, the better my chances of marrying.)

So anybody is welcome on my campus, for TGIF, to talk, to get pinned, for anything. Slight preference is given to members of the fair sex, but the name of your school and the color of your hair don't matter. Come on over.

Campus Comedy

During the student demonstrations at the University of California, an elderly woman approached me on the Berkeley campus. Assuming that she was a tourist in need of directions, I prepared myself for the usual questions: "Where is the Administration building?" or "When does the library open?" Instead, she queried eagerly, "Can you tell me at what time the afternoon demonstrations start?"

A college girl we know is still undecided about her future career. When a new acquaintance came up with the inevitable campus query, "What's your major?" she replied, "English."

"Oh, do you plan to teach?"

"No," she replied.

"Then what do you plan to do with it?"

There was a pause. "Talk, I guess."

Bring Them Home!

There is an old saying "Give a dog a bad name and kill it." Namecalling can be an effective substitute for argument. Senator Joseph McCarthy succeeded in delaying liberal movements by calling liberals "Communists" or "soft on Communism."

President Johnson's statement that we will not "scuttle and run", meaning that we will not withdraw from Vietnam is more than a brilliant metaphor. It is a stroke of genius. It appears to have persuaded many Americans that there would be something shameful in letting the Vietnamese settle their own affairs. Even Americans who have seen clearly and said plainly that our entering the civil war was a tragic blunder often add that now of course we can't just pull out.

No one doubts that we could blast the whole of Vietnam to bits. To choose an opposite course is not to "scuttle and run" from the relatively puny forces of our opponents.

The recent anti-Ky and anti-American demonstrations in Saigon, Danang and Hue have shown that we have no reason to stay in Vietnam. They have hereby sharpened the contrast between the President's metaphor and the facts.

Although it has always been obvious that the generals we support in Saigon were not popularly elected, and just as obvious that they govern only a fraction of South Vietnam, we have tried to justify our interference on their side in the civil war by a more or less tacit assumption that popular support of the generals within the Saigon fraction of the country is clear and that, therefore, we should consider them a "legitimate government" for the entire country.

The premise does not support the conclusion. And the premise itself, if it was ever tenable, has now ceased to be so.

I for one see no remaining reason why our fighting men should not be brought home as fast as our ships and planes can carry them. If the President were to bring them home instead of sending still more of them to kill and be killed in Vietnam and devastate the country, he would lose face with those who, like General Ky, the so-called Premier of South Vietnam, want the United States to attack China, which might lead to the final holocaust.

But the President would gain the esteem of almost all humanity, including most of the people of South Vietnam.

Which one will it be? Which of these UMass beauties will be chosen Miss University and given the chance to represent her school at the Miss Massachusetts finals?

It won't be easy for them. At the ceremonies, to be held in Bowker on Friday, May 6, they will be judged on their carriage, poise and overall charm in bathing suits and evening gowns. Also, each will be required to give a demonstration of some special talent.

The winner will be given the opportunity to compete in the Miss Massachusetts finals, and perhaps the Miss America Pageant at Atlantic City. She will also receive a trophy, fame, and fortune in the form of a $200 scholarship. The second-place winner will receive $100, and third place is worth $50.

Webster Boys To Read for Seven Days

Next week is Webster week, so the residents of Noah Webster House are going to pull seven consecutive all-nighters—reading the dictionary.

The seed for this was planted Wednesday night at one of Webster's infamous "Dorm Dinners" by Dr. Stanfield of the Sociology Department. The idea caught on like wildfire and now there's no stopping the Websterites.

Here's the plan: At one o'clock this Sunday afternoon, Chet Weinerman, President of Webster House, will begin reading Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary aloud. He will read for a half hour and then be replaced by another Websterman who will in turn be replaced after a half hour. These half hour readings will continue in Webster's lounge day and night for seven straight days.

If you would like to hear the melodious voices of some of the boys of Webster House, drop by the lounge Sunday or any time next week.

Men Set New Fashion Pace —

With Wild Styles!

THE MOD LOOK: Chuck Close, on the left, wears a blue and white polka dot shirt, a red polka dot tie, and black Spanish boots. Kurt Meier, in the middle (who was afraid his mother would see the picture wears a black and white sports jacket, light blue herringbone slacks, a flower-print tie, and grey pinstripe shirt. Aaron Bean, on the right, sports a madras suit.

What is happening to the typical collegiate look for men? As the House of Walsh puts it: "There's a trend away from the overly casual look towards the more 'style-conscious' look."

Men's CPO jackets (chief petty officer), pin-striped shirts and levis will always be classic dress for campus men. However, there are new trends originating from Europe that are already appearing in modified degrees on campus.

by JENNIFER FINKLE,
Feature Staff

One of the prophets of the British Mod movement, John Stephens, has promoted bell-bottom trousers, vinyl vests, cambray shirts, flowered neckties, plaid swimming trunks, and the double-breasted suit. This fashion trend is surely trying to replace the traditional Brooks Brothers image of the Ivy League look.

As Professor Wong states: "If you can't afford to buy a suit for fifteen years; the fashion is going to catch up with you."

The House of Walsh already has a stock of six-button, double-breasted blazers; the new paisley and printed shirts; along with the wider neckties.

The current fad for the four-inch necktie began in Paris by Pierre Cardin, and was quickly picked up by the British Mods. This fad has even invaded Brooks Brothers Territory. The store claims that "they are out-selling narrow ties."

As one English clothier says, "Any man wearing a thin tie runs the risk of being considered a 'rinse'." (British for "square").

Eye-blinding polka dots, wild paisleys and checks are already being worn by a few individuals on campus.

The geometric color patterns and crazy combinations of colors and designs, along with the recent pop artists, definitely help to set fashion trends.

The double-breasted suit will not flood the market this year.

since retailers have already ordered their fall lines. However, the modified version will soon be evident on campus.

Kris Kamp, a University freshman who has lived in England for a while says: "With the advent of the Beatles, England has led the trends in the pop-music scene for the past two years. They have continued this lead in fashion, as witnessed by the current 'Carnaby Street' influence."

As men's interest in fashion trends are growing, fashion magazines are devoting more room for the men.

The men's fashion director for Harper's Bazaar, J. Allen Murphy, has great imagination and a pace-setting attitude. His opinion of a man's fashion image: "A man must know his type. He should be knowledgeable about himself."

"He can develop an individual look which can be a great asset in business. A professional man must look sharp, potent, confident. Fashion can be an asset."

What about it, men—going to start setting up an individual look for future careers?

As one male student says: "University campus dress is fairly functional, but function is not nearly as necessary as it once was. There should be more individuality in dress."

Folk-Rock Group To Sing at Picnic

by BOB JOYCE

Saturday, May 14, the Freshman Class will sponsor the annual University Picnic. This picnic will begin at 6:00 p.m. on the Student Union Terrace. It includes an impressive list of entertainment.

Michael Haley, comedian who was Master of Ceremonies at the Sophomore Banquet, will start the evening's entertainment. He will be followed by "The Bitter End Singers" and a UMass group—"The Bold".

THE BITTER END SINGERS are a folk-rock group which has just returned from a six month national tour on which they received many fine reviews.

The Bold need little mention, since their reputation in the four college area is very well known. They have just cut a record, "Don't Tell Her", which will be released soon by Gateway Studios.

The picnic is open to the entire University.

The Bitter End Singers will be at Soph-Frosh picnic May 14.

Sun Safety Hints Given Sunbathers

by RICHARD DANCA

With summer getting nearer, more and more UMass students have begun their annual campaign to get a sun-tan before they leave Amherst for the summer.

Dr. Richard J. Jennings of the University Health Services gave some pointers and facts on tanning in a recent Collegian interview.

The best time to get a tan — and the worst time to get a burn — early in the season, is when the sun is directly overhead, according to Dr. Jennings. Complexion is the main determinant of time in the sun.

Dr. Jennings said redheads should not take more than five to 10 minutes of sun near noon early in the season, and even later in the season should not take too much more than that.

Brunets, too should take it easy at first, according to Dr. Jennings, but by July and August these people can safely stand two or three hours if they have already tanned.

Dr. Jennings said the safest way to tan is to get no more sun than will slightly pinken the skin each day. He said people who follow this rule will probably have a better tan than others at the end of the summer, though the method is a little slower.

This pinkness, called "erythema", indicates that the skin and its pigment cells have been stimulated and tanning will soon follow.

Some sun-tan oils and creams are very good, Dr. Jennings said, though he wouldn't want to "plug" any brand.

Baby-oil and olive oil—though the latter is "less aesthetic"—moisten the skin and protect it that way, Dr. Jennings said.

For sunburn, Dr. Jennings recommends cool soaks and ice if the burn is not bad, with aspirin to relieve the pain.

Most sunburn creams are good, he said, and many contain an anesthetic to relieve the pain of a burn.

No cream should be applied if the burn produces blisters with fluid in them, Dr. Jennings said, since applying the cream could break the blisters.

If the burn blisters, or if it produces sufficient discomfort to prevent a student from sleeping or studying, the person should go to the infirmary for treatment, Dr. Jennings said.

Students should watch their exposure to sun, said Dr. Jennings, and with proper care they can leave Amherst with a tan instead of a burn in June.

Cassirer Reports Success Of Negro Festival of Arts

by PAMELA METAXAS, Staff Reporter

"Every country sent at least one group of artists, including folklore, ballet, dancing, singing," began Prof. Thomas Cassirer of the department of Romance languages, recently returned to the University from The First World Festival of Negro Arts in Dakar, Africa.

APPROXIMATELY 40 countries were represented in the festival that lasted from March 30 to April 24, he said.

Cassirer pointed out that although most of the 40 were African countries, England, France, Brazil, U.S., Haiti and Trinidad were also part of the group.

He added that three activities were offered every evening including French and English poetry, a film series concerned with documentaries of Africa and a nightly performance on an island off Dakar dramatizing the slave-trading history in the 17th and 18th century. Besides there was also exhibitions of African art "assembled from museums throughout Africa, Europe, U.S. and private collections," he said.

"They also had a conference of writers, artists, teachers, museum directors which was held under the auspices of UNESCO that dealt with African art," added Cassirer.

THE TITLE of the conference was "The Role of Art in the Life of the People." Some of the topics discussed were the protection of the traditional African art and the fostering of indigenous tradition; the influence of African art in Europe and America; the relation between African music and jazz.

CASSIRER believed "the aim of the festival was to make the world and the African aware of the existence of African cultural tradition and art life in Africa today." He pointed out that Leopold Senghor, Pres. of Senegal, feels that is just as important for the Senghor, Pres. of Senegal, feels that it is just as important for the develop economically."

Cassirer emphasized that the festival, the first of its kind, was extremely successful in terms of the art exhibits and the performances by the countries. He believed the festival achieved its purpose in that it brought people together while emphasizing the differences between people and their art, even on the same continent.

Theoretically the festival is to be held every five years, he concluded.

UM Women to See 'Trial by Jury'

The annual meeting of The University Women will be held on Wednesday, May 11th at 7:45 p. m. in the Newman Center.

AS ENTERTAINMENT for the evening, the Simsbury Light Opera Company will present Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury." Produced in London in 1875, the operetta was the first work written as a partnership between the librettist W.S. Gilbert and the composer Arthur Seymour Sullivan. "Trial by Jury" is a one-act musical satire on the 19th century Breach of Promise Court.

The Simsbury Light Opera Company of Simsbury, Connecticut is celebrating its 20th anniversary and presented "Cox and Box" in Amherst three years ago. The company is especially well-known for its performances of Gilbert and Sullivan and for its generous contributions to charity and welfare projects.

THERE WILL BE NO admission charge for members. Husbands, escorts, and guests (persons not eligible for membership in The University Women) are cordially invited and are asked to pay a small fee for dessert and admission. Reservations should be made by calling or writing Mrs. George Agrios, 20 Valley View Circle, 253-2673 or Mrs. Richard A. Rohde, 820 No. Pleasant St., 253-7770.

Oxford Program

UM Students Plan Summer Abroad

By FRANCES DUNCAN

The University of Massachusetts goes abroad! On June 27, 1966, the 121 students accepted for the Oxford Summer Seminar will leave for England for six weeks of active living and learning in a British atmosphere.

THIS UNIQUE summer program was developed by U-Mass in conjunction with Oxford University. Six fully-accredited American seminars will be taught by Oxford dons at St. Hilda's College, Oxford. The courses include: Modern Novel, Chaucer, Literary Criticism, The Renaissance in England, Modern British and American Drama and Modern Poetry.

Dr. Ernest Hofer, Associate Head of English at UM and director of the Oxford program has developed an exciting program which will allow the student to study and play as hard as he is able and to derive the most possible benefits from his stay in England.

In addition to the courses being offered (each student is enrolled in two) a guest lecturer will speak on each Wednesday night during the summer. An exciting academic aspect of the program will be the fact that Bodleian Library, possibly the greatest University library in the world, has offered to allow the Seminar to use the vast facilities, for research, study, or plain enchantment.

FOUR SATURDAYS will be spent in guided tours so that the student may absorb the atmosphere of British living. These tours will include a trip to Stratford to see a Shakespearean play, a great country house tour to Luton Hoo, Hampton Court Palace, Syon and Hatfield, a visit to Cambridge University, and to London for the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace, a play, and a Hofer-inspired pub crawl.

The students will have one free weekend to explore on their own. Before the end of the program (August 8) a party will be held at Alvecot Lodge, in the Cotswolds, one of the several hunting lodges of Henry VIII and now owned by two Americans, Mr. and Mrs. John Tilley.

The Univ. of Mass students presently engaged in a massive reform program will be aghast at St. Hilda's curfew—12:00 midnight, every day of the week. The general information sheet for St. Hilda's college states: "A bell will be rung 10 minutes before all meals. Will members please be prompt for meals."

OF THE 121 STUDENTS participating in this program, 40 undergraduates and 26 graduates are from the Univ. of Mass. and 22 undergraduates, and 33 graduates are from among other colleges which include Dartmouth, Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst, and Notre Dame.

As Dr. Hofer addressed a meeting of the students on April 16, 1966, he had this advice, "Remember: you represent your American college. Make your work your special concern. Let's agree to work hard and diligently in order to play hard."

Poetry Reader

A UMass junior has been selected to represent the University of Massachusetts at the Inter-Collegiate Poetry Reading Festival, May 7, at Emerson College in Boston.

Edward Solomon, a recreation major from Natick, will attend the Festival along with representatives from other northeastern colleges.

Theme of the festival is "Commentary on the Twentieth Century by Twentieth Century Poets." Solomon will read Langston Hughes' "Brass Spittoons" and Karl Shapiro's "Elegy for a Dead Soldier".

Take your good time going home.

Fly half-fare on Eastern via Florida.

Florida swings in the spring—but it really swings in the summer.

Lower off-season room rates are in effect. And Eastern will take you to Daytona or Ft. Lauderdale or even Miami for half-fare.

So take a detour and enjoy it on your way home. Or go home first and down to Florida later.

Just use your Eastern Youth ID card, or similar card from another airline. If you don't have such a card, it's a snap to get one—provided you're under 22 and can prove it. For the specifics, stop by a Travel Agent or any Eastern ticket office.

Once you have your card, you can get an Eastern Jet Coach seat for half-fare. You can't make an advance reservation. But if there's a seat available at departure time, you can fly to any Eastern destination within the continental U.S. including Florida.

Dr. Maki Named Director Of Center of Asian Affairs

A leading U.S. scholar of Far Eastern affairs, Dr. John M. Maki, has been appointed professor of government and director of a newly-created center of Asian Affairs at the University of Massachusetts, effective September 1, it was announced today by Dr. I. Moyer Hunsberger, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

DR. MAKI has devoted the major part of a 32-year career to a study of Japanese politics and government, has studied in Japan and has published approximately 30 articles and several books in his field.

"The appointment of Dr. Maki to the faculty marks another important step in the efforts of the University to broaden its curriculum to meet the needs of today's students," said Dean Hunsberger in announcing the appointment. "All American schools and colleges provide opportunity for study of western civilization, but as a nation we have directed relatively little attention to the study of the peoples of Asia and their cultures. The headlines in the newspapers are a continuing reminder of our need for specialists with broad knowledge of the Far East."

Chorale and Chorus Prepares For Annual Spring Concert

by KAREN SHELLEY

The University Chorale and Chorus are preparing for their annual Spring Concert, on May 22. The Concert will include a cappella piece by the Chorale and the Madrigal Singers, and Bruckner's Mass in E minor by the Chorale and Chorus. The Concert will be directed by Dr. Richard du Bois, Director of Choral Music at the University, at 4:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

A HIGHLIGHT of the performance will be several selections from The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam set to music by Dr. Richard du Bois, and sung by the Madrigal Singers.

The Mass by Bruckner will be sung by a combined chorus consisting of the Chorale and the University Chorus, about 120 voices in all. The Mass includes the six parts of a mass: Kyrie, Gloria, Sanctus, Benedictus, and Agnus Dei.

The Chorale will sing several a cappella pieces which include a selection of Scarlatti, "Exultate Deo" and a selection of Carissimi, "Plorate Filii Israel". Those who heard the Winter Concert will remember the "Autumn Madrigal" by Arnold Freed; this concert includes Freed's "Summer Madrigal".

THREE PIECES which are planned for the Concert will be especially memorable: One is the beautiful "Nachtwache" by Johannes Brahms; another is the arrangement of nursery rhymes by Ralph Hunter which proved to be an unparalleled success on tour. The third piece is "Go Down, Death" by Tom Scott. Accompanied by bongos drums, this song is based on a chant from the Sea Islands off of Georgia and has the power to lift the audience right into the heart of darkest Africa.

This free spring concert should be a compelling, unique performance; everyone is welcome on May 22, 1966, at 4:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Christian Science Film Shows World-Wide Movement

by JOHN CUSHING

Last Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Student Union, the Christian Science Organization at UMass presented a film open to the public, The Story of Christian Science.

The purpose of this film is to give the non-Christian Scientist a brief look at the religion, its teachings, including some answers to today's seemingly many problems, its world-wide movement, and many of its other aspects.

THE FILM gives a quick review of the life of the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy. It relates how she was led to this discovery after being healed by reading the Bible.

Erwin D. Canham, Editor-in-Chief of the international daily newspaper, The Christian Science Monitor, explains how this religion is a very "practical science." It shows us how to follow in Christ's way.

THE FILM proceeds to touch on many subjects. It briefly describes the daily lesson that each Christian Scientist reads and shows the First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts, the beginning of a Sunday service, a Sunday school class, and a Wednesday evening testimony meeting.

Also mentioned is the special meeting for college students from all over the world, held at the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston. At this meeting, held every other year, problems of college life are discussed.

The role of Christian Scientists as ministers and Protestant chaplains for the armed forces is stated. Also, the role played by practitioners is brought out.

THE DIFFERENT periodicals are presented. All started by Mrs. Eddy, they play a large part in every Christian Scientist's life. They include the previously mentioned Christian Science Monitor, and the Journal, Sentinel, and Herald.

Finally, the film has the First and Second Readers of the Mother Church answer questions put to them by a non-Christian Scientist. These include questions and answers concerning the teachings of Christian Science and how they may be applied to everyday situations. They show how Mr. Canham's statement that this religion is a very "practical science" is proven.

FROSH DROP 6-5 ENCOUNTER TO HOLY CROSS INVADERS

by TIM MURPHY

A capricious cross-field wind hampered both teams considerably but Holy Cross' young Crusaders overcame the gusts to eke out a close 6-5 decision over the UMass Frosh Wednesday at the Pasture.

Wind-blown hits were spewed all over the diamond and a bloop single to center ushered in the winner in the eighth inning. With the score favoring the Crusaders by 5-4, HC second-sacker Jeff Lyons tied into a Larry Pearlman curve and banged the ball for a single. A two-out pass to Ed Cooney put runners on first and second.

Frank Casey then delivered his hit with the runners moving on the pitch. UMass center fielder Al Seibert sprinted in but the ball faded away from him. A last minute dive saw the spunky Seibert trap the ball as he fell to the ground while Lyons crossed the plate with the sixth HC tally.

The never-say-die Redmen came back in the ninth frame as John Mitsakos landed on second after a miscued toss. Seibert, playing his finest game of the year, singled sharply to right to plate Mitsakos and put UMass one down. Holy Cross pitcher Bill Close, 220 pounds strong, then bore down to retire Warren Barrett on a bunt out and Lonnie Lehrer on a fly to second. After walking pinch-hitter Clark Henebry, Close struck out Pearlman, making his first start of the campaign, to end the game.

The Redmen hopped off to a fire-brand start as DiSarcina, the proprietor of two hits in the encounter, tripled to deep right field. Al Craig's singleton to center sent DiSarcina scampering home with the first UMass counter. Tough Tony Chinappi clouted a breeze-blown double to center as Craig took third. Two ground outs and a whiff retired the home forces.

In the second inning, HC jumped on Pearlman for three base hits to load the sacks. Two bases

Mays, Indians, Bucs Shine

by MIKE CURRAN

Going into Thursday night's action, the Cleveland Indians and Pittsburgh Pirates hold slim leads in the American and National Leagues respectively. The Tribe is being closely pursued by the Baltimore Orioles and the Bucs are a nose in front of the San Francisco Giants who took a three game series from the Dodgers at Candlestick.

Willie Mays connected in the fifth inning of Wednesday night's game against Claude Osteen to break Mel Ott's lifetime National League home-run mark of 511. Mays needs 202 more to catch the great Babe Ruth who poled 714 round-trippers with the Red Sox and Yankees.

Max Alvis and Frank Robinson are fighting for the batting lead in the Junior loop while Joe Morgan and Ken Boyer lead the National circuit. Roberto Clemente and Carl Yastrzemski, two of the game's more consistent hitters, are making early bids for the top.

The Boston Red Sox may give Manager Billy Herman the ax unless the club starts to produce. Haywood Sullivan, Bosox GM, the man who brought you Dan Osinski, Bob Sadowski, Eddie Kasko, Joe Christopher, and Darrell Brandon, among others, is rumored to be the successor to Herman's post.

Statistically, the Atlanta Braves have hit 27 homers to lead the majors in that department, while the "powerful" Finley fiascos, the Kansas City Athletics, have managed only two.

Fred Whitfield, "Nuzz's Nemesis," has continued where he left off last year in his personal crusade against the Yankees. He has beaten them four times already this year and last season produced five winning hits against the New Yorkers.

Snakebeaters Topple Middlebury

by TOM FITZGERALD

At 5'7" Howie Goffman was the smallest man on the field. The diminutive attackman, however, came through in a big way for the Redmen in Wednesday's game against Middlebury, scoring three goals and helping UMass to a crucial 7-5 victory on the wind-swept lacrosse field.

Thanks to Goffman's "hat trick," Kevin O'Brien's two goals, and single tallies by Martie Kalkow and Dick Howe, the Redmen boosted their record to 4-3. Saturday, the lacrosse tribe will try to do something the baseball team couldn't do—scalp UConn at Storrs.

With seven minutes gone in the second period and UMass trailing, 3-2 attackman Goffman went to work. A wild scramble took place in front of the Middlebury net just after an O'Brien shot had hit off the handle of Panther goalie Bayard Russ's stick, and Goffman was there to tap the ball into the goal and tie up the score.

Shortly after the four-minute mark of the second half, Dick Kent, fighting hard to keep the ball in the offensive zone, flipped the ball to Bob Murphy. Murphy passed to Goffman, who quick-wristed it into the net, making the score 4-3, with UMass ahead to stay.

Martie Kalkow relayed a shot off the stick of Tony Arneri on an extra-man play two minutes later, to put UMass up by two, and Dick Howe followed with a goal from in close with all of one second left in the third quarter.

Goffman, a junior from Randallstown, Md., led off the fourth period offense by batting in a pass from Kalkow at 4:39 while Middlebury was short a man.

Midfielder Jim Allen, who played an excellent game for the visitors, initiated a Middlebury comeback with a goal at 7:55, just seven seconds after Redman defenseman Brad Stokes was waved off for slashing.

Although Allen was subsequently thwarted by two superb saves by UMass goalie Bill Sinclair, his teammate Fred Beams, Middlebury's best, hit the scoring column in spectacular fashion with nine seconds left on the clock. After being stymied for 59 minutes and 51 seconds by the UMass defense and Murphy in particular, Beams fired with his peculiar half-side-arm-half-under-arm motion and hit the target from 35 feet out.

The first period ended with Middlebury on top, 2-1. Bill McCollom drew first blood for the Panthers before three minutes had elapsed, with an assist coming from Pete Kirkpatrick.

O'Brien knotted the score at 9:26 after working his way by several defenders to get in good scoring position. Allen and Kirkpatrick pushed Middlebury into a 3-1 edge, Allen on a wide-angle shot with five minutes left in the first period and Kirkpatrick on a dash down the middle at the start of the second period.

O'Brien's second goal came on a power play at 6:08 of the second quarter and cut the gap to 3-2. It was the first of six straight goals for the Redmen, who outshot the opposition, 52-

Agnoli, Baldwin, O'Connor Lead Frosh By Dean, 8-2

Two - goal performances by Don Agnoli, Sandy Baldwin, and Kevin O'Connor paced Coach Frank Shields' freshman lacrosse squad to its fifth straight victory as the Little Redmen subdued Dean Jr. College, 8-2, last Tuesday at Franklin.

Steve Anderson and Gary Vassar registered solo tallies, while assists were executed by Ken Hubbard, with two, and Agnoli and O'Connor, with one each.

Goalie Mark Schlossberg and defensemen Jim Pye and Tom

Coach Shields

Tufts shone as the Little Redmen's defensemen limited Dean, whose previous low was eight goals, to only a pair of offensive thrusts. The club, which remains unbeaten, will try to put a leash on the Little Huskies of UConn in its next tilt on Thursday.

the mound and stood with hands on hips as the plate umpire beckoned Seibert to the plate.

It was a tough loss for the Frosh who left thirteen men stranded, and at one point collected three straight hits without scoring a run. The yearlings now stand at 2-2 with victories over Amherst and AIC. HC, though pushing across six runs, left eight men on base, four in the last three innings.

Saturday's game, originally scheduled at Storrs, will get underway at 2 p.m. at UMass

Prestige Battle at Stadium Tomorrow

Ambition vs. Tradition: Gridmen Face Grads

by GLENN BRIERE

UMass football fans will be able to get a preview of the 1966 Redmen in addition to seeing former UM stars as the Varsity meets the Alumni tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Alumni Stadium.

The game will wind up Coach Vic Fusia's spring practice sessions. Fusia feels that he has accomplished his major objective during the spring training. "Although we still need polish, we certainly haven't lost the ability to hit," the coach said. "We have been striving to find replacements for our two outstanding ends, Bob Meers and Milt Morin, and a defensive halfback to fill Lee Biron's shoes. We think we have several players who with experience will be capable replacements."

Fielding a strong 31-man squad, Coach Chet Gladchuk's Alumni promise to give the Varsity a rough game. With 21 professional players and nine graduating seniors, they include most of the seniors from tured two Yankee Conference titles and the UM teams of 1963-64-65, which compiled a record of 23-2. The largest delegation is from the Tangerine Bowl outfit of 1964.

For the varsity, three regular lettermen will be out of action on Saturday. Halfback Bob Ellis, who has a shoulder injury, will be on the sidelines in addition to center Dan Harrigan with a back injury and guard Bob Santucci with a knee injury. Soph Bruce Gombar, freshman Jeff King and junior Dan Glogowski will fill their positions.

Two NFL and one AFL club will be represented in the game, in addition to a host of Continental and ACFL players. Bob Meers was drafted by the Minnesota Vikings, Phil Vandersea by the Green Bay Packers, and Jerry Wheelchel was recently signed by the San Diego Chargers as a defensive back. Wheelchel played for the Holyoke Bombers last fall.

Last spring, in the first annual contest, the varsity nipped the Alumni, 6-0, on Dick Benoit's touchdown. Tomorrow's contest promises to be just as exciting. The donation will be 50 cents for students and $1 for adults. The game is being sponsored by the Varsity "M" Club.

Trojans Pace League

by DAVE JARNES

Rain, which has been the spoiler of the softball schedule this spring, again took its toll on Tuesday's games.

The Wheeler Trojans remained in first place in the West League with a close 5-4 win. Carroll's winning run in the bottom of the sixth provided the Pins with their first win, a 4-3 decision over the Hi-Lo's.

THE PLYMOUTH PATRIOTS continue to lead the South League after their 12-0 romp over the Colts. In other games the Birch beat the Bengals, 7-1, and the Commanches rolled over the Cherrys, 17-3, as Longo contributed four hits to the victors' attack.

A penalty kick by Marty Smith in the last 30 seconds gave BKP a 1-0 soccer win over KS. Both teams were undefeated going into this game and the high caliber of play displayed by both houses was of championship quality.

JACK THOMAS AND JIM OLMEDO each booted home two goals as the Aces toppled the Flaming A's, 4-1. Robert's two second half goals provided the difference in Dave's Dud's 2-1 win over the Chow Hounds. TEP blanked ZN, 2-0.

Freshman wrestling Coach Maurice Brosky defeated Al Garsys for the independent title in badminton. Ron Merrill has reached the finals in the fraternity division while Adam Horne and Randall Helwig are dorm finalists.

In mixed doubles tennis, the teams of Howie Sandman-Sharon Brown and Joe Sargent-Christine McCallen won their opening round matches.

The Yankee Conference championship could be decided today and tomorrow as the UMass baseball team invades Maine for a pair of decisive battles with the Black Bears.

Bill Smith and Carl Boteze, the two UMass pitching aces who have been less than impressive in their last starts, are the probable hurlers for the game for the invaders. Scheduled to pitch for Maine are lefthander Gordie Engstrom, owner of a 3-0 record and an ERA of 1.55, and junior righthander Terry Ordway, who was the losing pitcher in contests with Rhode Island and Vermont. He is 2-4 overall.

UMass has a record of 5-1, while Maine is one game behind at 4-2. If the Redmen can sweep the series, they will clinch at least a tie for the title. If they split, they remain a game ahead. But if Maine wins both, the Black Bears will take the lead with only two games left.

The Stench of Politics

Quality Ignored as Beacon Hill Compromises on Med School

Politics are casting a shadow on the future of the University of Massachusetts medical school.

When the Legislature appropriated the first $200,000 in 1962, there were visions of a first class institution.

Today there is doubt.

From its inception, the school has been in political difficulty. When the first funds for planning became available, everyone predicted confidently that the first class of students would enter in the Fall of 1967.

Dean Lamar Soutter, who accepted the challenge of building an excellent new med school, now struggles to salvage his dream.

The first halt came with site selection.

A committee of the trustees was named to screen possibilities and make a recommendation. The new dean assisted.

There were surveys and expert witnesses. Everything suggested that the medical school should be built on the campus at Amherst.

While Dr. Soutter worked, alliances were forming among the trustees along political lines.

Dean Soutter made his recommendation for Amherst, but this was ignored as the political lines hardened.

More surveys, studies and expert witnesses were called. They were unanimous for Amherst.

The political battle was now between Amherst and Boston. Dr. Soutter, a sensitive man of high ideals, put his support and prestige behind Amherst. No action was forthcoming; time slipped by. The trustees committee was deadlocked.

As the pressure grew, politics came out of the back rooms. One of the trustees polled the Legislature to see where members wanted the school built.

In a last desperate effort to break the political deadlock, the national consulting firm of Booz, Allan & Hamilton was hired to recommend a site. It selected Amherst.

Cardinal Cushing publicly called for a decision so that the med school could move ahead.

The full board of trustees met for the crucial vote. The balloting was secret, in violation of the intent of the state's open-meeting law.

Amherst and Boston were deadlocked. The political forces favoring Boston could not be beaten. Springfield was tested as a compromise but could not muster the necessary votes.

On the fifth round of secret balloting, Worcester emerged the victor in an obvious political compromise.

A $50 million project, the UMass med school, will stand in Worcester, a compromise to politics.

This was the first major setback for Soutter. He was estranged from his own trustees and faced with building a med school where he did not believe it belonged.

When he accepted the position of dean, friends had warned him that he would never be able to build a quality med school "with Beacon Hill paying the bills."

A close friend said, "He has never been fully able to accept Worcester; that was 'Bemi' Soutter's first compromise with quality."

During the early months of 1965, Dr. Soutter ignored the knowing glances and comments from his colleagues and plunged into the job of screening architects and planning development in Worcester.

By Fall, recommendations for architectural excellence were submitted to Gov. Volpe.

Again the shadow of politics fell across the state med school—meetings, delays, maneuverings.

Dr. Soutter did not know of the intrigue behind the scenes, but he knew that no action was forthcoming.

In February the governor's office announced its recommendations. Named was an architect who had never built a med school or a teaching hospital.

Campus Hails Queen Judy

Judy Sturtevant, a junior from Milton, evening-gowned, belled-bottomed and swim-suited herself to the title Miss University Friday night in Bowker Auditorium at the first annual Miss University Scholarship Pageant.

The pageant, sponsored by the Revelers, and the Amherst Jaycees, is an official preliminary for the Miss America Pageant. Miss Sturtevant will go to Attleboro in July to compete in the Miss Massachusetts contest.

Dressed in a white satin gown with black sequined shell top of her own design, Miss Sturtevant accepted the honor at 10:30 after being chosen from five finalists selected from the 13 contestants.

Elizabeth Eastman, junior from Seekonk and Mary Ellen Quigley, Springfield sophomore, were chosen first and second runners up by the five judges.

Freshman Jacqueline Faustine and sophomore Diane Baker were the other two finalists.

Miss Sturtevant is in Kappa Kappa Gamma, Miss Eastman in Sigma Sigma Sigma and Miss Quigley in Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Competition at the pageant was divided into three categories: evening-gown, talent and swim-suit. The judges cast ballots for each event.

In the evening-gown competition, the 13 girls appeared together in a picket-fenced flower garden, lighted in pink then blue light.

Master of Ceremonies Ray Castelpoggi described each girl's gown as she walked to the front of the stage and on to the red-carpeted runway.

All 13 hopefuls again appeared together after their individual promenades.

Mabel Bendiksen, the present Miss Massachusetts entertained with four songs while the contestants prepared for the talent competition.

Performances included poetry interpretation, modern dance and piano solos.

Miss Sturtevant appeared in blue bell-bottom trousers with orange striped cuffs and matching jersey to sing "Honey Bun" from the musical "South Pacific."

First runner-up Elizabeth Eastman presented a pink dress which became six different outfits, her own creation.

Mary Ellen Quigley, second runner-up, played the Polka-Dot Polka on the piano. See pictures, page 2.

Contestants Sparkle With Charm and Beauty

Feminine glamour and talent were in abundance at the Miss University Pageant.

At left, Mabel Bendiksen, Miss Massachusetts, crowns Judy Sturtevant, as M.C. Ray Castelpoggi hands the new Queen her trophy.

Miss Sturtevant will compete in the Miss Massachusetts Contest this summer in Attleboro. A $200 scholarship is among the many prizes awarded to Miss University of Massachusetts.

Pageant Sidelights

Nervous Tension Mingles With Gaiety

By BARBARA PROKO

A basement dressing room made stark and white with fluorescent lights and three walls of mirrors bulges with clothes, hair spray cans, suitcases, and girls.

"What are you going to do tonight, girls?"

"Smile," chorus the 13 contestants in the Miss University pageant.

A pink-gowned blonde perched on a white porcelain sink proclaims enthusiastically, "I took two Excedrin—I feel so great!" Leaning back, she nearly knocks over a can of Babbitt's bleaching cleanser.

Upstairs, Reveler stagehands scurry around, moving props. Miss Massachusetts, sitting on the sidelines, smiles constantly speaks when spoken to.

At 8 p.m. the 13 contestants march quietly from the dressing room to the stage, the audience, and the judges.

Twenty minutes later, "the worst is over." "I'm glad we were all in that together." "Would you believe I'm shaking like a leaf?" the girls whisper excitedly after their first appearance.

Moving a piano from behind the curtain, the stagehands replace the girls on stage. The audience applauds the boys' debut.

"Did you see all those people watching us? I'm embarrassed," one mutters as he retreats into the wings.

In the dressing room, bell-bottoms and cocktail dresses replace gowns while the girls prepare to display their talent. A dark-haired contestant rehearses modern dance amid dress forms and music stands.

"I still feel great," the pert blonde announces. Scooping up a mouthful of water at the sink, she hits a bottle of hand cream and misses the Babbitt cleanser by an inch—again.

Trellises are replaced by beach umbrellas as the stagehands work behind the curtain. More relaxed now, they toss a beachball around until a voice booming "Two minutes!" clears the stage for the contestants' final appearance.

The boys huddle around the edges of the curtain. Backstage judges, they appraise and approve Miss University and her court.

Five minutes after the pageant ends, the girls laugh, chatter, throw clothes into suitcases, and leave the dressing room in a whirlwind.

"Know how I feel now? Real good!," the pert blond says.

Only the can of Babbitt's bleaching cleanser has passed through the evening unmoved, unchanged.

UMass Hosting African Guest

The International Training Program at the University of Massachusetts will play host on Monday (May 9) to 19 visitors from four African nations, and to all African students now enrolled in courses of study at the University, Amherst, Smith, and Mount Holyoke.

A luncheon honoring the 19 government representatives from Kenya, Malawi, Nigeria, and Zambia will be held at the Student Union at 12:15 p.m. At 4 p.m. the foreign visitors will join many of their fellow countrymen at the reception for all African students from the four colleges.

Attending the luncheon and reception will be officials of the four colleges, faculty members engaged in teaching African studies, student officers of campus organizations, Amherst town officials, foreign student advisers, and representatives of area news media.

The 19 government representatives from Africa will be at the University for three months for training in Extension administration, personnel supervision, agricultural development techniques, and communications.

A professor emeritus of the University, Wilbur Thies, is technical director of the group. The 19 participants are associated with African ministries of agriculture and commerce, and agricultural colleges recently established in many of the emerging nations south of the Sahara.

Peace Corp Returning To UMass

Peace Corps staff members are now visiting UMass, one of 69 top U.S. universities and colleges selected as the focus of this recruiting effort because of the number of volunteers they have produced in the past.

They will be on campus today and tomorrow to provide information on the program and answer questions.

Responding to the urgency of the Micronesian program's needs, the Peace Corps has created a new, simplified application procedure. It includes a special shortened application form which concentrates on skills needed specifically for Micronesia. In addition, tests will be required.

Exiled Author to Lecture on Russia

Valery Tarsis, the Russian writer who recently was granted asylum in the West, will lecture here on "Ferment in Russia" at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 12, in Bowker Auditorium under the auspices of DUP.

Ward 7, Mr. Tarsis' most recent book published in this country, was inspired by Chekhov's Ward 6, which was an expose of the dreadful conditions in mental hospitals under the Czar. Ward 7 is an expose of present-day conditions in mental hospitals under the Soviets. When Chekhov was writing, the patients were at least mental cases; when Mr. Tarsis wrote his book, only one out of 6,000 inmates was reported, actually a mental case; all the rest had been incarcerated because their writings or public utterances criticized the Soviet government, its restrictions upon creative endeavor, and its stifling of all progressive or imaginative activity among artists and the intelligentsia of Soviet Russia. Mr. Tarsis was one of the writers caught up in this net. For seven months he was imprisoned at Kashchenko Mental Hospital in Moscow as a "mental case."

But Mr. Tarsis was a well-known writer in the West. He had succeeded in smuggling several of his manuscripts out of Russia for publication in the free-world — Bluebottle was published in England in 1952; Ward 7 was published in the United States and Canada as well as in England. International protest and constant pressure from the free world grew so loud that the Soviets released Mr. Tarsis to his home in Moscow.

But now the quandary for the Soviet government deepened. According to their own law, Tarsis, having been declared officially insane, could not be tried, as were the two writers Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuli Daniel. And he was still a very vocal rebel against communism. When Leicester University in England invited Tarsis to come to England to lecture, the government apparently decided he would be less of a nuisance abroad than he was at home, and, miraculously, granted him a visa. Once in London, Tarsis took advantage of his opportunity and requested political asylum in England, which the British government granted him.

The United States government also granted him permission to enter this country. He arrived here on May 2nd and will fill several speaking engagements while he is here. He will remain in this country through June, when he returns to Europe for lecture commitments there, and returns to the United States in October for a coast-to-coast lecture between October and mid-December.

'Free University' Created at UM

Four college students, faculty, and area residents are being invited to help establish an experimental educational center to be opened this fall.

This center plans to offer unconventional courses and educational programs chosen democratically by participants and not available in regular universities.

More informal activities — a coffee shop and craft workshops are also planned.

A small group of students and teachers have held preliminary meetings and have tentatively planned the organization of the "free university." They hope this summer to rent and furnish a house to use as a center.

COLLINS ...

Under Collins, Boston embarked on a vast program of urban renewal and other improvements.

Boston was cited by Look Magazine and the National Municipal League as an "All American City" in 1963. In November of that same year Collins was re-elected to a second term. He was chosen president of the 15,000 member American Municipal Association and became a member of the executive committee of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

This spring and fall, all interested persons will be asked to submit a description of programs they'd like to participate in.

These descriptions are to be compiled and circulated to the group. People with related interests would form preliminary groups, and then plan and conduct their own program.

Study areas already suggested include Black Nationalism, Alienation and Revolution, Writing Workshop, and a Folk Music Workshop.

There will be a meeting open to everyone at 6:30 on Tuesday in Council Chamber B to discuss these plans and modify them where necessary.

On June 11, 1964 Collins was awarded an honorary Doctorate of Laws degree by Harvard University, the first time in its 330 year history that Harvard had granted such a distinction to a Boston Mayor.

Time magazine featured John F. Collins on its cover, the first time a New England Mayor has been so singled out, and in an accompanying story described him as "the ablest Mayor Boston has had in a quarter of a century."

In sponsoring the Mayor's visit, the four classes hope an opportunity will be afforded everyone who wishes to meet, question, or speak personally with the Mayor.

COMMENTARY

Vietnam Swallowing American Funds

Editor's note: Reprinted from May 6 Commonweal.

Officially, the Defense Department does not know what the war in Vietnam will cost America, and is not even trying to find out. "Our business is to support the conflict there. Our business is not cost accounting," said one Pentagon official, striking a most unusual note for a member of McNamara's band.

All this amounts to saying that the Defense Dept. is not telling, rather than that it doesn't know; for orders for military goods must be placed well in advance. (While the Pentagon estimates Vietnamese expenditures in fiscal 1966 at $4.6 billion, the extra contract awards for the same period are running at a rate of $6.6 billion.)

Employing evidence like this, and scouring around Washington for whatever else would help, Fortune magazine has been able to do what the Pentagon supposedly cannot: cost out the war.

In its April issue, Fortune estimates the current cost of the war at $13.7 billion a year. But Fortune, presumably with access to excellent sources, goes further: "U.S. Senators who know what Defense Dept. witnesses say in closed congressional hearings have predicted a U.S. buildup to 400,000 men, or more."

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, has reportedly requested a buildup to 400,000 by the end of December.

"With that many U.S. servicemen in South Vietnam, the cost of the war would run to $21 billion a year—even more if bombing and tactical air support increased in proportion to the buildup on the ground."

But that might not be the end of it either. Last December Time reported that field commanders in Vietnam were asking not for 400,000 but for 480,000 men by 1967 and that if Hanoi responded in kind (which it has been doing) U.S. military planners predicted a commitment of 600,000 men before the end of '67.

Gen. Harold Johnson, Army Chief of Staff, suggested not long ago that the war could last anywhere from five to fifteen more years.

So add up your figures as you wish, granting huge amounts in the tens of billions as a margin of error, and the cost of a five-year war in Vietnam will approach or even generously exceed $100 billion!

So money isn't everything, especially since the U.S. (as Fortune duly points out) is a rich nation. What is at stake in Vietnam is basically lives and justice and the complicated issue of world peace or world destruction.

Nevertheless, money is important. It means resources devoted to one project rather than another. It is an indicator of what this country, rhetoric aside, truly believes in.

The U.S. is willing to spend $100 million in Vietnam, flying B-52s from Guam ($1,300 per hour per plane) to drop huge "payloads" ($30,000 per plane) into the jungle.

The U.S. pledged 1/500 of that sum to the new Asian Development Bank. In the two decades since WWII, the U.S. has given India $6 billion — and $4.5 billion was in loans.

Fifteen years ago, the U.S. dedicated 2% of its Gross National Product to overseas assistance. Today, the Administration would have the nation dedicate less than 1/2 of 1% to the same task (which meantime has grown far more pressing).

And even this proposal is being debated bitterly. But there is no question about devoting from 2.5-3% of our GNP to a war of doubtful justice and outcome.

The cost of the war in Vietnam will be, as Fortune gently puts it, "unpleasantly large." The economy will be strained, taxes will be raised, the building of the Great Society will show from the pace of a turtle to that of a caterpillar.

Yet in one sense, these results are less disturbing to contemplate than the national loss of perspective which our Vietnamese investment reveals.

Perhaps we were sucked into the Vietnamese whirlpool by a series of unfortunate commitments. But we made commitments to Latin America five years ago in the Alliance for Progress—yet Vietnam is receiving yearly more than 20 times the American resources devoted to Latin America.

Despite the rhetoric which pledges the U.S. to fight as hard against hunger, disease, ignorance and misery as against Communism and/or Chinese and Soviet imperialism, the figures tell another story.

MED SCHOOL ...

Dr. Soutter had no recourse. There was nothing he could do. The selection of architects came from the governor's office.

The pattern of frustration was complete when word came that the governor had trimmed budget requests for the school.

Not only has the money inadequate for the needs of the coming year, but all the employees had been classified "new and temporary."

The dean and the university trustees were now drawn together in a common battle to maintain some form of momentum.

Dr. Soutter summed up his despair and his frustration when he said, "The Bureau of the Budget is dictating how the medical school should be developed—as if we knew nothing about it."

Every political victory over excellence destroys some of the med school's image.

Many believe that hope for a first-rate med school is already lost.

Those who know him best say Dean Soutter will remain only as long as he believes there is still hope for a top calibre school.

Three major decisions in the short life of the school have succumbed to politics—site, architects and budget.

When Dean Soutter goes, the UM med school will have lost its last battle in the fight for quality.

We Shall Never Know

The Truth

by CHET WEINERMAN, Editorial Chairman

From its inception, the University of Massachusetts Medical School has been a fiasco; prominent leaders in the medical profession are astounded and dismayed by the manifest asininity of the concerned state and university officials. Those of us who are residents of Massachusetts accept the course of events thus far almost passively; it is both traditional and consistent with the heritage of the Commonwealth to have absurdity, ignorance, and corruption reign supreme in any project in which public funds are at stake—or rather up for grabs.

The selection of Worcester as the site for this "top-notch medical school" was the premiere abortive decision. Thousands of dollars were spent on professional advisory committees. The unanimous decision was "BUILD IN AMHERST"; it would be less expensive, there would be a better chance to obtain larger Federal aid, it would boost the general University growth, many facilities necessary for the Med School would be already existent in Amherst, there would be an increasing need to have a hospital in the Amherst area.

A case was also made for Boston; rumor was that the Medical School might operate within an existing structure, UMass-Boston was near-by, faculty would be more willing to serve in a big city, a city recognized as one of the world's finest medical centers.

But Worcester was chosen instead. Why was Worcester chosen? Why? It is not near the academic or medical community. The expense will be inestimably larger than it would have been if built in Amherst. Worcester is a dead city with little to offer a medical school. Why, against the advice of everyone? No one talks. No one knows.

After the decision by the Trustees to locate the school in Worcester, President Lederle decided the wisest course of action would be to accept the Worcester site as fact, and "make the best of the situation." But men like Drs. Paul Dudley White and Albert Edward Goss asserted that as long as a remote possibility for relocation of the Med School existed, they would do everything in their power to bring about this decision. Because these dedicated men realized that there were still legal means of recourse available, lawyers were consulted.

Lederle is not pleased about this committee (headed by White) because the President feels that the Worcester decision is beyond the point of change. President Lederle has abandoned the fight for Amherst, and now adverse pressure is being applied to those who are carrying on the fight. To those who are so concerned about opening the school exactly in September, 1969, would it not be more prudent to risk some time and perhaps open in Amherst in 1970? Indeed, the difference of one year might be costly—but what of the worth when reviewed thirty years hence. To court and gain a possible reverse decision through legal means would indeed be a supreme accomplishment. It is still within range.

The selection of Rourke, Campbell & Aldrich, and Ritchie firms as the architects for the Med School is a decision which is now shrouded with doubts, doubts concerning both the integrity of the choices and the competency of the firms to build a complex medical center. The Governor has stated that the law specifically requires that selection of architects be made by the Commissioner of Administration and Finance. This assertion seems to have petered out in the light of the recent expose involving Volpe's brother, who supposedly influenced the rewarding of this and 46 other state contracts to architectural firms who had supported Volpe in his bids for the Governorship.

Shortly after cutting the total University budget by 23%, Gov. John A. Volpe—by now a noted medical authority—slashed the Med School budget by an overwhelming 80%. Volpe claimed that a substantial portion of the budget cut came from an excessive estimate of the time and money needed to construct a medical library. Alfred Brandon, Chief Librarian at Johns Hopkins Med School; Ralph Esterquist, director of the Harvard Med School Library; UM Dean Lamar Soutter, and many other esteemed and qualified personnel express unanimous agreement that it takes 3 to 3 years to build an acceptable medical library and UM must start now in order to have one ready when its doors finally open.

But Volpe—the accepted authority in the field—feels otherwise, and thus no significant progress toward a library will be made this year. Of even greater importance is Pres. Lederle's statement concerning the budget cut and its effect upon the progress of the Medical School.

"There is simply not enough money in that budget to move ahead."

It is rumored that Volpe's anger at the Legislature for questioning the cleanliness of the architectural selections and also his long-standing tense relationship with a Democratic-appointed Lederle are two of the causes for Volpe's seemingly reckless and unconcerned decisions.

McCarthy? Contract favoritism? Lederle's submission? 80% budget cut? Peter Volpe? Ignored advisors? Rare books in one year? Personal feuds?

It can be safely assumed that we will never know the complete truth. (When do we ever?) No, we shall never know. The entire deal is enveloped in political wheelings and dealings and personalities. To even think of a "top-notch medical school" in this state was absurd. The Mc- and the rational voices of educated thought—or so it seems. At least in and the rational voices of educated thought—or so it seems. At least in the great state of Massachusetts.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Letters To The Editor

Political Sponsorship for Political Candidates

As we learned from last Friday's Collegian, in a half-page ad, the four classes are sponsoring the Honorable John F. Collins, Mayor of Boston, who will visit UMass on Tuesday.

I do find of utmost interest the fact that Mr. Keough, former President of the Class of 1968, who instigated the activity, has avowed intentions to form a Youth for Collins movement on this campus, and this summer has plans to work for Mr. Collins' bid for the U.S. Senate.

Granted, Mr. Collins' speech will probably be non-partisan. But he will receive state-wide newspaper coverage. And indeed, the fact that the busy Mayor of Boston took time out to talk with college students will certainly not hurt his image.

It was not too long ago (coincidentally) that the Honorable Mr. Brooke, Attorney General of the Commonwealth, came to speak to our campus community. And, here, Mr. LeBeau, President of the Class of 1969, headed up the activity and ran it through his Class Executive Council. Of course, Mr. Brooke was as non-partisan as possible for one who is a candidate for the U.S. Senate. But his visit was invaluable toward his political bid.

Oh, by the way, Mr. LeBeau, by his own admission, is an avid Brooks for Senate supporter.

Let us make it clear that we have the highest regard for Messrs. Brooks and Collins. Our issue lies not with them but with our class officers. Class money and prestige have been used to aid the political preferences of certain class officers. We have on campus four politically-oriented groups, who could serve the campus by sponsoring political candidates. But, why do the classes have to do so... unless you are a class officer and would like to use your power to aid your favorite man or party.

Both the Young Democrats and the Political Science Assoc. were informed that Mayor Collins will be at UM Tuesday. But, this was only after Mr. Keough had persuaded the other Class Presidents to spend class money for the event, and after they lent their class's sponsorship to the visit.

I hope that next year's class officers will have better consciences than Mr. LeBeau and Mr. Keough. Seeing that neither gentleman will be serving as a class officer next year, I do hope that their successors will think twice about misuse of their powers.

Let us have political candidates on our campus...but only under political sponsorship.

A Salute to the Administration

by JON GERARD

One thousand five hundred Jewish undergraduate students at the University would like to thank the administration for solving an annual problem which we face. For four thousand years our ancestors have set aside two days of the year, Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur, to free themselves from all mundane activities and pray in their synagogues.

We have had enough of this nonsense, but have yet to find a way of breaking the tradition. Now, the administration has cleverly decided to schedule next year's first day of classes—a day which no conscientious student would readily miss—on the sacred Jewish New Year.

They have given us justification for not having to adhere to the ritual of the most holy day of our religion. Everyone knows it is too late for "old fashioned," backward Jews to have the calendar changed. They are faced with a painful dilemma no Christian would consider imposing on his coreligionist.

We "progressives" salute you; only a well informed programming office with a great deal of foresight could have thought of such a brilliant scheme.

Next Stop: Nutrition!

To the Editor:

I think that I can speak for a great number of people who eat at the South Commons when I render my wholehearted appreciation to whomever was responsible for the modernization of the musical background there. This move is definitely a step in the right direction. Now how about the food?

"How Goes It...?"

To the Editor:

How goes it when a school of higher education closes the doors of its library early on weekends as well as close down the fraternity bars and strictly patrol lovers' lanes. With the suppression of Mass. education, Mass. drinking, and Mass. copulation, it seems as though the only thing being encouraged on campus is mass.....

Witnesses Testify on Sightings

Editor's note: The following is an account of two people at UMass who saw or say they saw a flying saucer. It seeks to answer once and for all the question "are people real?"

by RICH MORAN

A flying saucer recently appeared at UMass, according to several persons. Two of the eyewitnesses described what they saw to a Collegian reporter.

The first of these is Mrs. Harriet Smiles, who checks tickets at the Kopper Kettle.

Interviewer: Mrs. Smiles, can you tell us exactly what you saw?

Mrs. Smiles: Well, you see, I'm originally from South Hadley but about three years ago I moved to Holyoke.

Well, it was about 10:20 and my hubby had just dropped me off at work. He said "so long Harriet" and gave me a little kiss on the cheek. He always does that when he says goodbye.

Well, they call me Mrs. Smiles at work but my hubby calls me Harriet.

Interviewer: Well, Mrs. Smiles—could you—uh—get on the story?

Mrs. Smiles: Well, I was in there behind my desk checking those tickets—you know you have to check them.

There ain't no tellin' what the devil they'll try to pass off on you. Well, I had a student one time that...

Interviewer: Please Mrs. Smiles, I want the story!

Smiles: Well, as I said before, I was checking tickets when one of the students said — "Lookit there Mrs. Smiles!" and I said "Oh my God."

Int.: Well, Mrs. Smiles, can you tell me what it looked like.

Smiles: Oh my Gawd, it was awful. It was blue, red, indigo, cigar shaped, no, wait a minute, it was shaped like a box. It was emitting a bright orange light so bright that no man could look at it. Well, at least I couldn't. You see I didn't have my sunglasses on. It was 11:45 at the time and I never put my gunglasses on before noon. You know the other ladies, they kind of well, uh, um...

Int.: We don't want to get into that.

Smiles: No, I'm sure we don't! He came in close near the company and I just uh, well, I didn't know what the devil to do!! So I said go away—one of the students trowed a pie at it.

Int.: Well, Mrs. Smiles, it seems as tho it's rather conclusive that it was a flying saucer. You're rather sure that it was a saucer??

Smiles: Oh no! No it wasn't, sonny. You don't mind if I call you sonny do you?

Int.: Oh no. Just get on with the story.

Smiles: Well, as I was saying, it wasn't a saucer. It just wasn't. The reason I say that is because I didn't hear a darn thing and we all know that saucers make a strange sound. Well, at least in all the movies I saw.

Int.: Thank you for your astounding account of what happened. Well, I don't know exactly, but... well, ... Oh! Forget it, thanks anyway.

UT Play Rates 'Fantastic!'

by NANCY ABRAMS, Feature Staff

"It's fantastic!" "I'm still crying." "This is the greatest play I've ever seen!" There were some of the comments spoken by the spellbound audience as they filed out of the Student Union ballroom after the opening performance of Arthur Miller's A View from the Bridge.

One could pile adjective upon adjective and still not do justice to this perfect production of the sometimes tender, sometimes savage play. As usual, the scenery and lighting were outstanding and always in harmony with the action and mood.

The play started in high gear and kept the rapid pace without a dull moment. The highly dramatic mood was sustained throughout as the scenes showed a greater variety of emotions. And every actor and actress in the production was capable of showing these emotions in a sensitive and completely honest manner.

The story concerns a longshoreman, Eddie Carbone (Philip Fisher) and his wife Beatrice (Daphne Reed), who have raised their niece Catherine (Margaret-Rita Crosby) as their own daughter. Two of Beatrice's cousins, Marco (Philip Mallet) country from Italy and move into the Carbone's and Rodolpho (Peter Stelzer), illegally enter the Brooklyn flat.

Catherine and Rodolpho fall in love immediately. Eddie, whose love for his niece borders on unconscious incest, makes life miserable for all as he tries to keep his seventeen-year-old niece from Sprite, you recall, is the soft drink that's so tart and tingling, we just couldn't keep it quiet.

Flip its lid and it really flips. Bubbling, fizzing, gurgling, hissing and carrying on all over the place.

An almost excessively lively drink. Hence, to zluopf is to err.

What is zluopfing?

Zluopfing is to drinking what smacking one's lips is to eating.

It's the staccato buzz you make when draining the last few deliciously tangy drops of Sprite from the bottle with a straw.

"Lzzzzlllupf!" It's completely uncalled for. Frowned upon in polite society. And not appreciated on campus either.

But, if zluopfing Sprite is absolutely essential to your enjoyment; if a good healthy zluopf is your idea of heaven, well...all right.

But have a heart. With a drink as noisy as Sprite, a little zluopf goes a long, long way.

SPRITE. SO TART AND TINGLING, WE JUST COULDN'T KEEP IT QUIET.

UConn Bombs Frosh

The UConn Huskies harnessed themselves to the tailwinds of a Southwestern to carry them to a 13-2 victory over the UMass Frosh at the Pasture.

Rich Rippoli, the yearlings' hardluck starter, was plagued by wind throughout his 5 2/3 inning stint. In the second inning, particularly, the gusts wrought havoc with fly balls. UConn catcher Al Beatini started it off with a routine pop to the infield. Redman third-sacker John Mitsakos appeared to have the ball easily when it blew over his outstretched glove and dropped to the ground in front of the charging Joe DiSarcina.

Terry Wolfe then drilled a ball over left fielder Tony Chinappi's head after being granted a second life when his foul pop was toyed with by the breeze. Rippoli proceeded to whiff Kevin Merli for what might have been the third out, but such was not the case. A high double to center and a triple to left-center chased in two more runs before a grounder retired the Huskies.

UConn's big righthander, Bill Hogerty, kept the UMass hickory handlers pounding the ball into the turf and permitted no such breezy shenanigans to plague his backers as had bothered the Redmen. In the eighth, however, Coach Dick Bergquist's boys, pretty well frustrated at this point, broke loose for three hits and two runs.

Al Holcomb, who pitched the final two innings for UMass after taking over for Norm Elliott, initiated things with a base-on-balls. DiSarcina cracked his second single of the encounter to continue his hot hitting. Al Craig then grounded out from second to first, but an infield hit by Warren Barrett, playing for Chinappi, loaded the sacks.

Al Seibert, furthered the Redmen cause with a line shot to right field to score DiSarcina with the second and final UMass run of the long afternoon. Clark Henebry ended the offensive thrust as he rolled to the pitcher.

Golfers Take Y-C Crown

The University of Massachusetts captured the Yankee Conference golf championship by overcoming a 10-stroke deficit in the last 18 holes at the Portsmouth Country Club on Friday.

The Redmen placed first with 989 points for the 36-hole test. Second was Rhode Island with 996 points, followed by New Hampshire with 1012 points.

Ed Polchlopek of Chicopee and Jim McDonald of Springfield were the stars for the Redmen. Polchlopek placed third in the individual scoring with a 158 gross for 36 holes. McDonald was fourth with 162.

Although down by 10 strokes going into the final 18, UMass ended with a winning margin of seven strokes over Rhode Island.

Crew Victorious

In the Rusty Callow Memorial Regatta held Saturday in Worcester, the UMass varsity crew finished second and the JV crew first in their respective qualification races in the morning.

The afternoon finals saw the varsity contend with 30-mile-per-hour winds to take third place. With a tremendous finishing sprint, the Redmen leaped from fifth place to finish behind victorious Amherst and runner-up Wesleyan.

The Jeffs cruised the 2000-meter course in 6:44 with UMass turning in a 6:55. The UMass crew consisted of Ben Oldham (bow), Phil Dunn, Roger O'Donnell, Glenn Chaple, Jim Scott, Barry Beswick, Bob Hanson, Neil Patterson (stroke), and Al Gobeille (coxswain).

The junior varsity rowed second in the finals behind Trinity. The J.V.'s took a 30-second sprint halfway through the race, putting them in good position to turn in a 6:46 time as opposed to Trinity's 6:40.

Tracksters Lose

Getting beat in their specialties, the jumping and running events, the injury-hampered track team fell to a strong Colgate squad 97-57.

The meet started off with an oddity when Art Larvey beat John Medeiros in the broad jump. John could manage only 21'2", but that was good enough for second place behind Art's 21'8". Co-captain Bob Murray remained undefeated in the pole vault as he cleared 12'6" and was followed by Dave Lizotte at 11'6". The triple jump, another stronghold of the Redmen, was nearly swept by Colgate, but Larvey jumped into second place with a clutch effort on his last jump.

Bob Karagosian keeps narrowing in on the 160 foot mark in the hammer throw. He threw 159'8" as he and Court Bassett took 1-2 in the event. Bob Delue flipped the javelin 188', the best of his life, but only got a third for his effort against the record setting Colgate thrower. Once again the Redmen were swept in the shot and discus.

In the running events the Redmen usually excel, but they got "run over" by Colgate. Ace sprinter Steve Burrell pulled a muscle in the 440 relay. Steve, who won the Yankee Conference dash indoors, will probably be lost for the season. Art Larvey came through in fine style with a win by inches in the 100 in the fast time of 9.9, and finished a close second in the 220 in 22.0. John Andersen ran a school record 49.4 in the 440 but placed behind some strong Colgate boys. Greg Bowman had the same problem in the half-mile. He ran a fine 1:55.5, but got beat by a half second.

The team's next and final dual meet is tomorrow at Holy Cross.

1-Game Lead with 2 to Play

Redmen Split Crucial Maine Series

Boteze Wins 3-2; Babyak, Vyce Star in 3-run 9th

by DAVE JARNES

UMass traveled to Maine this weekend needing a split of their two game series to retain first place in the Yankee Conference. The Redmen got that split, winning Friday, 3-2, and dropping Saturday's game, 6-2. Friday's game was a real thriller. Maine started the first inning with singles by Norm Tardiff and Tom Farrell to put runners on first and third with nobody out. At this point it looked like Carl Boteze might be heading for a shelling similar to the 18-2 Connecticut debacle.

Carl got out of the inning unscathed, however, forcing Dick Devarney to ground out, getting George Ferguson on a popout, and striking out John Gillette. Carl wasn't quite as fortunate in the second when Maine pushed across a run with "Stump" Merrill's wrong-field double and Steve Sones' bloop single. After the second Boteze bore down and didn't allow a run until the ninth.

Meanwhile, the Redmen were able to do absolutely nothing against sophomore righthander Gordon Engstrom. The Maine hurler had the Massachusetts hitters baffled with his sinking slider, and the Redmen didn't get a hit until Hagan Anderson singled with one out in the sixth.

Engstrom entered the ninth with a masterful two-hitter going, but then the roof fell in, nailing with a walk, the first off Hagan Anderson led off the infield. Andy and Jim Babyak Engstrom. Frank Stewart sacrificed home the tying run with a single.

Terry Swanson hit a perfect double play ball, but Farrell booted it and UM had runners on first and second. Alex Vyce singled to bring in the second run, and successive walks to John Peacock and Jim Kuczinski brought in the final UMass tally.

But Maine refused to die. With one out, pinch hitter Darrell Hawkins drew a walk and Tardiff moved him to third with a single. A fielder's choice scored Maine's second run of the game. Dick Devarney then second, but Boteze induced Ferguson to fly out as Carl's joyous teammates mobbed him.

Perhaps the biggest play of the game came in the bottom of the eighth when UMass trailed 1-0. John Gillette hit what appeared to be a sure home run. Left fielder John Canty disappeared from sight as he chased the ball under a car. He somehow got the ball to Jim Babyak, who in turn made a perfect relay to the plate which barely nipped Gillette.

Catcher Jim Kuczinski used his 225 pounds to good advantage as he did a fabulous job of blocking the plate. Gillette was shaken up as he staggered back to the bench. If Gillette had scored UMass would have been behind 2-0. Thus, the Redmen wouldn't have been able to play for one run in the ninth by having Stewart sacrifice.

Varsity Over Alumni, 19-0

by GLENN BRIERE

A tenacious defense led Vic Fusia's varsity Redmen to a 19-0 victory over the UMass Alumni in the second annual Alumni-Varsity football game Saturday at Alumni Stadium.

The first quarter was played rougher than many spectators had expected. The varsity had the first chance to score, as a 36-yard run by junior halfback Bob Detore set them up in Alumni territory. But they lost the ball on downs, and it was the Alumni's turn.

The grads promptly moved upfield behind Jack Shroeder's passing and fullback Phil Vandorsea's running. They got down as far as the six-yard line of the varsity, but a fifteen-yard penalty moved them back and the threat was ended.

Quarterback Greg Landry's fumble on the three-yard line of the Alumni cost the varsity a golden opportunity in the second quarter. But the Redmen regained the ball on their own 32-yard line. Ten plays later Greg Landry sneaked over the line for the first score of the afternoon. Al Caruso was tackled on the extra point attempt and it was 6-0 in favor of the varsity. The touchdown came with only 32 seconds left in the first half.

Like the second quarter, the third period went scoreless until the final minute. With 48 seconds left, Landry fed a handoff to halfback Don Durkin who scampered nine yards to a tally.

In the fourth quarter, Coach Fusia tried out most of his freshmen. With 5:49 to go, a frosh passing combo clicked as quarterback Peter Foote found Mike Kehlin all alone, and passed for the touchdown. The play went 28 yards.

Greg Landry (11) passes to Nick Warnock (83) of varsity. Also pictured are Bill Conner (75) and Don Hagberg (74).

Ferris Stops Redmen In Relief, 6-2; 2 Hits for UM

by DAVE JARNES

Saturday's game started in almost the same fashion as Friday's game. For six innings UMass was held hitless by Terry Orday and got only two hits the entire game. The Black Bears picked up singletons in the third and fourth against southpaw Dave Katz. Maine scored in the third when Katz walked the opposing pitcher. Orday was sacrificed to second and came home on Ralph Bona's double. John Gillette led off the fourth with a double and Carl Merrill brought him in with a two-out single.

The 2-0 count held up until the seventh inning. Massachusetts threatened in the sixth when Orday walked the bases loaded with two out, but Terry Swanson's hot smash was turned into a force play by Dick Devarney. Orday wasn't quite as lucky in seventh as control problems proved to be his undoing. Alex Vyce led off the inning with UMass' first hit. John Canty popped out, but John Peacock hit a solid single to right. Kuczinski was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Pinch-hitter Jeff Whitney walked to force in a run and that was all for Orday. Hagan Anderson tied up the game by hitting into a force play against relief pitcher Joe Ferris. From this moment on, Ferris was virtually impregnable as he whiffed five batters in his two and two-thirds innings of relief work.

6 for Arneri

Lacrosse Takes UConn, 10-3

by TOM FITZGERALD

Tony Arneri, who works as a part-time bartender, gave the UConn lacrosse team a king-size hangover Saturday afternoon at Storrs, scoring a UMass game high for the season of six goals as the Redmen walloped the Nutmeg Staters, 10-3.

The Redmen fired four goals in each of the first two periods and outshot the opposition three to one, in lifting their record to 5-3. UConn stands at 2-3 in its first year of varsity competition since being raised from club status.

Besides the Arneri six-pack, other UMass scores were registered by Kevin O'Brien, Martie Kalikow, Howie Goffman, and Dick Kent. O'Brien, Jim O'Donnell, and Charlie Avakian contributed assists.

The hosts actually held the lead, but only for a minute and

The last of the eighth inning was a nightmare for UMass. Ferguson led off with a walk against relief pitcher Bill Smith and was sacrificed to second by Gillette. Sones hit a routine grounder to Andersen but Peacock couldn't handle the throw at first. This put runners on second and third. Ron Lanza hit a grounder to Babyak, but Jim was unable to get the runner at the plate.

Merrill singled the 2nd run across by a hit through the close-infield. Joe Ferris drove in another run with a suicide squeeze and was safe when the Redmen failed to get the runner at the plate. John Canty replaced Smith on the mound and Tardiff greeted him with a bloop hit to drive in the fourth run. Canty fanned Bona and Devarney to end the inning.

Dave Katz should be praised for his fine pitching performance. The plucky sophomore has pitched well every time out this year.

The split of Maine series wasn't too hard to take, especially when one considers that the Redmen had to battle the frigid Maine temperatures as well as the caustic remarks of the Maine fans. UMass can clinch the Yankee Conference title by beating Rhode Island at home on Wednesday and New Hampshire at Durham on Saturday. In previous meetings UMass beat Rhody, 7-0, and UNH, 15-9.

21 seconds. After Arneri had posted number one just before the two-minute mark of the first canto, Morgan flipped in a good pass from Harvey Stoler at 3:07 and Bob Gustavson tallied in a fast break at 3:55.

O'Brien, however, shot the ball off the inside bar of the goal to even the score at 2-2. His score was the first of seven straight for the Redmen.

Kalikow and Arneri (number two) both hit the scoring column before the period ended. O'Donnell scored an assist on Kalikow's shot.

At 8:40 of the second period, Goffman made it 5-2 with a quick flip past UConn goalie Skip Brooks off a pass by O'Brien. UM then scored three goals in 38 seconds as bullets by Arneri (number three and four) at 13:34 and 14:12 sandwiched Kent's first goal of the season at 13:53.

RUSSIAN EXILE TO SPEAK

VALERY TARSIIS

On Thursday, May 12 at 8:00 P.M. in Bowker Auditorium, the Distinguished Visitors Program will present a lecture by Valery Tarsis. A specialist in Western European literature, Tarsis was recently granted asylum in the West. His latest book, Ward 7, is an expose of present day conditions in mental hospitals under the Soviet. He described a state in which only one out of six thousand inmates in Soviet mental institutions was, he reported, actually a mental case. The rest had been incarcerated because their activities were considered detrimental to the Soviet society. Mr. Tarsis himself was sentenced to the Kaschenko Mental Hospital in Moscow as a result of his writings. WMUA will broadcast the speech live.

Legislature Lambasts UMass Officials On Budget Requests

The president and treasurer of the University of Massachusetts took a vocal mauling from state legislators Tuesday for allegedly trying to make the lawmakers appear to be against education and for "violating the spirit of UM fiscal autonomy." Rep. John J. Toomey (D-Cambridge) at one point denounced UM Treas. Kenneth Johnson for talking "hogwash" and told the University official, "You ought to resign," during a special hearing on UM budget requests before the House ways and means committee.

On their part, UM Pres. John W. Lederle and Johnson told the committee that Governor Volpe's office and the Administration and Finance Dept. made "errors and omissions" worth $3 million to $4 million in trimming the UM budget requests. Rep. Freyda P. Koplow (R-Brookline) accused Lederle of arguing his case for a $34.5 million budget in the press before the committee had a chance to hear him. She said his action "smacks of politics—with a halo around your head" and made the Legislature appear "anti-education."

Rep. William H. Finnegan (D-Everett) made the same charge, quoting from The Herald of Monday a report that Gov. Volpe, after meeting with Lederle, had blamed legislative delay on new taxes for present deficits and necessary spending reductions.

Lederle and Johnson were before the House committee to plead for restoration of $8.3 million cut from the fiscal 1967 UM budget by the Volpe administration. The University president had commented publicly earlier that the cut could force UM to reduce enrollment, at a time when demand for admission is rising.

LEDERLE denied that he had blamed the Legislature for anything. He noted that he had supported pay raises for legislators in the past, although Toomey told him, "That's beside the point."

Four-College Free University Plans New Concept in Education

by CLIF SNICKERS, Day Editor

Finish Folk Music 101. Red China 320. Cinematography Seminar. Sound absurd? Out of the question? It's not. For these are some of the projections of the New Experimental Education Center.

The group held a preliminary information meeting last night at the University. Similar meetings at Smith and Mt. Holyoke will be today and tomorrow, and Amherst students convened on Monday to decide just how much and what kind of organization is necessary to form the Center.

Under the leadership of half a dozen students and professors, the Experiment drew attention and interest at all four colleges, and has plans of renting a house in the fall for holding group meetings.

In the interest of educational freedom, no pattern has been established for conducting classes, workshops, or seminars. The members of a group will themselves decide what methods to use.

The formation core of the Center hopes to serve only as a clearing house for proposals.

Students or faculty of the 4 colleges may submit to the Center outlines of ideas they wish to work on in the small informal group setting that the Experimental Center will offer. Ideas thus gathered will be distributed to all Center members.

Employing only the necessary minimum of organizational structure, the Center's programs will promote an atmosphere of free interchange which cannot be achieved within the strictly regulated structure of formalized educational institutions.

The 50 students at last night's meeting and the 25 at Amherst on Monday decided on a fee of $12 per semester, to be paid by all participating—both students and professors. This "tuition" will pay for rent and equipment.

Adopting the title "Daniel Shay Center," the group agreed that the name would signify the spirit of revolution which their experiment hopes to generate.

More plans are being drawn up, based on suggestions made last night. Information and a list of current proposals may be obtained from Steve Krinsky, 405 Mills House. Krinsky is also accepting names of interested students. A mass meeting of members of all four campuses is scheduled within two weeks.

COLLINS OUTLINES PROBLEMS IN CITIES

Mayor John Collins

by JOYCE HARVEY, Day Editor

"The problem that exists in the nation's cities today exists because the federal government has been loath to leave the farms," Mayor John Collins told the audience in the Student Union Ballroom Tuesday.

The Honorable John F. Collins, Mayor of the City of Boston and candidate for the United States Senate, noted that lack of education, unemployment, and poverty are the problems of the emerging nations as well as our own cities in America.

"These are times of dilemma and confusion," Collins stated, "but these dilemmas have existed in the past, too. Now there is a large transition as the agricultural population moves into the cities. The stresses and strains are becoming more evident to all."

Noting that 55% of the American population lives on less than one percent of the real-estate with 70% living in urban areas, Collins emphasized that Massachusetts is more urban than the national average. In 1960, 84% of Massachusetts population was urban. Projection by the Arthur D. Little Co. of Cambridge, predicts that population-per-square-mile will double by 2000.

"The transition from agricultural to urban has brought new immigrants — farmers, Negroes, Puerto Ricans, the uneducated, and the unemployed—to live in the slums or create new slum areas," Collins explained. "The cities are becoming the residences of the less-fortunate of our society."

According to the Mayor, the federal government has the resources (61% of the national tax collection), but it is the cities which have the problems.

"It is necessary for us as a nation to get these resources from Washington to cities where the problems are," Collins explained. "The cities have been slow in get-

CONSTITUTION TO BE REVIEWED

by DIANE STUMPFELD, Senate Reporter

The sale of cigarettes and soft drinks will see a substantial increase again this Wednesday night as the Student Senate convenes for this year's fourth Constitutional Convention to consider all new amendments to the Student Government Association constitution. During this meeting, class officers are given all the privileges of senators. The class budgets must be passed at the convention before they can be put into effect.

One proposal being considered is an amendment by former Senator Dick Wimberly (ousted from Brett House) providing that no senator can be removed from his Senate seat unless he has voluntarily left his constituency. This assures that a senator who has been ousted from his dorm will remain representative of that dorm.

Honors Student Probes Communism, Nationalism of Vietnam

by JEAN FULTON, Honors Student

"To go like hell for two weeks and write a 70 page paper and turn it in! lots do it, but that's not the purpose of independent study," says George Hofmann, Jr., a UMass government major and senior Honors student. Since last fall he has been researching the history of the Communist and Nationalist involvement in Vietnam.

This married senior, a Marine veteran of four years, sees independent study as "an exhaustive search with the intent of formulating and writing conclusions." It should be started early and researched steadily, according to Hofmann.

At a distance, a casual observer last winter found his "Lincoln beard" immediately striking yet Dusty Hofmann is more a "neatnik" than a "beatnik." The neat and well-trimmed beard—not gone—seems to be an outward reflection of an orderly nature, the careful planning and thought which went into the preparation for his dissertation. His goals, a college education and reenlistment as an officer in the Marine Corps, are exemplified in his study of the late 19th Century origins of the Vietnam conflict.

Speaking slowly, yet with rapidly moving hands which seem to precede his most meaningful statements, Hofmann is highly motivated. His scholastic goal is high. He is dissatisfied with his 3.0 cum, commenting that "some of my friends in this project have 3.8's!"

Hofmann balances his time between classes, research and a part-time job at the Reserve Desk of Goodell Library, and frequent trips to the Harvard Library in Cambridge. Dusty, nevertheless, is not a cold or one-track scholar. His easy manner and rapidly appearing smile attest to this. Yet, Dusty is not reticent about expressing critical opinions, "If they are truly deserved," he says.

He recognizes the theory behind the Honors Program and its intention of individual and thorough study.

After a pause for thought, Dusty first evaluated the program as "misguided." However, typical of his tendency to qualify flat statements, he added: "Perhaps it's more of a supervision problem." He explained that he believes the program is not administered effectively, perhaps not carefully scheduled in some departments. "In all departments, there should be more supervision. It should be required from the beginning to show progress," he said.

The government department schedules faculty advisers, as does each department, then goes one step further: a schedule of specific dates is formed (and met), said Hofmann. While approving of this system, he would modify it to "require an adviser meeting every two weeks and a check on progress."

A close working relationship exists between Dusty and his faculty adviser, Prof. Karl Ryavec. Prof. Ryavec knows at just what stage Dusty is working. Dusty feels that this continuous contact is lacking in many departments, and that this is partially to blame for the projects which never materialize at the end of the spring semester.

Dusty's interest in his subject is deep and practical. He has been sworn into the Marine Corps as an officer candidate. While he disagrees completely with the opinion that the United States should withdraw from Vietnam, he feels that not only the independent demonstrators but also the many so-called Republicans and Democrats are in error. His careful research does not result in labelling, or name-calling, but rather in explanations and reasons.

Hofmann believes he has benefited from the Honors Program because it is a continuous project over the year in an area meaningful to him. He said: "If after writing mine I get a 'B', and a kid of two weeks' work gets an A, I'll have fulfilled the purpose of independent study—to learn more." He admits grades are important, too. Dusty feels that the advisers should not be involved in the final grading, as they are now, because they cannot be objective. He claims: "It's not fair to have him grade your work when in effect he's grading himself."

Dusty believes the Honors Program is not fully effective as an end in itself, a means to gaining three credits without class attendance. Rather, he feels that it should be a means to personal knowledge. Dusty's suggestions for study? "Supervision."

Although he does have suggestions for improvement, he stresses the project is essentially worthwhile to him.

Would he do it again? "Well, I don't . . . Well, I guess so. Yes, I guess I would, but I'd start even sooner."

Independence Celebrated At Hillel's Cafe Shalom

The Hillel Foundation is serving minors. Saturday night, at the Hillel sponsored "Cafe Shalom" students, many under 21, celebrated "Yom Hatzmaot" with Chomos Bi Tachiti, Petah and dark red mitz since these are Israeli fun foods, not liquors.

Yom Hatzmaot, Israeli Independence Day, was marked by Israeli singing and dancing and U.S. folk songs and fruging for a unique blend.

Joanne Najemy and Dave Greenstein lent their guitars to the festivities and the highlight of the party was the beautiful voice of Annetta Labourena, who has performed throughout the Boston area. She sang several Israeli and American songs, including "Shalom".

Noreen Blank and Barbara Block, coordinators of the party, said that the Cafe Shalom climaxed a week of activities sponsored by Hillel and the Student Zionist Organization to celebrate Israel's 18th anniversary.

BUDGET . . .

Of Volpe blaming the lawmakers, Lederle said: "He says those things, I don't."

Toomey's denunciation of Johnson came when the treasurer said he had discovered the alleged "errors and omissions" in Volpe's reduced UM budget only in the last few days. Toomey noted the governor's budget message had been a public document since January.

"WHAT KIND of hogwash are you trying to give this committee, for the love of heaven?" Toomey demanded. "Lou ought to resign—who're you trying to kid?" The Cambridge Democrat, a 17-yr. veteran of the committee, also demanded to know Johnson's salary, and when advised it was $20,000 a year suggested again that the treasurer resign.

The charge that UM was "violating the spirit" of its fiscal autonomy came from Rep. John J. Long (D-Fall Rv.). He cited a transfer of $800,000 from the University's permanent salaries account to pay for travel, printing, maintenance, advertising and temporary salaries.

JOHNSON denied any violation of spirit. He said the money was put in the permanent salaries account in a rush just before the last budget was enacted, with the understanding that it would be used for various purposes later.

The complaint of Long, echoed by Finnegan, involved the longstanding feeling of some legislators that their intentions on UM spending are regularly thwarted by UMass officials.

BOTH Lederle and Johnson remained calm throughout the hearing. Lederle characterized himself as "the man in the middle" between the governor and Legislature. All he wanted, he asserted repeatedly, was to give the state the best university possible.

He said the full $34.5 million was needed to upgrade the University and to make room for 1,000 new students at the Boston branch, 1,310 in Amherst and 500 anticipated new summer students.

He also asked favor—action on a UM bill to enable payment of salaries beyond the present state maximum of $21,322 a year.

DEAN Lamar Soutter of the UM med school also appeared before the committee. He asked that his $600,000 budget request be restored from the $120,000 to which Volpe cut it.

He said the money was needed to establish a library and hire professors so the professors could advise on construction and equipping of the school.

SENATE . . .

The convention will also consider an amendment which would bar house counselors from participation in any branch of judiciary. Institution of Women's Area Standard Boards (roughly equivalent to Men's Area Judiciaries) to be composed of the Southwest, the Hill, and the Quad will be discussed. Another amendment proposes voting rights on the Student Faculty Discipline Board for the chairmen of the Men's and Women's Judiciaries.

Of particular interest to the student body, are several motions on the regular Senate agenda.

The first is an Academic Affairs Committee proposal which recommends that students be allowed an unlimited number of class cuts with no penalties imposed by the faculty.

The second is a Men's Affairs Committee proposal recommending that all men's residence hall rules be made and enforced by an elected house council. House mothers and counselors will no longer make or enforce these rules.

The Incentives Sub-Committee, in its consideration of motivation and reward of student leaders, is recommending to the Provost that academic credits be awarded for executive service in the Collegian, Inder, W.M.U.A., Yahoo, Caesura, and the Student Senate.

On the order of budgets and finance, the Collegian budget is to be considered, as are the Art

Students are urged to take advantage of preregistration for summer school.

PREREGISTRATION prior to May 25 for the first session and July 5 for the second session will help to ensure pre-scheduling, prebidding and registration in the student's choice of courses and should eliminate "fighting the lines."

Catalogs and applications for undergraduate and graduate students are available at the Registrar's Office and Graduate Office respectively.

No course reservations, housing assignments, billing will be undertaken for students whose applications are received after June 1 and July 10. It will then become necessary to arrange for these at registration.

ting a voice in the Cabinet in Washington."

Stressing the need for significantly larger amounts of money for the cities, Collins observed, "If $30 billion is spent for the race in space, then 20% of the people don't need to stand in garbage in the cities."

"It isn't necessary for the young people to look to the Peace Corps for challenge," the Mayor concluded. "They just have to look around them to see that their communities and cities present challenges."

SWANK, NEW YORK - SOLE DISTRIBUTOR

Pop-Folk, Rock, Food, Fun, Frolic This Weekend

by BOB JOYCE

Eight months ago the owner of New York's "Bitter End" thought he sensed a new trend developing in the pop-rock field. HIS HUNCH started a nationwide talent search in which over 300 girls and 150 boys were auditioned. This search resulted in the formation of The Bitter End

Singers. This group is composed of three men, all of whom had previous experience with other folk groups; and two girls whose ability to sing and act is challenged only by their good looks. Since opening last August at the Bitter End they have hit it big everywhere including the White House, where they have performed twice. After conducting a six month national tour, The Bitter End Singers have now come into their own.

THIS SPRING they have appeared on Shindig, The Steve Lawrence N.B.C. follies and other nationally televised shows. "Variety" magazine says: "Lots of animation and high theatrical sight values, with strong vocal arrangements."

The Bitter End Singers will be appearing at the All-University Picnic sponsored by the Freshman Class this Saturday.

Also there will be comedian Michael Haley and "The Bold." The picnic begins 6:00 Saturday evening, May 14 on the Student Union Terrace. The public is invited.

The Bitter End Singers who have sung almost everything including at the White House, will be here to entertain everyone at the All University Picnic, Saturday, at 6:00 p.m. on the Student Union Terrace.

Media Advisors Sponsor Publications Confab

Journalism teachers and advisers to student publications from about 200 New England institutions of higher learning have been invited to a two-day colloquium at the University of Massachusetts, May 13-14.

It will be the first annual meeting of the New England Journalism Teachers Association (NEJTA), hosted by Dr. Arthur B. Musgrave, professor of English and journalistic studies at UMass.

MEETING IN conjunction with NEJTA will be faculty advisers to the student press in a colloquium sponsored by the National Council of College Publications Advisers, District One. District Chairman is Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of English and journalistic studies at UMass.

The Friday meeting will consist of reports of the journalism programs at five of the six New England state universities, as well as at Northeastern University, the University of Bridgeport and Gorham State University, Me. Also discussed at the first meeting will be the relationship between education for journalism and student publications.

SATURDAY MORNING the faculty advisers will discuss "Publishing Boards as the Answer to Publishing Problems," "Student Freedoms as Expressed at Tufts and the California State Colleges" and "Advising the Student Press—Censorship or Control?"

After a dutch-treat luncheon, a joint session will feature 20 newspapermen, all New England Newspaper Fellows at UMass, who will discuss professionalism, journalism education and student newspapers.

Webster Week Highlights:

Aardvart to Zyzzogeton

The event: the first college dictionary-reading marathon. The place: Noah Webster House at the University of Massachusetts, of course.

The time: starting Sunday, May 8, at 1 p.m. and running around the clock all week long or until the Webster House students finish reading the 2728 pages of the G. and C. Merriam Dictionary.

THEY ARE doing the reading aloud, each student taking a half-hour shift in the Webster House lounge. It's part of the celebration of Noah Webster week by the 320 men residents of the house. If they don't finish going through the 450,000 dictionary entries by the time the week ends Sunday, May 15 at 1 p.m., they plan to take up where they left off at Webster Week next year.

Webster Week includes an art show, dinner-dance Wednesday night and other events. The dictionary marathon, in the words of Dr. Luther Allen, faculty resident at the house, will be "a combination of a tribute to Noah Webster and an educational obstacle course."

Credit for the idea goes to Robert E. Stanfield, assistant professor of sociology and a faculty fellow at Webster.

The students have worked out schedules and reading rules, including provisions for waking up night shift readers, emergency substitutes and a running log.

Webster House president Chester S. Weinerman, Brookline sophomore, started the reading Sunday from a brand-new dictionary donated to them by the Merriam company in Springfield.

A majority of the students have signed up to take part; they will be aided by 12 faculty fellows and others.

At 4:30 p.m. Tuesday they were up to "balance sheet" on page 165.

Two Thoughts

"Here Lies the Basis of Democracy"

Society has an interest of its own in the freedom of its members. It is not an unalloyed interest, for individual freedom is the original hazard to social order, harmony, and united action. Screened in the case of the young by family controls, freedom is meted out by society to its new members in prudently graded instalments.

...The grant of freedom moves at a risk and every first grant of freedom is premature. Nevertheless, not to grant it involves a greater risk; for to society also, as well as to its individual members, their freedom has a positive value of an important sort.

...An unfree membership of society is one which, just to the extent of its unfreedom, does not habitually control its actions by its own thinking and is therefore kept immature. Whatever the gain in social order and uniformity, no society can have an eventual interest in maintaining an immature membership; there can be no developed society of undeveloped individuals. Here lies the basis of democracy.

— William E. Hocking from Freedom of the Press

The Basis of Soviet Freedom

... In Soviet thought freedom and responsibility are not merely associated, they are inseparably linked. Responsibility is the hub of a wheel of which the freedoms are simply spokes.

... In the United States and England it is the freedom of expression, the right itself in the abstract that is valued; and generally no positive considerations can limit its exercise, only negative considerations such as irresponsibility so great as to limit other freedoms or to limit the exercise by others of the same freedom. In the Soviet Union on the other hand, the RESULTS of exercising freedom are in the forefront of attention, and preoccupation with freedom itself is secondary.

... It is essential ... to recognize that when press freedom is seen as a bipolar concept, it is the pole of responsibility that comes first in Soviet thought, and that exercising the right or the freedom is subordinate to the goals such exercise advances. ... If in serving these ends, the press also provides an opportunity for people to enjoy freedom of the press well and good; but this consideration of freedom is secondary in the Soviet Union to the responsibilities of the press and may be and is sacrificed if need be. In the U. S. the emphasis is placed on freedom rather than responsibility. Freedom of expression is the absolute value.

Letters To The Editor

Lions or Lambs

The most vital decision that any student body must contemplate is its relationship with the Administration and the Faculty.
Do students have rights?

Dean Curtis has said time and time again that the students make their own rules. How many times have we heard the Administration and Faculty say that the University exists because we the students make it possible. Yes, it exists because of us and for us. We are the ones who paid approximately $180,000 in Student Activities Tax to be allocated by the Student Senate (students) to various student activities. We pay for the Collegian, Cacursa, Index, etc., not the Administration or Faculty. Student Publications reflect student creativity which belongs exclusively to students. I firmly believe that activities which are student supported and express student creativity belong under student direction.

True, the proposal now before the Faculty and Student Senates is an emasculated one, unlike the one that was almost rammed down our throats earlier this year. If we the students want a Publications Board then the recently proposed Board is the one we want. But, I do not believe that the students want an overseer on campus publications. If we remain Lions and keep showing our teeth like we did on Women's Rules then reform and revisions such as those on Women's Rules will follow.

Senator from Greenough House

I Chimpanzee

There is a course on campus called Botany 101. There are approximately 450 students enrolled in it, of which 53% failed the last exam, with the rest of the marks comprised mostly of D's and a few C's. This exam was scaled by the instructor, Eugene Putala. It was after the scale that the 53% had flunked. At the top of the well-known "bell-shaped curve" was the median grade of 25/50. Yet, the grade of 25 was an "F." Is this fair?

Though the course is designated General Botany, many of the questions pertained to the History of Botany. These were not straight forward questions but, rather, picaresque, trick questions which fool even prepared students.

Mr. Putala added humiliation to defeat by using the entire next lecture for a diatribe on the stupidity of the class. He stated that anyone who studied and failed had the mentality of a "chimpanzee." At this rate there are roughly 225 chimpanzees taking Botany 101. He also compared the intellectual curiosity of the class to that of a 4 or 5 year old. Stating that there were only 5 questions that were challenging on the exam he noted that this was the "guttier course" on the freshman curriculum. Comparing himself to Einstein in respect to his individuality, Mr. Putala challenged the students to protest, even to the Governor, to make him change his ways.

Realizing that there are many freshmen in the course, is it fair that they should be exposed to such a dictatorial instructor. Clearly the scale on the exam should be changed.

Recently the Administration has shown a willingness to respond to the student protest in the line of social reform. A letter similar to this is going to be submitted to the Senate Academic Complaint Committee. Let us hope that the Administration is just as responsive to Academic reform.

How Long

Dear Sirs:

Newspapers across the state have proclaimed it—no more curfews for coeds at UMass starting next September.

What can a move of this nature (from nothing to all) indicate? Even to the new Freshman women, who once had a strict reminder, of an 8:00 p.m. curfew to remind them that they are there for academic as well as social reasons, it is now the decision of these newly emancipated girls of seventeen and eighteen to roam the streets, as some of their male classmates do, until all hours of the night.

How sad some of us unfortunate suspended students are ex post facto, being out of the hallowed halls in Amherst for the very laws that are being done away with. Do you blame us for a little well-earned bitterness? These new laws are ones the so-called "liberal" colleges such as Smith, Mount Holyoke, and even Radcliffe haven't been granted yet.

Long live UMass laws and students, but for how long??

Sam Sparc Speaks Out
Victory

Fight songs as of late have advocated a kind of suppressed hostility. They express a desire to win, but do not really mirror the violence that the spectator wishes to occur on the field. The ramifications of this suppressed hostility have significant Freudian implications. It may lead to such things as schizophrenia, paranoia, suicidal tendencies, or bad grades. But now all your downtrodden hostile people have nothing to worry about because Sam Sparc has just written the words to what he hopes will become the next UMass fight song.

ANYTHING GOES, MASSACHUSETTS

Handcuff their hands, Massachusetts,
Then throw away the key.

Tie up their feet with a square knot,
Tie it as tight as can be.

Trip them in mud when their back's turned.

Gouge their eyes so they can't even see.

Stomp their toes, bite their nose, strip their clothes-off.

Onward to victory.

Grad Student to Trace Origin Of Arab-Israeli Conflict

by AARIF GHAYYUR

The Arab-Israeli conflict will be the subject of a talk to be given tonight at the International Club coffee hour at 5:30 in the Governor's Lounge, S.U.

Guest speaker will be Hatem Hussaini, a doctoral candidate in the UMass Government Department and Vice-President of the International Club.

He was born in Jerusalem but was forced to emigrate and is now of Jordanian nationality. He obtained his B.A. from the American University in Cairo and his M.A. in Government from the University of Rhode Island.

His extensive travels in Arab countries has further acquainted him with the Palestine problem.

In his talk Hatem will trace the origin of the Palestine issue and the resulting Arab-Israel conflict.

SPRING PICNIC

The International Club Spring Picnic is scheduled for Saturday, May 14.

Participants should meet in front of the Student Union at 11 a.m. From there the group will go to the home of Ellen Castaldini in Wilbraham.

Rides and food will be provided and the party will return to campus by 6 p.m.

The picnic will cost 50c for members and 75c for non-members. Sign up at the International coffee hour tonight or in the R.S.O. office.

Hatem Hussaini will speak on the Arab-Israel conflict tonight.

METAWAMPE

How He Became a Legend

by ROBERT GORMAN, Feature Staff

Everyone on campus has heard of Metawampe, but few people know of the legend of Metawampe and how he became the spirit of the University.

Metawampe was chief of the Norwottek Indian Sachem of this area. In 1674 he deeded land, including Mt. Toby, to early settlers of Swampfield (now Sunderland).

This land was acquired by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and today is used as a forest preserve by the University.

IN 1907 several faculty members of the Massachusetts State College took a hike to the summit of Mt. Toby. They were so "inspired by the grandeur of the valley and mountain scenery" that they formed a faculty outing club for hiking in the area. The club is now the Metawampe Club.

Since 1924 the club has had an annual hike over Mt. Toby at Christmas time. After the hike, the club usually has dinner at the Parish House in Sunderland.

This tradition continued and eventually the chief became a legend. Out of this legend grew the Pipe and Hatchet orations at commencement time.

IN 1948, the athletic teams took up the name of Redmen. This prompted a desire to have a symbol of the University teams and something for the students to look up to.

Accordingly, and February 11, 1951, the Class of 1950 gave the University the bronze statue of Metawampe.

In 1948, the official University of Massachusetts seal, bearing the legendary chief, was given to the school by Professor James Robertson of the Land Architecture Department.

TODAY, the chief is honored at football rallies and each September by the incoming Frosh.

Not only is the chief a symbol of University spirit, but all students can climb Mt. Toby where the Metawampe Club still has a summit house open to all hikers.

Any undergraduate who is returning to the University for the fall semester and did not have his I.D. picture taken on consoling day may have it taken in 105 Machmer during the posted office hour.

CORRECTION: Greek Week schedule: IFC swim meet will be at 7 P.M. Thurs. May 12. Olympics and Chariot Races 9:00 A.M. at the Athletic Field.

"Salt of the Earth" Debuts In Western N.E. Tonight

"Salt of the Earth," a movie about a New Mexico mine strike, will be shown for the first time ever in Western New England tonight at 8:00 in Mahar Auditorium.

MADE IN 1953 during the height of McCarthyism, the movie was blacklisted by Hollywood and not shown anywhere until its re-release in 1965.

The producer of the film, Herbert Biberman, was accused in 1948 by the House UnAmerican Committee of being a Communist, and became one of the Hollywood 10, a group of men blacklisted from filmmaking by Hollywood.

"THE SALT of the Earth" was made by an Independent film production corporation, based on an actual strike of the Mine-Mill and Smelters Union. It was shot in New Mexico among the strikers and their families, many of the strikers acting out the parts in the movie.

The main character is played by a professional Mexican actress who had her United States visa taken away after starring in the film.

IT IS BEING presented by Young Independents, an SDS chapter. Admission is free (donations welcomed.)

UMass Theatre Director Resigns To Accept Position at Univ. of Iowa

Cosmo A. Catalano, Director of The University Theatre, has resigned his position to become artistic director of The University Theatre at the University of Iowa.

MR. CATALANO received his B.A. from Allegheny College, and his M.F.A. from The Yale School of Drama. He came to UMass in 1962 when he helped to found the University Theatre in conjunction with Mr. Harry Mahnken, Dr. Orville K. Larson, and Mr. Terry H. Wells.

Since then, he and his colleagues have worked very hard to build a professional — academic theatre on campus. Mr. Catalano was instrumental in establishing the Master of Fine Arts program in theatre at UMass, the Summer Repertory Theatre of the UMass Fine Arts Festival, many new theatre courses, and in bringing visiting professor Dr. Walther R. Volbach to the Speech Department.

His many productions here include: TARTUFFE, ANDROCLÉS & THE LION, THE TWIN MENAECHEMI, OTHELLO, THE STREETS OF NEW YORK, THE GLASS MENAGERIE, and THE MARTYRED.

BOTH THE students and the faculty are very sorry to see Mr. Catalano leave as he was an active and potent force, continually working for a first class theatre, with only the highest academic and professional standards. But everyone wishes him the best of luck in this new and wonderful position.

MR. HARRY MAHNKEN succeeds Mr. Catalano as Director of Theatre, and there is no doubt that under the skilled and capable hand of Mr. Mahnken that the theatre will continue to grow and develop as a professional academic organization whose keynote is EXCELLENCE: in education and in performance!

THE COLLEGE PRESIDENT: HIS CAUSE AND CURE

Oh, sure, you've been busy, what with going to classes, doing your homework, catching night crawlers, getting married, picketing—but can't you pause for just a moment and give thought to that dear, dedicated, lonely man in the big white house on the hill? I refer, of course, to Prexy.

It is interesting to note that college presidents are always called "Prexy." Similarly, trustees are always called "Trixie." Associate professors are always called "Axy-Pixy." Bursars are called "Foxy-Woxy." Students are called "Algae."

But I digress. We were speaking of Prexy, a personage at once august and pathetic. Why pathetic? Well, sir, consider how Prexy spends his days. He is busy, busy, busy. He talks to deans, he talks to professors, he talks to trustees, he talks to alumni. In fact, he talks to everybody except the one group who could lift his heart and rally his spirits. I mean, of course, the appealing, endearing, winsomest group in the entire college—delightful you, the students.

It is Prexy's sad fate to be forever a stranger to your laughing, golden selves. He can only gaze wistfully out the window of his big white house on the hill and watch you at your games and sports and yearn with all his tormented heart to bask in your warmth. But how? It would hardly be fitting for Prexy to appear one day at the Union, clad in an old rowing blazer, and cry gaily, "Heigh-ho, chaps! Who's for sculling?"

No, friends, Prexy can't get to you. It is up to you to get to him. Call on him at home. Just drop in unannounced. He will naturally be a little shy at first, so you must put him at his ease. Shout, "Howdy-doody, sir! I have come to bring a little sunshine into your drear and blighted life!" Then yank his necktie out of his vest and scamper goatlike around him until he is laughing merrily along with you.

Then hand him a package and say, "A little gift for you, sir."

"For me?" he will say, lowering his lids. "You shouldn't have."

"Yes, I should," you will say, "because this is a pack of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, and whenever I think of Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades, I think of you."

"Why, hey?" he will ask curiously.

"Because, sir," you will say, "though you are no longer a young blade, still you gleam and function. Full though you are of years and lumps, rheumy though your endocrines and flaccid your hamstrings, still you remain sharp, incisive, efficacious."

"Thank you," he will say, sobbing.

"So it is with Personna," you will continue. "Naturally you expect a brand-new blade to give a close, speedy shave. But how about a blade that's had hard and frequent use? Do you still expect a close, speedy shave? Well, sir, if it's a Personna, that's what you'll get. Because, sir, like you, sir, Personna is no flash-in-the-pan. Like you, sir, Personna abides."

He will clasp your hand then, not trusting himself to speak.

"But away with gloom!" you will cry jollily. "For I have still more good news to tell you of Personna!"

"How is that possible?" he will say.

"Hearken to me," you will say. "Personna, in all its enduring splendor, is available not only in Double Edge style but also in Injector style!"

He will join you then in the Personna rouser, and then he will bring you a steaming cup of cocoa with a marshmallow on top. Then you will say, "Good-bye, sir. I will return soon again to brighten your dank, miasmic life."

"Please do," he will say. "But next time, if you can possibly manage it, try not to come at four in the morning."

Victory Over URI Here Today Can Clinch YanCon Tie

by GLENN BRIERE

With just two conference games remaining, the UMass baseball team will try to clinch a tie for the Yankee Conference championship against Rhode Island this afternoon at 3 at Amherst.

The Redmen, who beat Rhode 7-0 earlier this season, are 6-2 in the conference while Maine is 5-3 and UConn is 4-3. Connecticut, after dropping its first three YanCon contests, has caught fire and has won four in a row. But if the Redmen beat URI today and New Hampshire on Saturday, the title will be theirs no matter what Maine and UConn do.

Carl Boteze, who rebounded from the UConn beating to top Maine in his last outing, figures to pitch today. Carl hurled three scoreless innings of relief against the Rams to complete the shut-out which Dave Katz started at Kingston two weeks ago. Boteze has an earned run average of 2.70 which would be much lower had he not allowed 5 earned runs in two-thirds of an inning against Connecticut.

The UMass batting averages took a beating over the weekend as the team gained a split with Maine. Terry Swanson, who went 0 for 8, dropped from .475 to .396. Hagan Andersen dropped from .366 to .357, but Alex Vyce went up to .427 to lead the team. Jim Babyak went down to .333, followed by Stewart at .279, Roy Lasky at .259, Jim Kuczynski at .238, and John Peacock at .179.

The Maine pitchers gave up only six hits over the weekend as the total batting average of the slumping Redmen nosedived from .299 to .269. Since their 15-9 win over UNH they have managed only seven runs in three games.

Sophomore lefty Dave Katz is leading the pitching staff with a 2-0 record and an ERA of 2.05, and in addition to Boteze's 2.70, Bill Smith has a 2.11 ERA.

On Saturday the team travels to Durham, N.H. for its last conference game. Maine has two games left with UNH, while UConn has contests with URI, Vermont and UNH.

Scott Hot; Marichal 6-0; Astros Surprise of NL

by MIKE CURRAN

Sparked by the hitting of Willie Mays and the pitching of Juan Marichal, the San Francisco Giants have vaulted into the National League lead. Cleveland and Baltimore are vying for the top in the Junior Circuit.

The New York Yankees, who replaced pilot Johnny Keane with GM Ralph Houk Saturday, have begun to show signs of life. Monday, the club ran its streak to three in a row as Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris connected for homers, their first round-trip collaboration since early last season.

Houston's Astros led by the hurling of castoffs Dave Gullit, Robin Roberts, Barry Latman, and Mike Cuellar and the heavy hitting of youngsters Joe Morgan and Sonny Jackson, have surprised everyone with their 15-10 record. Jackson, rookie shortstop, is first in the National League in stolen bases and tenth in hitting.

Ray Sadecki, St. Louis southpaw, was sent to the San Francisco Giants in a straight-player deal for Orlando Cepeda. Both teams figure to benefit from the deal.

The Boston Red Sox, after losing 17 consecutive games to the Minnesota Twins, broke loose for 12 runs Sunday as they swept a double-header from the surprised Twins by 8-1 and 4-1 scores.

Boston writers and fans are raving over rookie George Scott who leads the league in home runs. Here's hoping they don't jinx him with all those fancy superlatives.

Intramural Action

by DAVE JARNES

Once again rain wrought havoc with the softball schedule as all of Monday's contests were postponed. Despite the weather problems the "minor" sports were quite active.

Maurice Brosky, freshman wrestling coach, reached the finals of the badminton tournament as he posted a 15-10, 15-6 win over Bill Cannata, the fraternity champ.

First round winners in the horseshoe tournament were Howe (SPE), Allen (ASP), Cain (TKE), Mador (SPE), Larson (LCA), and Bridges (KS).

The team of Bob Pederzani-Jane Meiser and Joe Sargent-Christine McCallen have reached the semi-finals of the mixed doubles tournament while Jay Thompson-Judy Burrell and Steve Krinsky-Carolyn Burt qualified for the quarterfinals.

Sigma Delta Psi, the honorary athletic fraternity, will be holding qualifying events the week of May 16. The contests will start at 4:00 p.m. each day. Further information may be obtained from Chester Gladchuk in the intramural office.

Lacrossemen at UNH Seeking Third Straight

by TOM FITZGERALD

With consecutive victories over Middlebury and UConn behind them, the UMass lacrossemen will be hoping to find another victory in the woods of Durham, N.H., as they face the University of New Hampshire this afternoon at 3.

UNH is feeling the loss of graduated goalie Brian Poole, who was All-everything for three years as a Wildcat.

For Coach Dick Garber's Redmen, the net-minder will be Bill Sinclair, with Bob Lawson in reserve. Walt Alessi, Brad Stokes, Fred Foley and Don Rana should take up the bulk of the defensive work.

The first midfield will once again consist of Kevin O'Brien, Howe, Martie Kalikow and Dick Kent will collaborate on the Bob Murphy line, and on the attack will be Tony Arneri, Howie Goffman, Jim O'Donnell, and Frank Guidara.

Reserves who should see plenty of action are Fred Molander, Gary Palardy, Dave Kelley, Dick Mahoney, Bill DeKosa, Joe Zalkind, George Zebrowski, and John Pettazoni.

What will probably be the toughest game of the season will take place Saturday as the Redmen host Brown, currently playing havoc with the Ivy League. The face-off is scheduled for 2 p.m.

Professors: Handmaidens to Atrocity

Mayer Speaks Out

Milton Mayer spends every second year at the University of Massachusetts as Lecturer in the English Department. He is associated with the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) and has written for many magazines and journals. His books include "What Can a Man Do?"; "The Revolution in Education" (with Mortimer J. Adler); and "They Thought They Were Free: The Germans 1933-45" (which is being republished this spring as a Phoenix paperback by the University of Chicago Press).

by MILTON MAYER

I am now engaged in grading my students prime, choice, good, commercial, or unfit for human consumption. Among them are my unmarried male students between the ages of 18 and 26, a category which, since I perform in a coeducational institution, covers about half the lot. If they do not sustain a grade average in the top two-thirds of their sophomore class they will lose their deferment, or reprieve, from military service, "service" being defined as the infliction of death upon as many of their fellow-men, who have never offended them, as possible.

This recent regulation of the Defense Department (which, when this newspaper country was last at peace, was called the War Department) makes of me and every other college schoolma'm in the country its handmaidens in the perpetration of its 'round-the-clock atrocity in Vietnam. I am too old and limp to be anybody's handmaidens and, besides, I am already spoken for by, among others, the Lord and the Devil.

We schoolma'rns have in fact been filling this role ever since 1940. The conscription classification 2-S—fulltime student in good standing—has been the basis of deferment without distinction since the Korean "police action." The introduction of the distinction simply forces us to see our role without blinking, and Vietnam simply forces us to face the fact that the decision we make, this month, between a B and a C, or a C and a D, constitutes a life-or-death sentence.

Our role is all the more ignominious because those of us who have a little learning have done all that we could to weaken the morale, or blind submission, of the young men who are being required to save one Asian tyranny from another by killing the helpless victims of both. In season and out we have been blowing the whistle on President Johnson's (and some of us on President Kennedy's) betrayal of our national ideals and our national faith. Our efforts to rescue our country from its Government have, willy-nilly, so vitiated the susceptibility of the young to believe what they read in the papers that a considerable proportion of them have abandoned honor for any and every sordid dodge, even unto the pretense of mental instability or homosexuality; and when the dodges all fail them, and their abandonment of honor hasn't saved them, they are dragged off kicking and squealing to be involuntary heroes in the salvation of freedom where no freedom has ever been.

We who have contributed to their moral degradation by opposing the American war on Vietnam have had to live unhappily with the immorality we have induced by trying ourselves to be moral. We have had to live unhappily with the craven cunning which our opposition to Vietnam has nourished in the hearts of the rising generation.

Rich Man's Passport

Some of us who are old and tenacious of the memory of shame are reminded of the stampede of the "interventionists" for arm-chair jobs after Pearl Harbor. I do not know any of these wretches—some of my best friends were wretches—to have been ashamed of their shameful behavior then or in retrospect. What they had in mind, it seems, was that somebody else, not they, should do the intervening; it went without saying, as it still goes, that the gentry who reason why should do so in solid comfort while the clods who are fit to do and die should stop the bullets.

The reasoners-why went to every length, just like the kids now, to find a better 'ole than a fox's. Everybody who wanted the world saved from Hitler wormed himself out of doing it personally if he could; everybody, at least, in my then acquaintance except Prof. Paul H. Douglas, who, having sedately sounded the tocsin, enlisted as a private in the Marines at the age of fifty; and I have had the impression ever since that Paul thinks that his noninterventionist friends have never forgiven him, when the fact is that there is scarcely another man that we could praise then and now for (as we say in the South) putting his money where his mouth was.

The characteristic figures of the Second World War, or Great Crusade, were no different from the Rolls-Royce-driving young gentleman whose intimacy with the country's leading family has proved to be no obstacle to his drawing a pass from his draft board as the sole support of his mother on her Beverly Hills estate, or from that rapidly lengthening list of high government officials who, 'mid the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air, have opted out of the current Great Crusade to sacrifice themselves to private enterprise. When one of them, an Undersecretary of State, resigned last month, one of his friends explained to the New York Times that this fiercest anti-Communist Crusader of them all wanted "to earn some money".

But this is the way the world wags, and always has, and always will, I suppose, until the Angels' Ministry at the end of mortal things. The professor's problem is whether to wag with it. The professor's problem is whether to present his students with their most inspiring example of servitude to truth or their most dispiriting example of subservience to falsehood. The professor's problem is not to publish or perish, but to perish here or hereafter.

Just War For Good Men

I do not, myself, object especially to the American attack on Vietnam (or to the Russian attack on Hungary); I see no persuasive basis for picking and choosing wars. However glorious the objective may be—to liberate Boston from the sales tax in 1776 (it was restored last month by the State Legislature), or to emancipate the Negro, or to save the world for democracy or the Jews from Hitler—every war is just as unjust as every other because it cannot be otherwise. It cannot be otherwise because it is war.

The just war will be fought when men who are perfectly good, in a perfectly good cause, are fighting men who are perfectly bad in a bad one, and not before; and when no man is handed a gun and, with another gun at the back of his head, ordered to use force and violence and other unholy means to kill another man similarly situated. The just war will be fought when no one unoffending person, be he only a very small Vietnamese person in swaddling clothes, is burned up alive. In a word, the just war will not be fought, and whoever says that you can not make an omelette without breaking eggs is making the cannibalistic error of using men as eggs. If men may be used as eggs, there is no just or unjust war or peace.

Volunteer's Cause

No civilized society can raise a volunteer, or even a mercenary, army. The volunteer army—as witness the location of the recruiting stations in the old days—is a skidrow mission without the faith, the hope, or the charity. It is the end of the line, and nobody who hasn't come to the end volunteers for it except, nowadays, in the hope of avoiding conscript transportation to the Hot Spot. Like everybody else in the world who has it good, the Americans would rather be red, white, or blue than dead. Nobody in the United States wants to stop Communism or anything else at the cost of his money, let alone his life, and we all understand why, in the very thick of the current Great Crusade, the rapidly lengthening list of high government officials are taking a powder. They have passed their twenty-sixth birthdays. There is no gun at their heads and so they are doing what comes naturally to the Twentieth Century American, to you, to me, and to the conscripts in Vietnam who would take a powder, too, if they could do so without being court-martialed and shot.

What is wanted, now as always, here as everywhere, is the volunteer. No man conscripted to do anything will ever serve the purpose with more than half a hand, and with no heart at all. He will work or fight for his life, even for his buddies; but that is not the purpose, and men will work or fight that way for good or bad purposes indifferently. Nor will short-term, hot-and-cold enlistments serve the purpose much better. What is wanted is the twenty-year man who will still be standing up when he has to do it from his wheel-chair.

Age eighteen is not a moment too soon to start standing up, but not with that first and last careless rapture that subsides at twenty-eight—or nineteen. We want men to stay the course; we do not have the money to finance drop-outs. It is men of A. J. Muste's eighty years that justify the investment. So we are not overly concerned with the boy who resists the draft—though we like to see him. We are still less concerned (though we know that men may change) with the dodger.

Deferment For Rich

But Vietnam is rolling, rolling all the way to China. Push-button warfare, when it is waged against people with push and no buttons, seems to demand

Students--"Our Reason for Being"

On the Agenda

- a 28 story, $10 million library
- three 13 story graduate research centers
- an underground student center
- the Northwest Resident Complex
- additions to Machmer and Bartlett
- a Fine Arts Center

In the past year alone a 1.5 million dollar School of Business Administration was dedicated, construction began on the new administration building, sports enthusiasts jammed the new stadium and new dining and residential areas opened to students.

But while land is being surveyed and foundations poured, UMass has been undergoing a quieter expansion program ranging from religion to admissions, curriculum to bureaucracy.

Curfews Plus

A fast-paced academic year saw not only the investment of self-curfew but reinforcement of a belief that college students are responsible members of their community and should be allowed a voice in deciding its policies.

In a major report released by a joint study committee of the Faculty and Student Senates, recommendations call for increased student membership on Faculty Senate Committees, a faculty-student Fine Arts Council and a faculty-student Discipline Board.

The interest of the student was also expressed with the proposal that five students have an equal voice on the Student Life Committee.

But curfews and campus growth have not monopolized all the headlines.

Administrative Achievement

At the other end of the state UMass-Boston has progressed to considerations of a permanent site on the outskirts of the city.

Organizing a quality staff and faculty within 15 months, UM-Boston will be handling 2200 students this Fall and is termed by President Lederle "an administrative achievement".

The establishment of UM-Boston, plans for the Med School in Worcester and the passage of the Harrington-Willis Act have helped spread the University community and its services across the state.

Student-Faculty Relations

Many faculty and administrators believe that the true educational experience rests with the still undeveloped programs of the residential college.

Combining curricular with extracurricular, the Orchard Hill Complex has pioneered campus efforts at establishing a residential college aimed at increasing student-faculty relationships in a multi-university.

Blending classes and faculty fellow programs with mixers and fine arts programs Orchard Hill has piloted the projected Northwest Residential Complex.

Plans call for five co-ed residential houses of 1000 students each with its own dean and faculty fellows. Courses will lay more stress on concepts and ideas and as well as reliance on independent research.

With a proposed program of four courses, the complex, set for opening in 1969, will increase seminar and discussion courses, de-emphasizing formal class meetings.

While Northwest will be geared to the undergraduate, graduate students have not been forgotten at UM.

An increase from 220 grad students in 1955 to the anticipated 2,200 in 1967 pressed the University into planning its Graduate Student Research Center and required Housing to allot seven floors of a high rise for grad living facilities.

The average grant received per grad student per year is between $1,250 and $2,500 and federal fellowships exceed 100. However, undergrads still hold sway over 80% of the enrollment and this year 19,000 applicants "sweated it out" with 4100 (1000 at Boston) passing inspection.

Formula for Success

In an attempt keep up with the increase in applicants UM has developed a method of evaluation known as "predicted formula" for applicants.

Based on high school rank and college board scores, the "predicted formula" for success precedes examination of applications by admissions personnel.

Besides averaging in the top 14% of their high school class, the Class of '69 averaged 567 on Verbal College Boards and 593 in Math.

But as the scholastic draft dodger will tell you, "Getting in isn't staying in."

Life Saver

In an effort to save potential drowning freshmen, the Keys and Scrolls have developed a big brother and sister program for the successful orientation and assimilation of Frosh.

Along with this revised set up and the Counseling Office's orientation program in the summer, students are aided in making the transition from high school to college life and in subduing the computer-based impersonalization of the multi-university, especially at registration.

A Way Out

Still an obstacle course, registration time has been cut in half by the new IBM

CDC 3600 computer — the overseers of class scheduling.

While the bureaucracy isn't increasing, the amount of work per person has grown, accounting for the familiar delays.

However, once registration and orientation are surmounted, if the student still feels lost in the crowd, it may be his own fault. There are over 250 RSO organizations open to students ranging from publications to science fiction, student government to hiking, besides the fraternity-sorority system also considering physical expansion off campus.

Other areas of growth on campus include: increased activity of religious groups, changing attitudes toward grading and teaching methods, improvements in the University Health Service, expansion of fine arts presentations etc., etc.

With campus expansion well under way it is well to note that the roots of this budding young campus are planted firmly around the philosophy of President John Lederle.

In his annual report on the University, Lederle said, "For the increasingly mature student here, there is an infectious exhilaration about a University in which everything is growing and constantly being renewed."

But the challenge and glory of physical expansion has not blinded Lederle to the true foundation upon which great universities are built: "We do not forget that our students are our prime reason for being, and that the human values we foster in them are the University's very blood and bone."

High rise buildings are moving in from the campus periphery. Plans have been approved for a 28 story, $10-million library in front of South College.

Top Priority

The proposed library has been given top priority on the list of the UM building program.

Commenting on the design by architect Edward Durell Stone, Trustee John Haigis, Jr. said that it represents an exciting new concept in library science.

Stone, noted for his embassy in New Delhi and the Lincoln Center in New York City, designed the vertical construction, alternating between every two floors of stack areas and one floor of study area.

The library is expected to house 2 million volumes as compared to the present 450,000 scattered between Goodell and other buildings on campus.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF THE PROPOSED 28-STORY LIBRARY AS IT WILL APPEAR BETWEEN OLD CHAPEL AND MACHEMER. THE 10 MILLION DOLLAR STRUCTURE, SLATED TO BE BEGUN IN THE FALL OF 1967

OR SPRING 1968, WILL BE THE TALLEST BUILDING WEST OF BOSTON AND WILL CONTAIN TWO MILLION VOLUMES, COMPARED TO THE UNIVERSITY'S PRESENT 450,000.

Professor's Problem:

"... inability to read and write is not a crime punishable by death."

as many shatterproof cocoanuts as the primitive tooth-and-claw procedure of Verdun (which shattered a million of them). So the bottom of the economic barrel has been scraped, and the Pled Piper of Washington has to begin creaming the economic top. The economic top is in college.

Draft deferment for college students has always been deferment for the rich and nothing else, like the rest of the advantages and disadvantages of democratic capitalist society. "No matter how unpromising the American high school graduate, he can always find some kind of licensed institution to accept him under the false pretense that it communicates the higher learning—if his folks have the thousand to three or four thousand dollars a year plus a surplus of hands on the farm. Thus college attendance in the United States has always been—and continues to be—preponderantly white. And thus conscription is disproportionately black. One of the splendors of the desegregated Army is the impossibility to discover how many of our killers and diers in Vietnam are black.

Half our high school graduates go to college because nobody else—except, of course, the Army—wants them. We store them for four years unless flagrant delinquency compels us to throw them out to preserve the institution's image. Many of my students, who are good kids, and better than I was, do not belong in college, but in high school. Some hopeless few, not many, belong in trade school or in semi-skilled jobs. By passing those who, on their "merits," need flunking, I have in the past preserved them from two years of barracks-room banality and the moral disintegration inherent in one man's voiceless obedience to another. By flunking them now, or even by giving them a C or a D instead of a B or a C, I consign them to the flames of Vietnam (worse yet, to the flame-throwing) and to the premature delights of a life (while it lasts) which one of my young friends epitomized when he wrote his folks to send him some powdered milk. "We can get all the whiskey we want," he wrote, and he is 18, but there is no milk."

Who To Save

I am now required to decide which of these young men are to be spared for a season and which of them are to be bound aboard the black-sailed ship destined for the Asian Labyrinth and the jaws of Minotaur Mac. I do not mean to do them this disservice; or myself. Nor do some of the troubled colleagues whose views I have heard. I doubt not that some of my colleagues will retire sedately through the classic escape-hatch of the technician who denounces political responsibility in the name of "simply" doing what he has been hired to do—the plea in avoidance for which we hanged Keitel at Nuremberg.

Eighty per cent of all college and university research and development is now financed by the Government with its attending infiltration and control overt and covert. Now teaching itself is to be tied to the chariot, not by the devious means of money but by fiat. The recent Naval Academy scandal revealed that the student calibre is so low that, with civilian instructors grading tough, the students are passed by "administrative grading" because the Navy can't get enough officers. Now we are invited, in the civilian institutions, to accommodate the Army by flunking in the same way.

Alternatives

The classic, or Keitel, escape has some validity. It always has. If Vietnam is none of my business, and teaching alone is, I have no problem unless, like Keitel, my country loses the war and I am put on trial. If Vietnam is my business, and I am a teacher, I have a whole congeries of problems. If I give my students all A's, I am letting the Army make me make a mockery of education, apart from the fact that I thereby condemn another instructor's students to death. If I am a tough grader, I am already avoided by the worst students, and I shall be avoided by all of them. If my courses are important (and difficult) and another man's trivial (and easy), the threat of the Army will drive my students from the important to the trivial. If my school has fairly high standards—as mine has—the student who might not make it in such a school will hotfoot it to one with lower standards, preferably to the worst school in the country, where he can be sure of shining. One of the ineluctable consequences of the Army's present assault on education is thus the debasement of education the country over.

Grading, whatever it may be in beef, is a dicey business in men, above all in education. Jones comes from a literate home and is both gifted and cunning, and maybe crooked besides. He frugs away his nights and pots away his days while Smith, who comes from an illiterate home, and is not very bright anyway, sweats blood at his books. In addition, Jones has money and Smith is holding down two jobs—one of them at night—to stay in school and is electing the hardest courses because he wants to learn. Am I to send Smith to Vietnam instead of Jones, when Vietnam, if it would do anybody any good, might be the only thing that would do it for Jones?

On the record Jones gets an A or a B, and Smith a C or a D. But not on my record. Incapable as I know myself to be of knowing what another man or boy deserves, I grade according to application and earnestness, and even according to need, and so do most of the teachers I know who do not want to be had up, on the Last Day, for the sacrilege of having played God. Nor do I flunk a student unless he compels me to, and he has to be pretty canny to do that. I live in terror of being remembered as the man who handed young Ruskin an F in English composition.

Impenetrable Jungle

The inequity (and iniquity) of grading students at all is wider and wider recognized. In every good college and university, including mine, the curriculum (if the can be said to be one) is under agonized reappraisal, and the best schools are engaged in frenzied experimentation. One of the commoner experiments is the non-grade course—which was all that there was when education was in its prime on the Athenian street-corner. The experiment is peripheral, confined, on the whole, to electives. Even so, the die-hards are as overheated about it as the computers.

There is a sense that the massive collapse of the whole educational enterprise in America impends. Nothing was done even to prepare the plant—not to say the staf—to survive the inundation of the war babies of twenty years ago. Nothing was done to examine the program in the light of the leisure-time implications of the cybernetic revolution that began fifteen years ago. Nothing was done to acquaint the students with what happened in Russia fifty years ago, or in Flanders Fields, or at Bergen-Belsen or Hiroshima. The reason that nothing was done was explained—to an empty house—by Robert M. Hutchins thirty years ago: the fragmentation of American society, faithfully reflected in the curriculum, was producing an impenetrable jungle, and premature specialization was producing a whole race of uneducated specialists without a common concern or a common language adequate to its communication.

Now we are in the thick of it. At the same time that awareness is growing acute that "more, more" is no solution, there is beginning to appear the stupefying suspicion that we do not have the liberally and generally educated men to tackle the monstrosity.

Most of our teachers are teachers because they went to graduate school, not knowing enough (as Hutchins once put it) to leave when the party was over. Most of our students are in college for no other reason—and they say so—than that they are in college. Most male students stay there for no other reason than Vietnam. (Most graduate programs are bigger for the same reason and therefore worse every semester). The student who ought to drop out—or who ought never to have dropped in—hangs on for all he's worth, be it ever so little. The prolongation of adolescence in the a-go-go society indicates a year or two off, before or during college, for kids to catch their breath, write poetry, sling hash, or hit the road and figure out what they are and what they want to do and be; but the possibility is foreclosed by the draft.

Army Dead Weight

As the cafeteria curriculum has become more and more bewildering in the choice of tastes, the lockstep of grades, credits, and cumulative averages has become more and more rigid. What the student wants is points, and the young instructor, himself a product of the point system, spends his life splitting them as assiduously as his predecessors in the late Middle Age split hairs. The enthusiastic teacher reproaches grading and always has, and, along with grading, the passivity induced by the lecture-and-recitation routine and the examination which calls for the rote recital of feedback facts worthy of instant oblivion. The suggestion that the teacher was once the Master, or Rabbi, charged with the cure of souls, has long since been established as First Amendment heresy.

Into this electronic confusion the Army throws its dread weight—as when did it not?—on the side of stultification. The male freshman has to be in the "upper" half of his class, the sophomore in the upper third, the junior in the upper three-fourths, and the senior entering graduate school in the upper fourth, it matters not how good the man, the class, or the college; or away he goes in the black-sailed ship. There is an alternative escape hatch, a Selective Service College Qualification Test. Since the Army Intelligence requirements are paleolithicly low—and have just been lowered still further to meet the demands of the body-snatch—it may be assumed that any high-grade moron can pass the test. But the students have learned to be afraid of all tests as dirty tricks.

No Men—No War

Henry Ford thought that the way to end war was to take the profit out of it. What Henry Ford did not understand (and what Adam Smith did) is that men prefer profit to peace. What Smith did not understand (and Marx did) is that the profit system can not be maintained without war. And what Marx did not understand (and Freud did) is that the non-profit system can no more be maintained without war than the profit system because men prefer war to peace.

What I understand is that the way to end war is to take the men out of it. I have spent my life trying to take at least one man out of it—myself—and I see no countervailing advantage, in my old age, in serving as a body-snatcher for Vietnam.

I do not know precisely how I am going to work my way out of this box and still respect my solemn obligation to teach and my low inclination to eat. But I know as a loyal American that I must not be a party to the ruin of the country I love, and I know that the bridal procession of Moloch and Miammon is leading it down the road to ruin. My students may not know how to read and write, but inability to read and write is not a crime punishable by death, and I am not going to pass such sentence on them.

The Growing Demand

UMASS ADMISSIONS OFFICE HARD PRESSED; ACCEPTED ONLY 42 PER CENT IN 1965

by JOYCE HARVEY

Never before in the course of American higher education has the demand for admission to our colleges and universities been as great as that of the past ten years. The fantastic growth in the number of students entering institutions of higher education can be seen in the latest study of the Office of Education which compares the opening fall enrollment figures for all colleges and universities within the United States. In 1955 there were 2,720,929 students enrolled across the nation; in 1964, this number increased to 5,320,294, or a ten-year gain of 95.6%.

Admissions officers are faced with a great challenge in their attempt to cope with this growing demand for higher educational opportunity. Each year the number of applicants increases at a rate which usually exceeds the number of places available.

The trend in total applicants over the past six years at the University of Massachusetts can be seen in the following chart:

year	total	% increase	applicants accepted	applicants accepted as % of total	applicants enrolled as % of total	enrolled as % total
1961	6,521	8.0	3,349	51.4	1,828	54.6
1962	6,930	6.3	3,445	50.0	1,854	53.8
1963	7,547	8.9	4,178	55.4	2,198	52.6
1964	11,869	57.3	4,505	38.0	2,439	54.1
1965	11,799*	-0.6	4,976	42.2	2,622	52.7
1966	14,600	19.2	—	—	3,100	21.2

*1965 application number of 14,999 included Boston-campus; 11,799 at Amherst-campus

**1966 application number of 19,800 included Boston-campus; 16,200 at Amherst-campus

Analyzes Success Chances

In trying to keep up with this trend, colleges and universities are continually seeking new methods to analyze and correlate the raw data which accompanies each application. The present process includes the modern data-processing equipment. This approach saves considerable time in analyzing the vast amount of admissions material.

The final decision on any application depends on all the admissions information on hand. Under the old system, with different people reading different portions of the thousands of applications, uniform, efficient, and consistent treatment was always difficult.

Over the past few years, admissions research at UMass has developed a formula which assigns weighted values to the factors in the admissions record according to their correlation with successful performance.

The result of this formula is a predicted average, an evaluation of the chances of successful performance at the University. This "predicted formula" not only quickly identifies candidates for early consideration during the year ("rolling admissions"), but it later allows the arrangement of applications in rough preferential order for ultimate processing.

The major criteria involved in the "prediction formula" include the applicant's high school rank and the College Board scores, Verbal and Math. Recommendations, by the high school principal and guidance office, are important for the borderline students. After a prediction formula has been made, each application is individually examined by the admissions personnel.

Competition among applicants for admittance to the University is becoming more and more selective. An example of the rising College Board scores further stresses the high rate of competition.

Class	Verbal	Math
1966	534	569
1967	542	571
1968	558	582
1969	567	593

The above figures are median scores for the current undergraduate body at the time of each class' application. In addition, the present freshman class was on the average among the top 14% of their high school class.

High School Record Important

According to Dean William D. Tunis, Dean of Admissions and Records, the high school record is of most importance in selecting the new freshman class. However, the admissions staff also note improvement in the applicant's high school record, exam scores, rank in high school class, and the rating of the high school itself.

Each candidate is judged on his capability to be successful academically and for his unusual interests. "We are interested in people with unusual interests — athletics, music, drama, writing — but, this is secondary to their high school marks and College Board scores," Dean Tunis continued.

What explains the increased application number to the University of Massachusetts? The tuition and a whole year's expense is considerably lower than the majority of other universities in the state:

$1,084, total bill for tuition, board, room, and fees at UMass.
tuition only: at Tufts	$1,900
B. U.	$1,550
B. C.	$1,400
W. P. L.	$1,800

According to Leslie C. Turner, Assistant Registrar, "the students at UMass are, on the average, like those at B.U. and Northeastern. There's an excellent quality of students here at UMass."

Males Get Easier Acceptance

The competition is already tough, and getting tougher. According to Dean Tunis, "If girls aren't in the top 15% and average 600 on the College Boards, they just aren't being accepted. High school boys, to be accepted, must be in the top third of their graduating class and have 500 or better on their College Board exams."

The reason for the discrimination? — "If we accept those students with the highest class rankings and exam scores, the University would be nearly 90% girls!"

However, the admission staff takes into account that the high school boys are slower developing in concern for their studies. Also, boys often have work and social pressures that could influence their academic achievement in the high school grading system," Tunis explained.

The best deal for those students who are turned down by UMass are the Community Colleges. As Dean Tunis points out, "The University accepts all qualified Community College transfers. Of the 1,600 applicants we have received from transfer students, the University will accept 500 of whom 350 will be from the Community Colleges."

ORCHARD HILL COMPLEX—PRESENTLY OCCUPIED BY 1,200 STUDENTS—IS THE FIRST ATTEMPT BY THE UNIVERSITY TO ESTABLISH A RESIDENTIAL COLLEGE. WITH INCREASING ENROLLMENT AT UMass, ORCHARD HILL HAS ATTEMPTED TO BREAKDOWN THE IMAGE OF AN IMPERSONAL UNIVERSITY BY PROVIDING OPPORTUNITIES FOR CLOSER STUDENT FACULTY RELATIONS.

Growth of Bureaucracy

Administrators Claim Computers Cut Red Tape; Students Still Go Through Ritual of Signatures

by JANE ROLAND

The average UMass student, at one time or another in his four years at college runs into a frustrating, almost impossible inconvenience known as bureaucracy. The red tape may hit him because of an important committee inability to work for lack of an accepted constitution, or it may be a decision to drop a course after 28 days, or a computer mistake which gives him three additional courses. In any case, the situation can become aggravating, sometimes almost intolerable.

As he traipses from Machmer to South College to the School of Education, the student whose files somehow got messed up can easily be expected to start wondering exactly why he must go through the ritual of signatures.

Often comes the thought that, since the University is getting larger, the bureaucracy has not really been increasing since the expansion of the University—rather, the new computer system of registration has made such a thing as choosing courses much simpler and less complicated.

In pre-IBM years, registration was in the Phy. Ed-Cage. Each student had a list of cards, somewhat like a bus ticket, each of which was a course-admittance card. After waiting in line at the English department table, he would sign up for a course at a certain time. This procedure was used for each course—waiting in line, then signing up. Were a course offered only at the time of a previously chosen course, the student would have to go once again through the line and try to straighten out his schedule.

"This waiting in line and juggling the schedule led to complete bedlam," com-

According to Registrar Starkweather, the University by using computers can get most students into the classes they want, although they are not able to choose their hours. Registration, which took two days when there were 5,000 students, takes half the time with twice the student body.

Starkweather in fact, does not believe bureaucracy is expanding in any area. "I went here as an undergraduate in the late '40's and the atmosphere was far more controlled," he reported. "The trend now, though, is in the direction of more impediments and red tape in the way everyone—not just the students.

Impersonal

"The work in this office," he said, motioning with an arm to cover all of South College and the Registrar's Of-department head to professor, can be demoralizing, besides the frustration at not knowing who to see for the answer to a question.

Discover After Awhile

To an incoming freshman who does not know where to go to talk about his requirements, and who submits to the Zoo I—Eng I—Math I suggestions of a strange adviser, the University appears huge and unfriendly. The campus, no matter how attractive, does not seem to be truly his.

It is after a few semesters of talking to upperclassmen and friendly professors that the student begins to discover his way around the rules, and to acquire his own group of friends chosen out of 12,000. Then perhaps, he can begin to laugh at the trials he is put through by red tape.

amount of administrative work is increasing. Thus, he reasons in 10 years, when the school is twice as large, the paperwork will have to be unbearably greater.

Not Worse Because of Growth

Not so, according to both Registrar William Starkweather and Assistant Dean of Arts and Sciences H. Duncan Rollason. They say the amount of mented Dr. Rollason. "The bureaucracy situation is not worse because of growth. The larger the school gets, the more efficient it can get in such cases as Registration Day."

ice in particular, "expands directly with the increase in the student body. The staff isn't increasing at the same rate, however." This, he indicated, accounts for the familiar waiting in lines, particularly at the beginning of the semester, in most administrative offices.

However more efficient the administrative process may be, it very often comes to the student an impersonalized system. Just the idea of running from building to building, from adviser to Realizing the need for the complex administrative processes, most students can usually ignore the situation. Still, the frustration felt at line waiting at Room Choosing for 2½ hours, and still not getting desired room, is not easily laughed away.

The advantages of a large and growing university must be balanced against the disadvantages, and bureaucracy's inconveniences must be recognized.

Interview With Dean Pippert

Dean Foresees Decline of Multi-duty College Teachers; Teaching Machines and Free Discussion on Rise

by FRED PILON

There will be a different meaning for the phrase "publish or perish" in the future. There might also be a new phrase "teach or perish."

This new phrase will reflect a concern with teaching for teaching's sake. Assistant Dean of Education Ralph Pippert stated that there will probably be none of the present research-teachers.

Dean Pippert visualizes the future teacher as just that—a teacher only. He will not have research to do, nor will he be required to publish. Dean Pippert suggests that the future college teacher will be trained much as high school teachers are being trained.

Pippert envisions a future student-teacher relationship similar to the relationship Socrates had to his students. The teacher of the future will not be merely a transmitter of information, he will excite the student's curiosity in areas that the student has yet to enter.

Teaching Machines'

The transmitter of information role may well be assumed by "teaching machines" already developed. Dean Pippert cited the example of students being taught to read at the University of Michigan through the use of computer. Pippert said that the computer reinforces certain responses and does not offer rewards for the incorrect response.

The University of Massachusetts, Pippert noted, is heading toward this concept of teacher and student in close intellectual contact. The residential colleges that the University is establishing and plans to expand are dramatic proof that the policy makers are aware of the need for such teaching methods, he said.

No Demands to Publish

By forcing the professors to accept positions in the residential colleges, Pippert said, the University cannot make any demands to publish on the professors. They have too much to do already, he believes. The University is leaning toward the concept of a teacher who is judged only by the merits of his teaching ability and not the amount of academic material that he may publish.

The University is also meeting another major requirement that is felt to exist by educators. That is the creation of research-only positions. These are vital to the development of new theories and the discoveries of new facts, said Dr. Pippert. It is then the teacher's job to present these concepts to the students. Distinguished men, such as Professor Richard Stein of the chemistry department, are given no course to teach and are even made Commonwealth Professors to insure that they will remain with the University.

Dean Pippert also believes that much of the bits of information that are the necessary symbols required to understand the complex concepts of a discipline will be furnished to the students via teaching machines or large television audiences.

Pippert stated that all that needs to be done is to convince professors who are now teaching 200-400 students at a single setting that the situation is no different than teaching 2-million students at once. This will eliminate the burden imposed upon so many other professors.

The day may well arrive when the student will spend his mornings watching television and his afternoons in small groups discussing concepts with his professor, who will be a trained teacher with a genuine interest in teaching.

Reform Committee Strengthens Student Power

by GENA COREA, Staff Reporter

With an increase in the growth of U-Mass, has come an increasing desire for efficiency. Peter Goodman, pro temp chairman of the University Reform Committee, feels that while efficiency may be beneficial to the student body as a whole, it is deadly to the growth of the individual student.

One purpose of the Reform Committee is, in Goodman's opinion, "to keep down the efficiency of the University, so that individual students can be better educated."

The increased enrollment, besides bringing many problems, also brings more students who are interested in working on these problems.

In the fall, a number of different groups were working on reforms, including a committee of the Young Independents. Various students and faculty members found out about this group and attended their meetings. In December, University Reform became independent of the Y.I.'s.

Fast and Furious

For three months, the committee planned two conferences—one on academic, and one on social affairs. At the second conference, students decided to circulate a petition demanding an end to women's sign-out sheets and curfews.

After that, a group of about fifteen people worked fast and furiously to reform women's regulations. With coffee hours in dorms, circulation of the petition, and a letter-writing campaign to the Collegian, the Committee started the action. By March, curfews were gone.

But women's rules, Goodman emphasizes, is simply the problem of the moment. "We have a lot more things to do, and they're going to be tougher to get."

Among other areas, the Reform Committee will be working for improvements in the requirement system, the University College, and the BFA. They will also fight the proposed communications board.

A Healthy Sign

Goodman feels that the time is ripe for the URC. "This is the time to help set University policy—while the University is still flexible, still growing."

And students can, as evidenced by the recent abolishment of curfews, help to set policy. "Students," Goodman says, "are more aware of their power. This is a healthy sign."

University Reform is now in the process of drafting a very loose constitution. For example, membership is being present at a meeting. Anyone who goes to a meeting, whether he's a student, a teacher, or a member of the administration, can vote. This way, anyone interested in reform can take part in the URC.

Goodman feels that working on the Committee is educational. "You learn about democracy. You learn that you can tell city hall what to do."

Reform Support

Various UMass administration and faculty members seem to agree with Edward Eddy, Jr., President of Chatham College, about college activists. Quoted in the Oct. 18, 1965 issue of Newsweek, Eddy said, "For years we have wanted a fire to burn. Let's not throw water on the first flames."

Mr. William Venman, Assistant to the Provost, said of the URC, "It's one of the best things that has happened on campus. It shows an aliveness on the part of the student body. It's much easier to have a dead student body."

Prof. Joe Clayton said, "I'm in favor of reform if its truly reform and not just change." Clayton thinks that students today are much more aware of almost everything than they were twenty years ago, and the formation of the URC is an indication of this. "The world situation now suggests change," Clayton said.

Expressing his opinion, Mr. Robert Hopkins, Dean of Men, said, "I think anything that keeps people thinking is good." Hopkins feels that something like the Reform Committee "gets started because thinking people start thinking."

Mr. William Tunis, Dean of Admissions, said of the newly formed group, "I think that students should question. That's part of the educational process. However, final decisions for changes must rest with the administration and faculty. Students have limited experience and don't always know what's right."

Mr. Joseph Dellagrotte, Assistant Professor of History, has been interested in the URC since its conception. "This committee was formed," said Dellagrotte, "not just to analyze problem situations, but to change them."

Dellagrotte feels that the formation of this committee shows that students are aware of problems, but, he emphasized, "consciousness itself is of no use unless it is translated into action."

David Mallory, consultant to the College Student Personnel Institute, quoted in Newsweek, said that students who are activists "are almost always intellectually powerful, not just 'bright'."

Reported in the same Newsweek article, some of the speakers at the American Council on Education condemned colleges for the fact that "only a minority of students really question their society or their education."

Stanford's Joseph Katz said at the conference, "The present college system is well designed to create docile students."

Not a docile student, Peter Goodman thinks that working on University Reform helps a student to become a mature and responsible adult, "not someone who will fit into a slot in society."

UMass Fine Arts Program Has Developed Within the Past Ten Years

by EILEEN MANLEY

American colleges, through exhibits and concerts, are educating their student bodies to the world of fine arts. The University of Massachusetts has developed such a program within the past 10 years and offers many opportunities for the student to be exposed to the fine arts. And there will be more in the future. UMass administrators and staff view their role as providing the programs; it is up to the student to take advantage of these opportunities.

Student Spectators

Development of the fine arts in New England began in conservatories, art schools, museums and smaller private institutions. According to Joseph Langland, English professor and poet of national reputation, it has only been a few years since state colleges began developing programs for the appreciation of the arts.

"Such programs, initially, let students be spectators. Indeed, being in the four-college area, there are now many occasions for students to be spectators," Langland states.

Attendance has not always been at capacity. Ken Bordner, an actor in the University Theater, says: "Even with 5,000 students on campus during the summer, University Theater productions were attended by town residents mainly. We will have had six big productions by the end of this year, and none of them had such attendance as the Operetta Guild's."

Some speakers have had small audiences. "Out of a community of 12,000, 50 may seem small," Langland comments. "However, 50 is pretty large if something significant happens."

Exposure Counts

It is not possible to measure attendance at campus art exhibits. However, the important thing, according to Dr. Paul Norton, head of the art department, is this: "Even if the student just walks by it on his way to class, he has been exposed to it." Dr. Norton stressed having the art available; one doesn't have to like it, but exposure may lead to understanding, or, at least, tolerance; this is the educational value of having the art available, he explains.

Some functions have attracted good attendance. Among these are productions of the Operetta Guild, the Roister Doisters and programs by the UMass Band, Orchestra and Chorale. "The faculty Concert Series filled Bartlett Auditorium this year," remarks Dr. Philip Bezanson, Head of the Music Department. "When we started this series last year, about 50 attended, and these were fine performers. If people paid to see them, they would think they had really seen something."

Dr. Bezanson adds that attendance at concerts sponsored by the Concert Association is steadily increasing.

Whether the students are receiving enough of the fine arts through programs such as these is up to the students themselves. The opportunities are now available.

Functions—A Must

According to Harold Watts, coordinator of students activities and assistant director of Student Union, "The University runs under a framework of policy that a student can be exposed to much of the fine arts if he attends most of the exhibits, concerts and lectures during his four years here."

Langland believes that one speaker's drawing a small audience is no reason to cancel other speakers. Such functions must be made available, he emphasized.

Along with chances to be spectators, there is a growing emphasis on participation. The Music, Art and English Departments have had expanding programs within the past few years.

When Dr. Bezanson came to the music department in 1964, he had 16 undergraduate music majors; this year he has 32, and next year he expects to have 50. Now, he says, the department's major problem is lack of room, for classes, instrument practice and concerts.

Art Moves Out

In the eight years that he has been here, Dr. Norton has built the art department into one of the fastest growing on campus. Like the Music Department, growth has created the problem of space. "Even with the Fine Arts Building we would need to keep the room we have now in order to have sufficient space," comments Dr. Norton.

Space isn't the only problem. The Music and Art Departments face financial problems also. To bring good artists to campus is expensive, and each department seeks money beyond its budget. Sometimes, such groups as the Revelers will sponsor artists. The English Department is expanding a new graduate program, as is the Art Department. In the fall of 1966 the Music Department hopes to offer a Master's degree. Groups such as the University Theater, the bands, Chorale, Roister Doisters and others are always looking for applicants.

Just A Beginning

And Prof. Langland believes that a fine arts program on campus is just beginning to get into "full swing." The different organizations and departments concerned with it are only now realizing "in what direction they should head." He states this as one of the reasons for the delay in construction of the Fine Arts Building; five years ago these groups did not know what they wanted or needed.

Are there, then, enough fine art opportunities at UMass? Prof. Langland replies: "Certainly not; but it is inevitable that they will expand, and the student interest with it."

Student-Senate-Administration-Boston-ACTION!

University Demands Travel a Broad Road To Become University Policy

by PETER HENDRICKSON

All roads lead to Boston—or that's the way it seems in matters of policy at UMass. The Board of Trustees, 21 men appointed by the governor for seven-year terms, are chosen from the "highest level, broad-gauged candidates available" according to Robert McCartney, secretary of the University and of the Board. Also included are various commissioners and the governor as ex-officio members.

Ultimate Word

These men—and one woman—are the ultimate policymakers at UMass with all other bodies recommending to them. The board meets monthly at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Boston to hear reports in open meetings from the committees and act on other business of an urgent nature.

"The Board can initiate business but most of the business originates at the University," McCartney said in a Collegian interview. He explained that the Board's members act "as independent citizens in the management saddle who recommend, in turn, programs and budgets to the governor".

Tiger By the Tail

But recommendations do not necessarily mean action. The budget was cut by $8 million from $47 million this Spring and the Board's recommendations for Med School architects were not followed.

"It's getting to the state where they are going to have to wake up and realize that they have a tiger by the tail," he said, pointing to the budget cut that is now being debated by President Lederle who has been in Boston nearly all week.

The Secretary said that we can't continue to expand if funds are not provided for the support of the programs that require supplementary staff and facilities. "We may have to stand up and shout for more to focus public attention," he said.

Private Pleading

He noted that Board members have personal prestige and are doing private pleading for restoration of budget requests. He could not say if the enrollment would be decreased next year.

The Board has standing committees that act on such matters as the curriculum, buildings and grounds, finance and student-faculty relations. "The curriculum is not rubber stamped, but they generally approve the University's requests. They use the Collegian as one source of information on this and other matters", he said.

Traditionally the Board does not focus on such things as curfew as these are primarily administrative functions. However the Board did set the room rent raises to "bring them more realistically into line with actual operational costs," the Secretary explained.

He pointed out that the unpaid members spend many hours in committee meetings each month to determine the course of the University.

The major policy-making bodies on campus are the Student and Faculty Senates who meet regularly to recommend action to the Trustees through the administration. Many proposals never reach the Trustees as they are not major departures from established policy and can be implemented through established University channels.

Final Word—Almost

Jay Savereid, faculty senator from the speech department, explained that "there is almost nothing the Faculty Senate can't pronounce, in fact, I can't remember any instances of censure in my five years with the Senate."

"The standing committees do the bulk of the work for the Senate and the most active is the Academic Affairs Committee that deals with every aspect of the curriculum, the calendar, course requirements and so on," he said.

He pointed out that the Faculty Senate "pretty much has the final word on these matters".

Student Representation

The work load for the Senate increases each year and the 100-member body finds that meeting twice each month does not provide adequate time for deliberation. "We're having to rush business," Savereid said.

The trend this year is to provide more student representation on Faculty Senate committees to provide liaison between the students and the faculty. The feeling seems to be that the student voice should be heard in policy matters although the majority voice is still held by the faculty.

The question is constantly raised, "How can students have a voice if they can not be held responsible for their actions?" The answer usually given is that the students do not have the majority voice and often do not have the vote to go with the voice.

The Fine Arts Council has equal representation of faculty and students since it is founded by a Student Tax. The Athletic Council has one student vote as the NSAA requires that the faculty maintain the controlling vote.

Unbounded

Former Student Senate Treasurer Jim Allen reiterated Savereid's statement about the scope of the Senate. Allen said that the Student Senate "knows no bounds" in its deliberative processes.

The Student Senate has traditionally devoted most of its efforts to budget and financial policy for the RSO activities. "That's changing though," he said, "In the past few years University policy as a whole has been examined and the administration of student tax monies has become more a procedural matter."

Allen pointed to the Fine Arts Council, "We need professional assistance from faculty members in areas like fine arts," he said. "The Faculty and Student Senates are peer groups with equally recognized power of recommendation. The Faculty Senate had traditionally stayed out of strictly student areas such as fine arts, but they are not touching housing regulations."

Decentralization

Decentralization of social power and policy is the trend in Student Government. "We want to make the residence units self-determining bodies with the members deciding their own government. Of course they must follow the general fiscal guidelines determined by RSO policy," he explained.

Jim thought that the Student Senate had achieved the most success in academic affairs policy and listed the inclusion of a finals reading day, extended services from the library, work on grading and work on the calendar. He also lauded the Services Committee and their success in helping to improve the student wage scale.

Grass Roots Government

The classes, often neglected in the consideration of policy making, enter into the picture of policy making. John Mullin, junior class president, considers his class to be a lobby force on the campus and in the state.

John said he feels that the classes are to the Student Senate as the state government is to the federal government. "We are much closer to our constituents than is the Senate. We can mobilize the forces of the class very quickly and are going to send letters to all the parents asking for their aid in opposing the University budget cut by the Governor," he said.

The Classes have planned to send a bus load of delegates to the State House next Friday to support the budget and focus attention on the University.

Mullin said that the traditional social functions of the classes will still be performed but that the emphasis is changing in scope to the greater realm of University affairs. "If the University reform committee came to us for help we would stand behind them," he said.

The President feels that he should have an ex-officio seat in the Student Senate to augment the at-large class representative. "In the past the at-large rep has not worked very closely with the class and I go to most of the meetings anyway," he argued.

An unexplored source of policy influence is the Alumni Association whose members exert a considerable influence in the state.

Policy is determined in many ways through many avenues of direct power and lobbying influence. The final receptors of the policy are the students who attend in ever-increasing numbers with ever-increasing demands for a voice in the formation of the policy that is to guide their course through UMass.

Reform Marches On

One of the most active elements of growth on campus has been the University Reform Committee.

What is the University Reform Committee? What has it accomplished? Will it be active next year?

These questions and others will be discussed at an open, all university coffee hour on May 18 6:45 p.m. to be held in the Colonial Lounge. Sponsored by the University Reform Committee, the coffee hour hopes to accomplish three main goals.

Alleviate Problems

First, the reasons for establishing a student run, student directed reform committee will be discussed. The problems which exist on this campus have often been discussed but not solved, and the Reform Committee hopes to alleviate this semi-active attitude.

These problems, both social and academic are also often hidden or pushed aside. The recent controversies and discussions concerning women's affairs have to some degree increased awareness of the problems on this campus; but the coffee hour May 18, and the University Reform Committee itself hope to further this goal.

The third aim of the coffee hour is to review and preview the URC. This organization, established this year as an official and representative student group, is designed to discover, investigate, and solve the problems of academic reform, social reform, and student inequity in university affairs.

Two Large Feats

The URC has accomplished two large feats—the abolition of personal dossiers in dormitories, and the abolition of women's curfews with sign out sheets voluntary.

Besides these two major accomplishments, the URC has been investigating other problems, doing research on alternative methods of evaluation, and seeking greater participation for students in all university affairs.

The University Reform Committee will be active next year, as a functioning and powerful student organization, but plans must be made, and the support of the members of the student body, faculty, and administration is essential.

Students are needed May 18, Colonial Lounge, 6:45 p.m. Discussion will be opened by Prof. Jos. DellaGrotte of the History Dept., Dean Ralph Pippert of the School of Education, and Peter Goodman of the URC. From there on the ball is yours.

UMASS GRADING SYSTEM RESULT OF EXPERIMENT

Every System Has Been Tried

by GORDON DAVIDSON

Any students dissatisfied with the UMass grading system can take consolation in the fact that almost every possible system of grading has been tried at the university.

Various Systems

The systems have included 100-point numerical grading, a system which gave more credit for English than chemistry, a ranking system and a plan which even included two types of F.

The present quality point system, adopted in 1953, has been instrumental in raising the standards of the university to their present level, according to administrators.

In 1914, when the University was simply an agricultural school operating on a semester basis, grades were computed on a 100-point system. Sixty was a passing grade. The 100-point system was common in most schools at that time.

In the mid-1920's, a complicated new system was instituted, based on the idea of giving credit for the two hours of preparation required for each lecture as well as for the classwork. Thus an English course which held three lectures a week would be worth 15 credits—three for each tenure and six more for the two hours of preparation for each class.

But a chemistry course, with only one lecture and two-hour labs, which required no preparation, would be worth only seven credits. Of course this system made interpretations of the grades difficult, not only in relation to the 100 system at the university but also to systems at other schools.

In the late 1920's, faculty study of their grading determined that differences in the strictness of grading by individual professors were too great to be ignored.

They found that a student who happened to get into courses taught by the hardest marking teachers could easily flunk out, although another student of equal ability but with different teachers would do well.

In 1929, as a result of these findings, the ranking system was recommended by the faculty. Although this system was never adopted officially, some of the professors used it in determining their marks. The students were ranked in relation to their classmates and then marked accordingly.

The important result of this concept was that grades were passed to the heads of departments. The differences in the grading by the professors became obvious and adjustments were made.

Credit System

In 1932, the complicated credit system was dropped and the standard three credits for three hours of classwork system was adopted, although the numerical system was retained. Under this system it was possible for a student to graduate with a 60 average in all his courses. This was called a "gentleman's grade".

There were also two types of F under this system. If a student's average for the semester was below 60, he would not be allowed to take the final exam and would get an F with no credit, computed as a 50. If he took the final and flunked, he had the right to take a

"Help Me"

UMASS GRADUATE SCHOOL HAS CHANGED FROM 220 in 1955 to 2,200 in 1967

by Jean Fulton

An applicant who pleaded, "Help me!", in the margin of his application, was accepted at Harvard Graduate School, reports Time Magazine. The criteria for acceptance in the ever-growing Graduate School of UMass, however, is more readily predictable.

Graduate Standards

Dean Edward C. Moore, the first full-time graduate dean at the University, classifies acceptance standards as four-fold: (1) the applicant's scholastic record as an undergraduate, (2) his letters of recommendation, (3) the University's previous experience with graduate students from the applicant's school, and (4) the number of openings in the program the student wishes to follow.

A student accepted into the clinical psychology program, for example, in which approximately 300 applications are received for 30 openings, may be required to meet higher standards than the student accepted into a program in which the number of applicants and the number of openings are equal.

Generally, UMass graduates are encouraged to study at other colleges and universities on the graduate level, to broaden their perspectives and thus increase their scope of learning in their specific fields. However, some students, particularly in the larger departments where new approaches can be more easily made, do continue their studies at UMass.

In 1955, the University Graduate School enrolled 220 students. In 1967, the anticipated enrollment is 2,200. Of the 1,822 graduate students at UMass this year, approximately 1,300 are Massachusetts residents. Of the remaining 500, 240 are foreign students. Almost half of them are supported financially, either through teaching and research assistantships or federal grants. A total of 916 students this year hold teaching assistantships or fellowships.

The average amount received in grants per student per year, between $1,200 and $2,500, "isn't large, but is essential to many students in order to finish their program", asserts Dean Moore. Four years ago, 10-15 UM students received federal fellowships. This year the number exceeds 100.

Even on a growing campus such as this, according to Dean Moore, "The graduate student housing problem is a complicated one." Surveys have shown that although graduate students would rather live off campus, they must sacrifice preferences for inexpensive housing.

Dorms For Graduates

Seven floors in one of the recently completed Tower dorms will be made available to graduate students in September, both male and female, providing room for 192 students. However, the unexpected reaction is that "we (the Graduate School office) are not being flooded with applications.

"Any dorm space remaining after Aug. 1 will be given to undergraduates," continues the dean.

Housing is often a special problem for married students. Plans are under way for low-cost modern apartments to be built in Hadley by a private contractor. Initial construction is intended for 200 apartments with enlargements to 600 anticipated.

Dean Moore, sensitive to the crucial need for more housing, has stated that if no plans are forthcoming soon, he will request that the University itself initiate construction.

And the greatest growth is yet to come. The post-World War II babies, now undergraduates, will begin graduating in 1968, and competition will increase for admission to graduate school. UMass estimates its graduate enrollment in 1967 at 2,200, a tiny part of the total of 800,000 enrolled in graduate school throughout the country by 1970.

Grading System--

conditional exam. If he passed he would earn an F with credit, recorded as a 55.

Under direction of President Jean Paul Mather, and in keeping with the growing trend of grading throughout the U.S., the University of Massachusetts adopted the quality point average (QPA) system in 1953. This system includes the use of letter grades. Although cutting points were only 1.6 for seniors and 1.3 for freshmen, many students were flunked out because of the higher standard.

"The slaughter was terrific the first term," according to Marshall Lanprear, retired University registrar.

"We finally voted that we couldn't flunk more than 10 per cent of each class," he added.

Grades Uppe

The new system created many problems in converting the old percentage grades to the QPA system, and in interpreting the new grades. Also, the cutting points and honors were experimented with for many years before the present levels were adopted.

Many professors, notably in the math and science departments, still use the numerical averages to compute their letter grades for the semester.

The feeling on campus seems to be that the QPA system has been a major factor in raising the academic performance of students. Under higher standards, students operate on a higher level of performance, according to this logic.

There are several failings of the quality point system, however. The most obvious and notorious is that it makes no distinction between the student who earns a 70 and one who earns a 79. Second, there is no way to record an A+.

According to William Venman, assistant provost, about 50 per cent of the students are satisfied or apathetic about QPA and the other 50 per cent desires a change. But there is no agreement on what the changes should be, and as a result there is no concerted movement for grading reform.

But that doesn't mean no effort for change is being made. The Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Senate has submitted to the Faculty Senate a recommendation that each student be allowed to take one course on a pass or fail basis. This would give students a chance to take courses they desire but are apprehensive about taking for fear of lowering their average.

Grades Aren't Everything

The faculty is allowed a wide latitude methods of determining their averages

UMass Intramurals Envy of Many Schools; Coach Gladchuck Seen as Motive Force

by DAVE JARNES

One important aspect of a school's physical education program that is frequently relegated to a secondary role or even completely bypassed is the intramural program. Competition in varsity athletics is offered to the very small percentage of the student body that is skillful enough to compete on an intercollegiate level. But what happens to the rest of the students who like to compete in sports, but don't have the ability or the time to do so?

At UMass these people are well-cared for. The intramural program is the envy of many other colleges and universities.

The numerous team and individual sports range from touch football to horseshoes offering something to just about everyone. Most of the phenomenal growth in intramurals has taken place in the last two years since Mr. Chet Gladchuk, Intramural Coach became intramural director. One need not look far for the reasons that account for this boom.

Boydén First Boost

The construction of the Boydén Physical Education building gave the intramural program its first big boost. Six full-sized basketball courts, squash courts, and bowling alleys have enabled more people to compete in more activities.

By instituting an award system, greater incentive has been given to both the various teams and individual competitors. Trophies are given to champions in all sports in the dormitory, fraternity, and independent divisions. Similar awards are also given in such categories as the leading rebounder and leading scorer in basketball. Mr. Gladchuk has praised the COLLEGIAN for its intramural coverage and its recognition of the teams and their individual stars.

Dividing the dormitories into units has brought the residents closer together, and has given more boys more chances to compete. When only one team was representing a dorm of 200 the best athletes would comprise that team but the rest of the fellows would be left out in the cold. With the unit system the dorms are divided according to floors or sections. Consequently there are usually three or four teams representing the dorm in every sport, and thus there are three or four times more participants.

Another factor contributing to the success of the intramural program has been its acceptance by the hierarchy of this school from President Lederle down through the housemothers.

Dean Field has stated, "I would like personally to encourage all men to take part in the fine program of intramural activities provided by the School of Physical Education as one positive step toward maintaining good health and a balanced campus schedule."

Although all of the above conditions have greatly helped to make the intramural program so successful, one certainly cannot discount the work done by Mr. Gladchuk himself, a man who is dedicated to his work.

On any given night Coach Gladchuk can be seen supervising the intramural program "to make sure that the boys are having a good time." Last week there was no umpire for a softball game and Mr. Gladchuk donned the umpire's mask himself. Chet Gladchuk's performance qualifies as being "over and above the call of duty."

Interest in the expanded intramural program is reflected in the hotly contested dorm-fraternity rivalry. In previous years the fraternities dominated the dorms, but this year the dorms beat the frats in bowling and football (39-34) while losing the all-star basketball game.

Dividing the dorms into units has apparently raised their level of competition to a point where they can hold their own with the fraternities.

This year Mr. Gladchuk is working to emphasize the individual sports. "Last year we stressed team participation. Instead of just 16 teams we now have 36 permanent units. Now that we have firmly established the units, we are trying to increase participation in individual sports. This year there is a 60% increase in individual sports participation. Horseshoes, swimming, and soccer are new to our program. "In the future we are planning on having a foul-shooting contest, golf, and track (if a track is ever built.)"

Sunday night Games

The ever-expanding enrollment of UMass doesn't seem to concern Mr. Gladchuk. "We have the facilities to cope with any immediate enrollment increases. What we may have to do is increase the hours of participation in our existing facilities to accommodate the additional participants. We may have to play games at 8:30, 9:30, Friday night, and Sunday afternoon."

Mr. Gladchuk and his able helpers Al Garsys, Dick Ferranti, Bob McNeill, and Dick Hale have worked hard to provide a program which everyone can enjoy. They feel that if you haven't participated in intramurals, you are missing something. "Remember," they say, "the only loser in intramurals is the non-participant."

Grading System--

for their final semester grade, and some professors do not give any marks during the semester but only indicate to the student how he is doing in his course.

Prof. William Ross, of the Physics department, has never given a grade on an exam or report in 33 years of teaching at the university. He feels that if a grade is placed on the paper that is all the student looks at. If there is none, he will read the comments and corrections to determine how he has done on the exam.

"I would like the whole college of Arts and Sciences to try this method," Ross stated. "Grades are not what a student should try to get out of a course, and I have had students write back to me after graduating and thank me for proving this to them," he added.

Although grades are not the primary reason for being in college, and the student should attempt to learn as much as he can from every course, he should appreciate the fact that the present system has evolved through the trial and error of many years.

PROPOSED MACHMER TOWER

The Machmer Tower complex, to be situated between the present wings of Machmer Hall, is now under study by the Mass. Building Authority for feasibility as a student-tax supported project running on a self-amortizing basis. With a completion schedule of 39 months and an approximate cost of nine million dollars, all parts of the building will be accessible to the student body as is the present Student Union.

Investigation Looms for Student Press

by JIM FOUDEY

Criticism of a Yahoo cartoon has provoked Gov. John Volpe into ordering a complete investigation of UMass student publications. Alleged complaints to the State House about the humor magazine set off Volpe's demands.

"Nothing But Trash"

The State Senate quickly approved 34-3 an order by Senator Kevin Harrington creating a five-member senate committee to investigate publications.

Harrington termed the cartoon of a clergyman pulling a rabbit from a chalice "blasphemous and an attack on the Catholic Church. He blasted Yahoo as being 'nothing but trash.'"

Editor of Yahoo issued this comment: "The intention of the cartoon in question was not intended to blast the Roman Catholic Church as charged. The cartoon was in fact, of light social commentary on the lightheartedness, if not bigotry, with which religion is treated by a minority of contemporary society, both off and on campus. Unfortunately and ironically, this cartoon has been constructed as a piece of the same bigotry which it in actuality was intended to satirize."

"Bad Taste"

President Lederle had been contacted Wednesday by Boston newspapers and at that time commented that "the cartoon was in bad taste."

"The issue concerns the whole area of student publications," Lederle said and he expressed concern that the Student Senate should be doing more in this field.

In reply to questions about Yahoo by Senator Harrington yesterday in Boston Lederle replied, "We are looking into the matter."

"Too Far Out"

However, Harrington appeared unsatisfied. Throwing the magazine down he exclaimed, "This is not enough—I want some answers and hard answers today."

Continuing he stated, "This magazine is too far out for me."

"There are going to be hard times for UMass in the days ahead and I predict that some heads will roll if I don't get an explanation," he said.

No official University statement has been issued concerning these remarks.

All-Nighter

However the action at the State House has not gone unnoticed by student leaders.

As rumor turned to fact 28 members of the mass media, student senate and interested students banded together to form the Free Press Committee.

The committee, headed by Senate President John Greenquist, worked all night gathering facts and preparing a come back to what Collegian Editor Tom Donovan termed "an infringement on the rights of the Students and the University."

Plans of the Committee include:

- a special one page paper explaining the views of the committee and the opinions of publication editors.
- letters to the faculty.
- telegrams to the Governor, state officers and state senators expressing concern with the action.
- a petition in the SU, to give all students a chance to support the views of the committee.
- statement by the Student Senate.
- News conference.
- a news conference to publically announce and explain the views of the committee.

Students, Profs Feted At Honors Banquet

More than 25 students and two professors were honored at a banquet last night in the Student Union Ballroom closing Honors Day proceedings at which the academic achievements of some 20 faculty members were noted.

Professor Henry Steele Commager, speaking at the banquet, called for universities to be the chief instruments in "guiding government along the right path."

During the day's proceedings, 78 graduate, senior and junior students and two professors were initiated into Phi Kappa Phi, a national honor society recognizing academic achievement in any discipline.

Members of Phi Beta Kappa were also honored.

HONORS BESTOWED

Other honors went to initiates in Sigma Xi scientific honorary society, Tau Beta Pi engineering honor society, and Beta Gamma Sigma, which honors business students.

Also Mortarboard women's honorary society, Alpha Zeta in the School of Agriculture, Omicron Nu home economics honorary society and Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honor society.

The other groups honored include initiates of Xi Sigma Pi, which honors forestry students, Phi Tau Sigma for food science, Phi Eta Sigma freshman men's honor society and Kappa Delta Pi.

Class Budgets + $70,000 Approved

by DIANE STUMPFIELD

Soon the sight of a Volkswagen bus driven by one-time pedestrian representatives of campus organizations will attest to the passing of the Collegian budget ($73,857) at Wednesday night's productive eight-hour Senate meeting.

The estimated total figure appropriated by the Senate for all budgets, excluding those of the classes, was approximately $70,000.00.

GROANS

Highlights of the meeting include the groans of former Men's Judiciary member, Mel Fisher, as the Senate defeated all major Judiciary amendments to the Discipline Board proposed by the Joint Study Committee and the attack by President Dallas (Class of 1966) against the Senior Week tax proposed in President Mullin's Class of 1967 budget during the Constitutional Convention.

The unusually orderly convention opened with the swearing in of the officers of the Class of '67.

After the defeat of both an amendment by President Dallas (Class of 1966) recommending elimination of a compulsory tax for the $8,000.00 Senior Week expenses and a motion by Senator Melanson (commuters) to strike compulsory alumni dues, the Class of 1967 budget of $33,150, with a student tax of $17.00 (an increase of $6.00 a year), per class member was passed.

INNOVATION

An interesting innovation covered in this budget is the issuing of booklets containing concise and accurate statements of placement opportunities available and records kept by the University. Budgets were:

The Class of 1968 budget of $44,450.00 (high, in anticipation of phenomenal Winter Carnival entertainment) with a student tax of $4.00 (an increase of $2.00).

The Class of 1969 budget of $17,684.00 with a $3.00 student tax (an increase of $1.00).

The projected Class of 1970 budget of $6,574.00 with a student tax of $2.00.

An amendment by Senator Freedman (Baker) proposing that the Stockbridge member of the Senate be given voting rights was passed.

In consideration of the Joint Study Committee Report, the constitution of the Fine Arts council was passed. The Council is to consist of an equal number of student and faculty members and be supported by a $4 fine arts fee per student.

JUDICIARY LOST

During the lengthy discussion over the proposed Discipline Board, almost all the significant amendments proposed by the Men's Judiciary were defeated.

As passed by the Student Senate, the Discipline Board will consist of 4 faculty and 4 student members. Amendments which were passed include:

Any student who has been a party in a disciplinary proceeding has automatic appeal to the Board.

In extremely critical situations (an example given by Senator Dacey ('66, at large) was rape on campus, the Board may handle original hearings of cases.

Committee Views Co-operation

What, You Might Well Ask, Is the Joint Study Committee? ?

The Joint ad hoc Study Committee was established by vote of the Faculty and Student Senates in November, 1965 to "investigate areas in which it is desirable to have increased Faculty-Student communication, and increased student participation in policy formation, and to recommend ways of achieving these goals"; i.e., to form a co-operation between students and faculty. The committee under the chairmanship of David Clay consists of Senator James Allen, Senator Robert Cripps, former Senate President Richard Dacey, Dean J. Severt Savereid, and Dr. Robert R. Wellman.

Areas under consideration this year include seating of students on Faculty Senate committees, establishment of a new Fine Arts Council, revision of the Discipline Board, and formation of a Student Publications Board.

SYMPHONY BAND PRESENTS SPRING CONCERT

The University of Massachusetts Symphony Band, conducted by John A. Jenkins, will present its annual Spring Concert this Sunday, May 15th, at 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Curriculum Study Committee Appointed To Consider and Recommend Changes

A "Blue-ribbon" Curriculum Study Committee of ten faculty in the University of Massachusetts College of Arts and Sciences has been appointed by Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger to undertake a thorough study of the present college curriculum and to recommend any changes considered desirable.

Emphasizing that its charge is to make policy recommendations, Dean Hunsberger said: "I hope the committee will devote special attention to college requirements for the freshman and sophomore years. None of the present requirements should be regarded as sacrosanct or unchangeable. The development of interdisciplinary courses, honors sections, and individual study programs merits special attention."

Committee chairman is Dr. LeRoy F. Cook, a theoretical physicist who was appointed as associate professor at UMass in September, 1965, after having served for the past six years on the Princeton University faculty.

Other members are: Dr. John A. Breudinger, assistant professor of philosophy; Dr. Theodore C. Caldwell, professor of history; Dr. Edward L. Davis, associate professor of botany; Dr. Peter Heller, Commonwealth Professor of German; Dr. C. Peter Lilly, assistant professor of chemistry; Dr. Lewis C. Mainzer, associate professor of government; Dr. Bernard Spivack, professor of english; Ronald A. Steele, assistant professor of music; Dr. David W. Yaukey, associate professor of sociology.

Meeting with the committee as non-voting members and resource persons are Associate Dean Robert W. Wagner, professor of mathematics and Assistant Deans Leonta G. Horrigan, assistant professor of English; H. Duncan Rollason, associate professor of zoology; Harry Schumer, assistant professor of psychology; and Severt J. Savereid, associate professor of speech.

The first meeting of the committee, which took place last April 27 was devoted largely to organizational matters, though lively discussion occurred with respect to the best method for eliciting advice from students.

At the next meeting of college faculty—on May 16—Prof. Cook and his committee will outline plans of action and solicit suggestions from those in attendance.

An intensive four-day meeting the committee has been tentatively set for the week prior to the start of the fall semester in September.

Prof. Cook has indicated that the committee will consult with interested faculty and students of the College of Arts and Sciences and with selected faculty from other colleges and universities across the country. A report to the college faculty is expected no later than May 31, 1967.

The appointment of the committee represents the culmination of at least 1 year of informal and formal discussion within the college. In February the faculty voted roughly 3-1 in favor of appointment of a committee to re-examine the present curriculum, which was adopted in the spring of 1958—about 2 student generations ago, Dean Hunsberger noted.

Only about one-third of the present faculty took part in the deliberations of eight years ago. Moreover, high school curricula have undergone striking changes and improvements since 1958, and today's freshmen enter the University with considerably better preparation.

According to Dean Hunsberger, "It is our hope that Prof. Cook's committee will propose a curriculum which reflects these changes and which revitalizes and catalyzes the process of liberal education. The rich diversity and high professional quality of our present faculty provide a potential for curricular innovation that is not available to a liberal arts college unattached to a large university."

"I look forward with great eagerness to the report of Prof. Cook's committee. If this report is accepted by the faculty, I shall spare no effort in implementing its recommendations at the earliest possible date."

Hot Time

The Amherst Fire Department responded to two fires last night, both at the University. A fire at Brooks House was called in at 7:30. A washing machine motor was reported to be on fire. However, firemen arrived only in time to wring out the laundry.

The Fire Department again responded at 8:15 to a fire at Beta Kappa Phi, 406 N. Pleasant St. The brothers were supervising the burning of rubbish in their back yard when the fire trucks arrived. However, fire officials stated that they were burning too close to the house and without a permit.

Animals, Highwaymen Here

A world famous, long-haired rock and roll group from Liverpool, England, will appear here Sunday, May 15.

Five Beatle-maned young men—The Animals—will headline a Sunday concert at 2 p.m. in the Cage.

Sharing the billing with the British rock and roll group will be the popular American folk song quartet The Highwaymen. The concert will climax Greek Week.

The second group from Liverpool to make the big time, The Animals sprung into world fame with their hit recordings of "House of the Rising Sun" and "It's My Life."

In contrast, are The Highwaymen — four collegiate young men who specialize in folk songs and a humorous outlook toward their musical contemporaries.

MOST IMPORTANT COMMUNITY

Professor Commanger, Winthrop H. Smith Professor of History at Amherst College, spoke on "The Community of Learning" at the banquet.

"In many ways, this is the most important community in the world" Prof. Commanger said.

He said he deplores the policies by which nations are using learning for ends of chauvinistic nationalism. This process, Prof. Commanger said, is opposed to the eighteenth century idea which said "scientists are never at war."

He cited several examples from eighteenth century history to illustrate his point.

He said Benjamin Franklin helped Captain Cook gain immunity from aggression so that the explorer could continue his work in peace.

The Amherst professor, author of several history books, said that restriction of travel to Cuba and Red China and use of universities for "wicked ends" is a sharp contradiction to these ideals.

He said science should be emancipated from chauvinistic nationalism and government should stop placing scientists at war with other scientists.

Candidates for Senior Honors include:

Peter C. Amoroso, George P. Banks, Ruthanne Batcheller, Jacqueline Beauvais, Glenn J. Binzel, Marshall Bloom, Judith A. Bolter, Ann Marie Bonneau, Sandra Borden, David P. Bourcier, David G. Briggs, Robert O. Brush, Paul E. Bryan, Alan B. Bulotsky, Francis A. Canali, Donald J. Ciapponelli, Janet Clines, Vivian F. Coggeshall, Elaine M. Corsi, Chester D. Cramer, Bruce E. Cutter, Paul R. ## STUDENT SENATE...

Each student in a disciplinary action before the Board may select an adviser to represent him in all proceedings.

All written or taped recordings of the hearing must be destroyed four years after the hearing or one year after all parties are granted a University degree, whichever comes first.

When the regular Senate meeting began at 12:20, the Collegian budget of $73,857.00, made up of $20,000.00 expected yearly revenue and a $53,857.00 appropriation by the Senate, was passed.

The budget included the purchase of a Volkswagen bus for delivery and travel, which will be at the disposal of other campus organizations.

Budgets for the Heymakers,

Concert Association, and Judo Club were passed, as was the $100,000 Art Club Budget.

The Academic Affairs Committee proposal, recommending that all class attendance should become the personal responsibility of the students was unanimously passed.

The motion to recommend to Provost Tippo that academic credits be awarded for executive service in certain campus organizations was passed. An amendment by Senator Garjian (James) proposing that credits be awarded to all members of these organizations was defeated.

The possibility of dividing the Senate into two houses was presented by Senator Downes (Hills South). The senator professed that "I don't think we should abolish the Senate."

U.T. Has New Director

(Amherst, Mass.) Mr. Harry Mahnken has succeeded Mr. Cosmo A. Catalano as Director of the University of Massachusetts Theatre. Mr. Mahnken received his B.A. from Geneva College, his M.F.A. from Carnegie Institute of Technology, and his Ph.D. is in progress at Michigan State University.

In 1955 Mr. Mahnken was appointed managing director of the Community players in Huntington W. Va. At the playhouse he directed full-length productions, one acts, and children's plays, as well as being responsible for the management, design, and construction. From the Community players, Mr. Mahnken went on to accept a one year appointment as Director of Drama and Instructor of Speech at Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa. In 1958 he became a lecturer for the Ford Foundation, and in 1960 was appointed Director and Instructor in Speech and Dramatic Art at the University of Richmond. Finally, in 1962 he came to UMass with Mr. Catalano to establish the University Theatre. For the next four years they worked together to produce a graduate program in theatre, a summer repertory company, many new courses, and a first class producing organization.

Mr. Mahnken's articles have appeared in The Educational Theatre Journal, Players Magazine, and Modern Drama. His many productions at UMass include: Oedipus Rex, Murder in the Cathedral, Ghosts, All The Kings Men, Born Yesterday, Julius Caesar, The Fantasticks, and A View From the Bridge.

There can be no doubt that the same drive, fortitude, and far-sightedness, that Mr. Mahnken has exhibited in the past will be evidenced in his leadership of the University Theatre.

The new Director of the University Theatre, Harry E. Mahnken.

Berkeley Defeats Chance To Free Student Gov't.

Berkeley students lost a chance last week to make more academic history by solidly defeating a proposal freeing student government of administrative control.

Killed, in the largest student vote turnout ever, was a proposal to substitute for the present constitution of the Associated Students of the University of California, an autonomous student government not responsible to the Academic Senate or the chancellor.

The proposed constitution was written by campus groups who felt it would remedy what they call "sandbox" student government, one without any real power.

Chancellor Roger Heyns served warning long before voting day that if the new constitution was ratified it could not go into effect because it was illegal.

Chancellor Heyns said passage of the new constitution would mean nonexistence of student government at Berkeley and the responsibility of all groups being run by the ASUC would be taken over by his office.

Attempts to get the document declared constitutional and would undoubtedly have touched off another furor. Statewide university rules that any "student government" must be a branch of the administration; it must get its power from the university and operate according to university rules.

Proponents of the constitution argued that an autonomous student government, unlike the present ASUC, would give students a "preponderant voice in decisions on rules governing student activities."

The administration argued that ultimate authority must remain with the chancellor or "the chain of responsibilities in the complex statewide university system will break down."

Graduate students, many of whom had had a heavy voice in drawing up the constitution, favored the proposal by about 1,000 votes. Undergraduates defeated it by about 2,000 votes. To be ratified, the constitution needed a two-thirds undergraduate majority. More than 11,000 of Berkeley's 27,500 students voted.

The new constitution grew out of a Constitutional Convention held last December.

At the convention, liberal graduate and undergraduate spokesmen held the floor and succeeded in passing their constitution transferring government control to the students.

Observers said that opposition to the proposed constitution centered on the way the document was prepared and could not be construed to be a vote in favor of the present ASUC setup.

Editorially, the Daily Californian commented, "Eventually the student government as constituted in its present form must be abandoned. The responsibility of caring for activities will never make for an ASUC that is concerned with education and the student's relation to the community."

Race Is On Rooms Wrapping Up

Ready. On your mark. Get set. Go. The race is on!

Stockbridge come in first with its students all registered in their four-year dorms.

The Towers push for a powerful second with 860 men and 703 girls already over the finish line. A breakdown of each dorm of the complex reveals that:

- 295 men signed up for T-1, leaving the dorm with 281 entry blanks.
- 340 men signed up for T-5, leaving the dorm with 236 entry blanks.
- 225 men signed up for T-6, leaving the dorm with 156 entry blanks.

Out of 192 placements for graduate students on the lower floors of T-6, 100 have crossed the finish line. The men take the lead again with 65 entries as compared to the women's 35. Future grad applicants note:

The deadline for registration is August 1st.

To build up the Towers' strength, a number of groups have contributed entries. Of Arnold's 213 residents, Brooks' 164 residents, and Melville's 192 residents; 57, 24, and 103 students respectively have joined the Southwest outfit.

Filling out the scoreboard are the fifth and sixth floors of Van Meter (21 girls) and 25 out of 69 Plymouth residents. 15 out of 29 men from the first floor of Greenough complete the Tower team.

The remaining entry blanks for the Towers can now be filled by returning students, transfer students, and Freshmen.

Brooks House, which has changed its qualifications, is turning out a strong outfit of Seniors. The biggest group to join, out of students over the wholecampus, consists of 19 Brooks Juniors. 140 students have signed up in all.

Mr. Wells, from the Housing Department, seems to be justly pleased with the progress of the race. He says that students are still in the progress of filling out applications for rooms other than those in their present resident halls.

Westover Gen. to Review ROTC

Lt. Gen. Horace M. Wade, 8th Air Force Commander, at Westover Air Force Base, Mass., will serve as reviewing officer for the University of Massachusetts parade and review of military and air science cadets May 20, 1966.

The review will be held at the University's athletic field at 7:00 p.m.

General Wade, the senior Air Force officer in the New England area, will also present the General Dynamics Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps Cadet Award. This award is presented annually to the outstanding air science sophomore cadet candidate for the professional officer course.

General Wade, a native of Arkansas, graduated from the University of Arkansas, and holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration. He began his military career as a member of the National Guard. In 1937 he entered the Air Corps, and in 1938 he received his commission as a Second Lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve.

General Wade was with the 7th Bomb Group acting as commander of a B-17 Flying Fortress, when the Japanese struck Pearl Harbor. During the war he achieved the rank of Colonel, and was credited with flying thirty-six combat missions in B-17 and B-24 aircraft. He achieved the distinction of becoming the first Assistant Chief of Staff for the Intelligence of the newly activated 9th Bomber Command in the Middle East.

The General's first assignment to the Strategic Air Command was not until 1949, and he soon became Deputy Commander of the 91st Strategic Reconnaissance Wing. In July of 1954 he attended the National War College, and after completing it, was assigned to Headquarters, Strategic Air Command, to become the director of personnel. While in this position, he established the goal of "professional force in being" and established the "quality control program" as they are known in the Air Force today.

He became Deputy Commander, Headquarters, Eighth Air Force in September, 1961, and in August 1962, General Wade was transferred to Headquarters, USAF to become the Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff, Plans and Operations. Lt. Gen. Wade received his third star in 1964, when he assumed command of the Eighth Air Force.

Lt. General Wade is a command pilot, maintains his proficiency in multi-jet aircraft, and has more than 7,000 hours of flying time. His decorations include the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Distinguished Flying Cross. General Wade is married, but has no children.

The Annual Spring Review is the culmination of activities for the Academic Year in the Air and Military Science Departments. Honors are presented to the outstanding members of the Cadet Brigade and Cadet Air Wing. All members of the faculty and staff are cordially invited to the Review.

To be dedicated Saturday, May 14, at the University of Massachusetts is this three-story School of Engineering classroom and laboratory facility, Engineering Building East. The public is invited to an open house at 9 a.m. and to the dedication ceremony at 10. Dr. Emmanuel G. Mesthene, director of Harvard University's Program on Technology and Society, will give the dedication address. The $1.9 million facility was designed by Drummey, Rosane and Anderson of Boston and completed last year by Daniel O'Connell's Sons of Holyoke.

How Dare You

by CHET WEINERMAN, Editorial Chairman

How dare you, John Lederle?

You have had the unmitigated gall to challenge an 80% budget cut off the University Medical School Budget, a paring which—as everyone knows—was necessary both for the fiscal well-being of the state and for the betterment of the new top-notch Med School. You know damn well all this talk about library books, reduction of enrollment, stagnation of University growth, and ceasing of UMass Boston development is only so much hogwash.

Why, Rep. Freyda Koplow is right; Volpe's actions are clearly in the State's best interest. It is your actions, Mr. President, which "smack of politics" and make the legislature appear "anti-education". The Legislature this year is gung-ho UMass; just examine the record.

And Treasurer Johnson; how could you have had the audacity to search for and discover errors and omissions in the Governor's carefully planned budget. Representative Toomey's prolific and courageous statement bears repetition here: "You ought to resign — who're you trying to kid." And especially with the salary you get, Mr. Treasurer. The state needs more men like John Toomey and less picayune people like yourself.

Rumor now has it that Dean Soutter may resign—on principle. Ach, principle, shminsiple. He's only a troublemaker and an idealistic spender. Rest assured that the Governor will find a most capable architect to replace Soutter as Dean of the Medical School.

Lederle. Johnson. Soutter. You're all bitterly digging up little untruths and irrelevant facts just to make the esteemed Legislature of the Commonwealth look bad, appear anti-education. But we can see right through you. You're violating the spirit of fiscal autonomy in this state, you are. You want a fancy med school and a respected University, and, by gum, you'll go to any extreme to achieve these ends. Even embarrassing the Legislature!! And the Governor!! Why you all ought to resign!

How dare you, John Lederle.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Letters To The Editor

A Message from the Presidents

To the Editor:

In the Monday issue of the Collegian, we were informed by Mr. Neal Whitman of the "misuse" of class funds, in that—

"Class money and prestige have been used to aid the political preferences of certain class officers" and that, "We have on our campus four politically oriented groups, who could serve the campus by sponsoring political candidates. But, why do the classes have to do so . . ."

This accusation brings to the fore a key question about class governments. This question was discussed somewhat during the past election campaigns. The key question is: Are the class governments more than social organizations and dare the class officers more than social chairmen? The answer was overwhelmingly "yes."

The classes have tried to do little more than hold a dance or sponsor a sing. We have entered new areas of class participation, and are looking for more. We are trying to get things done for our classes, the University, and the state.

A small part of this participation has been the inviting and subsequent sponsoring of present holders of and candidates for state-wide office.

The results of this program have been impressive. Within the last year the classes have sponsored the incumbent Senator Edward Kennedy and the two leading candidates for Senator Saltonstall's vacant seat, Edward W. Brooke and John F. Collins.

"The four politically active groups have failed to bring important political figures to the University of Massachusetts. The classes have succeeded. Who the class president supports for an office is of little consequence, for the class executive council must approve these invitations."

If we want to have the most important political figures in the state at the University of Massachusetts, the classes must continue to extend invitations and to use their prestige, because obviously the alternative groups have failed.

Honors Projects: Students Research Variety of Subjects

Psychology

Groups Affect Creativity

by NANCY ABRAMS

Imagine that you have a crazy idea. Would you tell this idea to a group of your friends? To a group of your enemies? Or even to a stranger or a group of strangers?

Vivian Coggeshall, a senior majoring in psychology, is attempting to answer these questions in her Senior Honors project.

DAINTLY DRESSED in a pink negligee, Vivian climbed onto her top bunk and frantically scored creativity tests as she spoke of her project. "After studying other research on creativity, I chose two tests from a battery by Getzels and Jackson that has been standardized. In the first test, one must think up as many meanings as possible for a given word. For instance, 'fair' can refer to a festival, the weather, mediocrity or a pretty maiden. There are 25 words on the test.

The second test asks for uses of five objects. For the object 'brick' one could use it to build things or for holding a door open.

"I gave these tests to the students in a child psychology lecture. Each person worked independently and wrote down his answers, which provided the norm to decide which responses are creative. A response made by one-fifth or less of these students is considered a creative one. Each student gets two scores—the total number of meanings or uses he thinks of and the number of creative responses.

"I now gave this test to the students in the educational psychology laboratories both at the end of last semester and the beginning of this semester. Half the students in each lab were given the test alone and the other half took the test orally in a group situation. I also asked the long-standing groups to rate the degree of amiability of the group."

WHEN VIVIAN HAD NOT finished scoring the tests of the 700 students who took part in this experiment, she admitted that her theory could be "blown to bits."

"The individual will be more creative than a member of a group," she explained, "because the radical individual is spurned by the group. A member of a newly-formed group, such as the students in the lab who were tested during the first week of this semester, will rank next in creativity because there is less organization. The students do not know each other and will not be inhibited by what others think of them.

"In a long-standing group, such as the students who worked all semester together in the lab, there is much closer interaction. It is reasonable to expect that the friendlier the group, the less creative responses there will be. If the group members are not friendly, they will be more willing to say whatever they please.

"IN A TIGHTLY-KNIT GROUP, each member knows what the others expect of him. If he perceives the group as thinking of him as conservative, he is less likely to say anything radical. A person will not say things he knows the group will not approve of him saying.

"I have enjoyed doing a research project of my own after spending years reading about them. It has been a wonderful experience, but I do not like all the busy-work. I know one thing: when I got through with this, I felt I would never want to see another creativity test again or even hear the word creativity."

Aldous Huxley -- Pioneering In a "Wholly Truthful Art"

by GENA COREA

He slumped into a chair, pulled out a cigarette from the pocket of his red-checked shirt and explained.

"I had two heroes, Aldous Huxley and Willie Mays. I couldn't write my paper on Mays, although he may be worthy of it, so I'm writing on Huxley."

Jim Collins, a slight, soft-spoken, yet out-spoken English major, has been exploring Aldous Huxley's writing for his Senior Honors projects. As his studies have progressed, Collins' ideas about the author have changed—from a former hero-workshop to an understanding of a great man's weaknesses.

Before beginning the project, all he knew about Huxley was that he had experimented with LSD, a drug, and that he had died on the same day as President Kennedy. Collins suspected that Huxley was someone to mold his life after—to equal or excel. After some work on the project, he discovered that Huxley was a man.

"I found that Huxley wasn't the hero I thought he was. He had his faults and his good points, too."

With one leg swung over the arm of the chair and his hands folded behind his head, Collins discussed the purpose of his paper. The paper will present a critique of the philosophy of life and literature in Huxley's early novels.

Among the many ideas Jim will explore is Huxley's concept of the "wholly-truthful art. The author believed that art should tell the whole truth and not just part of it.

Jim inhaled his cigarette and explained the concept.

"For example, in one of his novels, Huxley told of the hero wetting his pants in some childhood incident. In a tragedy like Hamlet, you couldn't have the hero falling off his horse or wetting his pants. In this latter art form, some of the truth must be excluded."

Huxley believed that the tragedy had its place in literature but would place his "wholly-truthful" art above it.

Another concept Collins will discuss is Huxley's philosophy of multiplicity. Pausing between words as he collected his thoughts, Jim explained this theory.

"Huxley saw life in its thousand aspects. He saw life, not as a single jewel, but as all the smaller facets of jewel life. (That's a good metaphor. I'll have to use it in my paper.)"

Jim further explained that Huxley, in his early novels, had ideas oppose each other, as they do in the human world. No one idea comes out on top.

Huxley's eyes became weak so he read with a magnifying glass. This, in Collins' opinion, reveals the author's attitude toward life. Life is something to be examined with a magnifying glass.

"But I'm simplifying. I'm sure Huxley would turn over in his grave and my adviser would kick me in the rear."

Later in the paper, Collins will study the evolution of Huxley's ideas. He will discuss the author's search for a oneness in multiplicity.

Jim will also touch on Huxley's non-attachment to his art—his aloofness. Collins likes this objective attitude toward art.

"I don't think you have to be screwed up to be creative. It isn't necessary to cut off your ear like Van Gogh, to be an artist."

Included in his project will be an evaluation of Huxley's place in the history of the novel. The author experimented with literary forms and helped to introduce the novel of ideas. The author, for example, would present a group of people meeting, talking and expressing thoughts.

When Huxley wrote after the first world war, it was a time to experiment. The old order had been swept away. No values were assigned to various concepts. Huxley believed that no values should be assigned.

This is where Jim becomes critical of Huxley. He believes that one must distinguish between degrees of goodness and badness.

"You've got to have a value system," he said.

Collins enjoys working with Huxley, but is quick to admit that he hasn't worked hard enough.

"I'm not going to say that I spend 38 hours a week on this project or anywhere near it. I'm lazy."

He finds the project somewhat "frightening" because he is completely on his own. This is quite different from the usual method of college study. However, Jim likes the idea of the honors program as opposed to the regular method of learning in college. In the latter method, the student is told to read the same thing and think the same things as thousands of other students. He becomes lost among many.

"This is a factor in the spread of beer parties, pot parties and existentialism," said Jim Collins. "The honors project provides an opportunity to work on your own, a chance to say something new."

Public Health

Can Hamburgers be Dangerous?

by BETTY CHISHOLM

When Paul Bryan asks for "hamburgers with" he doesn't want onions. He takes ammonia and nitrogen with his hamburgers part of his Senior Honors project of inspecting bacteria counts in ground beef. The purpose of his project is to establish a standard bacterial count as a valid test for the spoilage of ground beef.

Anyone visiting Room 230 in the Food and Drug Laboratories of the Department of Public Health, Morrill Building, would probably see a sandy-haired, blue-eyed fellow, all five feet, ten inches of him committed to a Kjeldahl connector bulb or to an aeration cylinder. These are two of the instruments which helped Bryan arrive at a standard correlation between the bacterial counts he derives from agar plate count samples and the Health Department's involved chemical testing of beef bacteria, which judges beef spoilage by the ammonia-nitrogen ratio of the beef. He hopes the bacteria analysis method of testing meat spoilage, a relatively simple test, will prove exact and standardized enough to replace the lengthy chemical test, which requires intricate and expensive chemical apparatus.

BRYAN COUNTS the colonies of bacteria in aged plate samples and constantly checks his figures against the figures of the chemical ammonia-nitrogen tests. The latter test reduces the meat to liquid in order to determine the percentages of free ammonia and nitrogen. Since nitrogen turns to ammonia as meat ages, the higher the quotient of the ratio of ammonia to nitrogen, the higher the count of bacteria. By the correlation of the presently used chemical test with his own bacteria analysis, Bryan hopes to establish a bacteriological standard.

Paul said his study has definitely affected him as a consumer. In his opinion, some food stores are looking more for an extra dollar than for quality and high sanitation standards. The aspect of food sanitation conditions is significant to Bryan because, he said, all bacteria in hamburger occurs in the grinding and handling processes. Since he is investigating an improved method of testing the degree of bacteria in hamburger, he is at times uneasy, perhaps uneasy, he said about eating hamburgers.

PAUL USES about two pounds of hamburger a week in his project, purchased from three price ranges at an Amherst supermarket. It may be noted that when he returns home, being shown hamburger in the refrigerator for a couple days strikes a sour note in Paul Bryan's head, though it never did before.

In general, the project has made Bryan more aware of what he is buying, not just in meats but in many commodities; for he has worked very closely with professionals from the Food and Drug Laboratories in his research. In fact, it was his fellow laboratory workers' daily curiosity in his research as a practical benefit to Health Departments that first made the honor student sensitive to the possible significance of his work.

It is possible, he reported that his final research report may be published in a public health journal. He added: "The possibility of practical application would be satisfying to me personally." This aspect of Senior Honors has made the experience valuable to him, he said. The project he was given, aside from developing initiative and resourcefulness in his major field—the purpose of the program—has given Paul Bryan a personal gain and enriched his entire academic career.

Anyone for hamburger?

UMass Treasurer Blasted By State Legislative Committee

University of Massachusetts Treasurer Kenneth Johnson was told yesterday by a veteran member of the House Ways and Means Committee, "You ought to resign." The declaration by Rep. John J. Toomey (D-Cambridge), former chairman of the committee, came after Johnson claimed Gov. Volpe and the Department of Administration made "errors of omissions and computations . . . between three and four million dollars" in the University's budget.

A similar claim was made by Lederle.

Lederle drew sharp criticism from members of both political parties for blaming the Legislature for reduction of the University's budget from the requested $34,500,000 to $26,200,000.

Rep. John C. Bresnahan (D-Lawrence) objected to giving the University "a blank check." He contended the University should forego accepting added enrollments.

This was in answer to Lederle's explanation the University based its budget recommendations on a desire to provide for 1000 students at the Boston branch, 1310 more at the Amherst campus and 500 in the summer school.

Rep. Freyda P. Koplow (R-Brookline), told the hearing she was "very disturbed" at the University officials this year. She said the officials were leading "the general public to believe we are anti-higher education. This is not so . . . I am disturbed that wittingly or unwittingly you have gone to the press instead of the Dept. of Administration and Finance. This is very, very disturbing and smacks of politics with a halo over your heads."

She said it made the Legislature appear to be playing politics "in the lowest sense."

Toomey asked Lederle why the statement was given to the press. The University President said he did not know how it got out and Toomey insisted, "You should know. If you didn't give it out how did it get out?"

Toomey said he was amazed University officials had not known the details of the budget slash before it sent a report to the committee.

Draft on Students Less Windy

The college student can breathe easier this spring than at any time in the last year. Unless he flunks out, the chances are almost 100% that he will be able to finish his education in peace. Most of their fears of being drafted have proved groundless. Nor do they have to worry anywhere as much as they had feared over the results of the college qualification tests, the first of which will be held Saturday.

Unexpected Surge in Enlistments

A number of factors have combined to ease their minds. A main one has been an unexpected surge in the number of voluntary enlistments. These are expected to go over the half million mark in the year ending next month, more than half again as many as in the previous year. Mental standards for servicemen have been lowered, reserve enlistments shut off, and at the moment both the Navy and the Air Force have more volunteers than they can take care of. All this has combined to ease the draft situation.

Earlier this year Selective Service officials were told they would have to supply an average of 35,000 men a month at least during the first half of 1966. To meet this figure it was obvious they would have to draft a number of college students—those who weren't doing too well and those who seemed to be frittering away their time in graduate schools.

Instead, draft calls for some time now have averaged 28,600 a month. The June call is for 15,000 men and that for July, 26,500. Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey said the other day that as long as the calls average 30,000 a month or less, college students who are passing their courses can consider themselves safe.

Within the next month or so almost a million and a half young men will graduate from high school and college. Draft boards will not reap a heavy harvest from either. High school graduates smart enough to get into college shouldn't have too much trouble getting a score of 70 on the qualification tests they will have a chance to take starting Saturday.

The others who are physically fit have new incentives to enlist early in the third period if an official had not mistakenly called UMass for having an extra man on the field.

His whistle blew play dead just as O'Brien's shot struck the inside bar of the goal.

The "A" team was responsible for tying the game at 3-3 late in the third quarter. Avakian tossed a pass to Tony Arneri, whose side-arm shot produced his 18th goal of the season.

UNH, however, went ahead shortly thereafter when Pete Campbell kicked a loose ball into the net with three minutes left in the third canto. But O'Brien and Avakian gave the last laugh to the Redmen.

As usual, UMass outshot its opponent by a wide margin. This time it was 48-17. New Hampshire's 5'10", 230-pound goalie Al Decarlo made 25 stops, several of them excellent, while UMass' Bill Sinclair executed a total of six saves.

The Redmen's next rival, Brown, may present a bit of a problem. The Ivy Leaguers, who will appear on the lacrosse field here at 2 p.m. tomorrow, have five of the leading scorers in New England.

Brown recently rode to a 20-1 victory over UConn and has beaten New Hampshire, 27-2. In the latter slaughter, the Brownies led, 19-0, at the half.

Splashing their way to a 12-4 burial of UConn's Little Huskies, the UMass freshman lacrosse-men extended their unbeaten streak to six games at the lacrosse field in the rain yesterday.

Paul Mushovic was the best muddler with four goals and one assist, while Kevin "Fox" O'Connor notched three goals and two assists. Other UMass producers were Gary Vassar (two goals, one assist), and Kent Hubbard, Don Agnoli, and Pete Harvey, with one goal apiece.

Dedication Saturday Of Engineering Building

Engineering Building East, $1.9 million University of Massachusetts School of Engineering laboratory and classroom facility, will be dedicated at ceremonies Saturday morning, May 14.

A 9 a.m. open house will be the dedication, followed by the dedication address at 10 a.m. Dr. Emmanuel G. Mesthene, director of the Program on Technology and Society at Harvard University, will speak on "The Intellectual Enterprise in an Age of Technology." The public is invited.

The facility was opened for use at the beginning of the present academic year. Electrical engineering laboratories and classrooms occupy the bulk of the three-story building.

SPECIAL FACILITIES include a 300-seat auditorium, an analog computer facility, a graduate fluid mechanics laboratory, a sanitary engineering laboratory, plus laboratories for process controls, instrumentation, control systems and other research under the departments of mechanical, civil, chemical and electrical engineering.

Planning for the building was begun in 1958 and it was completed in 1965. Drummey, Rosane and Anderson of Boston is the designer and Daniel O'Connell's Sons of Holyoke the builder.

The UMass School of Engineering ranks second in size among the schools and colleges of the University. It now has approximately 900 undergraduates, 125 graduate students, a faculty of approximately 60 and buildings and equipment worth over $5 million.

this year under the GI Bill of Rights. A 3-year enlistment will earn them benefits for college study. Of the college graduates, when you sift out the physically unfit, those who are married and those going to graduate school, you won't have many left.

Forces Need Specialists

With all this going for them you would think the military services would be happy. They aren't. The Pentagon doesn't like to talk about it too much, but there is an alarming shortage of men in some classifications. The Army, for instance, is trying to induce 7,500 retired sergeants, specialists in engineer, ordnance, medical, signal and other categories, to return to active duty to help train the new recruits and to fill occupational specialties here and abroad.

Trackmen Belt Holy Cross; Yan Con Meet Tomorrow

by TERRY CARPENTER

Led by John Medeiros and Court Bassett, the UMass tracksters walloped Holy Cross in the field and held on in the track events to eke out a big 76½-72½ win over last year's New England champs Tuesday at Worcester. The injury-hampered team will thus head into the Yankee Conference meet tomorrow at Kingston, R. I., with a 3-2 record.

A 20' 10½" performance gave Medeiros a victory in his specialty, the long jump, to start off the meet. Phil Skerry followed with a third place in the shot, and Medeiros captured the high jump at 5'8", with Jay Hall tied for third.

Co-Captain Bob Murray an even 11 feet to win the pole vault, and Dave Lizotte took third with an 11'6" showing. Bassett led a sweep in the discus with a throw of 131' 7½". He was followed by Goodfellow and Divver. Another victor was Bob Delue with a 182' 5" in the javelin, just beating teammate Bassett.

Bob Karagosian cracked the 160' mark with a throw of 164' in the hammer. Bassett again added points with a third place finish.

Medeiros wound up the field events with a victory in the triple jump at 41' even, nipping Steve Prouty by an inch.

In the running events, however, the Redmen had their problems. Terry Carpenter finished second in the mile with a 4:25, and John Anderson did likewise in the 440 with a 51.0.

Busybodies Medeiros placed second in the 100, with Bob Moroney coming in third.

The only event won by the

C. K. Yang has nothing over UMass' John Medeiros, who paced the Redmen tracksters to a slim victory over Holy Cross with impressive performances in the long jump, high jump, triple jump, 100 yard dash, and the high hurdles.

Redmen on the track was a rout. Hall, Medeiros, and Ted Davis swept the 120 high hurdles. Greg Bowman placed third in a fast 880 race.

Anderson, switched to the 220 because of a manpower shortage, won an important second.

Don Walkwitz and Moroney took second and third in the intermediate hurdles.

Carpenter's second place in the two-mile clinched the victory, and the Redmen then conceded the relay to the Crusaders.

NO RENT RAISE!

Rents at the Lincoln Apartments will not go up.

Mr. Jack Wells of Housing commented that "rent at the Lincoln Apartments will not be raised at this time and there are no plans at the moment for a future raise."

He explained that it was just a proposal which was shelved by the Treasurer's Office and Housing.

"Infringement of Rights"

The meeting, also attended by Dean of Students William Field and Robin Brooks, Asst. to the Dean of Students outlined these plans in an atmosphere marked by deep concern for the maintenance of a free press and a free University.

Various members of the committee expressed concern with recent action of the Senate House regarding UM and feel that there has been "an infringement of our rights to grow and develop into a great institution."

Finally, the committee expressed its desire to rally both students and faculty behind the cause of a free press and to render support to President Lederle and the administration regarding "recent stagnation of UMass growth by the State Legislature."

Frosh to Test Worcester Sat.

Weather permitting, freshmen baseball will once again swing into action Saturday as the junior Redmen journey optimistically to the east to do hardball battle with Worcester Academy at 3 p.m.

After dropping successive contests to Holy Cross and UConn at home, the baseballers hope to even their season's slate with a victory against the prep-schoolers. Coach Dick Bergquist will probably start right-hander, Norm Elliott who saw limited action against the Huskies last week.

Nine Tops URI, 5-2; Clinches Conference Tie

by GLENN BRIERE

Once again the weather was uncooperative but Rhode Island was not as the UMass baseball team downed the Rams, 5-2, to clinch a tie for the Yankee Conference championship Wednesday at Amherst.

Played on a raw, windy day which has typified UMass baseball this spring, the victory gave the Redmen a chance to win it all on Saturday when they travel to New Hampshire. Carl Boteze not only hurled a six-hitter and struck out 11, but he helped his cause with two RBI's in the second inning. It was Carl's fifth win against one setback.

UMass got to Rhody pitcher

Frank Fleming early, scoring four runs in the first two innings. Hagan Andersen led off the bottom of the first with a single to left. After he was forced by Frank Stewart, Jim Babyak grounded to second but first baseman Bruce Hallworth missed the throw and there were runners on second and third.

Terry Swanson then drove a triple to deep right center, scoring Stewart and Babyak. Swanson was thrown out at the plate trying to stretch it into a homer, but the Redmen were in front, 2-0.

Ted Mareno started off the second by hitting a pop fly to right which somehow dropped among three Rhode Island fielders for a double. After John Peacock drew a walk, Jim Kuczynski laid down a sacrifice bunt which the third baseman threw high to first, and the bases were loaded with Boteze coming up. With the infield drawn in, Carl bounced a grounder past the glove of the shortstop into left field, and two runs scored to make it 4-0. Fleming retired the next three batters to end the rally.

In the fourth, John Peacock walked, moved to second on an infield out, and scored when Hagan Andersen smashed a double down the left field line for the fifth run.

Rhode Island scored its two runs in the sixth on a hit batsman and two singles, but Boteze bore down to allow just one hit in the last three frames.

Maine stayed in the race Wednesday by defeating New Hampshire, 6-0. If the Redmen can do the same on Saturday, they will take their first outright conference title in nine years and only their second in history. Coach Earl Lorden's 1952 team tied for the crown with UConn.

Lorden is undecided over who will pitch against UNH, but it should be either Dave Katz, John Canty or Bill Smith; UMass, who beat the Wildcats 15-9 at Amherst, now has a YanCon record of 7-2 and an overall mark of 10-3.

Avakian's Late Goal Gives Redmen 5-4 Victory at UNH

by TOM FITZGERALD

It took Charlie Avakian eight games, 59 minutes, and 32 seconds to score his first goal of the season. When it came, it gave the Redmen a pulse-quickenning 5-4 victory over New Hampshire Wednesday at Durham.

The Redmen spent all afternoon setting the stage for the grand finale. After trailing 4-3 midway through the fourth quarter, Coach Dick Garber's lacrossemen rallied with a goal by Kevin O'Brien after a Jim O'Donnell assist with 6:34 left to play.

O'Brien's goal saved the day and lifted the curtain for hero Avakian's performance, which came off on schedule, or rather just in the nick of time.

The three-year veteran took the ball with less than a minute left. Hustling down the right side, he beat his man and fired from a tough angle. The ball zipped by another defender and the goalie, hitting the left side of the net. The clock showed 28 seconds left.

The Redmen were losing, 3-1, at one point in the second period. UMass crease man Howie Goff-

3-2 with an excellent shot from the right at 7:32 of the second period. The junior midfielder,

SPE, AEP, Rams Win

by DAVE JARNES

SPE clinched the A League title with a surprisingly easy 13-3 win over ICA. Lambda Chi entered the game with hopes of finishing first, but Sig Ep dampened LC's lofty aspirations by unleashing a powerful attack featured by Strong's four hits and Miller's three.

In another key IFC battle, AEP eliminated defending champion TKE in a 4-3 squeaker. Both of TKE's losses have been by one run. AEP is still undefeated and will meet BKP next week for the B League championship.

The Webster Rams extended their winning streak to five by nipping the Redwoods, 6-3, and blasting the Hawks, 13-1. Mike Hamilton had seven for eight in the doubleheader and raised his average to .800.

Tom Camalli's home run in the bottom of the seventh enabled the Redmen to tip the Colts, 4-3, and take over sole possession of first place in the South League. Meanwhile, the Patriots dropped to second after being upset by the Birch, 12-11. Clauss and Bousquet had four hits apiece for the victors.

In a traditional rivalry the Greenough Grants beat the Greenough Garfields for the first time in three years, 6-1, behind the outstanding pitching of Kay Sanford. Sanford fanned nine and allowed only two hits.

The Wheeler Trojans remained undefeated and still on top in the West League by bombing the Maples, 11-1. Rounding out the dorm games, the Bengals defeated the Cherys, 7-3, and the Pines upended the Hoovers, 8-3.

PMD scored an amazing 12 runs on 15 hits in the first inning and went on to trounce hapless PSK, 19-0. John Sheran led the attack with five hits. Turning to the independents, the Chem Club continued to roll along by toppling the Forsters, 6-2, and blanking the Land Scrapers, 7-0. The Pi Spots showed some run scoring power in whipping the Bounders, 15-5, and the AEP Pledges, 13-1. The Trojans edged the Good Guys, 5-3, and the Knights were beaten by the Ghosts, 13-4.

man had started the scoring by firing a pass from Bob Murphy into the goal just before two minutes had gone by in the first quarter.

An unassisted tally by Dave Hagerman at 6:15 deadlocked the score at 1-1, for the only other offensive production of the somewhat sloppy quarter.

New Hampshire's Bob Doherty jolted the Redmen with back-to-back goals at 4:42 and 7:17 of the second period. Both came on hard left-handed shots as Doherty hustled past the goal mouth from the right side.

After playing almost 20 minutes without drawing a penalty, the Redmen added the hosts by incurring several in the second quarter. In fact, UMass spent nearly 10 straight minutes with a man in the penalty box.

Commencement Highlight

Honorary Degrees to Be Awarded

Six men and women who have made important contributions to agriculture, medicine, and education will be awarded honorary degrees at University of Massachusetts commencement exercises June 12, UMass President John W. Lederle announced today.

The six are author-historian Barbara Tuchman; American Heart Association President Dr. Helen B. Taussig; mathematician Marshall H. Stone; alumnus-agriculturist Frederick V. Waugh; alumnus and former trustee Ralph F. Taber; and Hampshire College President Franklin K. Patterson.

Winner of the 1963 Pulitzer Prize in general nonfiction for her best-selling "The Guns of August," Barbara Tuchman has a new book, a study of the pre-World War I period entitled "The Proud Tower," currently on the best seller lists. Mrs. Tuchman was born in New York City and graduated from Radcliffe College. She served as a researcher for the Institute of Pacific Relations in New York and Tokyo and as an editor, writer and European correspondent for the "Nation" during the 1930's. From 1943-45 she was an editor in the Office of War Information. In addition to her two recent histories, she is the author of "The Lost British Policy," published in 1938, "The Bible and the Sword," which came out in 1956, and "The Zimmerman Telegram," published two years later.

Dr. Helen B. Taussig is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of California. After studying at Harvard and Boston Universities, she went on to obtain her M.D. degree from the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. As a young diagnostician she became interested in heart disease in children and pulmonary stenosis, the cause of "blue babies." After years of study she theorized that a congenital construction of the artery connecting the heart and lungs in babies caused oxygen starvation of the blood. The late Dr. Alfred Blalock performed the first successful "blue baby" operation based on her theory, and since that time 80 percent of these operations have been successful. In 1962, Dr. Taussig published the first alarm about the dangers of thalidomide to pregnant women. Last October she was elected president of the American Heart Association, the first woman to hold that post.

Busy Summer Lies Ahead

Summer at the University of Massachusetts will be busier than ever this year.

An estimated 6,000 students will spend the traditional vacation months in classrooms or studying in University-sponsored special programs, while an additional 9,600 lay and professional people will use the campus facilities for conferences.

The grant total of 15,600 people expected to participate in 44 programs on and off campus this summer will help the University fulfill its commitment to maintain its facilities and participation in academic, social and cultural affairs on a year-round basis.

Summer sessions, offering regular course instruction in 420 graduate and undergraduate subjects, will be held for 5,600 students, including freshmen, in two six-week terms—June 15 to July 22 and July 26 to September 2.

Another 400 will study in special programs. The 31 conferences scheduled from June to September will deal with subjects ranging from public welfare to school lunch programs.

For the third year, summer terms will also launch a number of the freshman class on their college careers three months early.

The special "swing shift" program is designed to accommodate those qualified applicants who otherwise would have been turned down for admission in the fall semester because of lack of room.

This year, 350 recent high school graduates will attend the two six-week summer terms, completing the normal first semester course load.

They will stay home during the University's fall semester, and rejoin their freshman classmates in the spring semester.

In other areas, the University will offer summer study programs in Bologna, Italy and Oxford, England; a writer's workshop on Nantucket; two National Defense Education Act institutes for advanced study, one in English and one in history; a program in education for teacher certification; a special program in speech and hearing therapy, and a National Science Foundation botany institute.

A full schedule of films, plays, lectures and art exhibits—the annual Summer Arts Festival—will round out the summer program. The festival, this year called "Arrest . . . Converge," will offer 53 fine arts programs in June, July, and August.

A total of 196 subjects will be offered in the first summer term and 143 only in the second term, with an additional 81 courses being offered in both terms.

U. C. Berkeley Rated Tops In The Nation

The University of California at Berkeley is "the best balanced, distinguished university in the country," according to a study of the quality of graduate education in American universities made public Saturday.

The 2-year study, was conducted by the American Council on Education, principal coordinating agency for higher education in the U. S. The final report was written by Dr. Allan M. Carter, vice president of the council.

DR. CARTER studied 29 academic fields in five general areas—humanities, social sciences, biological sciences, physical sciences and engineering.

He queried more than 4,000 scholars in 106 universities, asking them first to judge departments in their specialties on the basis of the caliber of the faculty and second to say where they would choose to do their own Ph.D. if they were to see the degree again.

Dr. Carter noted that only U.C. Berkeley appears in the leading group in all five general subject areas. Harvard and Stanford appear in four divisions; Columbia, Illinois, Yale, Princeton, California Inst. of Tech. and Michigan appear in three; and MIT, Chicago and Wisconsin in two.

HARVARD ALSO was rated as "distinguished" in 23 departments but was considered only "good" in civil engineering and was not rated at all in chemical engineering.

Stanford and Yale were rated "distinguished" in 10 departments, Cal Tech, MIT, Michigan and Chicago in eight; Princeton, Wisconsin, Columbia in seven; and Illinois in six.

1) There is "a close relationship between faculty salaries and quality of graduate faculty." Universities receiving the highest overall ratings for high caliber faculty have an average compensation of $14,000. Average compensation at the lowest ranking institutions was $9,500. "Good education is costly education," Carter wrote.

2) "Institutions that the strong in all areas invariably have major national research libraries." The 17 universities among the top 20 institutions in the study (omitting the specialized science and technology schools—Cal. Tech., MIT and the Rockefeller Inst.) have libraries ranging from 1.3 to almost 8 million volumes. The bottom 20 institutions in the survey have libraries averaging only 45,000 volumes.

3) "DISTINGUISHED" graduate departments concentrated in 13 states, in the Northeast and in California. No Southeastern, Rocky Mountain or Northwestern universities had a "distinguished" department. The Southwest and the plains states had one apiece.

Following are the 29 academic subjects studied and the universities which will rank as "distinguished" in them:

- CLASSICS — Harvard.
- ENGLISH — Yale, Harvard, U. C. Berkeley, Princeton, Columbia.
- FRENCH — Yale, Columbia, Harvard.
- GERMAN — UC Berkeley, Harvard Yale, Texas, Princeton.
- PHILOSOPHY — Harvard, Michigan, Yale, Princeton.
- SPANISH — UC Berkeley, Wisconsin, Harvard, Michigan.
- ANTHROPOLOGY — Chicago, Harvard, U. C. Berkeley, Michigan.
- ECONOMICS — Harvard, MIT, Chicago, Yale, U. C. Berkeley, Stanford, Princeton.
- GEOGRAPHY — Wisconsin, Chicago, U. C. Berkeley.
- HISTORY — Harvard, UC Berkeley, Yale, Columbia, Wisconsin, Princeton, Chicago, Stanford.
- POLITICAL SCIENCE — Yale, Harvard, U. C. Berkeley, Chicago, Columbia, Princeton.
- SOCIOLOGY — U. C. Berkeley, Harvard, Columbia, Chicago, Michigan.
- BACTERIOLOGY - MICROBIOLOGY — U. C. Berkeley, Rockefeller Inst., Illinois, Wisconsin, Caltech, Harvard.
- BIOCHEMISTRY — Harvard, U. C. Berkeley, Stanford, Rockefeller Inst., Wisconsin, M. I. T., Cal. Tech.
- BOTANY — UC Berkeley, Harvard, Michigan, Wisconsin.
- ENTOMOLOGY — U. C. Berkeley.
- PHARMACOLOGY — Harvard, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Yale.
- PHYSIOLOGY — Harvard, Rockefeller Inst.
- PSYCHOLOGY — Harvard, Stanford, Michigan, U. C. Berkeley, Yale, Illinois.
- ZOOLOGY — U. C. Berkeley, Harvard, Rockefeller Inst., Stanford, Johns Hopkins.
- ASTRONOMY — Caltech, Princeton, Chicago, U. C. Berkeley, Harvard.
- CHEMISTRY — Harvard, Cal. Tech., U. C. Berkeley, M. I. T., Stanford, Illinois.
- GEOLOGY — Harvard, UC Berkeley, Cal. Tech., Columbia.
- MATHEMATICS — Harvard, U. C. Berkeley, Princeton, Chicago, MIT, Stanford, Yale, NYU, Columbia.
- PHYSICS — UC Berkeley, Cal. Tech., Harvard, Princeton, Stanford, M. I. T., Columbia, Illinois, Cornell.
- CHEMICAL ENGINEERING — Wisconsin, M. I. T., Minnesota, Princeton, U. C. Berkeley, Delaware, Michigan.
- ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING — M. I. T., Stanford, U. C. Berkeley, Illinois.
- MECHANICAL ENGINEERING — M. I. T., Cal. Tech., Stanford.

"Huelga" Grips UMexico

The University of Mexico has a new rector who has asked for the confidence of striking students.

The newly appointed rector, Javier Barros Sierra, said he is willing to meet "just demands that are formally presented to me in the rectory."

MORE THAN 7,000 striking students have kept Latin America's largest university closed for more than three weeks. The strike itself was begun more than ten weeks ago by law students.

The huelga, or strike, came to a head when a student delegation with a list of demands approached Rector Ignacio Chaves, and two were severely beaten by members of Chaves' staff. A mob then stormed and seized the administration building and forced Chaves and some of his aides to resign under the threat of violence.

In a two-and-a-half hour conversation at his home after his appointment, Barros Sierra met with strike leaders and told them they would have to submit formal petitions in his office after the rectory is turned over to him by the students.

FOR THE MOMENT, the new rector and the striking students have arrived at an agreement that will end the strike.

But late reports from Mexico City indicate that student leader Jose Castro Osuna and a faculty member, Francisco Rivera, have fallen out over how to end the strike.

Rivera, a right-wing faculty leader, is among a group seeking the return of the rectory to University control. Osuna, a Trotskyist, is opposed to releasing the students' hold on the building until Barros Sierra agrees to the students' demands.

WMUA to Aid Music 101 Students

Dr. Gage Installed

Dr. Robert W. Gage, director of the University's health services, has taken office as vice-president of the American College Health Association.

He was installed at a recent three-day meeting of ACHA in San Diego. The conference was attended by about 600 university physicians, health administrators and other participants in the field.

The ACHA, founded forty-five years ago, includes representatives from more than 500 higher educational institutions in the United States.

Dr. Gage is a graduate of UMass. He received his M.D. degree from the Harvard University Medical School. He was a Navy medical officer during World War II and a general practitioner in Ulysses, Pennsylvania, and in Amherst before being named to his present post in 1960.

Professional Staff Recruited As Heads Of Residences

With several residence halls scheduled for completion by the fall semester, the office of the Dean of Women is recruiting professional staff members to serve as Heads of Residence in women's residence halls.

Faculty couples, with the wives interested in student personnel work and in serving as full-time Heads of Residence, and the husbands willing and interested in lending support to the program in their residence hall, are urged to apply.

The Dean of Women is also interested in recruiting wives of graduate students for these positions. Interested persons are asked to arrange for an appointment with Dean of Women Helen Curtis.

Cynthia Sue Lloyd Awarded Scholarship

Cynthia Sue Lloyd, a Junior at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts, has been selected to receive the Ralston Purina Scholarship Award for 1966-67, according to an announcement made in St. Louis by R.C. Eaton, Director of Public Relations of Ralston Purina Company.

The Purina Scholarship amounts to $500. It is awarded each year to an outstanding Junior or Sophomore in the state universities and land-grant colleges in each of the 50 states, and in three Canadian agricultural colleges and one in Puerto Rico.

Winners are selected at each college by a faculty Scholarship Committee on the basis of their scholastic record, leadership, character, ambition in agriculture and eligibility for financial assistance.

Miss Lloyd is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerrold D. Lloyd of Whitinsville, Massachusetts.

WOPE May Offer Modern Dance Classes

The University's Department of Physical Education for Women is considering a series of eight classes in Modern Dance in the fall semester.

Classes have been tentatively scheduled for Tuesday nights from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

The teacher will be a professional dancer from New York and his fee for these classes will be $20 for adults and $10 for students.

The Women's Phys. Ed Department has requested that interested students contact Miss Marilyn V. Patton in that department by today. They may call on ext. 2323 between 9-10 a.m.

COMMENTARY

U.S. Should Do the Talking

(Editor's Note: The following is part of an editorial which appeared in the May 21 issue of The New Republic. Though the editorial is not reprinted in full, enough appears here to present adequately the writer's point).

Since the U. S. is spending at the rate of about $1.5 billion a month to fight the war in Vietnam, it should, if "money talks," be doing the talking. But behold: another speaks—he who is said by Hanoi to be nothing but an echo.

Marshal Ky speaks, and the Secretary of State interprets his speech, so that we shall understand Ky does not quite mean what he seems to say. Consider the statements of last week.

In an interview on May 7, Marshal Ky said that he expected to stay in power for at least another year; there would, however, be an election for a constituent assembly "about September," September 15 to be exact.

No Vietnamese newspaper reported a word of this news, which led one Vietnamese journalist to comment that "it must be the first time in history that a government censored the remarks of its own Prime Minister."

Secretary Rusk explained over TV on the following day that Ky "did not say... that he is going to stay in office another year."

Then, 24 hours later, Mr. Rusk informed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he too thought "there will be an election for a constituent assembly in September," though "no one can write in blood what is going to happen in the future."

That afternoon South Vietnam's Ambassador to the U. S. told newsmen that he doubted whether "all of the administrative problems and differing points of view between political forces in the country would allow elections to take place in such a short period of time as mid-September."

The same day, May 9, an official in Saigon "close to Ky" told Washington Post reporter Ward Just that "the government... may stay in office a year, or 6 months, or 9 months or 2 years."

And on May 11, Ky repeated his determination to stay in office "until the civilian government is elected." And how long would that be? One year or more; at least until the middle of 1967. Meantime, "all is going well."

Does it much matter whether Ky clears with Rusk or vice versa, or who is proved right about the date of elections or the durability of the Ky regime? We doubt it, for all this rushing about to fashion a new suit of legitimacy for Saigon is largely for purposes of display.

Mr. George Kennan was closer to the truth when he told the Fulbright Committee weeks ago that genuinely free elections cannot be held in the midst of a civil war.

In present circumstances, "elections" will certify little more than the power of those who have the decisive military advantage.

Marshal Ky, at least, has been candid enough to say he has no intention of permitting an unrestricted use of the franchise; and no U. S. official has thus far contradicted him.

Popsicle Sticks and Progress

by CHET WEINERMAN, Editorial Chairman

When perspiration cascades down your face after defeating your buddy in tennis 6-love, you'll get an orange popsicle from Joe the ice-cream man and languidly collapse on the grass.

And then your thoughts will float like a raft on a quiet sea, farther and farther away. You will turn back to your year in Amherst, to the unparalleled academic and social advances. To Simon and Garfunkle. To a talk in the study lounge until 4:00 a.m. And to your unsteady views on religion, death, and morality (whatever they may all be—or if they even exist). To that Chem 112 final and the history paper. To the stench of the Med school and the courage of the Free Press struggle.

You will thrust yourself ahead, projecting to grad school. What you want out of life—and what must be done to reach your goals. Will the struggle be worth it all? What is success—and what is self-respect?

And now everything will begin to conglomerate. All the experiences of the year will become engulfed in all the philosophies and doubts of your mind and all of this will become entangled in personal aspirations and the ways of a pressured society. But after a while, a somewhat understandable pattern will appear. Things will seem a little less blurry, because you will have added a little more perspective to your life...to life.

"Hey, Bob!" Pulled back to popsicle sticks and perspiration, you will turn to your friend and nod blankly.

"Bob kid, how 'bout another set?"

You'll spring to your feet, pull your socks up over your ankles, and reclaim the second court. It will be a closer game than the first and you'll be having a good time, until darkness makes play no longer possible.

This is what summer is for.

Let Us Not Falter

To the Editor:

As some of you may recall I was once a member of the Collegian editorial staff. I am submitting this letter to the Collegian regarding my views on the recent controversy caused by Yahoo which has resulted in a Senate investigation of campus publications.

The question of whether or not the cartoon was in bad taste is not what concerns us. Rather what concerns the publications media and all students is the question of censorship which may result from this investigation.

Taking the optimistic view and assuming nothing comes of the investigation save for a denouncement of the poor taste of Yahoo and a statement that all student publications could be better (But even the New York Times is not perfect, let alone our state legislature) what may be the possible de facto result on student press freedom?

First—By the mere fact student publications have been investigated many persons will feel that these publications are irresponsible and should either be abolished or under faculty and/or administrative control.

Second—The investigation will supply another and a much stronger argument to those persons who would like to control student communications media for their own use and for the betterment of a "University Image."

Third—Many persons will tend to regard student editorials and opinions as mere 'tommyrot', having no value or worthwhile ideas or suggestions.

Fourth—Last but by no means the least harmful result which may occur is that it will take the student communications media many years to recover its good image even if no other action is taken by the Senate committee.

Another possible outcome of the Senate investigation is that student communications media may be subject to faculty and/or administrative control. This would result in an immediate suppression of student press freedom. Controversial items would be glazed over or non-existent. The communications media would be coerced to say nothing but good about the "University Image."

"A Free and Responsible Press" would be "free" in name only and "responsible" to the administration.

The worst possible outcome of the Senate investigation would be a complete take-over of the communications media by the administration with no pretense of being a student operated media.

So far student response has been overwhelming. Let us not falter in the face of denouncement or opposition. We have a constitutional right to a free press. Let us make sure we retain that right even though we are only a student communications media.

Tyranny and suppression cannot survive in the light of a free press. Let us move forward with press freedom, not backwards to the days of suppression.

Harold A. Gushue, Jr.

Letters To The Editor

"...Take a Running Jump"

To the Editor:

This letter is in answer to the two recent letters concerning Mr. Putala's flunking 53% of his class of Botany 101 on the last hour exam. The first letter, written by Mr. Carey, attacked Mr. Putala's strange bell shaped curve. I found his letter and grievance to be well founded. I felt it was about time someone put this self-made god in his place. I was overjoyed by Mr. Carey's stand. I found that he had expressed my views fully, thus it was not necessary for me to write in. However, recently Miss Femino wrote in praising Mr. Putala's fair and idealistic stand.

From her letter I can see she did not flunk. From her letter I can see she enjoys Botany 101. I consider her to be quite fortunate, but what about us poor chimpanzees who did flunk?

It has come to the point where it is no longer a matter of just being a mark, it can be a death sentence. Consider the case of the average boy. If he flunks, and his other marks are low (everyone has an off year) he may get a one way ticket to Vietnam. Thus, Miss Femino, you are putting his life on the line, just because he is not interested in Botany and thus finds it difficult. And when you get one of these individuals for a prof., it makes things difficult. When 53% of a class fails, you cannot blame it on the students' "low standards."

I'm not saying it is Mr. Putala's teaching method that is at fault here. I'm saying it is his method of grading—his deformed bell in the bell curve. We are not all science majors, and many of us have a dislike for science, yet the administration says we must take it. Is this fair, Miss Femino? I consider you fortunate but we can't all be like you.

You obviously think a lot of Mr. Putala. This is understandable; but just because you have a crush on the man, don't make us all suffer. I'm sure when you mature in your sophomore year you'll outgrow this, but it may be too late. When the great idealist Putala sees your letter, it will make his ego even more steadfast. This won't help the person in danger of going to Vietnam.

Perhaps we can work out a compromise. Miss Femino, maybe only students should be marked in their majors and related subjects, and in other subjects be marked fail or pass. Or even better, maybe you, your brownie points, Putala, and Botany 101 ought to take a running jump.

You have nothing to lose Miss Femino, but I have everything to lose.

John Eisenmanny

URC:

A Beginning

To the editor:

The University Reform Committee meeting last Wednesday night served as a forum for the beginnings of communications between disjunctive groups on campus. Students, faculty members, and housemothers discussed issues of social and academic reform.

It is through this framework that university reform will be most effective. There must be a dialogue if there is to be an understanding of the real problems with which the URC has been concerned.

I want to emphasize that the URC, although a student initiated group, invites and appreciates the expression of opinions and ideas of all those interested in university reform.

The Real Issue At Stake

To the Editor:

And what about the cartoonist?

When my mother showed that Yahoo cartoon to our priest, he did not question the merits of free speech. Nor the irresponsibility of the UMass administration. Nor the need for a campus issue. Instead, his head drooped sadly as he intoned "some of my best friends are sinners, but I wouldn't want my daughter to marry one such as that Yahoo cartoonist."

I do not personally know the cartoonist, but I can imagine that he represents that large percentage of UMass students who made it out of the question for me to apply here. Perhaps these people don't realize what freedom is more important than free speech. It is, I might suggest, the right to a Catholic conviction parochially expressed at any time and for what ever motive.

When this cartoonist eventually realizes his error, I doubt that he will ever be able to look a rabbit straight in the eye or to hold a chalice without spilling the contents down his leg. But for now, his sin must be obscured by larger issues. The real issue at stake is this student's soul.

Someone must speak to him, that is, someone besides my priest's daughter. There is hope. Yahoo rots, but Christ has risen.

"By the way, you have been handling a paper impregnated with a contact poison of phenyl hydrazine substitution products. The poison should now be speeding through your system and you will lie groaning on the floor."

"The Hunt" has come to the University of Chicago.

Poison gas capsules, flame throwers, stiletos, high-voltage wires, lasers, contact poisons, snake venom, and ordinary guns are among the weapons being used in the rash of homicides being committed here.

An Oberlin College brainchild, the Hunt is based on a game played in the movie, "The Tenth Victim," which depicted a 21st-century society so frustrated by the abundance of leisure time that, to release suppressed anxieties, it organized murder as the ultimate means of recreation for whoever wanted to take part.

Participants were classified as hunters or victims; these situations were alternated after each "kill." A person who killed his tenth victim (this was possible since the victim could kill his hunter in self-defense) became a national hero.

A major limitation in the adaptation of the movie version to the campus involved the means of effecting the kill. Both Oberlin and Chicago students are permitted to use an infinite variety of devices, providing they can be proven to have been effective in a real situation and no bodily harm is done.

Thus poison gas capsules are pen cartridges; flame throwers are aerosol shaving-cream cans; stiletos are ball point pens; high-voltage wires are rubber bands; lasers are flashlights; contact poisons and snake venom are most any liquids; and guns, naturally, are water pistols.

No female participants — not even Chicago women—have yet attempted to use the bra-gun employed by Ursula Andress in the film.

At Oberlin, an IBM 1620 computer is used to match at random students who have joined the Hunt. One point is awarded to a successful hunter or a victim who has killed his hunter; one point is subtracted from the score of a deceased victim or a hunter who has killed the wrong person. The first person accumulating ten points becomes a "Decathlon" and has a party throw for him.

Initiators of the Hunt at Chicago, advertising themselves as "The Directorate," have contributed to the evaluation of the rules. A time limit of 96 hours per killing has been set for increased excitement.

So while a hunter can receive up to two points for killing his victim, the victim receives nothing for merely eluding his hunter.

This makes it profitable for the victim to know the name of his hunter and possibly set a trap for him, but since this is precluded by the rules of the game, the only way he can get this information is by bribing the Directorate. The rules clearly permit such a move.

"We have been approached several times, but there have been no concrete offers, unfortunately," said Andrew Lachmann, a second-year student in the liberal arts college and half of the two-man Directorate.

"We're waiting . . . Someone started a conversation with us about Mata Hari, and we would like to pursue that further," he added.

Mike Starrels, a third-year student in the college and the other half of the Directorate, suggested more serious motives behind organizing the Hunt.

"We thought it would be a good way of giving students some relief from academic pressure, as well as bringing them together socially," he said.

Only two faculty members are now in the Hunt, but Lachmann is urging them to join. "We think it's a great way for professors to meet and become acquainted with students," Lachmann said.

Since the first distribution of Hunt rules, about the middle of April, an average of four persons have joined each day. Starrels said he had received calls from persons outside the university, but had to turn them down.

"We keep the Hunt confined to this small area so that people don't go jetting off to New York on Hunt business alone," he explained.

Publicity from Chicago news media upped participants in the Hunt's third round.

What do students see in the Hunt? "A substitute for football," one student answered. "A chance to play James Bond, replied another. But situations like this probably provide the answer:

"Zop! OK! I wired your doorknob to an electric current carrying millions of volts and amps and such, so that as soon as you touched the doorknob, you were incinerated."

This alleged murder was contested on the grounds that no wires were attached to the doorknob either inside the room or outside. A duel at twelve noon outside the bookstore settled the matter.

Stickmen Bow to Dartmouth By 13-5 Score, Post 7-5 Mark

by TOM FITZGERALD

A 7-5 record and a hopeful outlook for next year—those are the results of a season of hard work for the UMass lacrosse team, which closed out its regular competition with a 13-5 loss at Dartmouth Saturday.

The Redmen would have finished 8-4 if they had maintained their first-quarter performance against the Ivy Leaguers. Coach Dick Garber relied on his first two lines almost exclusively and as a result, UMass led, 3-1, at the quarter and trailed by only 4-3 at the half.

The classy Indians, however, had more depth and scored nine goals in the second half to salt the contest away. The big men for Dartmouth were John McKissock (four goals), Charlie Innis (three goals), Bob McCormick (one goal, four assists), and Grant Monahan (two goals, one assist).

For the Redmen, Howie Goffman scored four goals, with Dave Jarret adding one. Jim O'Donnell notched a trio of assists, and Bob Murphy also reaped an assist.

Goffman's first goal gave UMass the lead at 1:37, but Monahan's shot at 10:22 hit off Redman goalie Bill Sinclair and into the net, knotting the score.

Three minutes later, Jarret took a pass from O'Donnell and fired through a crowd to make it 2-1 at 12:58. The combination of O'Donnell to Goffman worked again with 42 seconds left in the quarter, giving the Redmen a lead of 3-1.

Monahan's second goal, at 5:15 of the second period, was the first in a chain of 10 consecutive goals for Dartmouth. At 10:34, McKissock took a high pass from McCormick and spiked the ball into the net to tie the score, 3-3.

McCormick put Dartmouth ahead to stay with a fast break goal just seven seconds later.

A pair of goals by McKissock sandwiched three straight by Innis in the third period, fourth quarter scores by McKissock, Bob Dobbin, John Hager, and Gene Nattie offset two more by Goffman.

Howie scored at 6:55 on a back-handed flip after receiving Murphy's pass and again at 10:16 by brushing the ball into the goal from a spot just outside the crease. The latter came at a time when UMass was shorthanded through a penalty.

In the game, the Redmen suffered a 56-34 shooting deficit. As Coach Dick Garber noted afterwards, this was one of the few occasions this year in which the Redmen were outshot.

The coach blamed inaccurate shooting and mental mistakes for most of the team's difficulties, but stressed the fact that "Overall, we played better than I thought we would."

In particular, he said, the performances of Sinclair, Murphy, O'Donnell, and the entire close defense were "better than we had hoped for." Garber termed the team's showing "a reversal of form from last year (when the team went 4-9)."

Frosh Nine Falls Again To Springfield

by TIM MURPHY

Overcast skies and wind were again the prevalent backdrops as Springfield College continued its mastery of the UMass freshman baseball team with a 3-1 victory here Saturday.

The Little Redmen, in their final horseshoe duel of the season, saw their record fall to 3-5 at the hands of the pesky Maroons. And pesky they were.

Though outhit by a nine-to-four margin, SC tied the contest in the sixth inning. With one out, third baseman Charlie Zien drew a walk from Redman starter Norm Elliott, winner of all three UMass victories.

After stealing second, Zien came all the way around on Joe Kane's single. Elliott then surrendered another single before retiring the Maroons on a ground ball and a strike out.

Again in the eighth SC struck. With two down and a runner on second base, Al Cese lay into an Elliott fastball and the laced pellet went a good distance over

Coach Shields Leaving FRESHMAN SNAKEBEATERS GO UNBEATEN WITH 15-3 WIN

"Upward and onward!" remarked freshmen lacrosse coach Frank Shields with a smile after an early season victory. Those words have now taken on a prophetic ring since the team finished a perfect 8-0 season by bombing the Dartmouth Frosh, 15-3, at Hanover, N.H. players.

But the shower that Coach Shields was later thrown into by his players may have been the first and last victory for him at UMass. He is leaving the University this year to return to St. Lawrence College for his Master's.

"I was overjoyed with this team," Shields said. "I think that they will be outstanding contributors to Coach Garber's program." He cited the "excellent skills and motivation" of his Lacrosse experience on the part of several of the players was one of the big reasons that this year's team was probably the most successful frosh lacrosse team ever at UMass.

In Saturday's game, everybody had a hand in the scoring. Posting goals were Gary Vassar (5), Kent Hubbard (3), Kevin O'Connor (2), Steve Anderson (2), and Don Agnoli, Tom Voisin, and Howie Shane, with one apiece.

Hubbard, Voisin, O'Connor, Anderson, Vassar, Paul Mushovic, and Ed Robbins all registered single assists.

Other members of the team, which should give impetus in the future to the growth of lacrosse at UMass, are Don Legg, Pete Harvey, Sandy Baldwin, Dan Murley, Gregg Stillman, Ed Sheehan, Kevin Collins, Jim Pye, Steve Chambers, Tom Tufts, Carl Larkin, and goalie Mark Schlossberg.

by lashing a torpedo shot to center.

Al Craig answered Di Sarcina's noise with a swat to deep center. DiSarcina scored the sole UMass run and Craig pulled in with a stand-up double. It looked like more activity for the home forces as Springfield pitcher Bill Barrey tossed a pick-off throw into center field, Craig taking third.

Kappa Sigma captured the Stephen Davis Award and the Olympus Cup. The Davis award is given to the unit which accumulates the highest intramural points on the campus, while the Olympus Cup is awarded to the fraternity which has the best point total.

Perhaps the turning point for KS was the wrestling, which KS completely dominated. Not only did it have several winners, but in some of the weight divisions, brothers from KS were matched against each other in the finals.

The Mills Cherry annexed the President's cup, emblematic of overall supremacy in the dorms. Although the Cherrys didn't enjoy spectacular success in any sport, they finished near the top in virtually every event.

Dick Cain (TKE) won the campus horseshoe title by defeating Walt Willard (Cherrys) 21-8, 21-15.

The Brett Black Bears captured the dormitory soccer championship with a 1-0 win in four overtimes on Joe Malinski's goal against the James Colt 45's.

SHULTON

After 19 successful seasons at UMass, Earl Lorden will retire as varsity baseball coach and assistant athletic director.

Earl Lorden to Retire After 19 Years at UM

Warren P. McGuirk, Dean of the School of Physical Education at the University of Massachusetts, today announced that Earl E. Lorden, Redmen Head Baseball Coach and assistant Director of Athletics for the past nineteen years, will retire this September when he reaches the state mandatory retirement age.

The Franklin, N.H., native will complete nineteen years on the University of Massachusetts faculty this June and during this time has developed baseball teams that annually rate with New England's best.

This year's Redmen nine has assured itself of at least a tie in Yankee Conference competition and could be a participant in the District I Playoffs to be held in Fenway Park June 7-9 to decide the New England representative in the 1966 College World Series in Omaha.

Coach Lorden received his high school education at Franklin, N.H., High School and went to the University of New Hampshire where he won letters in football and baseball. He played professional baseball with Manchester in the old New England League as a second baseman.

In 1922, he became Director of Athletics and head coach of football, basketball, and baseball at Turners Falls High School and during a tenure of twenty-five years his teams won several Western Massachusetts diamond crowns and in 1942 his squad won the State title.

Coach Lorden has been District I Representative on the Baseball Rules Committee for the past four years and while serving as chairman for the district playoffs, he has given New England college baseball one of its biggest boosts by being able to have the finals staged in Fenway Park. Overall his Redmen baseball teams have won 184 games and lost 145 and in 1954 his New England championship squad competed in the College World Series in Omaha.

Kelley, Kuz, Landry, Santucci, Lorden Honored

by MIKE GOULD,
Sports Editor

Victory and defeat, joy and sorrow, second guessing and arm-chair quarterbacking. The world of sports is not unlike the game of life.

No man is born a great athlete. True, some are born with more ability than others, but it is the development of this ability through constant and devoted practice, the acquisition of the right attitudes toward sports and, what is perhaps most essential, a profound love for one's game, which are the qualities the varsity athlete must possess if he is to become a star athlete.

It is only through this love and devotion to his sport that the athlete will be able to enjoy and appreciate the fruit of his efforts. Only when he feels a self-contribution to a victory, whether it be as an active participant or a spirited benchman, can the varsity athlete enjoy the indescribably ecstatic feeling of victory.

Like the varsity athlete, the coach of a varsity sport is of a different breed. He must be both a friend and an authoritarian, a psychologist and an engineer, a catalyst and a repressor. The coach must gain the respect of his players and must mold his students to the point where they will again his respect.

Here at the University of Massachusetts we are blessed with talented athletes and coaches whose efforts help make life in our own little world exciting and enjoyable.

It is time to honor these athletes and coaches. Although the COLLEGIAN's appreciation of the enjoyment and pride which our athletes have given their followers will never finance a track or a fullback, we offer the following awards with deepest sincerity.

Athlete of the Year — Dave Kelley

A senior from Geneva, N.Y., Dave, it is rumored, is going into selling. His product—varsity sweaters. Dave is a rare athletic specimen on campus. He plays three varsity sports and plays them with great spirit and skill. The fall saw Dave playing roving linebacker for Vic Fusia's Redmen. Few will forget the play Andersen and Frank Stewart drew walks. With the bases loaded Jim Babyak blasted a triple which went two hops to the 420-foot sign in left field. Terry Swanson then blooped a single to center to make it 4-0.

Providence came roaring back, however, in the bottom of the seventh. Boteze had trouble for the first time in the game. After a walk to Fran Archambault, a single by Dick Giannotti and a fielder's choice, Steve Saradnik hit a high drive over the 320-foot sign in right for a three-run homer. That cut the UMass lead to one, 4-3.

Boteze left the game with one out in the eighth after putting two men on via walks. Cauty struck out the first man he faced, but he brushed a pitch against Leo McNamara to load the bases. Saradnik, who had hit the homer, came up but he grounded into a force and the Redmen breathed easier.

Things were to get much stickier, however, in the last of the ninth. Cauty struck out the leadoff man but he then issued passes to Pat Monti and Greg Walsh of the Friars. Paul Robey went down swinging for the second out and pitcher Pettinelli came up. He hit a high pop behind the plate which should have ended the game, but Kuczyński misjudged it and Pettinelli had a second chance.

Cauty walked him to load the bases for Fran Archambault. With the tying run 90 feet away and the winning run on second, Cauty got two strikes on him, and then blazed a fast ball which Archambault swung at and missed, ending the contest.

In the last three innings the Friars, who had not left a man on base in the first six, stranded seven runners. Boteze and Cauty had their fast balls humming, fanning 11 and 4 respectively. The Friars' record fell to 6-15.

The Yankee Conference ended in a three-way tie as UConn beat Vermont, 5-0, and Maine downed New Hampshire, 5-1, on Saturday. A committee consisting of Vermont, Rhode Island, and UNH will decide who is to go to the NCAA District One playoffs at Fenway Park June 7-9. The decision is expected shortly.

The Redmen did not take batting practice Saturday because the bus had a blowout about ten miles out of Providence. The bus crawled the rest of the way but it arrived too late for the team to practice. The Redmen also had to contend with a miserable infield. Amazingly enough, there were few bad hops in the game off the cement-like dirt.

On Tuesday, Coach Earl Lorden and the Redmen will travel to Springfield College for their last regular season game.
